WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

Pres. Murray's New Year Message:

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Total mobilization for victory will be CIO's chief aim in 1943.

This was the key point in the annual New Year's Message of CIO Pres. Philip Murray—a message that outlined steps necessary to place the nation on a complete war basis.

"The United Nations must battle through to the complete defeat of the Axis powers," Murray declared. "And we know that such total victory calls for supreme effort and sacrifice on the part of all the American people, and the total mobilization of all our manpower and material resources."

Total mobilization can be effective only with "the full and direct participation of labor in the formulation and administration of war policies and activities," Murray said.

"One of the chief essentials for victory is the creation of a healthy war economy in which available goods are distributed in such a way as to assure the health, morale and productive efficiency of war workers; in which proper safeguards are taken against inflation; and in which special privilege is not allowed to interfere with the mobilization of all our financial and material resources for winning the war."

To back up the nation's war effort, Murray said the CIO would continue to press for democratic rationing of consumer goods; for effective labor unity; for removal of the tax on voting in eight states; and for the elimination of racial discrimination in industry.

"The CIO holds out the hand of fellowship and solidarity to all the freedom-loving peoples of the world," he declared, and during 1943 will work for "closer war unity" among the labor movements of the United Nations.

Furthermore, the CIO added, American labor "will work for the establishment after this war of a world order in which the four freedoms will prevail, in which the principles of the Atlantic Charter will become a living reality, and in which fascist imperialism may never again destroy world peace and threaten democratic progress."

Chicago Workers Hail Gen. Sikorski

Chicago, Dec. 31 (FP)—Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, premier of the Polish government in exile, was greeted here by a delegation from the American-Polish Trades Council, representing more than 60,000 organized AFL and CIO workers of Polish descent.

"We have observed with admiration the forthright, courageous and vigorous stand you have taken against Nazi fascism, the enemy of all mankind," Local Pres. Joseph Pyzik of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, CIO, told Sikorski, presenting him with $585 for the Polish underground.

Other members of the delegation included ACW Vice Pres. Leo Krzycki, J. Lechniak of the Intl. Union of Bakery & Confectionery Workers, AFL, Mira Brzozowska, Intl. Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL, and Conrad Komorowski, United Farm Equipment & Metal Workers, CIO.

Coast Aircraft Locals Hail Panel's Wage-Boost Order

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31—Recommendations for stabilization of wages of Southern California aircraft workers, released this week by Paul R. Porter, who conducted the War Labor Board parleys here, were hailed by leaders of the United Auto Workers Union as a "basic pattern for the constructive solution to the labor-management problems which have so long beset the West Coast aircraft industry."

Porter's recommendations, which still await full War Labor Board approval, set minimum rates of 80 cents an hour for all workers in the industry four months or longer, and establish for the first time in the industry's history an equitable pay scale covering the eight major California air plants.

The increases are retroactive to July 6.

ENDS HODGE-PODGE

But the significance of the Porter recommendations is not limited to the boosting of minimums. It establishes a classification system which sweeps away the hodge-podge setup which had made the industry's labor relations a storm center for more than a year and a half.

This abolishes the so-called "merit" system which had prevailed in aviation, by which employers were able to grant wage increases to individual employes on "merit," and which had been used in the employers' long fight against unionism.

"Both the American people who have so deep a concern in the maximum production of planes and aircraft workers, whose problems are at last receiving their proper attention must hail this report as a victory for their cause.

"It will mean more planes to blast the Nazis and the Japs."

Lew Michener, West Coast director of the union, which is conducting an organizing drive at the three giant Douglas plants, saw in the report an acceleration of the UAW recruiting campaign.

Lack of Plan Cuts Output In Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 31—(FP)—Although the need for war material is greater now than ever before, one important Buffalo war plant is one-third idle and another in nearby Tonawanda is producing only one-fourth of capacity, the Buffalo Union Leader, CIO newspaper, charges.

Declaring that the situation is not the fault of the company or the CIO United Steelworkers but can be blamed on the lack of centralized war planning, the newspaper said the Buffalo plant is the American Car & Foundry Co. and the other is the Buffalo Steel Co.

United Steelworkers Rep. Edward Janiak says that the ACF plant's production was curtailed for lack of steel, but that the plant is equipped to handle subcontract work which would not require raw steel.

"We feel," CIO Council President Thomas F. Casey said, "that these are production crimes. Both these plants could turn out subcontract material. And if the ACF is one of the finest equipped plants, we feel they should get orders for shells and have other plants now making them convert to other war production."

It has been estimated that 82 per cent of Americans normally get to their jobs in automobiles.

Sperry Gyroscope Vote Goes CIO As 'Herring' Flops

By LYLE DOWLING

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—The 16,000 workers at the big Sperry Gyroscope plant here, who voted Dec. 22 in a Labor Board election three-to-one for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers against the AFL's International Association of Machinists, cast an overwhelming vote at the same time against the red-baiting of the AFL organizers, who pinned all their hopes in the election on smearing the big CIO union as "Communist".

The election smashed the third company union at the important war plant and ended with a UE victory the hitherto successful fight of the Sperry management to maintain its traditional open shop policy.

The thousands of highly skilled war workers in Sperry's 10 plants scattered over Long Island responded by their votes to the UE's past record of achievement in organizing win-the-war production and in protecting the interests of UE members as part of that production drive.

UNION SUCCESSES

They knew that a UE man won the first WPB individual production award, that UE labor-management committees had recently won recognition at the White House and that the UE along with the whole CIO is putting up the best fight in Washington for the kind of overall organization of national production the Sperry men and women know is needed to straighten things out in their own plants.

And, although there are at present only a very few Negro employes at Sperry's the workers there knew that the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee had both censured the AFL-IAM for discriminating against Negroes and singled out the UE for its militant actions against Negro discrimination.

This week finds a 400-member UE shop steward system in full operation—the same shop steward system which the UE's International Representative in charge of the campaign, Joe Dermody, set up as the means of organizing the plant. The stewards are going to work on grievances and on negotiating a union contract, just as during the organizing campaign they carried the CIO message to the workers in the plants who chose them as stewards.

AFL CAMPAIGN FLOPPED

The AFL - IAM, which stepped into the picture as soon as the third company-dominated union had been thrown out by the NLRB and the court to which the company appealed the NLRB decision, based its anti-UE campaign exclusively on red-baiting.

All the old charges by Congressman Dies and other enemies of the UE were expensively distributed by the IAM, but unsuccessfully.

The UE had begun to organize in 1939 at Sperry's, but lost a yes-no NLRB election that year. There followed a fight against, first, the Sperry Hourly Employes Association, then the Independent Instrument and Mechanical Workers' Union, and finally the Brotherhood of Scientific Instrument Workers—all three proved by the UE to be company-dominated.

Wilson Poll Gives CIO 3-1 Margin

Chicago, Dec. 31 — One of this city's largest meat packing houses was firmly in the CIO fold today, as the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee rolled up a 3-1 majority in a pre-Christmas NLRB poll.

The poll followed an intensive campaign by the CIO union, which previously had gained victories at big Armour and Swift plants here. The pre-election drive stressed need for lifetime seniority, no race discrimination, all-out production to aid the war and establishment of a labor-management committee.

Coast Utility Vote Won by CIO

San Francisco, Dec. 31 — Two major districts in the Pacific Gas & Electric Co.'s huge power network went CIO this week in NLRB elections.

In the San Jose area, PG&E gave the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee a 292-27 margin over the AFL, while in the North Bay District the CIO outdistanced the AFL by 185 to 116.

Textile Union Wins in South

Lynchburg, Va., Dec. 31—Undaunted by a last-minute deluge of company propaganda, the CIO Textile Workers Union of America swept to a 4-1 victory at the big Consolidated Textile Co. here.

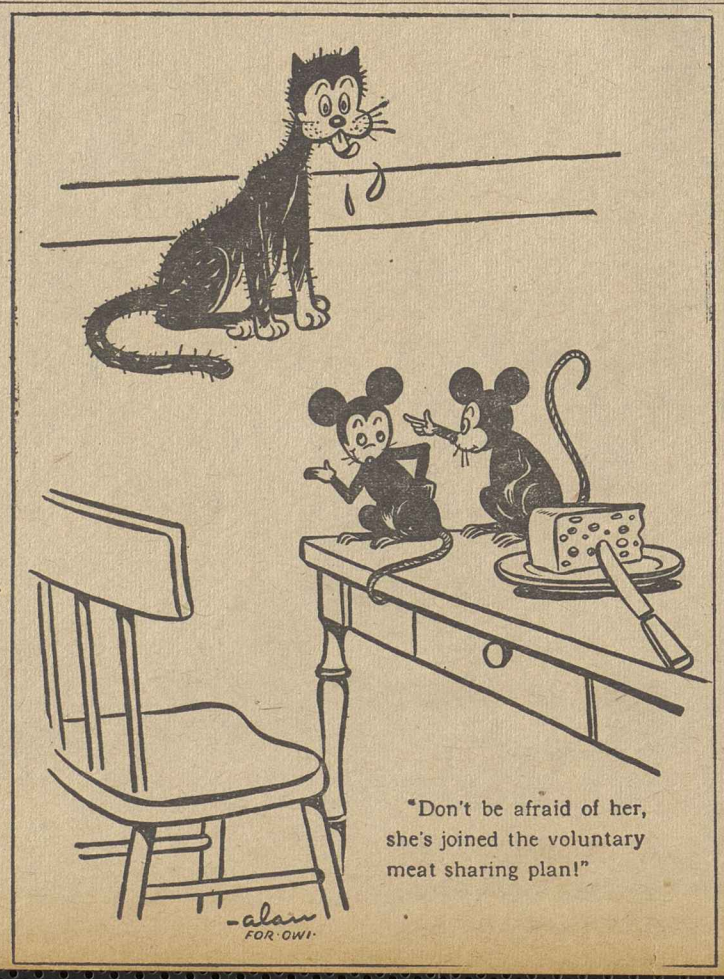
Longshore Union Asks 15c Pay Hike

San Francisco, Dec. 31 (FP)—Pres. Harry Bridges of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, CIO, has requested an hourly wage increase of 15c for the bay area, which would raise the base wage to the east coast level of $1.25.

"Shipowners," Bridges said, "will no doubt contend that west coast longshoremen already have received an increase of 15% since Jan. 1, 1941.

"But longshoremen have been making a tremendous contribution through increased taxes, Allied War Relief, purchase of war bonds and stamps, not to mention the thousands of dollars worth of labor which went into the loading of the Red Cross mercy ship."



CIO Votes Spell Doom Of E-J's Musty Open Shop

By GEORGE KLEINMAN

ENDICOTT, N. Y., Dec. 31—Cracking the hidebound, 58-year-old open shop fortress of Endicott-Johnson, the CIO International Fur & Leather Workers' Union won a hotly-contested Labor Board election in the E-J tanneries by a vote of 1037 for the union to 951 against. The IFLWU is the first union ever to win bargaining rights for any section of the 23,000 Endicott-Johnson workers in the Tri-City area of Endicott, Binghampton and Johnson City, New York.

The IFLWU's outstanding victory among the tannery workers climaxed an organizing drive in this nationally known "paternalistic" open shop with the company resorting to every form of coercion and intimidation of the workers on the eve of the election.

Over 90% of the tannery workers participated in the election. Excitement and enthusiasm ran high through the more than 23,000 E-J workers employed in the three cities area.

CHANGE FROM POST

Only three years before the Endicott-Johnson Co. had intimidated its workers to such an extent and whipped up such anti-union sentiment that a competitive organizing drive conducted by AFL and CIO shoe unions was decisively defeated by a 5-to-1 vote for "no union" with more than 12,500 turning out in a company inspired demonstration against unionism in "E-J's domain."

Congratulations on the IFLWU victory poured in from all sides. Cracking the Endicott-Johnson open shop, the second largest leather and shoe concern in the country and working on war orders, was hailed as a major gain for the entire labor movement. E-J has long been pointed to as one of the toughest nuts to crack because of its so-called paternalistic set-up.

WILL AID WAR

Effective aid to the nation's war effort will be one of the immediate results of the IFLWU election victory, declared Myer Klig, IFLWU vice president, who with IFLWU General Organizer Herman Paul was in charge of the campaign. Klig pointed out that by having the union attend to grievances, stoppages in the tanneries would be eliminated and thus the production of all necessary leather for shoes for American and Allied armed forces by this second largest unit in the industry would be unimpeded.

In trying to head off the union's organizing drive, the company distributed more than $1,000,000 to the workers in the form of wage increases, pay for a week's vacation, free boots, aprons and gloves, and severance pay for draftees. These are standard provisions of IFLWU contracts in practically all organized shops.

E-J workers had had paid vacations some years before through the company's so-called "benevolence"—but the company's same benevolence had withdrawn them during recent years. This in spite of the fact that E-J made a net profit of $4,000,000 in 1941.

Fighting tooth and nail, the first serious challenge to its open shop policy maintained since 1894, the company even resorted to having its foremen and straw bosses try to instruct the workers how to vote. Some workers were sent down to vote on company time. Others were told they did not have to report back to work after voting and that they would be paid for a full day's work.

SAW THEIR CHANCE

But the company's tactics only added oil to the flames. The tannery workers saw their first real chance to break through the steel band of "E-J paternalism."

They had been through years and years of uncertainty with their wages raised or cut when, as and if the boss pleased; a medical plan that the employer originally paid for, but for which he made workers pay when he wanted to and which he controlled from the nurse in the plant to the hospital in town. They saw organized IFLWU tanneries from coast to coast sign contracts with higher wages and better working conditions.

Some 3,000 E-J workers had bought their homes—but they couldn't buy the land under them from E-J! E-J plants had no labor-management committees functioning to give the utmost to the war effort. They couldn't have one at E-J because there was no union, no collective bargaining, no representation for the workers.

E-J's empire trembled at its foundation stones when the news of the IFLWU's victory came through. So important did the company consider the tannery election, that its general manager, George F. Johnson Jr., was present while the ballots were counted.

Johnson City, Endicott and Binghamton were agog all day and evening. Workers in war production plants such as International Business, Remington Rand and others throughout the same area also waited for the results eagerly. E-J is the controlling influence in the tri-city area.

Textile Union Wins Pennsy Election

Philadelphia, Dec. 31 — Impetus was given the organizational drive for Eastern Pennsylvania begun several weeks ago, when the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, won an election at the Wm. Whitaker & Sons Cotton Textile Mfg. Co., involving 200 workers.

The National Labor Relations Board election proved a victory for the union, after a very brief campaign, despite the eleventh hour attempt by Mr. Whitaker, Sr. to intimidate employes.

Primary among the demands of Whitaker workers were union wages, pay every week, improved sanitary working conditions, holidays and vacations with pay, a voice in work-load, the eight hour day, closed shop and check-off. Now that the election has been won, the contract negotiating committee of workers at the plant will present these demands to the company.

'Don't Muff The Peace' ... Wallace

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—The people of the world dare not muff their second opportunity in a generation to build an international commonwealth based on democracy, economic security and justice, Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace declared this week.

The nation's leading spokesman for the post-war aims of the common man, Wallace spoke on the 86th anniversary of the birth of Woodrow Wilson, who tried unsuccessfully at the end of World War I to construct a democratic new world.

In the intervening years, the United States "has learned her lesson" and should be ready to cooperate with the other nations of the world in a genuine effort to rid war, dictatorship and hunger from the earth, Wallace declared.

"Obviously, the United Nations first must have machinery which can disarm and keep disarmed those parts of the world which would break the peace," Wallace asserted.

INTERNATIONAL COURT

"Also, there must be machinery for preventing economic warfare and enhancing economic peace between nations. Probably there will have to be an international court to make decisions in cases of dispute.

"And an international court pre-supposes some kind of world council, so that whatever world system evolves will have enough flexibility to meet changing circumstances as they arise.

"The aim would be to preserve the liberty, equality, security and unity of the United Nations—liberty in a political sense, equality of opportunity in international trade, security against war and business depression due to international causes, and unity of purpose in promoting the general welfare of the world."

PUNISHMENT

But, the U. S. Vice-President reminded the nation, democratic security cannot be built while the fascist aggressors still hold sway. Military victory must be followed by punishment of the guilty—not "revenge for the sake of revenge" but rather to "undo so far as possible the diabolical work of Hitler and the Japanese warlords in poisoning the minds of the young."

That may require United Nations supervision of German and Japanese school systems as part of a general psychological and military disarmament of the fascists.

Economic reconstruction, Wallace said, will be a prime necessity in the post war world to avert a "series of economic storms," and the stronger nations "can provide guidance, technical advice and in some cases capital investment to help those nations which are just starting on the path of industrialization."

FULL EMPLOYMENT

If this country can provide full employment in wartime, it should and must be able to do likewise in peace, the Vice-President declared.

The man on the street will demand an answer, Wallace added, "and the returning soldier and sailor will demand an answer—and this will be the test of statesmanship on the home front, just as ability to cooperate with other nations for peace and improved living standards will be the test of statesmanship on the international front.

"Now at last the nations of the world have a second chance to erect a lasting structure of peace—a structure such as that which Woodrow Wilson sought to build."

UCAPAWA Moves Office

Philadelphia, Dec. 31 — The national office of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers has been moved to 1505 Race St., Philadelphia, Pa., it was announced by President Donald Henderson.

Headquarters were formerly located in Chicago.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK, newest CIO pamphlet shown above, contains full text of President Philip Murray's definitive speech on problems and opportunities rising from the influx of thousands of women workers into war industry. Speech was delivered at the Boston conference of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, and deals with the need for bringing women into war production and the opportunities CIO unions have for organizing them. Anti-Bias Committee Meets Jan. 6

Washington, Dec. 31 — A meeting of the CIO anti-Discrimination Committee is scheduled in national headquarters here Wednesday, January 6, CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey announced this week. Carey is chairman of the committee, whose members are James J. Leary, secretary-treasurer of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, Ferdinand Smith, secretary of the Natl. Maritime Union, Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes and Boyd Wilson of the United Steelworkers.

Purpose of the meeting is to discuss and take action on discrimination against Negroes and other groups which hold up total war production, to initiate an educational campaign on the serious dangers of the practice, and to map further action with government agencies and with employers to stop it.

In announcing the committee meeting, Carey said that CIO unions have an excellent record of no discrimination in their organizations. He added that postwar angles of the question would also be discussed, pointing out the unions should prepare now for necessary action after the victory.

Transit Service Union Reviews Big Gains of '42

Chicago, Dec. 31—Solid progress in organizing and real benefits to a rapidly growing membership are seen in a year's end report to members of the United Transport & Service Employes, CIO, submitted in "Bags and Baggage" international official publication.

More than 80 percent of the total membership is covered by contracts, the report said, and well over $1,000,000 in wage increases have been won during the year. Membership has increased by 40 percent, and the union now has members and contracts on more than 115,000 miles of Class I railroads.

Principal wage increase was won with a raise from an average of 36 cents per hour to 46 cents, covering redcaps, dining car employes, Pullman service employes and station porters. Present demands are for a flat 20-cent hourly increase to take care of cost-of-living jumps.

Canned Food Rationing Hailed As Forward Step

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Rationing of canned goods—another step in the direction of the universal rationing long demanded by the CIO — was announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard in a radio speech this week.

Actual rationing will begin some time in February, and will be run on the point system that allots a certain number of points to each ration ticket, depending on the supply of the particular commodity covered.

In announcing the rationing, Wickard made a strong plea to all people to avoid a buying rush that would deplete grocers' stocks. Despite this plea, hoarding was reported on a wide scale the day after the announcement was made. Unions and consumer organizations have criticized this method of announcing rationing for some date in the future as a direct tip-off to people who like to hoard.

However, Wickard announced at the same time that all ration bookholders would be required to state how much they have on hand when the order goes into effect, so that any surplus can be deducted as was done with coffee and sugar. Severe penalties are provided for false statements.

WAR NEEDS

Rationing is based entirely on war needs, both Wickard and Elmer Davis, chief of the Office of War Information, pointed out in radio speeches announcing the move. In addition to food sent to our own armed forces, considerable supplies are sent to our allies and to areas where United Nations armies operate.

This food saves American lives, they explained, because it goes to Russians and British who are killing Nazis that otherwise might live to kill our men, or have to be killed by them.

Despite rationing, Americans will continue to eat comfortably, in fact better than any other nation involved in the war. Without it, as the CIO has long pointed out, war workers would have to go without essential foods and thus be unable to keep war production at top levels.

Universal, democratic rationing has long been a major plank in CIO's victory program, not only as the only fair means of passing around existing supplies but also as the only means of assuring needed foods to war workers.

New Year's Message:

Total War Mobilization Seen by Pres. Murray As CIO's 1943 Goal

Total mobilization for victory is the chief task to which the Congress of Industrial Organizations will devote itself in 1943.

Labor has no illusions about the magnitude of the effort which victory demands. We know how great is the military might of the Axis. We know the desperate determination of its dictators. We know that any negotiated peace or appeasement will betray the cause of world security and freedom and open the way for even worse warfare in the future.

The United Nations must battle through to the complete defeat of the Axis powers. And we know that such total victory calls for supreme effort and sacrifice on the part of all the American people, and the total mobilization of all our manpower and material resources.

MOBILIZE THE PEOPLE

The CIO therefore in the coming year will seek to mobilize the working people as never before for greater and greater effort to increase production, to make our civilian defense more effective, to provide more war relief, and to further every one of the nation's essential war activities.

At the same time, the CIO in 1943 will increase the insistence of its demands for nation-wide planning and centralized administrative control of all the resources and economic policies of the nation. To make total mobilization effective, it will insist on the full and direct participation of labor in the formulation and administration of war policies and activities.

One of the chief essentials for victory is the creation of a healthy war economy, in which available goods are distributed in such a way as to assure the health, morale and productive efficiency of war workers; in which proper safeguards are taken against inflation; and in which special privilege is not allowed to interfere with the mobilization of all our financial and material resources for winning the war.

DEMOCRATIC RATIONING

To this end, the CIO will work in 1943 for a universal system of democratic rationing, so all may have their fair share of available goods; for effective price control, particularly over living necessities; and for a win-the- war tax program that will adequately finance the supplying of our armed forces, will prevent inflation, will plug loopholes through which wealth has avoided paying its full share, will distribute the tax burden according to ability to pay, and will not deprive low-income groups of the goods they must have for healthy activity.

In order that labor may play its full part in our country's total war mobilization, the CIO will intensify and extend its organizing activities in 1943.

It will continue to work for effective labor unity to promote the war effort, without sacrifice of the democratic gains made through industrial organization and without yielding to any form of racial discrimination.

FIGHT DISCRIMINATION

To make total mobilization effective, the CIO will also continue its fight against any discrimination in employment directed against Negroes, against women, against the foreign-born, or against any other workers whose loyal participation must be enlisted for our total war effort.

It will intensify its efforts for the complete abolition of the undemocratic poll-tax, which hampers our war effort by disfranchising 10 million Americans in the poll-tax states and thus denying them full participation in our country's political and war activities.

Finally, the CIO holds out the hand of fellowship and solidarity to all the freedom-loving peoples of the world. In the coming year it will work for closer war unity and cooperation between the labor movements of all the United Nations.

It will aid their peoples in every way possible in our common cause. And it will work for the establishment after this war of a world order in which the four freedoms will prevail, in which the principles of the Atlantic Charter will become a living reality, and in which fascist imperialism may never again destroy world peace and threaten democratic progress.

Smelter Union Sweeps Poll In Conn. Plant

Torrington, Conn., Dec. 31—War workers at the Torrington Standard Co. here rolled up a better than four to one majority for the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, with 1118 for CIO and 234 for no union in a Labor Board election this week. Over in nearby Canaan, the same union defeated the AFL by 89 to 52 in another NLRB poll.

The Torrington election victory was made possible by the intensive campaigning of women union members, who are in the majority at the plant.

That NAM Again

The National Association of Manufacturers holds its annual hate-fest shortly before the opening of each session of Congress.

After listening to frenzied denunciations of union labor and every other progressive tendency in American life, the NAM adopts its directives for the coming year, which are duly transmitted to its stooges in press and politics.

Thereupon, with unfailing regularity, editorials and columns begin to appear in the papers declaring that labor "has gone too far," that public opinion is turning against the unions, that they have been "coddled" too much, and that "drastic curbs" are called for.

Meanwhile a little clique of anti-labor extremists in Congress get together to translate the NAM program into legislative terms; and the papers begin to report that the coming session will crack down on labor with bills to do this, that and the other to every existing right of the working people.

The war seems to have done nothing to stop this annual routine. The would-be union-busters shot off their mouths at the recent NAM congress with their accustomed venom, and with additional disruptive attacks against the administration's win-the-war policies.

The newspaper propaganda is also running true to form. And the NAM's agents in Congress have jumped to the crack of its whip with their usual alacrity.

The same clique of labor-baiting poll-tax Congressmen, headed by the same Rep. Howard Smith, the NAM's chief mouthpiece in Congress, have held their meetings and announced the anti-labor legislative program of the NAM to the press as if it were their own baby.

This program calls for the suspension of overtime pay requirements of the wage-hour law; for anti-strike legislation; for open shop conditions in industries handling government work; for the barring of political contributions by unions; for revival of the Hobbs' bill to curb unions; and for the scrapping of the National War Labor Board.

The Democratic poll-tax bloc boasts that it will have Republican support for this anti-labor program of the NAM, and that the increase of Republican strength will assure its enactment.

Progressive Republicans have already expressed their unwillingness to play tail to the kite of the NAM and its Democratic poll-tax stooges. And those who haven't should realize that the NAM is very far from being the voice of the American people.

Just as the poll-taxers represent only a small minority of the citizens of their states, so, too, the NAM is controlled by a minority of anti-labor extremists and does not represent the majority of fair-minded and patriotic industrialists.

The selfish class-hatred preached by the NAM is bad enough in peacetime. But in a war like the present, its program is a disruption of our united war effort which all labor unionists and all other patriotic Americans should resist and defeat.

Food Is a Munition

The resignation of Donald Montgomery as Consumer's Counsel in the Dept. of Agriculture calls attention to the inadequacies of the present rationing and price control programs.

He resigned in protest against what he considered disregard of consumers' interests in the Department, and took the occasion to turn the spotlight on the urgent need for much more ambitious and comprehensive food rationing.

The CIO wholeheartedly supports all steps for the extension of rationing, as both socially desirable to insure a fair distribution of available goods and necessary to win the war. Its only complaint is that these steps are still so small and wavering.

1. Immediate rationing of all foods, except certain perishables.
2. Help for millions of low-income families to buy their share, at present high prices.
3. Governmental subsidies to meet high wartime costs of producing and processing foods without higher prices; and to bring basic foods within reach of low-income families at reduced prices.
4. Extension of the Food Stamp Plan and school milk and school lunch programs, to make sure poorer families get their share of essential foods.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

FOOD rationing has been overlong delayed. Even now it is only being started piecemeal, with all sorts of apologies and explanations, as if it were some terrible imposition, and as if the American people could only stand one of the facts of life at a time.

When automobiles first came along, horses in blinkers would shy in every direction at the strange noise and smell.

But when blinkers were removed and the horses given an unobstructed stare at the new contraption, they ceased to shy. Maybe they even got an inkling of what a lot of work the gas buggy was going to save them.

Why not give the American people credit for enough horse sense to be able to look universal rationing squarely in the face, and to realize it's no monster but a real war blessing that promises a square deal and a fair share to all?

The CIO is one substantial group of Americans that doesn't kick about rationing or shy away from it. On the contrary, it welcomes rationing and demands more and more of it without delay, until there is a universal rationing system for all commodities.

Rationing isn't only a method of preventing some people from buying too much. Properly applied, it is also a means of assuring more living necessities to many people who aren't getting enough.

If this sounds like a paradox, consider what has happened in Great Britain under a full-fledged system of universal rationing and price control.

There was a time when the best-fed Englishmen —like the best-fed Americans today—were pot-bellied bankers and the idle rich.

But now the best-fed Englishmen, after the armed forces, are the merchant seamen. Because of their hard and dangerous work, British seamen get seven or eight times as much meat, four times as much sugar and twice as much tea as does a British banker.

The next best-fed English people are miners and other workers in heavy industries—and the children, no matter how poor their families.

Actually countless poor families in Great Britain are now getting more and better food than they could ever afford before.

This has been brought about by rationing and price control, coupled with governmental aid to food producers, free milk and free school lunches for children, and the sale of below-cost meals to industrial workers.

British children from one to six years old get one pint of milk a day, in addition to school lunch milk, according to the U. S. Consumers' Guide. All families may buy this children's milk at half the controlled retail price, and if they can't afford even that they may get it free.

Children under two are similarly provided with fruit juices, cod liver oil and other vitamin concentrates, free; and eggs and oranges are first allocated to holders of a child's ration book.

In a word, the British not only ration available food, but they also take steps to provide all with the necessities they are entitled to, no matter how small their incomes.

All this has been done, not in the name of socialism, but as an essential measure to mobilize the whole country for winning the war—and with the approval of all parties.

In the United States, there has been a 40% increase in food prices since the war began. As a result, countless low-income families are being forced to get along with less and less to eat.

If all living necessities are fairly rationed, such families will be entitled to more than they are getting at the present time.

But rationing by itself won't enable them to buy their full share. And there are many families right now who can't afford to buy all the sugar and coffee their ration allows them.

The CIO therefore demands not only universal rationing but also effective price control over living necessities. It also calls for governmental steps similar to those taken in Britain to aid food producers in keeping down prices, and to bring to even the poorest their full share of rationed goods.

Pro-Nazi Gets Pegler's Publicity

Philadelphia, Dec. 31, (FP)—Westbrook Pegler has allowed his column to be used by a poison-pen pro-Nazi letter writer.

Occasionally Pegler fills his column with letters from so-called loyal Americans, spouting variations on his own reactionary theme. But Pegler's use of non-union help has backfired in his face, because union workers at the Baldwin Army Tank Shop here are especially sensitive to the smell of Nazism.

When they read a letter in Pegler's column recently directly attacking them, their union and the Roosevelt administration, they examined the signature carefully.

The writer—Andrew Hercha—turned out to be a worker who had been fired from the Pennsylvania Railroad for pro-Nazi activities but was continuing his propaganda at Baldwin.

GOT STATEMENTS

Local 2422, United Steelworkers, CIO, obtained signed statements from its members, recording Hercha's publicly-aired opinions. The evidence has been turned over to the FBI for further investigation. And Hercha has disappeared.

Here are some extracts from the statement, deleting Hercha's obscene language:

"Andrew Hercha has stated that our President, Mr. Roosevelt, was a Jew . . . and that he wasn't fit to run the country . . . He further stated that he much preferred Mussolini and Hitler's tactics to those of a President whom he continually referred to in a disparaging way as Mr. Rosenfeldt . . . He has mentioned several times that he used to work for the Penna Railroad and was fired on account of his pro-Nazi activities. . ."

The Baldwin workers are glad to be rid of Hercha but they want to know how much longer Pegler will be permitted to act as a front for the pro-Nazis out to sabotage the war effort.

'Meet With Unions,' WLB Asks Cities

Washington, Dec. 31 — The War Labor Board this week told city and state governments throughout the nation that they have a solemn duty to engage in collective bargaining with their employes, even though the WLB assumes no jurisdiction over their negotiations.

The opinion was voiced by Dean Wayne Morse of the WLB in a lengthy decision involving union disputes with New York City, Newark and Omaha, Nebr. Earlier leaders of the CIO transport and municipal workers unions had sharply criticized the Board's refusal to take jurisdiction in their cases.

WLB DECLINED

Morse argued that such action by the WLB would constitute an invasion of the "sovereign rights" of sub-divisions of state governments. Effect of the WLB refusal to act was to leave the unions with little recourse when city or state government officials give them the cold shoulder in negotiating sessions.

While refusing jurisdiction for the WLB, Dean Morse argued strongly that municipal executives should take a cooperative attitude in dealing with unions. He blasted Mayor LaGuardia of New York City for refusing to attend a WLB hearing at which the CIO transport workers' demands were being discussed.

Much of the unrest and dissatisfaction among government employes, the WLB official said, "can be placed squarely at the door of those few administrative officials of government who, by their records, show that they have a very uncompromising and unenlightened attitude toward the problem of discussing labor relations questions with public employes coming within their jurisdiction."

A 92-year-old citizen of Minonk, Ill., rolled up his sleeves and got in 17,000 pounds of scrap for the local scrap drive.

N.A.M.'s Crawford - Shotgun Caesar

By JOHN DUNN

Federated Press

"One of my forebears had a flintlock rifle. That rifle is hanging in my house, over the fireplace, and before I will permit you (the U.S. Government) unhindered, to put into effect these plans for regimentation of a free enterprise in this country, I will take that musket down and give you battle."

Those words belong to Frederick C. Crawford, starched collar storm trooper from Ohio whom the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers has placed in command of its "desperate civil war" against American democracy.

They were spoken a little more than a year ago at a round table conference sponsored by Fortune, the business magazine. And Crawford wasn't speaking metaphorically. For seven years as president of Thompson Products Inc., he has broken the law of the land.

He has used spies, gunmen, goons, teargas and sawed off shotguns to destroy the aspirations of his employes for collective bargaining. He has repeatedly expressed his admiration for fascism and his hatred for the commander-in-chief of the U. S. armed forces—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Pathological Hate

Crawford's hatred for Pres. Roosevelt is almost pathological. For years he had in his private office a picture of the President hanging upside down. Beside it was a picture of Mrs. Roosevelt with a pipe stuck in her mouth.

His admiration, on the other hand, for fascism is well known. In 1939 he made a trip to Europe. On his return he praised Mussolini's regime in Italy and asked: "What difference does it make if the dictatorship of Germany is consuming one-fourth of production for military grandeur or whether the bureaucracy of the New Deal is consuming one-fourth of production to maintain itself?"

It would be less than fair if Crawford's war aims were not told. He has put them succinctly:

"We are fighting for our freedom. Freedom from renegotiation of contracts. Freedom from Pansy Perkins. Freedom from Prostituting Attorney Arnold. Freedom from the Alice-in-Wonderland War Labor Board, freedom from that (unprintable epi-) thet) gentleman on the hill."

Goering must have wept with joy until his mascara ran and Hirohito surely let loose with a couple of Banzais when the news came Dec. 5 that Lammot duPont and the other NAM fat boys had elevated the Cleveland shotgun Caesar to the purple.

Bells should have run in Berlin for a U.S. industrialist who threatened to close a vital war plant in Bell, Calif., if his employes joined either the AFL or CIO; who fired nine skilled workers for pasting "This Machine Works for Hitler" stickers on idle machines in his Cleveland factory; and who disrupted production in another department for a week to fire a unionist.

F. C. CRAWFORD
"We've got Roosevelt on the run . . ."

All of this is a matter of record with the Natl. Labor Relations Board and the Natl. War Labor Board. There is also plenty on the record of the LaFollette committee to prove that there isn't anything in the book of anti-unionism or out of it, that Crawford hasn't used.

NAM's Perfect Choice

In fact, he was chairman of the NAM resolutions committee which met secretly last September to map the program. Lammot duPont called the signals but Crawford carried the ball with statements like this:

"Weve got Roosevelt on the run. We'll keep him on the run. Let's spend some real money this year. What the hell—it'll only cost us 20 per cent, the rest would go in taxes any way."

Crawford at 51 is one of the youngest tories ever chosen to head the NAM. Crawford is tall, thin and high strung. He tries to look haughty and usually succeeds. His publicity men have, with the earnest help of Cleveland's newspapers, tried to build him up as a civic leader. But he continually lets them down by popping off in the language of an 18th century aristocrat.

A native of Watertown, Mass., Crawford was graduated from Harvard University in 1916 and went to Cleveland as a maintenance engineer at the Steel Products Inc., which was to become Thompson Products. He joined all the right clubs and did all the things expected of a young Harvard man on his way up.

Crawford first came to the attention of the public and federal authorities after the enactment of the Wagner act. He had become president of Thompson Products in 1933. Cleveland was caught in the great organizing wave that was sweeping industrial America.

To combat just this, Cleveland industrialists had built the Associated Industries. The young president of Thompson's was very active in the AI, whose record of strikebreaking, industrial espionage and violation of civil liberties fills several volumes of the LaFollette committee's records.

Crawford was a director of the Associated Industries and his company was one of the best customers of Corporation Service Bureau, the AI's spy organization. The AI tried to deny that it ever paid any money to the spy outfit, but LaFollettee investigators had evidence to show that it had used an ink eradicator in an attempt to eliminate from its books, records of the payments.

Lots of Tear Gas

This type of chicanery was typical of the Thompson company's own relations with the spy outfit. LaFollette investigators found that Thompson's had paid for the spy service by giving vouchers to certain employes for so-called legal and professional services so that the employes could pay the Corporation Service Bureau by personal check.

The LaFollette committee also found that the Thompson company ranked 16th among all U.S. companies in the amount of teargas purchased. And that it spent $4,603.75 in one year for industrial spies. And that is not all, according to the Cleveland Union Leader, which says the unrecorded amounts spent by Thompson's fighting unions would probably run into tens of thousands of dollars.

Crawford's anti-union activities have won the admiration of his fellow industrialists and constant attention from the NLRB. Pending either in the NLRB or federal courts are charges involving company unionism, discriminatory firings, coercion and intimidation in Thompson plants at Cleveland, Detroit, Euclid O., and Bell, Cal.

More serious is a charge filed by Local 300, United Auto Workers (CIO), with the Natl. War Labor Board that "Frederick C. Crawford, president of Thompson Products Inc., is un-American, subversive, pro-Axis and an enemy of our country."

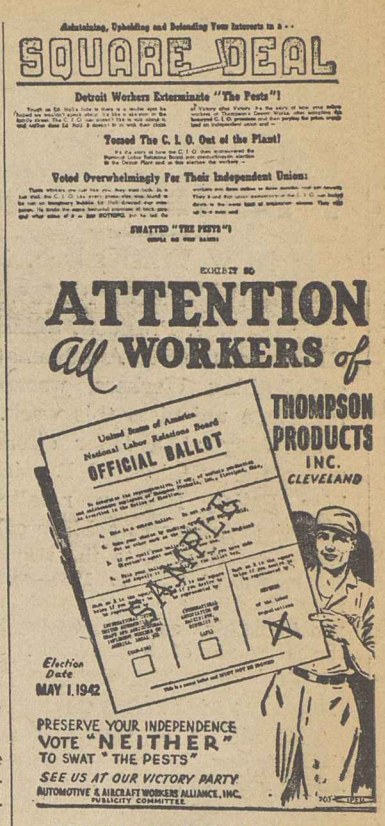
A 63-page brief prepared by Ed Hall, co-director of the UAW's current organizing drive, tells the story of what Crawford has done since the national emergency began. Some highlights:

Nine unionists fired for pasting "This machine Works for Hitler" stickers on idle machinery; lack of manpower in Thompson plants because the company refuses to hire unionists; disruption of morale by continuance of the Automotive & Aircraft Workers Alliance Inc., one of three of Crawford's company unions outlawed by the NLRB; demotion of skilled workers, even though it hurts production, when they are suspected of unionism; 3,000 man-hours wasted weekly by employes who spend their time spying on and hounding fellow employes.

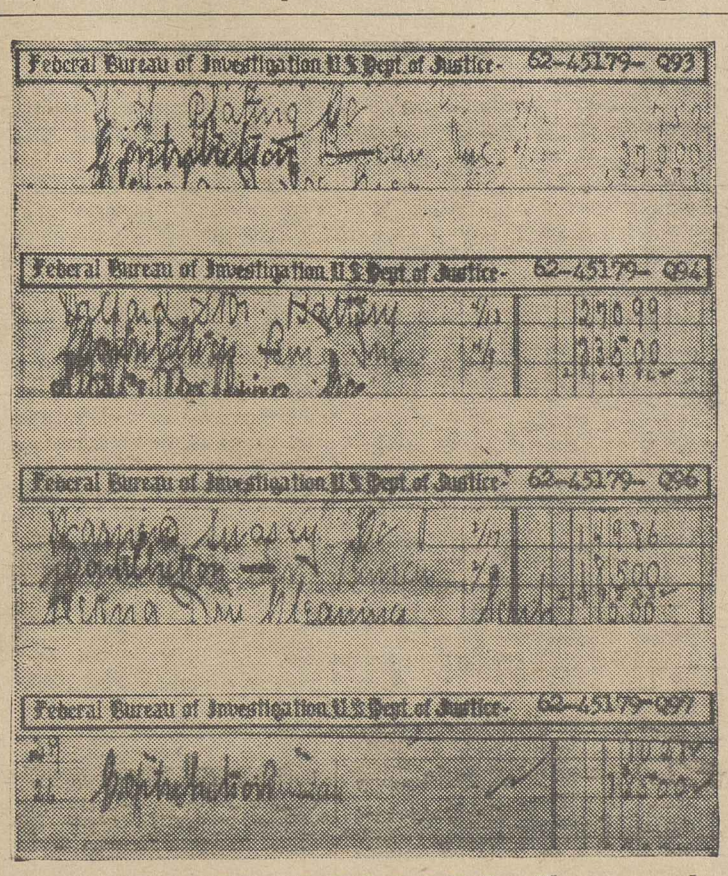
Big Profits

Since the defense program started, Crawford's company has done quite well—by taking advantage of that government generosity Crawford is so fond of denouncing. It was one of the first companies to get a government grant—13 million dollars— to build a defense plant which it leases from the government at $1 a year.

Although Thompson's is primarily a subcontractor, dependent on the big auto and aircraft companies, its gross business in 1941 was $44,332,596 and gross profits were $9,280,688.



COMPANY UNION literature gets distributed freely at Thompson Products, Inc., anti-union corportion headed by the NAM's new president, Frederick Crawford.



DOCTORED RECORDS: These records of the Associated Industries, notorious Cleveland strikebreaking agency of which Crawford is a director, show how the AI unsuccessfully attempted to hide the fact that it made payments to Corporation Service Bureau, labor spy outfit. FBI experts used a special process to show that ink eradicator had been used to eliminate the spy outfit's name and that names of other, and more respectable, organizations were written in over it.

U. S. Pleads 'Button Your Lips'

Washington, Dec. 31—On battle fronts every day men risk their lives to discover the location and strength of the military units of the enemy. Yet at home, too many of us are presenting the enemy with information of the same military value, the Office of Censorship says in a statement.

This is the information which newspapers and individuals are asked not to tell the enemy:

DO NOT TELL the names of ships upon which sailors serve.

DO NOT TELL the troop units in which soldiers serve overseas.

There is no objection to revealing that Pvt. John Jones is in Australia or that Seaman Tom Brown saw action in the Atlantic, but there is military information which endangers the lives of American fighting men in stating that Pvt. John Jones, "Company C, 600th Infantry," is in Australia, or Seaman Tom Brown, "Aboard the U. S. S. Wisconsin," is in the Atlantic.

The Office of Censorship says: "We ask editors not to publish these troop identifications, and we ask parents and relatives not to reveal them. Don't give the enemy anything that may lengthen the war!"

Course Opens For Labor Teachers

Monteagle, Tenn., Dec. 31 — A course to train labor education leaders will be inaugurated by Highlander Folk School on Feb. 1, it was announced today.

The course, which will run until April, will give capable leaders a chance to do field work under the supervision of Highlander staff teachers in important union centers of the south.

Highlander has the support of many CIO and AFL unions, and has done pioneer work throughout the south in helping workers raise their economic and educational levels.

Applications for the course may be obtained by writing to Highlander Folk School, Monteagle, Tenn.

Preserve United Nations Unity, Hillman Urges; Hails Soviets' Courage

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—Unity of the peoples of the United Nations, forged out of the hammer blows of Axis aggression, must not be permitted to fall apart after the war, President Sidney Hillman of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers, warned American unionists this week.

Speaking at a labor dinner under the auspices of Russian War Relief, Hillman recalled that the "failure to achieve collective security led to the shameful record of 1936 to 1939—commencing with the advance of Japan into China and culminating in the triumph of appeasement at Munich."

HITLER'S SPLITTING TACTICS

That process of individual nations falling before the fascist hordes must be avoided at all costs in the post-war world, the clothing union leader added.

"It is of first importance that the understanding among the United Nations which has been sealed with our common blood be further strengthened and deepened," he said.

"Divisive voices are still heard among us from those appeasers and defeatists who have never been wholehearted enemies of fascism. They are playing Hitler's game.

"They attack our unity — our greatest source of strength. They seek to divide the liberty-loving people of the world, as they were divided in 1939, and open the way to their defeat, one by one."

OTHER SPEAKERS

Similar expressions of gratitude to the Soviet Union for its resistance to the Nazi armies and for the need of unity among democratic peoples were voiced by other speakers—Chairman William H. Davis of the War Labor Board; President Samuel Wolchok of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes; Vice - President Howard Mackenzie of the National Maritime Union and Lloyd Ross, secretary of the Australian Union of Railway Workers.

Hillman charged that fascist-minded enemies of unity are no longer able to attack directly, but keep up a furtive campaign.

"They say that we owe Russia no debt of sympathy or gratitude because she is not fighting for us, but for herself. Of course, Russia fights for herself—as we fight for ourselves. Each fights to preserve its freedom and independence in this great people's war of national liberation. Each, in fighting for itself, contributes to the common cause. Only if we fight together can our cause triumph.

APPEASEMENT FORCES

"The voices that preach division and distrust today, in the heat of battle, will grow louder and more insistent once the victory is won. Then the forces of appeasement and reaction will make their all-out effort to divide the United Nations and defeat our common purpose. For these gentlemen are not interested in waging a people's war or writing a people's peace."

The common people are not fighting for another power-mad Versailles, Hillman asserted, but, instead "for the four freedoms and all they imply."

Before the war, he recalled, Hitler agents "assiduously fostered and persistently played upon" two misconceptions about the Soviet Union.

EXPLODED MYTH

The first of these, he said, was an underestimation of the strength and courage of the Red Army and of the productivity of Soviet industry. The other, Hillman added, was the belief "that there could be no common basis for collaboration between two economic systems so different as those of the Soviet Union and our own.

"Eighteen months of the most sustained and savage warfare that the world has ever seen have fully explode the myth of Soviet weakness . . .

"The formal evidence of coalition lies in the United Nations agreement, the Anglo-Soviet treaty and the Roosevelt - Molotov protocol. These documents have their basis in, and draw their strength from our common purpose to destroy the Axis; forever to liquidate the barbarous ideology of fascism, and to build a new world in which all people shall have the right to determine their own way of life in freedom, peace and security."

Stone Union Wins Ohio Poll

Chauncey, Ohio, Dec. 31—Employes of Strontium Products Company voted 43 to 11 for the United Stone and Allied Products Workers Union in election December 23. The company previously had accepted proof of representation in the form of signed cards presented by the union, but later reneged on its pledge.

The workers have given answer to these double dealing tactics. International Representative John Ceope organized the plant.

CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A nation-wide campaign for immediate rationing of all essential consumer goods was announced this week by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO as part of the program for National Auxiliary Week, the third week in January.

Tens of thousands of individual penny post cards to Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes is the goal of the campaign and local auxiliaries are urged to set themselves a quota of cards to be sent in during the national week.

KNOW THE REASONS

"We understand why there are shortages. We know our armies and our allies must have food to fight Hitler," the Auxiliary Washington News Letter says. "But we can't win the war if working people can't get the food and clothing they need to maintain all-out production. And we can't be sure they do get these things unless they're rationed so that everybody gets what he needs to do his job for Victory."

The News Letter also attacks the appeaser press for its drive against rationing and asks its affiliated organizations to make it clear to Byrnes that the people support rationing—approve of the plans for rationing canned goods, and urge more rationing immediately.

Wide circulation of the new CIO leaflet "Women in War Work", the speech made by President Philip Murray to the Second Annual CIO Auxiliary Conference in Boston is another goal of National Auxiliary Week. President Murray concluded his inspiring address to the auxiliary delegates with these words:

"I think that when you go back home you should try to impress on your local unions the need for developing larger and stronger local auxiliaries. I think you should impress upon the national officers of your unions the need of encouraging the growth of auxiliaries nationally also. They will add to the strength and give comfort to their unions and they will help the nation win the war."

PLAN CAMPAIGNS

The Auxiliaries plan to use National Auxiliary Week to take President Murray's advice and call upon all local unions to inaugurate campaigns to assist in building new auxiliaries and strengthening existing ones.

The News Letter lists three ways in which an auxiliary can be of practical assistance in the union's war program, and points out that there are many more. 1. Undertaking all or part of the union's program for welfare of servicemen. 2. Training its members to check on observance of price control and rationing regulations in stores where union families buy. 3. Aiding in community action to establish child care centers where they are needed. Material on how to proceed to help the union in each of these fields is available from the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of CIO, 1019 15th St. N.W., Washington, D. C.

The third feature of National Auxiliary Week is a national money-raising drive in which every CIO auxiliary is urged to participate. The purpose is to raise a fund to pay expenses of auxiliary organizers. The organizers will be volunteer women in key industrial areas, named by the executive board of the Auxiliary Congress on the recommendation of the existing auxiliaries in each area. Each auxiliary is asked to plan some money raising affair to raise a contribution to the national organizing fund.

PROCEEDINGS OUT

Proceedings of the Second Annual Conference of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO are off the press this week. They contain a condensed version of the daily proceedings for each of the four days of the Conference, Nov. 9-12.

The win-the-war program of the CIO auxiliary congress is available in these proceedings, which should be read by everyone really interested in the auxiliary movement. On sale for 30 cents, CWA-CIO, 1019 15th St., N.W., Washington, D. C.

Food Is Ammunition for Civilians; "Distribute It to All," Is Demand

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—"You can't run a war as long as people have doubt how they're going to eat, any more than you can distribute bullets to soldiers on the basis of their income before they joined the Army."

With that principle in mind, Donald Montgomery, resigning Consumers Counsel of the Department of Agriculture, this week called on labor, farm and consumers groups to make their voices heard in the halls of government where vital wartime food decisions are being made.

Montgomery, who quit his office after its powers had been stripped by Roy F. Hendrickson, newly-appointed food distribution director, bluntly warned the American people that under present plans," consumers' needs shall be determined for them by an office not admittedly accountable to them.

"At the same time, an industrial relations division is created to work closely with food processors and distributors, and to give them a chance to say what they want."

ACTED FOR CONSUMERS

The Agriculture Department's Consumers Counsel—which Montgomery headed for seven years—was set up to act as a spokesman for the people in helping determine fair prices, quality standards and similar food and apparel problems.

Its termination, Montgomery said, "is a clear signal to consumers that they had better begin to look to their food needs themselves. Few consumers, least of all those with low incomes, have been able to send paid spokesmen to Washington to look after their interests.

"That was why consumers' counsels were set up in the first place," he commented, "and that's why consumers' counsels have been liquidated, one by one."

Montgomery, in a detailed statement about the nation's food problem, warned that 1943 may find Americans facing food problems as serious as those in Great Britain. Speaking two days before the OPA announced its contemplated point-rationing system, the former Agriculture official predicted that the Americans will take food sacrifices in stride if they are assured that a fair system, bringing equal food to all the people, is speedily put into effect.

SERIOUS PROBLEMS

This country has a long way to go before it comes within calling distance of the British set-up for insuring a decent minimum food allotment for every citizen, Montgomery declared.

By taking title to all the food in the British Isles, the government has been able to provide free or low-cost provisions for many low income families, and to see that every family gets a highly nutritious diet—even if it's less varied than what many of us are accustomed to on this side of the Atlantic.

In contrast, Montgomery predicted that 38% of the American public won't have the cash to buy the meat they'll be entitled to in future rationing books.

FIVE-POINT PLANS

To meet the nation's war-time food needs, Montgomery offered a five-point program which included:

1. Rationing of all foods except cereal products and perishable fruits and vegetables—a program to be instituted without advance notice, so that hoarders and speculators can stock their shelves.

2. Governmental assistance to low-income families to help give them sufficient food for an active place in the war effort.

3. Government subsidies of food processing and production—as in Britain—rather than subsidies through continually higher prices paid by consumers.

4. Extension of the food stamp plan and the school lunch plan, and the supplying of large quantities of whole wheat bread, flour and potatoes to low income consumers.

5. Elimination of luxury foods and of waste, and greater consumption of skimmed milk—now going in large quantities as hog food—and margarine.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

President S. H. Dalrymple of the United Rubber Workers of America reports the following elections: Goodyear Plant, New Toronto, Ontario, Canada, 83 per cent voted URWA-CIO; Dayton Rubber Company, Dayton, Ohio, URWA-CIO, 397, Independent 315, No Union 9; Plant Protection Firemen, Des Moines U. S. Ordnance Plant 97½ per cent voted URWA-CIO; U.S. Rubber, Detroit, Michigan, plant guards voted for the URWA-CIO by an overwhelming majority. President Dalrymple also reports that favorable progress is being made in reorganizing Firestone plant in Hamilton, Ontario, Canada.

Frank McCarty of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee reports another PWOC-CIO victory at Wilson Company in Chicago by a vote of 3454 for CIO to 1014.

George Craig, regional director in Philadelphia, reports winning an election in behalf of the Textile Workers Union, CIO, by a vote of 91 to 82 for no union.

Iowa Votes CIO

Ben Henry, regional director in Des Moines, reports winning the following elections in his region: The UAW-CIO won the election at the J. I. Case Manufacturing Company's plant in Burlington, Iowa, by a vote of 117 to 18 for the AFL. Thus, the last J. I. Case plant is enrolled in CIO. The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee won an election at the Iowa Packing Company's plant in Des Moines, by a vote of 480 for the CIO to 418 for the Independent. This plant, a subsidiary of Swift & Company has been notoriously non-union for several years. The PWOC started to organize it in 1937.

Ewald Sandner, regional director in Newark, N. J., reports that Morris Riger of the UPNTWA announces an outstanding victory at the Hillside-Irvington plant of the Lionel Corporation. The union was certified as the collective bargaining agency by a vote of 485 out of 729 eligible. Negotiations for a contract are now in progress. This campaign culminates a 25 year attempt on the part of organized labor to organize this plant. Brother Sam Macri, CIO Field Representative assisted in this campaign.

Wilbur E. Bade, director of organization of the American Newspaper Guild, reports winning an election in the International News Service by a vote of 134 for CIO as against 32. Several years ago the ANG lost an election there. Therefore, this fine victory is particularly significant. Brother Bade also advises this is the only major wire service whose employes did not have Guild contract protection.

First in Kaiser

The Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists & Technicians, CIO, became the first CIO union to win an NLRB election in the Kaiser Shipbuilding empire, when the technical employes at the Permanent Magnesium plant near Los Altos, California, voted overwhelmingly for the CIO, after the AFL withdrew from the election in the face of sure defeat. Negotiations for a contract are now under way.

In the NLRB elections held in seven divisions of the Pacific Gas Electric Company, San Francisco, California, the Utility Workers Organizing Committee, CIO received 570 votes, AFL, 238 and no union 53. At the North Bay, CIO received 185, AFL 116, no union 20; San Jose, CIO received 292 votes, AFL 27, no union 21. Of the several elections held in this industry on the West Coast, CIO received a total of 1221 votes as against 1019 votes for the AFL.

R. J. Davidson, CIO Regional Director in Cincinnati, reports that the CIO won an election at Fries & Son, Covington, Kentucky, with a vote of 33 as against 2 for the AFL.

John C. Lawson, Secretary-Treasurer, United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America advises that the employes of Strontium Products Company, Chauncey, Ohio, voted 43 to 11 for the CIO. The company previously had accepted proof of representation in the form of signed cards presented by the union, but later reneged on its pledge. The workers have given answer to these double dealing tactics. International Representative John Ceope organized this plant.

STAR'S VISIT: Members of the CIO United Automobile Workers crowded around to hear when John Garfield, popular movie star, made an impromptu speech during a visit to the Willys-Overland plant in Toledo, Ohio.

Bengalese Peasants Arm Against Invaders

CALCUTTA, Dec. 31 (ALN)—In India's easternmost provinces of Bengal and Assam, which for months have been threatened with invasion by the Japanese, the workers are not only straining every nerve to increase war production but are also cooperating with the Kisan Sabhas (peasant unions) to form armed People's Defense Brigades. Hindu and Moslem workers participate jointly in these activities.

One of the vital war materials produced by India is jute. To increase their profits, the Bengal and Assam jute employers organized into the Indian Jute Mills Association, cut production 20% last August and laid off 8,000 workers. To deal with this situation the General Council of the Bengal Trades Union Congress met in Calcutta and passed the following resolution:

"We urge the Bengal government to realize the seriousness of the situation and appoint a joint committee, consisting of representatives of employers, workers and government, to investigate conditions in the jute industry, prevent the laying off of workers and introduce a uniform standard of wages. This is imperative if production for the fight against fascism is not to be impeded."

ELECT COMMITTEES

Following this meeting, workers in the jute mills elected committees to cooperate with the employers in finding ways to increase production.

The Bengal Railwaymen's Federation met at the same time to demand speedier conversion of railway shops to war production, military training of the workers, and increased pay to offset the rise in living costs.

"Only a well-fed people can defend the country," one delegate said. "Only training in the use of arms will raise the morale of the workers."

PEOPLE UNITE

Significantly, measures taken by the workers and peasants to organize their own defense brigades have gone farthest in Chittagong, nearest city in India to the Japanese armies.

When Chittagong was severely bombed last May 9, the president of the local Dock Workers' Union, Golam Sarif, was killed. Immediately after this a District Organizing Committee was formed to recruit a People's Defense Brigade.

The committee consisted of five members—three Hindu and two Moslem. Within two weeks the brigade numbered 2000, 25% of whom were Moslem. In the face of the common danger, unity between the Moslem minority and Hindu majority was complete.

Detroit CIO Women Busy In War Work

Detroit, Dec. 31—Detroit UAW-CIO Womens Auxiliaries, besides being regular contributors to the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, have undertaken a program for 100 per cent participation in all branches of volunteer war services.

With over 500 members having graduated from first aid classes, the women's auxiliaries will not let up their campaign until every member has passed the three courses.

IN RED CROSS

Members are represented in Red Cross work as Nurse's Aides, First Aid Instructors, Motor Corps drivers, and Canteen Aides; maintaining three Red Cross Blood Donor stations and making regular donations to the Red Cross Blood Donor Service; acquainting auxiliary members and families with Red Cross services to the armed forces; recruiting for the various Red Cross volunteer service and supporting the 1943 Red Cross War Fund.

In OCD work including Nurse's Aides, the women's auxiliaries are active as air raid wardens and drivers.

Unions Prove Major Factor In Britain's Manpower Set-up; Have Big Voice

LONDON, Dec. 31 (ALN)—In Britain, where the last reserves of manpower have now been tapped, special importance attaches to the problem of movement of labor from one industry to another.

An expanding war plant cannot get new workers merely by calling in persons hitherto not engaged in industry; the workers must be transferred from some other plant or industry. This vital task of transferring labor is carried out, not by the employers, but by the government.

THREE MAIN LAWS

Three legislative acts give the Minister of Labor and National Service (Ernest Bevin) full control over the movement of labor:

(1) The Emergency Powers Act of May 22, 1940, which empowers the government "to require all persons to place themselves, their services and their property at the disposal of the Crown," and gives Bevin authority, not only to draft for service in industry all able-bodied persons not yet in the armed forces, but also to shift workers from one industry to another;

(2) The Restriction-on-Engagement Order of May 1940, which states that employers in designated industries shall not hire workers except through the local Employment Exchange of the Ministry of Labor;

(3) The Essential Work Order of March 15, 1941, which decrees that workers in "essential" industries may not leave their jobs—and may not be dismissed—without the permission of a National Service Officer representing the Labor Ministry.

In exercising these powers Labor Minister Bevin works in conjunction with the Regional Production Boards, on which the Ministry of Labor is represented. Workers are transferred, not because of the whim of employers or market fluctuations, but in accordance with the requirements of an over-all economic plan for the nation.

COOPERATE WITH UNIONS

Further, the Labor Minister collaborates fully with the trade unions. Three labor representatives sit on each of the Regional Production Boards, and it is the duty of the National Service Officer, in the case of disputed transfers, to consult with the plant labor-management committees.

The Essential Work Order, considered by many to be the most far-reaching British legislation to have come out of the war, was drawn up by Bevin in close consultation with representatives of the Trades Union Congress.

In return for its ruling that no worker in an "essential" plant may leave his job without the consent of a National Service Officer, and that absentees shall be liable to prosecution by the NSO, the Essential Work Order gives workers the following three guarantees:

THREE GUARANTEES

(1) Every "essential" firm must pay its employes a guaranteed "normal" weekly wage, whether or not they are fully employed all the week. The "normal" wage is that previously arrived at by collective bargaining between the unions and employers' federations in the industry.

(2) Every "essential" firm must provide its employes with conditions "not less favorable" than those general in the industry.

Under this and the above section of the Order, the collective bargaining function of unions—always especially important in Britain in view of the lack of national wage-hour legislation—becomes part of the machinery of government. New emphasis is thus given to the role of trade unions in the war effort.

(3) In those plants with joint production committees, or coal mines with pit production committees, the National Service Officer may not penalize a worker for slackness or absenteeism without first consulting the committee. Further, the worker has the right to appeal to a Local Appeals Board, on which labor is represented. Since March 1941, only one worker out of 30,000 has been prosecuted under the order.

When put into effect on March 15, 1941, the Essential Work Order applied to nearly 100 industries. Today the order covers nearly 8,000,000 workers.

General Strike Averted In Bolivia

(According to reports from Bolivia, the strike ended this week with the announcement by a government mediator that negotiations for final settlement are now under way.)

LA PAZ, Dec. 31 (ALN)—Only urgent appeals by trade union leaders strongly opposed to the Axis have kept the tin strike in the Patino mines from spreading to other mining districts of Bolivia.

With Aurelio Alcoba, general secretary of the Confederation of Bolivian Workers (CSTB) and other union officials in jail, with martial law prevailing in the mining camps, with cabinet officials issuing statements about Nazi uprisings, a general strike this week was considered certain.

STRIKE PROVOKED

However, at a dramatic meeting of 5,000 miners in Potosi, center for over a year of an anti-labor offensive by the tin corporations, the miners voted to postpone a strike after hearing pleas by Potosi Deputy Arratia and local union leaders Pedrazas and Victor Sanjines. For months the Hochschild company has been preparing busily for a strike, arming its garrisons of carabinieros with machine guns and hiring 100 strikebreakers a day. Deputy Arratia said:

"Miners—do not respond to Hochschild's Fifth Column provocations! You have expressed your solidarity with the peoples fighting for a better world. Despite the justice of your demands, do not stop working.

"The Red Army has taken the offensive against the Nazis; the British and North American forces are pushing forward in North Africa. They need our tin!"

Printing of the country's new all-purpose ration books will take 87,000 pounds of ink, 7500 pounds of paste, half a million pounds of boxing.

Australian Nails Press Slurs on Labor Govt.

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Stories and rumors that Australian labor morale is low, that the workers there aren't enough interested in the war and that consequently war production suffers, are absolutely false, a high officer of the Aus-tralian labor movement told the CIO NEWS in an interview this week.

He was Lloyd Ross, youthful secretary of the Australian Railways Union in New South Wales—here in the U. S. by way of Canada, for a brief tour of our war production centers. In Canada, he attended a conference of the Institute of Pacific Relations.

"Such rumors are due to the anti-labor attitudes of many newspaper correspondents who don't like the extent of labor organization in Australia or the fact that we have a labor government—or who think their publishers would be pleased by stories knocking labor."

Morale and production are high in all sections of Australian war industry, he said, particularly on the waterfront where war supply ships are handled. The waterfront union, he added, is represented on shiploading commissions, and union leaders have shown the way to record-breaking ship turnarounds.

UNION EFFICIENCY

"Naturally the efficiency of the war workers is highest where the unions are strongest," he said. "You will find, for example, that efficiency in shiploading compares favorably with the records of your own Longshoremen and Warehousemens Union—headed, incidentally, by an Australian-born worker."

Labor - management production committees are beginning to be set up, functioning most effectively in the basic arms production industry, which is government-controlled. They also function on the waterfront, in mining and in the explosives industry. The arms industry employs some 100,000 workers in direct production, all of whom are organized in unions and employed by the government.

The extent of unionization in Australia is demonstrated by the fact that close to one million workers are union members, of a total Australian population of only seven million. New thousands are coming in as women are brought into war industry. Women, Ross explained, are the only untapped source of labor left in the country.

UNITY FOR WAR

Unity on the win-the-war issues has existed in Australia since long before the Japanese attack, Ross said, despite the occasional reluctance of some employers to come along. Such issues as price control have been accepted, though rationing remains a problem. This difficulty, he explained, is largely due to the fact that Australia is feeding more than 100,000 extra people with 60 per cent fewer workers in the consumers' goods industries.

Australian workers are keenly interested in unity with workers of the other United Nations, Ross pointed out, and are particularly interested in closer contact with U. S. workers. "They will come into any form of international labor unity that gives each trade union movement in the United Nations an equal role," he said.

"The Australians are like workers everywhere. They want above everything else to win this war and rid the world of fascist slavery."

WLB in New Step To Speed Decisions

By LEILA FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31—Its machinery bogged down with thousands of cases now before it, the National War Labor Board late last week announced a two-fold decentralization plan to help simplify procedure and speed action on disputes and adjustment cases.

Announced by the WLB as a means "to cut red tape to the minimum without relaxing in any way the heavy responsibility" placed upon the board, the action is seen as a general move in the direction of attaining faster action in the regional offices, along lines sought by the CIO in recent months.

Under the new plan, authority will be delegated to the regional offices to make final decisions on all labor disputes and on all voluntary wage and salary adjustment cases involving employers of less than 100 workers. These, the board estimates, comprise approximately two-thirds of all requests for wage or salary adjustments coming before it under the stabilization program.

CUT WLB's ROUTINE

With authority delegated to regional offices, the 12-man War Labor Board will be free to act almost exclusively as a supreme court to hear appeals from regional offices and its industry commissions. Only exceptions to this procedure will be cases of national significance, or those which involve consideration of major policy. Over these, the board will reserve the right to original jurisdiction.

Final decisions on voluntary adjustment cases would follow the procedure of the national board, which provides for appeal to a tripartite regional panel from an adverse ruling by a regional director. The decisions of these panels are final, subject to the right of any panel member to request board review, and the board's right of review on its own motion.

"The goal towards which the board is aiming in its decentralization program," according to George W. Taylor, acting chairman of the board, "is a simplified procedure under which Mary Jones, who works behind a counter in a department store, and Henry Miller, who handles a machine in a war factory, can get quick action on the requests of their employers or unions for wage or salary adjustments."

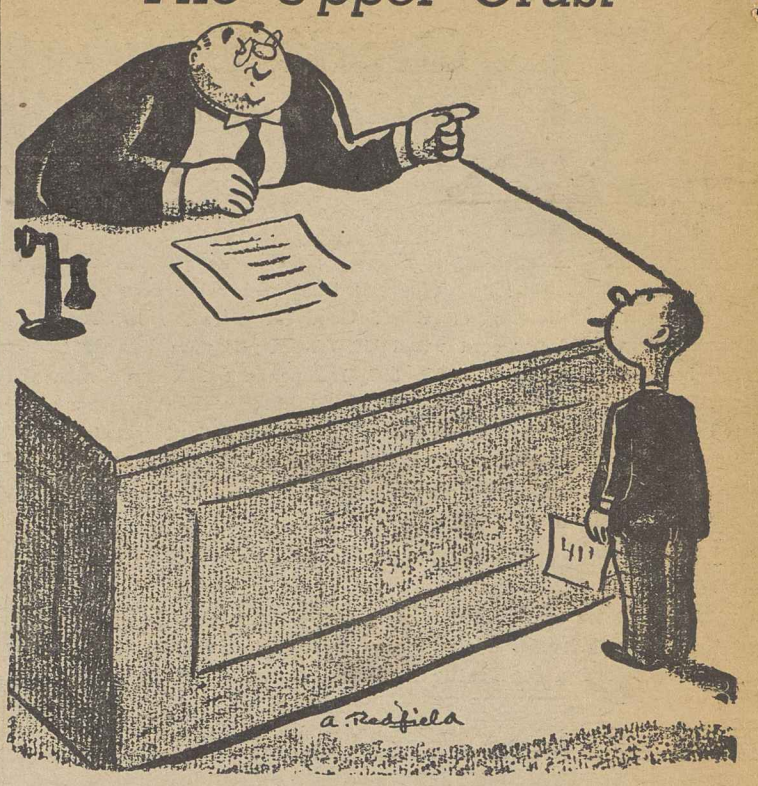
TO FORM MORE PANELS

Plans are now being worked out, the board announced, to establish panels composed of four representatives each of labor, management and public in major cities in the country to which cases which cannot be settled by the U. S. Conciliation Service may be referred. Regional Advisory Boards are already established in the WLB's 10 regional headquarters at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Dallas, Kansas City, Cleveland, Chicago, Denver and San Francisco.

Previously, authority to make final rulings had been delegated to regional offices only in limited types of cases.

In addition to the re-allocation of authority, the board is drafting simplified forms to use in applying for wage and salary adjustments. These will make it easier for the small business firm to apply for rulings on proposed adjustments.

The Upper Crust



"Now, Wilbur, it's up to you. Explain to the men that there can't be any grievance committee in wartime."

Murray Hails USSR Fight Against Foe

Washington, Dec. 31 — American workers and all our people are "profoundly stirred by your magnificent resistance to the full force of Hitler's war machine," President Murray said in sending New Year's greetings to the Russian people, through the Tass news agency.

"We hail with delight your victorious offensive which is daily freeing more and more of your land from the Nazi grip," he said. "American labor is straining every effort to strengthen the offensive power of our armed forces and to furnish all possible assistance to our fighting allies."

Declaring that the Soviet offensives have "turned the tide of battle for all the United Nations," Murray added: "We join you in fervent hope and iron determination that 1943 will bring the final and complete defeat of Hitlerism, and the beginning of a new era of peace, security and social progress for all the peoples of the world."

Ask Halt to Tax Dodge In Ads

AMHERST, Mass., Dec. 31—Charging that manpower and scarce materials are being wasted by the continuation of full peacetime volume of advertising, 100 educators and economists called upon high government officials this week to prevent excess profits going into ads rather than into taxes.

"We urged through administrative order that commercial companies be permitted to include as a deductible cost (for tax purposes) only that minimum of advertising absolutely essential to secure the sale of actual current output," the group wrote to Sec. of Treasury Morgenthau, WPB Chief Nelson, Stabilization Director Byrnes and OPA Director Henderson.

"We are not here disputing the peacetime service of advertising," the group said. "We are nevertheless aware that there is now little present need to stimulate current consumption.

"To the extent to which advertising accelerates present buying, it is running in direct opposition to the effort of the Treasury and the War Agencies to check inflation."

VOLUME IS UP

Advertising volume has increased by 21 per cent over the 1935-39 peacetime average, the group declared, adding:

". . . Freedom of the press may well be enhanced if newspapers are less dependent upon advertising and more dependent upon collecting the true cost of publication directly from the readers."

Signers of the letter included Prof. Colston Warne of Amherst College; Prof. J. R. Smith of Columbia; Prof. Elizabeth Hoyt of Iowa State; Prof. Morris E. Garnsey of Colorado University; and Prof. Paul Kirkpatrick of Leland Stanford.

The Unions Are Doing the Job

This letter from Corp. A. Bindman was sent to J. R. Robertson, vice-president of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union. The writer, who has been in the army since March, is a former union official.

Fort Bliss, Texas.

Dear Bob and Union Friends:

When I first entered the Army in March, I reported the lack of material and supplies which then stood out as the most obvious weakness in our armed forces. Today, after eight months, I can report that the situation has completely changed; some of the most important materials and supplies are plentiful. Of course, there is much to be hoped for but from the way things are moving it should not be long before I can report "perfect."

If you remember, I said that after being in the army eight weeks I had not seen a 90 mm. gun and that we did not have other important training items. Since then I completed my basic training and was sent out on Cadre to another outfit. This week the outfit is being activated and we have almost every bit of equipment necessary for combat duty. Quite a difference. One outfit (8 months ago) started with practically nothing; another outfit (8 months later) is starting completely equipped.

I know who is responsible for the excellent change. It is the workers on the home front. The labor management committees, the Murray and Bridges and Reuther plans are beginning to show their effects. Supplies are coming in good numbers and on time. Keep up the good work.

MORE OUTPUT NEEDED

The need for increased production has taken on far greater importance since the opening of the African Front. That front must be expanded and accelerated in its forcefulness. It is up to you, workers in industry, to deliver the goods in greater quantities and on time.

You would be surprised to see what a positive effect a plentiful supply has upon morale of the men. They are discouraged when they have to wait weeks and months for necessary equipment.

The fellows here, in spite of the fact that they are ready to give their lives for the defense of their country and democracy, are also willing to help foot the bill. They also buy bonds. I, like a good percentage of the men, give 10 per cent of my pay for war bonds.

Many have pledged a bond a month which is taken out of their pay. Such sentiment does not come from a disgruntled group. Yet, it is true that they may write home and complain about this and about that, but they do that because there is nothing else to write about and because your letters to them perhaps suggest that they should complain. Most of them, even if they do not say it, like the army.

FOOD IS GOOD

For my part, I'll take a G.I. meal to any that you can get in the best restaurant. I know the food is fresh and wholesome, cooked by clean cooks in clean pots and in a clean kitchen. As for Army life in a camp, I know many people that pay $30 to $50 a week to go to some summer or winter resort to enjoy what we have free of charge.

Don't think that I am trying to spread it on. I believe every word I write. I have gained weight and health in the eight months that I have been in the Army. Of course, it is true that we miss the folks back home but we know that we can't have our cake and eat it. Either we stay here and fight for what we miss or spend the rest of our days dreaming of those we love and the things we cherish.

WRITE TO THE BOYS

This business of letter-writing is an important item and I think we should attach a little more importance to it. Men wait twice a day to hear from you. Don't disappoint them. And when you do write, don't only wish that they were home.

They have a job to do before they come home and they want to do it. Tell them what you are doing to help them in their work. Tell them that you are helping to increase production, that you buy bonds and that you donated your blood for them.

The newspapers that I receive each week I enjoy very much. News of victories, of production committees keeps me informed of the things I had a hand in when I was back home and make me feel that you want me back again; for greater effort on your part means greater effort on mine, and my comrades'. The more we put out now, the sooner we will be together celebrating Victory!

Fraternally yours,
CORPORAL AARON BINDMAN.

Maine CIO Gets Constitution

Portland, Me., Dec. 31—A new constitution has been drawn up by the Maine Industrial Union Council, which met recently in this city.

Affiliated to the council are locals of the textile, shipyard, newspaper and transport service unions.

Longshoremen Start New Paper

San Francisco, Dec. 31—The first issue of The ILWU Dispatcher, new official organ of the CIO Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union, came off the press this week.

The paper is the first published as a national organ of the ILWU. Previously it has sponsored a special supplement of the San Francisco Labor Herald and, for midwest organizing work, an edition of The CIO NEWS.

Editor of the new bi-weekly paper is Morris Watson, one-time Associated Press writer and later an official of the American Newspaper Guild. It is published at 150 Golden Gate Avenue, San Francisco, Calif.

WORK FIGHT GIVE TO CIO WAR RELIEF

CIO Message to Congress: Unite, Mobilize for Victory

Urge Closer Ties With Farmers

WASHINGTIN, Jan. 9 — CIO councils and union affiliates were urged to take an active part in Food Mobilization Day, Jan. 12, as a step toward developing friendly, close contacts with the farm population.

Pointing out that "the CIO is deeply interested both in maximum production and the efficient utilization of essential crops," John Brophy, CIO councils director, urged state and city councils to offer cooperation with State and County War Boards set up by the Department of Agriculture.

VITAL TO WAR

A similar call for friendly relations with the farmers came from Donald Henderson, head of the CIO cannery union, who declared that "foods and fibers, as well as tanks and guns, are going to win this war and guarantee a people's peace."

Saluting the "tremendous efforts being made by farmers throughout the United States to do their share—and more—in helping to win the war," Henderson added that "farmers and workers together can win the war and guarantee the peace. We need each other in solving our common problems."

Brophy, in his letter to the councils, suggested that unions could help supply labor for the farms during peak periods of the year. Unions should give thought to "development of closer contacts" with farmers on a "community basis," Brophy said.

"Through such contacts, labor can offer assistance to farmers in many situations and can undertake to explain the program of organized labor to the farmers."

Wright Aero Goes CIO As 17,000 Vote

Paterson, N. J., Jan. 9—The United Automobile Workers, CIO, rang out the old year with a thumping victory in the largest NLRB election yet conducted in an aviation plant.

By a 2-1 margin, the CIO affiliate swept to victory over the AFL and the independent Aircraft Workers of America at the Wright Aeronauical Corp. plant here. The results:

UAW-CIO	10,147
AWA	4,613
AFL	1,257

Richard Frankensteen, UAW-vice-president and director of the union aircraft campaign, predicted that the results at Paterson augur another CIO victory on Jan. 18, when the NLRB conducts a poll at the company's Lockland, Ohio, plant, where some 20,000 workers are employed.

NLRB Stands By Guns in Kaiser Case

Washington, Jan. 9 — The Natl. Labor Relations Board today turned down a request of the Kaiser Co., big West Coast shipbuilder, that two of its members be disqualified from judging the issues due to arise in a coming hearing on the company's labor practices.

The company, together with its subsidiary Oregon Shipbuilding Corp., had argued that NLRB Chairman Millis and Board Member Reilly should be barred from sitting in on the case because they had participated in conferences looking toward a compromise settlement of the issue.

The NLRB, quoting from the Wagner Act, showed that Millis and Reilly had been acting in accordance with the law when they attended meetings called by Economic Stabilization Director James Byrnes. With no solution forthcoming from the meetings, the Board scheduled its Kaiser hearing for Jan. 11 in Portland, Oregon.

CIO COMPLAINED

The case is based on a complaint by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers that the companies and the AFL signed collusive, closed shop contracts in violation of the Act. The complaint said that shipyards now employing thousands of workers were placed under contract to the AFL two years ago when they had in one case only 66 employes and in another none at all.

Consumer Goods to Drop in '43

Washington, Jan. 9 — Purchase of consumer goods and services are due to tumble from 10 to 15 per cent under the 1942 level during the coming year, the WPB's Office of Civilian Supply predicted this week.

Output of materials for consumers will take an even greater dip, probably of 15 or 20 per cent, the government agency said.

Hearst Got Praises of Nazi Ace

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—Nazi world-wide propaganda chiefs used to receive "encouraging" reports that the Chicago Tribune, parts of the Hearst press and the New York Enquirer had refused to join "the dance of death of the New Dealers."

George Sylvester Viereck, jailed Nazi propaganda agent in this country, sent a message to that effect as late as Jan. 7, 1941—just 11 months before Pearl Harbor—the government revealed as a grand jury handed out indictment of 33 more persons on charges of conspiring to undermine the morale of the armed forces.

QUOTED HEARST

Viereck, who was indicted for the second time within recent months, was able to use aging William Randolph Hearst as a Nazi propaganda medium. Writing to his German bosses about publicity for a Nazi-inspired book entitled "Lothian against Lothian," Viereck declared:

"A few days ago Mr. Hearst gave it a great deal of space—nearly half a page in his own column, which reaches at least 20 million people."

Several persons named in the indictment were the object of previous government action. Among the new fish caught in the net was George Deatherage, organizer of the Knight of the White Camelia, anti-Semite and holder of both Army and Navy jobs until forced out by publicity in the paper PM and the labor press.

Blast Plans To Draft All Labor

Detroit, Jan. 9 — Proposals to draft labor for war industries were vigorously opposed by Richard T. Frankensteen, vice-president of the UAW-CIO in an address over the Blue network, under auspices of the "Wake Up, America" forum.

Frankensteen presented the labor point in a discussion on "Should Labor be Drafted for War Industry?"

"In its war for survival our country has a powerful secret weapon which its Axis enemies can never hope to command. That secret weapon—the surest guarantee of our future victory over Nazism—is the productive power of free men and women," the union leader said.

SPIRIT OF PEOPLE

"The workers for whom I speak know that this war is their war. They know that defeat for their nation means enslavement, starvation and death for them. No whip lash of compulsion is required to win their labor."

'Push Fight on Bias'—CIO

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9.—The Fair Employment Practices Committee of the federal government must be given additional funds to increase its effectiveness in ending racial discrimination in American industry, the CIO Committee on Racial Discrimination declared this week.

Members of the committee are CIO Secretary James B. Carey, chairman; President Willard Townsend of the United Transport Service Employes, secretary; James J. Leary, Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; Ferdinand Smith, National Maritime Union, and Boyd L. Wilson, United Steelworkers.

Text of their statement follows:

"The existence of discrimination against Negroes and other minorities is not only a continuing blot on American democracy, but even more seriously a drag on the total mobilization of all our people needed to win the war against Axis slavery.

"Every war industry and plant in the country is crying for more manpower, desperately needed to keep the weapons of war rolling out to the offensive fighting fronts of our armed forces and our allies.

"Negro Americans are as anxious as any to work for victory, just as they are fighting for victory in the Army and the Navy. To allow employers or any other agencies to bar them from jobs is worse than unjust—it is an active help to Hitler.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY

"The CIO, in setting up the Committee on Racial Discrimination at its November convention, moved to implement in industry and government the policy it has always held to in its own ranks—of absolute opposition to discrimination in any form, and of complete equality of opportunity for all.

"This policy has been made national in the Executive Order of the President No. 8820 and in setting up of the Fair Employment Practices Committee. The CIO concurs fully in these steps, as it concurs in every move to promote national unity for winning the war.

"At the same time, we must point out that the job of wiping out racial discrimination is far from complete, and at the present rate of progress will scarcely be completed in time to make full answer to the needs of all-out war, or to the needs of a people's peace.

"Too often mere lip-service is given to the principle of equal opportunity. Too often an employer or a whole industry, ordered to stop discriminating against Negro workers, has evaded the order by offering token employment to a handful in place of opening jobs to all who are qualified. Or again, Negro workers are confined to the lowest paid, least skilled or even the menial jobs, regardless of their experience or training.

"Of course there are notable exceptions to these disruptive practices. The exceptions, however, could easily become the rule if the national policy were made completely effective. This cannot be done as long as the Fair Employment Practices Committee lacks sufficient funds and sufficient personnel to do the needed job.

FEPC LACKS FUNDS

"At the present time, the FEPC lacks funds and personnel to do the necessary following-up on each of its orders. Trained, paid investigators are needed to patrol every section of industry where discrimination is suspected or found. More cooperation from other government agencies responsible for war production is needed.

"The CIO Committee on Racial Discrimination is determined to press for these and all other measures to end this gross injustice and criminal waste of needed manpower. We intend to press for more funds and more authority for the FEPC. We plan to work closely with other government agencies and with employers in the solution of the problem.

"Victory requires the full effort of every person in this country and in the United Nations. Many millions of people among our allies are looking to our country to end inequalities that hold back a speedy United Nations victory."

Electrical Union Gains 73,000 Members in Quarter

NEW YORK, Jan. 9—The CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America, which in the year closing with the union's annual convention last September had added 169,000 new members, broke all previous records for growth during the quarter just ended, according to the quarterly report of the UE's Director of Organization, James J. Matles.

During the quarter ended on Nov. 1, 1942, the big CIO union added 73,215 new members.

This is a rate of increased growth which, if sustained as union officers expect it to be, will add 292,900 new members to the organization by next September, 1943.

The Director of Organization's report showed some of the reasons why the UE is growing:

Union contracts signed during the 3 months, 46 new and 75 renewed, covering 54,075 war production workers, 9,185 of them brought under contract for the first time.

Wage increases negotiated during the quarter, 8,311,800 for 68,450 workers, or more than $121 average per worker.

California CIO Takes Stand Against Bias

San Francisco, Jan. 9—In contrast to some labor organizations which discriminate against various racial groups, the California CIO Council today laid out the welcome mat for workers of all races, colors or creeds.

The welcome was contained in a formal declaration on racial discrimination published in poster form, copies of which today were sent out to all California CIO unions, leaders of the national CIO, members of the President's Committee on fair labor practices and to President Roosevelt.

Arbitrate Transit Case, Murray Asks

NEW YORK, Jan. 9.—A call for arbitration of wage and union security issues between the Transport Workers Union and the City Board of Transportation was sent to Mayor LaGuardia by CIO President Philip Murray this week.

In the call, President Murray wrote to the Mayor that he would "hold himself" in readiness to lend whatever assistance I can" to the quick settlement of the problems which affect 32,000 transit employes and have a direct bearing on war production in the city.

Murray reminded the Mayor that he had agreed that the Board of Transportation would carry on negotiations with the TWU "on matters of wages, hours, grievances and working conditions to the same extent and in the same manner contemplated and provided for in the then existing labor agreements."

He also pointed out that the TWU had submitted a "Four Point Victory Program" some six months ago, that called for: 1) a general increase to absorb rising living costs and iron out wage inequalities, as in the Little Steel formula; 2) improvements in working rules and conditions; 3) union security based on maintenance of membership and 4) setting up of a labor-management committee to improve transit as an aid to war production.

FLAT REJECTION

"This is a program that impressed me as being eminently fair and reasonable, for it asked the Board of Transportation to grant its 32,000 employes only that which the National War Labor Board declared all American workers to be entitled to," Murray wrote, adding that it would raise morale and efficiency and thus aid the war.

"I was therefore shocked when I learned that after only two conferences, John H. Delaney, chairman of the Board of Transportation, rejected every one of the union's requests," he wrote.

"At your suggestion, I met with Mr. Delaney on Oct. 20, and after a conference that lasted almost two hours I came away with the distinct impression that he was not only hostile and antagonistic to the union, and therefore incapable of conducting negotiations with it in good faith, but that he is utterly indifferent to the needs and welfare of the employes whose fate he holds in his hands."

Honor Norris For 'Valiant Service'

New York, Jan. 9—George W. Norris of Nebraska, the grand old man of American liberal politics, won't be serving in this session of Congress. But the 81-year-old veteran of 40 years of battling for the people's rights can rest assured that his work has been appreciated.

Spokesmen for workers, farmers and liberals gave Norris that message at a banquet here last week, and called upon him to continue the battle against reaction.

Speakers at the banquet—which was sponsored by the Nation magazine and the Union for Democratic Action — included Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, CIO Pres. Murray, Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, James Patton of the Natl. Farmers Union, Max Zaritsky of the AFL hat workers' union, Supreme Court Justice Douglas, Mayor La Guardia and others.

HITS NAM POLICIES

Norris, visibly moved by the high tribute to his work in fighting monopoly, establishing the TVA and supporting New Deal principles, warned against the "representative of special interests" who are seeking to gain control of "our governmental structure" by the time war is ended.

Calling for workers, farmers and liberals to unite their forces, Norris launched an attack on tory-minded leaders of American industry.

"At a recent meeting of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the president of that great and powerful organization probably spoke out of turn and exposed the real intention when he said that we are not fighting this war to supply milk for every Hottentot child or to establish a TVA on the Danube," Norris declared.

GIFT: Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Sen. George W. Norris examine a bust of the veteran liberal presented to him at a testimonial banquet in New York.

"Any man with a heart and soul, and with vision, can see that, when this war is over, the world must be under the control of men who have no Hitler ideas hidden in their hearts.

"This war will be a failure—the peace will be a failure—if we do not provide that, as far as humanly possible, food shall be provided for every innocent babe, regardless of its nationality."

The Nebraska senatorial veteran cited as a prime war aim the freeing of men from the yoke of monopoly and the conservation of our natural resources "for the benefit o all the people . . .

"Yes, we say to the NAM that the stranglehold which many of its members have had upon the happiness and destinies of the common man will be loosened and this unseen and mysterious power known as electricity, through the instrumentality of many TVA's, will lessen the labor of those who toil, and will bring happiness, joy and comfort to every fireside in the land."

MURRAY SPEAKS

Murray, in his address, called upon Norris to coordinate labor and liberal groups and "fight the kind of fight that we know you are capable of fighting.

"I have come tonight, George, to plead with you, yes, to command you; come on, George, and lead us."

The CIO leader voiced labor's "prime interest" in winning the war, adding:

"It has bled, wept and died to win this war, but we want to make sure that in defeating Hitler we really will win this war. To make positive the assurance of final victory in that direction, labor tonight is demanding that Sen. Norris give to the people of the United States his service as our leader."

'Ration All Foods Now' . . . Outlook

Washington, Jan. 9.—Rationing of all foods, plus uniform dollars and cents price control at retail levels should begin at once, the Economic Outlook says in its current issue released this week.

"The CIO demands for the good of the American public that there be a rationing program of commodities before they become scarce and of commodities that are now limited in supply," the Outlook says.

This should be done, it adds, without giving advance tip-offs to the belly-patriots who like to hoard against their country's future. The present system, as practised in the canned goods situation, must be halted by immediately freezing stocks of goods to be rationed and setting up a temporary ticket system.

"Pleading will not stop certain people from hoarding," the Outlook says. "There seems to be no reason why the announcement of rationing of canned goods could not have been delayed until OPA was prepared to institute a point rationing program."

POINT RATIONING

Values for point rationing must be fixed by the OPA rather than by retailers, as has been suggested, and point values must be fixed at both wholesale and retail levels. In addition, an allocation program is needed to ensure the supply of rationed goods. "Nothing could be more disastrous to the rationing program than to have the consumer present his coupon at "a retail store and not be able to have it altered," the Outlook says.

Dollars and cents price control, to be effective, must include standard grading of foods, and an end to the present confusion, especially in meat grading, the Outlook concludes.

CIO Research Men Hear U. S. Post-War Experts

Washington, Jan. 9—An outline of the problems facing post-war America was presented by prominent government economists this week at a meeting of union research officials called by J. R. Walsh, CIO director of research and education.

Speakers at the all-day session included Prof. Alvin Hansen of Harvard, now working for the Federal Reserve Board; James McLaughlin of the Natl. Resources Planning Board; A. F. Heinrichs and Donald Davenport of the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Cat Jumps Bag as Gallup Tells All!

Philadelphia, Jan. 9—Dr. Gallup, whose American Institute of Public Opinion sells "polls" every week to our best newspapers, tipped his hand on how accurate these polls really are in a speech to a businessman's club here this week.

Dr. Gallup's polls, it will be recalled, invariably show that "opinion" favors drastic curbs on unions, that "opinion" favors a general sales tax, that "opinion" is convinced strikes are holding up war production, etc. This week, for example, the Gallup poll shows a "majority" in the country in favor of compulsory manpower legislation.

Speaking at the Poor Richard Club here, the Doctor evidently felt a word of explanation was necessary on why his poll had been so wide of the mark on the recent elections.

It seems there were two reasons: (1) the Institute interviewers did not canvass each Congressional District and (2) the Institute's "dangerous practice" of putting together a national picture from insufficient samplings.

Dr. Gallup's methods were wrong when applied to the elections—where samplings can be checked with figures. Presumably they can be just as wrong on opinions—especially when the questions are slanted to produce a desired result.

CIO Barbers Plan First Convention

New York, Jan. 9—The first constitutional convention of the National Organizing Committee Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America, will be held at the New Yorker Hotel here on April 11-12, it was revealed today by committee officials.

The committee, established several years ago, is headed by S. J. Ruggeri, president; P. Charles Di Neri, secretary-treasurer, and John Tartamella, director. The organization has many locals in large metropolitan centers.

"Our country is engaged in a life and death struggle against the forces of fascism, a conflict which we had no part in making but one in which labor must play an all-important part," the convention call declared.

"We must direct our energy to the successful prosecution of the war effort, yet we must remain vigilant against the reactionary forces that would destroy the organized labor movement."

CIO Board OKs Labor Peace Plan

Washington, Jan. 9 — President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations today announced that the Executive Board of the CIO, without a dissenting vote, has ratified the agreement for the arbitration of jurisdictional differences between the CIO and the American Federation of Labor.

This agreement was signed by the peace committees of the AFL and the CIO on December 2, 1942, subject to the approval of the executive councils of the two organizations. The subsequent vote of the members of the CIO Executive Board was carried out by mail.

TEXT OF PACT

"The AFL and CIO peace committee, in an effort to make its maximum contribution to our country in the war and for the furtherance and protection of the conditions of the workers, today agreed upon the following:

"We are convinced that if peace negotiations are to be successful and unity achieved, cooperation among our respective members and orgnaizations must be encouraged and promoted. It is our belief that it would be extremely difficult to make satisfactory progress toward unity through these negotiations if in the meantime there is an absence of practical cooperation between the two organizations.

"We agree to the establishment of a joint AFL-CIO committee to hear and decide any disputed jurisdictional differences that may arise between the two above named organizations. If the joint committee fails to agree upon a complaint lodged with the committee it shall select a disinterested arbiter to render a decision on the dispute in question. The arbiter's decision shall be final and binding on both parties. In the event an arbiter cannot be agreed upon by the committee within five days, the President of the United States shall be requested to name an arbiter. We recommend that this understanding shall remain in force until labor unity is effected. This agreement is subject to the approval of the Executive Councils of the two organizations."

National Unity, Stabilization Held Prime U. S. Needs

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—"The strongest possible organization of the legislative work of all our affiliated unions is the No. 1 job in the months to come," President Philip Murray said this week in calling a special conference of CIO internationals to formulate CIO's victory program for the new session of Congress.

Legislative work must be organized, he said, to carry out the main task before Congress and the people, "to achieve and maintain full unity and total mobilization of all our resources for victory over the Axis enemy."

Murray's speech to the conference, called as The CIO NEWS went to press, laid down two broad principles that the CIO would seek to follow in cooperation with the Congress; national unity and economic stabilization on the home front to back up the offensive fighting fronts.

At the same time, Murray warned in the call to the meeting that "the social gains of the last decade, and most important of all, some of the most basic needs of our war production and morale, will be in dire danger" from what he called "one of the strongest alignments of reactionary anti-labor forces that has confronted us since the CIO was organized."

PROGRAM OF CONGRESS

Security of these gains and of labor's rights is essential to all-out prosecution of the war, he said in submitting an action program to the meeting. As positive steps the program called for a win-the-war tax bill, for improvements in social security, for enforcement of universal rationing and strict price control at retail levels to strengthen the national economy for war.

Two major points in the program for complete national unity called for an end to the poll tax that keeps 10 million Americans immobilized in the people's war for democracy and for an immediate end to the disruptive work of the unAmerican Dies Committee.

"The achievement of economic stabilization is of prime importance, in which Congress is called upon to play a leading role," Murray said. "A principal factor in economic stabilization is a sound and adequate tax bill, to supply needed revenue and to guarantee the workers sufficient income to keep themselves in full health for top war production."

Social security must be increased "to cushion the shocks and smooth the sharp adjustments that arise from a war economy," he added, and rationing must be enforced to meet "the problem of supplying adequate food and other necessities for every war worker."

POLL TAX, DIES

Poll tax repeal was urged to cut away "a drag on our war mobilization" and to nullify "a constant resource of enemy propaganda, both in our own country and among the United Nations."

Calling for an immediate end to the Dies Committee, Murray described it as having "a consistent record of disruption and harassment of labor, of the government, and even of Congress itself," adding that it had also "consistently tried to sow suspicion and hatred against our allies."

Murray ended his opening speech to the conference by pledging the CIO "to work with Congress and all our other agencies for one common task—the strengthening of the home front behind the offensive fighting fronts and under the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief."

'Christian Ideals' Award Given To Pres. Murray

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 9—Described as an "outstanding exponent of Christian ideals," CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week received the 1942 Christian Culture Award given annually by Assumption College here.

The Rev. J. Stanley Murphy, college registrar, said that Pres. Murray had been selected for the honor in recognition of his "prudence, justice, temperance and fortitude—those cardinal virtues so necessary in every age, but especially today."

For a Victory Congress

CIO President Murray put his finger on some of the major tasks of the new Congress—if it is to be a real victory Congress—in his remarks to the special legislative conference of the CIO in Washington.

He called for the enactment of those measures only "that support our armed forces and our Commander-in-Chief, that strengthen our economy and enlist all our people in the common struggle."

To insure economic stabilization, he said, we must have "a sound and adequate tax bill, to supply needed revenue and to guarantee the workers sufficient income to keep themselves in full health for top war production."

The social security program must be lifted above present levels—both as a sound means of withdrawing money from circulation and thus checking inflation, and to provide a backlog of security for the workers after the war.

Labor has accepted wage stabilization, Murray pointed out, but it must be protected against the assaults on its living standards and union conditions that are threatened by anti-labor members of Congress.

Universal rationing and effective price control are essential war measures, and the CIO president urged that sufficient authority and funds be allocated to the government agencies charged with such duties. He also asked that these agencies be not subjected to "unthinking attacks" and "constant harassment."

One major piece of unfinished business before the new Congress is the passage of legislation to abolish the undemocratic poll tax, that deprives 10 million Americans of the right to vote. Though passed by the House in the last session of Congress, its passage in the Senate was prevented by a disgraceful filibuster of the poll-tax minority.

Murray described the poll tax as a "drag on our war mobilization which must be cut away at once."

Another obstacle to our war effort is the scandalous disruptions of the labor-baiting un-American Dies committee. "As a necessary war measure, its career should be immediately halted," Murray said.

Congressional leaders have expressed the hope that this will be a "victory Congress." This it can only become if it follows the general lines indicated by President Murray and desired by the vast majority of the American people. All labor unionists and other public-spirited citizens have a duty to impress this on their Congressional representatives.

Make Every Drop Count

CIO members are good soldiers. They're in the thick of the fighting at the front, and many have been decorated for their gallantry.

CIO members are also good soldiers on the home front. Belly-patriots, profiteers, hoarders and defeatists may gripe about rationing. But we have yet to hear a single complaint from a CIO union about personal inconveniences resulting from necessary war measures.

The fighting fronts have first call on our oil and gasoline; and American seamen shouldn't have to risk their lives carrying a single gallon that isn't essential for war purposes.

So we know CIO members are not going to belly-ache about having to cut out all pleasure driving in the eastern states; and that they're going to make every drop of gasoline count when they have to drive to their war jobs.

OPA Administrator Henderson, in his recent appeal to labor, recognizes the obvious necessity of war workers getting to and from work. But he asks that they cut their driving to an absolute minimum and use public transportation wherever possible.

War workers who hold "C" cards have an especially grave responsibility in this connection, he points out. And those who are eligible for "C" rations should make every effort to form new ride-sharing clubs that can function on "B" or even "A" rations.

Every gallon of gas used unnecessarily is a gallon donated to Hitler. But America can count on the CIO and its members to cooperate till it hurts in conserving gasoline, as in every other kind of war activity.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE new Congress is about 50 per cent Dr. Jekyll and 50 per cent Mr. Hyde. And that doesn't mean 50-50 as between Democrats and Republicans.

The Dr. Jekyll of Robert Louis Stevenson's story was a good-looking, public-spirited citizen, who always did the right thing and was beloved by all.

Mr. Hyde, on the other hand, was a hideous villain of the deepest dye, always up to some devilish brutality.

Yet these two opposites were one and the same person. It all depended which side of this split personality gained the upper hand.

So it is with the new Congress. It comes into being in the most critical year in American history. And it is unusually closely balanced between its Jekyll and Hyde possibilities.

The new Congress can mobilize the whole country for speedy victory; or it can place the most dangerous obstacles in the way of our war effort.

The relative strength of the Republicans and the Democrats is not of the chief significance. For there are Jekylls and Hydes in both parties, and important Congressional votes cut right across party lines.

Nor is it true to say that the last elections showed any public swing to the reactionaries, whether Republican or Democrat. Actually the Republican vote was the lowest since 1928, and so was the Democratic vote.

Millions of citizens failed to vote—due to absence in the armed forces, due to shifts to distant war plants, and due to apathy or dissatisfaction.

It still remains to be seen whether the Republicans can win over any substantial proportion of these millions by 1944.

If the Republicans avoid the pitfalls of labor-baiting and defeatism in this Congress, and seek to become the most aggressive force for victory, they may make big inroads among such doubtful voters.

But if the Administration, for its part, does not waver or seek to appease tory and defeatist elements—if it pushes ahead with a vigorous and progressive program for total war mobilization, letting the chips fall where they may—its chances are excellent to stay on top.

For it should be remembered that this Administration has won the most sweeping election endorsements in the past precisely when its domestic policies have been most progressive.

The worst of the Hyde tendencies in Congress are represented not only by anti-labor isolationists and appeasers like Republicans Hoffman and Ham Fish, but fully as much by labor-baiting Democrats like Smith and Cox and the rest of the Bourbon poll-tax clique.

On the other hand, there are Republicans as well as Democrats who line up 100 per cent behind our Commander-in-Chief for national unity and for a progressive and aggressive all-out war effort.

In between these clear-cut Hyde and Jekyll groups, there are scores of Congressmen who are torn in both directions, depending upon their estimates of the trends of public opinion among their constituents.

The organized workers and other public-spirited citizens, therefore, have the gravest responsibility to impress their wishes on Congress. With them rests the power to tip the delicately balanced scales in either the Hyde or the Jekyll direction.

What are the openly announced aims of the Hyde forces in Congress?

They want to cut wages by abolishing overtime rates, to establish open-shop conditions in war work, to abolish the War Labor Board, and to pass a number of bills to hamstring the unions.

Then they are set on ending the $25,000 salary limit and granting many special tax privileges to the wealthy, at the same time as they advocate the worst kind of soak-the-poor measures like the sales tax.

They will also hamper the war effort by sniping at rationing, price control and other essential parts of the Administration's win-the-war program; and possibly by outright defeatist moves for appeasement and a negotiated peace.

This whole lose-the-war effort can be blocked, however, if labor and the rest of the folks back home are alert, well-organized and outspoken.

In this case, we can have a real victory Congress that will squelch the labor-baiters; enact a win-the-war tax program based on ability to pay; abolish the poll tax; strengthen the Administration's hand on rationing, price control and total war mobilization; and go all-out for victory in 1943 behind our Commander-in-Chief.

The American people can decide what kind of Congress this will be. It's up to us—to every one of us!

Murray's Message to New Congress: Achieve Unity, Mobilize for Victory

The following statement was made today by President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations to a special legislative conference called in Washington, January 8, 1943:

One main task faces the people and the Congress today, to achieve and maintain full unity and total mobilization of all our resources for victory over the Axis enemy.

This requires the utmost effort by all sections of the nation, working together with Congress on the home front to back up the offensive fighting fronts abroad. Every consideration of special interest must be swept aside; only those interests that aid the nation must be served. In our gigantic war for national survival, we have time only for those measures that support our armed forces and our Commander-in-Chief, that strengthen our economy and enlist all our people in the common struggle.

Sound Tax Bill

The achievement of economic stabilization is of prime importance, in which Congress is called upon to play a leading role. A principal factor in economic stabilization is a sound and adequate tax bill, to supply needed revenue and to guarantee the workers sufficient income to keep themselves in full health for top war production.

Such a tax program must reach more deeply into big profits and inflated incomes, must close present loopholes and enforce the desired $25,000 net income level. Any form of sales tax, however labelled, must be avoided as a direct threat to workers' health and efficiency and consequently to war production.

As a further aid to economic stabilization, the social security program must be lifted above present levels. This will also serve to cushion the shocks and smooth the sharp adjustments that arise from a war economy.

Union Conditions

Labor has made a major contribution to economic stabilization in its wholehearted acceptance of wage stabilization. In return, labor must be secured in its present wage and other union conditions and must be assured the continued opportunity to adjust inequalities. This is more than a matter of justice. It is a vital part of strengthening the national economy and promoting war production. Workers cannot work at top efficiency if they are distracted by a recurring need to protect their living standards and working conditions.

The problem of total mobilization for war carries with it the problem of supplying adequate food and other necessities for every war worker. Under war conditions, this calls for universal rationing and for control of the cost of living, with adequate enforcement of all necessary measures.

Government agencies working to this end must be equipped with sufficient authority and with needed funds for carrying out such a program. The war will not be served by unthinking attacks on them or by constant harassment of their operations.

Unity for victory must be based on full democracy for all, excluding none or relegating none to second place. At the present time, the poll tax keeps 10 million Americans out of our democracy and thus prevents their playing their proper part in the all-out war effort.

This drag on our war mobilization must be cut away at once. To let it continue means the immobilization of a huge army of citizens who want to join their fellow Americans in working and fighting for the nation. It is also a constant resource of enemy propaganda, both in our own country and among the United Nations.

End Dies Committee

A united people must be secured against disruptive attacks from individuals and groups, under no matter what screen or immunity they may be operating. For this reason, the Dies Committee should be denied further sanction and funds from the Congress. The Dies Committee has a constant record of disruptive and harassment of labor, of the government, and even of Congress itself. It has consistently tried to sow suspicion and hatred against our allies. As a necessary war measure, its career should be immediately halted.

The CIO, as the organized body of more than five million American working men and women, pledges its full cooperation to Congress in carrying out these and all other measures dedicated to winning the war. We pledge to work with Congress and all other agencies for one common task—the strengthening of the home front behind the offensive fighting fronts and under the leadership of our Commander-in-Chief.

Msgr. Ryan Warns of Tory Drive

CLEVELAND, Jan. 9—A successful comeback by the nation's reactionaries in the 1944 elections will endanger all the social gains won by U. S. labor in the past decade, Msgr. John A. Ryan, one of the nation's leading Catholic liberals, warned this week.

In an address to the American Catholic Sociological Society, Msgr. Ryan predicted that "if the Republicans elect their candidate for the Presidency in 1944, and if they are able, with the assistance of Democratic reactionaries, to control both Houses of Congress, the status and influence of organized labor, and therefore the whole body of wage earners, will undergo a disastrous decline."

He added that "so long as the present occupant of the White House remains there, no fears need be entertained for the cause of labor or social justice."

'AUTHENTIC BOURBONS'

Msgr. Ryan, who directs the Dept. of Social Action of the Natl. Catholic Welfare Conference, lumped together the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, the big metropolitan newspapers and the reactionary farm organizations as the "authentic Bourbons."

"Millions of returning soldiers and sailors will not be fooled by the old claptrap of 'rugged individualism'," he said. "With their knowledge of the unlimited productive capacity of our war-time industries, they will demand the opportunity to earn by honest labor a decent amount of the enormous potential product."

Another speaker was the Rev. William J. Smith, director of the Crown Heights School of Catholic Workers in Brooklyn.

"If fewer people accepted Westbrook Pegler as their Sir Oracle and more people would dip into some of the writings of men like Msgr. Ryan, we would have a saner view of the situation."

Murray Talks Over CBS, January 19

Washington, Jan. 9 — President Philip Murray will go on the air Tuesday, January 19, from 10:30 to 10:45 p.m., EWT over the Columbia Broadcasting System's national network.

He will deal with CIO's legislative program for the new session of Congress, describing the steps CIO is urging for national unity and for strengthening the home front behind the fighting fronts.

All CIO unions and members should tune in for this major statement of CIO win-the-war policies, and should arrange listening parties, special meetings, etc., to ensure the widest possible audience.

Tuesday, January 19, Columbia Broadcasting national network, from 10:30 to 10:45 p.m., EWT—President Murray on the air.

Ask U. S. Keep Child-Care Centers

Washington, Jan. 9 — President Roosevelt was asked this week to insure continuance of WPA child-care projects because of their importance to the war production program, in a letter sent to him by CIO President Philip Murray.

The projects have been caring for children of working mothers, thus enabling them to stay on war production jobs, Murray wrote.

"The discontinuance of these schools would force many women to leave wor jobs and would impair the efficiency of others who were unable to make satisfactory care arrangements," he said.

"The CIO would therefore like to propose that you issue an executive order transferring the child protection program of WPA into the Federal Workers Administration as an operating program, together with the unexpected balance of the $6,000,000 of this year's WPA appropriation which is earmarked for care of children of working mothers," he wrote.

"We believe that this procedure would insure continuance of these child care projects which are so important to our war production program."

Quick, Watson, The Microscope

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9. — Strikes in American industry plummeted down to three-hundredths of one per cent of manhours worked during November, the War Labor Board announced this week.

The figure is a record low, and provides labor's answer to those who claim unions hurt the war effort.

Pamphlet Gives Dope on All WLB Policies

Washington, Jan. 9—Basic policies and methods of working through the War Labor Board are described in CIO's new handbook, "Procedure and Preparation of Cases Before the WLB," issued this week with a foreword by President Philip Murray.

Describing the origins of the board and the reactionary attempts to substitute wage-freezing and other coercion for mediation and peaceful settlement of disputes, President Murray writes in the foreword:

"A proper functioning of the board is a vital necessity in the maintenance of morale among the workers in American industry. Labor unions, their representatives and members, must fully understand the procedure and policies of the board in order to assure full protection for the workers.

"This pamphlet is intended to analyze the basic policies and procedure of the board in order that our unions and members may obtain the maximum benefit of this agency."

DETAILED ANALYSIS

The pamphlet, in 72 pages, gives a detailed survey of board procedure, its origins and application, and rules and regulations issued. It was prepared by the CIO Legal Department. Full text of general board orders and interpretations, and a list of board regional offices are given in the appendix.

Start Work Now For Decent Tax Bill, CIO Urges Unions

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—Every CIO affiliate must begin immediately the job of bringing the campaign for a win-the-war tax bill home to its members and to all the people they have contact with, Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, said this week in a circular letter to CIO unions.

"Forces are being organized and lines are being drawn on the tax bill which is sure to be under consideration within the first month," Cowan said in warning that the drive must get under way as the new Congress meets.

"Taxation to raise money now, as at all times, must be based on ability to pay," he said. "This is doubly important in wartime when excessive taxation of low incomes will affect the health of war workers and therefore reduce their efficiency and production."

OUTLINES PROGRAM

Cowan's letter briefly outlined the CIO tax program, main point of which is the need to protect workers' living standards so that they can maintain health and efficiency for top war production.

"In any war tax program the most important thing to be considered is that every person must be left a sufficient net income after taxation to enable him to buy the reasonable share of the available food and clothing which a proper rationing program sets aside for him," he wrote.

This calls for sufficient exemptions in income tax, spendings tax and similar means of taxation, and in addition reinforces the need for universal rationing and strict price control at retail levels.

Cowan's letter urged all affiliates to distribute CIO's new tax pamphlet as widely as possible.

Banquet to Hear Pres. Murray

Detroit, Jan. 9—Pres. Philip Murray will be principal speaker at a banquet here Jan. 23 to celebrate the successful conclusion of the CIO War Relief Committee's collection for the Detroit War Chest.

Victory Tax Explained By CIO Counsel

Washington, Jan. 9—An explanation and rates schedule for the so-called "Victory Tax," levied at a flat five per cent on workers' wages over $12.00 a week, $624 a year, is contained in a memo drawn up for CIO affiliates by Lee Pressman general counsel.

The memo explains the few credits allowed, which include insurance premiums, reduction of certain debts and deductions for war bonds. War bonds bought singly entitle the worker to a full credit for the amount. If bought jointly, the credit is pared by 50 per cent. No deduction can exceed the amount of postwar credit.

Employers are required to deduct the "Victory Tax" from paychecks over $12.00, even though the annual income may be less than $624. The tax is figured at a round rate in different wage branches, so that the $12.00 a week worker pays the same rate as a worker with $15.99 a week.

After the war is over, the taxpayer will be entitled to a 25 per cent credit if single, 40 per cent if married, with two percent for each dependent.

Paralysis Drive Talk on MBS

Washington, Jan. 9 — Full CIO cooperation in the drive for aid to victims of infantile paralysis will be extended by President Murray in a radio broadcast scheduled for Tuesday, Jan. 12, over the Mutual Broadcasting System from 8:15 to 8:30 p.m., EWT.

President Murray will speak for the Labor for Health drive of the National Infantile Paralysis Foundation, now conducting its annual January drive for funds.

Senate Group Asks Over-all Planning

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—Victory requires over-all planning for total mobilization and an end to the idea "that somehow we can muddle through this war," a sub-committee of the Senate Education and Labor Committee said this week in a report endorsing the Pepper-Kilgore bill that calls for centralized war planning.

"Our sub-committee believes that the Axis enemy cannot be defeated by haphazard, partial use of our resources," the sub-committee, headed by Senator Pepper, said. "We believe that the American people desire and are prepared for all necessary steps to mobilize our complete resources."

The report places the bill, which was supported at the CIO convention in November, squarely before Congress in the opening week of the new session. Senator Pepper also announced that he and Senator Kilgore of W. Va. would reintroduce the measure as soon as possible. The report was signed by Senators Pepper, Schwartz of Wyo., and LaFollette, of Wisconsin.

DOUBT INCREASES

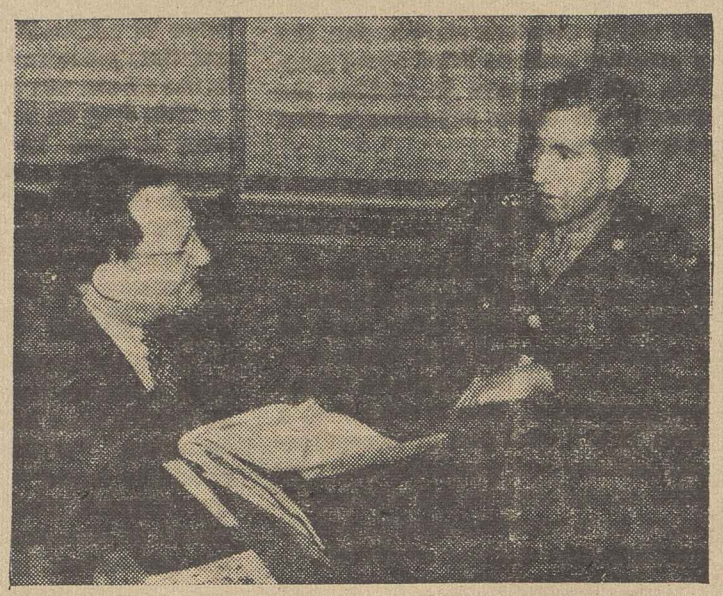
Huge increases in war production scheduled for 1943 will not be met unless overall planning is brought into play, the sub-committee warned, pointing out that we did not maintain the full program in 1942. The report also warned against increasing War Dept. control over production, saying that it was not fitted for the centralized planning that is required for full output.

This was shown, the sub-committee said, by the fact that the War Department has concentrated 75 per cent of contracts with big monopoly firms, leaving smaller outfits unused in the production drive.

"The central problem is this," the report said, "war today involves our entire economy . . . our war production must have the broadest possible popular base and the most democratic and representative control if we are to wage a successful war and make a lasting peace."

Building Local Asks Unity Meet

Chicago, Jan. 9—A joint conference of CIO and AFL construction locals in the Chicago area to map unified action against future anti-labor activities by employers was suggested to the Chicago AFL Building Trades Council today by Organizer John Davidson of CIO Construction and Maintenance Local 1228.



DON'T GRIPE was the message of Corp. John Bartek, a member of the CIO Textile Workers' Union, who was rescued with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker after 22 days of drifting in the mid-Pacific. Bartek (above, right) tells TWUA Pres. Emil Rieve that tories' squawks about food rationing give him a pain.

Union War Hero Slams 'Gripes' Over Rationing

NEW YORK, Jan. 9 (FP)—"Tell them to quit griping about food rationing. Ask them how they'd like to eat sea gull."

That's Corp. John Bartek talking. And probably more than any other union man, he has a right to talk that way. For Bartek was one of seven U. S. Army men who tossed about in a raft on the Pacific with Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker for 22 days before being rescued.

Seated in the office of Pres. Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union, CIO—his own union—Bartek didn't really want to talk about himself. He wanted to talk about Rickenbacker, and rationing, and the battle for production of other union members.

DIDN'T KNOW SCORE

"I used to gripe, too, when I was a civilian," he said about some of the present day confusion over rationing and price control. "I hollered about a lot of things. I didn't know what the score was.

"But after being lost for 22 days, and seeing the job the American soldiers are doing 'way out there in the Pacific islands, I think I can talk about these things."

The Japanese, according to the sandy-haired rug worker from TWU Local 26 in Freehold, N. J., "aren't so tough."

NEED ALL OUR HELP

"But there are a heck of a lot of 'em," he grinned. "And our boys out there need everything we can send 'em. They're getting it, but they've got to keep on getting it, too. The men and women in our mills and our mines and factories have got to keep on pushing production. Those boys are taking it, for us. We can't let them down."

Bartek feasted on sea gull with the others after four oranges had sufficed eight men for eight days, and found it "not bad at all." "I mean that," he said.

"When you're as hungry as we were, you eat anything—and like it. Things like that make it pretty hard to understand why anybody'd hollor about food rationing."

It was Bartek's Bible—one given him by the Baptist church in Freehold when he signed up for his "second hitch" in the army—which was used each day for prayers of the men. He read from it each morning and each night. "It made us feel better," he said simply.

He's anxious to get back into harness again as a flight engineer, and he thinks the airplane, particularly the big American fighters and bombers, is the greatest machine ever made.

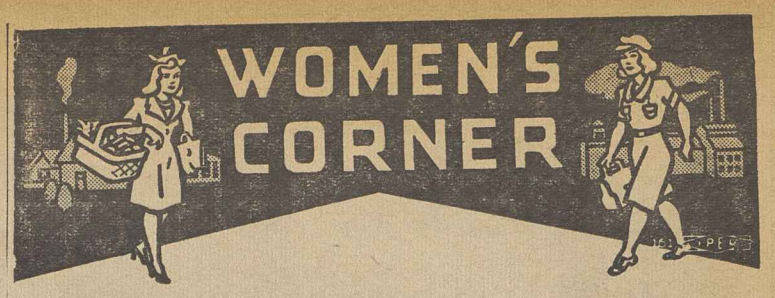
Hartford CIO Backs Food Plan

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 9 — Full support of the canned food rationing program set by Sec. of Agriculture Wickard was voiced by the Hartford CIO Council in a resolution which described the plan as "a necessary step in the direction of complete and effective rationing of all essential goods and services."

At the same time the Council called upon the War Labor Board to speed its handling of cases, backed efforts of Mayor Spellacy to obtain day nurseries for children of war-working mothers with federal rather than private funds, and strongly condemned the Nazi massacre of Jews and other conquered peoples throughout Europe.

Your cooperation in demanding the Union Label of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers has demonstrated once more the effectivness of organized labor's purchasing power. There are still a few open-shoppers left in the men's and boys' clothing industry who deny their workers the basic right of organization. Each demand for the Amalgamated Union Label is one more blow against all anti-labor employers. Always ask for the Amalgamated Union Label on all men's and boys' wearing apparel that you buy.

AMALGAMATED CLOTHING WORKERS OF AMERICA



By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

CIO Auxiliaries called on President Roosevelt this week "to take a direct hand" in preventing further food price increases and in speeding rationing in order to insure "strong workers to maintain production of the ships, tanks, planes and guns our armed forces and our allies must have for Victory over Hitler."

President Faye Stephenson of the CIO Auxiliary Congress urged the President to call upon the Food Administrator, the Director of Economic Stabilization, the Office of Price Administration and the Congress to put the following five point program into effect:

"1. Immediate rationing of all essential consumer goods so that the limited civilian supply can be distributed according to national need and not according to individual income.

"The canned goods rationing program already announced by the Office of Price Administration is a step in this direction, but that program should be extended at once to cover all essential foods. Delaying rationing of meats, for example, until sometime in March is dangerous when many communities have been suffering from acute shortages for the past two months.

"2. Dollars and cents retail price ceilings are essential to keep food prices within reach of the average worker. Present price ceilings are ignored in a large proportion of our nation's stores and regulations are too complicated to enable the consumer to spot violations.

"Dollars and cents price ceilings at wholesale levels, as announced by OPA for the 1943 canned goods pack, will not protect the consumer unless retail price ceilings are also set.

MAINTAIN CEILINGS

"3. Retail price ceilings must not only be set but also maintained. In a number of cases current prices will need to be lowered to enable most people to buy their full ration.

"We have been seriously disturbed by the repeated newspaper stories that no use of subsidy is contemplated to maintain price ceilings. Abolition of subsidy and raising of milk prices in the Duluth-Superior, Chicago, and New York areas substantiates these stories.

"We want to call to your attention the British subsidy system where hundreds of millions of dollars a year are spent by the government to keep prices of essential goods from increasing. The British government says one of the purposes of this program is:

'To keep the prices of essential rationed foods sufficiently low to enable all sections of the populations to buy their full allowances.'

"We need a widespread subsidy system for that same purpose in this country.

"4. Even with subsidy to keep prices steady, many poor families in our country will not be able to buy their full ration. For them the food stamp plan offers special assistance.

"We feel very strongly, therefore, that the food stamp plan should not be discontinued, as has been announced, but should be revised and continued to ensure full rations to all low income families.

"5. Finally, we urge adequate enforcement of price control and rationing by full Congressional appropriations, by nationwide representation of labor and consumer groups on all price control and rationing boards, and by supplementing the official OPA staff wherever necessary by trained volunteers working under OPA supervision and responsible to OPA."

News Guild Auxiliary Gets Up Steam

New York, Jan. 9—The Women's Auxiliary of the American Newspaper Guild is beginning the year 1943 with a campaign to organize an auxiliary in every Guild local, following the mandate of the Guild convention in Denver last June.

The convention recommended "that auxiliaries be formed by each local to continue the past good efforts of the WA-ANG for their aid and support of the Guild" . . . and "that local Guilds be directed to set up machinery which will provide proper liaison between locals and auxiliaries."

The campaign will be led by Mabel Pollock, Executive Secretary-Treasurer of the Auxiliary International.

CONVENTION MANDATE

The drive is a result also of the mandate of the recent CIO convention in Boston and takes its inspiration from the speech of President Philip Murray before the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, in which he urged all national unions to "encourage and lend support toward the perfection of the auxiliaries everywhere.

"I think that you can help us greatly. We are going to rely upon your zeal and your understanding and your inspiration, your courage and your devotion to help us build a greater labor movement for the people of the United States."

The WA-ANG Denver convention voted that the organizing drive run from February to May. In addition to organizing new locals, existing locals will be strengthened.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO terminated the year 1942 with full speed ahead in the way of election victories. The UAW-CIO, after suffering a loss at the Wright Aeronautical Company, Paterson, N. J., some months back, demonstrated their ability to come back by an overwhelming victory at this company's plants in Paterson. In the production end of it, which employs by far the largest number of workers, the CIO received 8,959 votes; Independent, 4,613; No union, 1,267. In the foundry, where the AFL intervened the CIO received 1,188 votes; AFL 411 and Independent 151. Vice President Richard T. Frankensteen, Board Member Charles Kerrigan, CIO Regional Directors Ewald Sandner and Pete Mosele and State Council President Irving Abramson and their staffs are to be complimented on this splendid showing.

Electrical Union Victories

The United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, demonstrated their ability in a year's effort by winning the election among ten plants of the Sperry Gyroscope Company, covering 16,000 employes, by a vote of more than three to one. This, after efforts of several years to organize the workers in these plants.

They also added on to their strength of victories with the following election results: Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, Attica N.Y., UE: 138; against: 22. Swyer Massey Ltd., Hamilton, Ontario, Canada, UE: 250; as against: 131. Moore Eastwood Plant, Dayton, Ohio, UE: 54; as against 33; and Cornish Wire, New Jersey, UE: 62 as against 30. Then to start off the new year with the same ability to organize they won the election at the U. S. Cartridge Company, St. Louis, Missouri, covering 6,000 skilled workers, defeating AFL Machinists Sheet Metal Workers by a vote of two to one and have petitioned for an election among 20,000 production workers in this plant.

The United Steelworkers of America, during the last few weeks of 1942, held 41 elections at various steel mines resulting in the casting of 9,683 votes for the USA-CIO as against 1752. The USA is leading in election victories all over the nation. They won the CIO championship for 1942. Congratulations to all of them.

Many Other Polls Won

President Martin Wagner of the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, reports two election victories; one at the Electro-Metallurgical Co., Duluth, Minn., with a vote of 69 to 2, and the other at Valentine Corporation, South Kearny, N. J., with a vote of 59 to 3.

Harry Haberthear, CIO Field Representative in Cincinnati, Ohio, advises of the election victory at Fries & Sons, Co. Covington, Ky., with a vote of 23 for CIO as against 2 for the AFL.

James J. Stanton, PWOC Field Representative, advises of the winning of the election in New York City at the United Dressed Beef in behalf of the CIO with a vote of 19 for PWOC-CIO as against 8 for no union.

Harvey C. Fremming, CIO Regional Director in Kansas City, sends in another flour mill election with a victory at the American Flour Milling Co., by a vote of 64 for CIO as against 1 for the AFL and 3 for neither.

Keep It Up In '43

We are headed in the right direction for 1943. Let's make it a year of victory for our nation and United Nations on the field of battle and on the front of production. Make it a victory year for CIO by organizing more and more workers and bringing them into the fold of this great labor movement so that with these victories we can also win the peace—protecting and advancing the economic gains of the working men and women of the nation and the prosperity of the nation, itself.

Let every representative of the CIO and of our affiliated unions pledge to make 1943 the banner year for CIO. Organize the Unorganized!

Latin American Scandal:

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 9—Near-starvation wages and miserable working conditions, which brought about a recent strike of Bolivian tin miners, can be found in other Latin American countries, Lombardo Toledano, Mexican union leader, declared this week.

Potosi miners are paid an average of 10c (American) for a work day of as long as 12 hours, Toledano, who heads the Confederation of Latin-American Workers, told Allied Labor News.

Wages are so low that it is cheaper for the operators to use primitive hand methods than to introduce simple machines.

"Workers in the mines work without shoes, protective devices or gloves," he said. "They can subsist only by continually chewing cocaine leaves. They literally have to work under anesthetics to bear the strain of the 12,000-foot altitude, the long hours and the wretched food.

"I have visited many mines in many countries, but I have never seen miners whose predicament was so desperate as the Bolivian tin miners."

VOICES CONFIDENCE

Toledano said that the CTAL had complete confidence in the labor leaders who have been arrested in La Paz on the charge of "undermining the Bolivian republic."

"One of these men is Aurelio Alcoba, general secretary of the Confederation of Bolivian Workers. Another is Waldo Alvarez, former labor minister. These two leaders are incapable of acting for foreign interests. As president of the CTAL, I urge that justice be done to the workers of Bolivia.

"It is completely false to accuse the anti-fascist Bolivian miners of serving the Axis, but an investigation should be conducted to fix the responsibility for the serious situation of the past two weeks."

LEADER BARRED

When Toledano, Alcoba and Salvadore Ocampo, sub-secretary of the Chilean Federation of Workers, visited Potosi last month, the Hochschild Co. refused to permit Alcoba, a former miner, to inspect the mines.

At a mass meeting of more than 5,000 workers, the three labor leaders explained the extreme importance of Bolivia's tin to the United Nations, and promised that the organized workers of North America would support their demand for an improvement in working conditions.

HITS MINEOWNER

While tin production in Bolivia has now been resumed, Toledano said that the demands of the tin miners must be met to prevent irreparable damage to the prestige of the United Nations in Latin America. He denied that Axis agents were responsible for the strike as charged in statements said to have been issued by the Bolivian government.

"Whatever influences entered into the strike," he said, "I can assure you that the living conditions of the Bolivian miners are miserable to the extreme. I thoroughly investigated conditions in the Potosi mines, where the exploitation of the miners by the Hochschild Co. is criminal."

Toledano, who returned two weeks ago from a tour of Latin American countries, will visit Washington in January to report on Latin America's economic problems and secure support for a hemisphere labor congress.

In Washington, Toledano will tell U. S. labor and government officials that the anti-Axis influence of CTAL representatives cannot prevent recurrence of outbreaks like the Bolivian tin strike so long as increased prices being paid for raw materials are not passed on to the workers in the form of increased wages.

"To date," he said, "all the profits have stayed in the hands of the companies."

Big Soviet Metal Union, One of Largest, Plans First Wartime Parley

KUIBYSHEV, Jan. 9 (ALN)—The Metal Goods Workers' Union of the USSR, whose present membership figure is a military secret because its members are virtually all now employed in making small arms and ammunition, is preparing for its All-Union convention, to be held within a few weeks in Moscow.

According to the chairman of its central committee, Mikhail Dismerini, the convention will concern itself with the major issues now before all Soviet trade unions: mass military ski training, adoption of war orphans from occupied districts, industrial training of unskilled workers, aid to the Red Army and the guerilla movement, and more than anything else, ways of increasing production.

"Our union," said Dismerini, "is giving all its strength to help the front and to struggle against the fascists."

TRIPLE MEMBERSHIP

The growth of all Soviet production unions since adoption of the First Five Year Plan in 1928 reflects the general growth of Soviet industry. "In the 1920s," Dismerini said, "the Metal Workers Union took in everyone engaged in iron and steel production, machine building and the manufacture of metal goods, but its membership was only half a million.

"In 1931, after three years of the First Five Year Plan, it had 1,480,000 members and was rapidly becoming unwieldy. We decided to bring the union closer to the factories by dividing up into smaller, more compact unions, seven in all."

The new unions were the Union of Iron and Steel Workers, the Railway Equipment Workers, Electrical and Power Station Workers, Farm Equipment Workers, Automobile, Tractor and Aircraft Workers, Non-Ferrous Metal Workers and Machine Building Workers.

Cripps Asks British Unions For Aid On Plane Program

By GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, Jan. 9 (ALN)—Indicating the determination of the government to mobilize Britain's industry for all-out war, Sir Stafford Cripps, newly-appointed Minister of Aircraft Production, this week warned that he would "override any individual, company or class that puts sectional interests before the need to win a complete and quick victory."

"Inefficiency in management is as great a breach of duty to the country as absenteeism among the workers, and has an even wider effect upon production," he said. "Directors who do not devote themselves wholeheartedly and energetically to their work are more to blame than any other persons."

CITE UNIONS' VALUE

Stressing the value of trade unions to the war effort, Cripps said: "Every keen worker will be a union member, for it is only through the trade unions that you will ensure fair terms and conditions and avoid friction between employer and worker.

"I will always be only too anxious to get the advice and help of workers through their unions, and I will always be ready to meet with union officials.

CUT OUT WASTE

"We have now reached the time when the inflow of fresh labor into the aircraft industry will gradually dry up, and yet we must continue to expand production.

"This we must do not by longer hours—which only lead to exhaustion and inefficiency—but by cutting out waste of labor and materials. If in a factory there is not a joint production committee, the workers must see that their trade union gets one at once.

"In every factory there should be a committee representing the workers, technicians and management, constantly improving efficiency in the use of men and materials."

MEETS SHOP STEWARDS

Cripps' broadcast came the day after he met with the shop stewards of one of Britain's largest aircraft factories to hear their charges that production was being held up through inefficient management.

Before his visit, the workers in the plant had held five mass meetings at which a detailed schedule of complaints was drawn up to be submitted to the Aircraft Production Minister through the formal machinery of the joint production committee, District Production Committee and the Regional Production Board.

Main charges against the company were that continual requests of the workers to store materials nearer the plant had gone unheeded; that unskilled men had been placed on skilled jobs, while skilled workers were idle; that the plant was cluttered up with materials used in manufacturing aircraft now out of production; that the management persistently ignored suggestions made by workers' representatives on the joint production committee.

Break With Finland Asked By Unionists

New York, Jan. 9—Immediate severance of diplomatic relations with Axis-dominated Finland was urged today by Rudy Hanson, secretary of the Natl. Committee of Finnish-American Trade Unionists and regional director of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers.

Hanson urged the step as a logical conclusion to the recent action of the State Dept. in closing the Finnish Information Center in New York, a focal point of pro-Nazi propaganda.

The committee has also issued a call for a Natl. Conference of Finnish-American Trade Unionists in Duluth, Minn., on Jan. 24.

'Toriest' Paper Again Under Fire

Seamen, WLB Score Lies of Chicago Trib

CHICAGO, Jan. 9—The Chicago Tribune, citadel of reaction in the American press, today was under attack along three fronts.

In New York, Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union called upon Pres. Roosevelt to denounce an attack on heroic merchant seamen which appeared in the Tribune's columns through the medium of an "interview" with an anonymous naval officer.

The Tribune article, latest in a series of attacks on the men who sail the nation's vital sea-lanes (4,000 of them have died in service), said that many seamen are draft dodgers, definitely are not seamen, tell their officers "to go to hell" and come aboard ship "not to work but to get paid."

PICKET PAPER

To back up Curran's letter to FDR, three NMU members—all of them survivors of mid-ocean torpedoings—picketed the Tribune building after they had failed to get an interview with Col. Robert McCormick, incredibly reactionary owner of the paper.

Meanwhile Dean Wayne L. Morse, public member of the War Labor Board, charged that a Tribune press service story had been "only 445 per cent wrong" in a story relating to the WLB.

The 445 per cent error—which many Tribune readers consider not unusual in the paper's stories—occurred in a "smear piece" about the cost of WLB telegrams to striking workers at a Philadelphia firm.

"Apparently disregarding altogether the facts, the writer of this story failed to ascertain that the War Labor Board sent the telegram from its original office in Philadelphia, rather than from Washington, in order to cut down expenses. The cost was $201.25, not $896 (as the Tribune story had charged) . . ."

'NAZI ORIGIN'

NMU Pres. Curran asserted that the Tribune's yarn about the seamen "can have only one origin—the Nazi propaganda mills.

"Its impact on morale of the thousands of unionized merchant seamen will be tremendous unless it is denounced for what it is—an attempt by Nazi stooges to disrupt and demoralize our contribution to the war effort."

The Tribune has already been under government scrutiny since the outbreak of the war. Special deputies of the Dept. of Justice held long secret hearings in Chicago several months ago, apparently to determine if the Tribune had been guilty of violating military secrecy regulations. The case was dropped by the government.

Oil Union Wins Poll On Pipe Line

Fort Worth, Tex., Jan. 9 — An NLRB election of major importance to southwestern oil workers was won by the Oil Workers Intl. Union when employes of the Pan-Handle Eastern Pipe Line Co. and two subsidiaries gave the CIO a majority vote.

The OWIU received 283 votes to 251 for no union. The pipeline runs from the oil fields of Texas to Detroit, gathering gas in Texas, Oklahoma and Kansas.

"We consider this a great victory for the Oil Workers Intl. Union," said Vice-Pres. A. R. Kinstley, "inasmuch as this pipeline runs parallel with several other major lines, some organized and some unorganized.

"We are now contemplating an organizational campaign to organize some of these pipe lines into our union."

OPA Head Urges Workers' Help In Gas Ration Cut

WASHINGTON, Jan. 9—A brief statement on the military reasons behind the current gas shortage and an appeal to all war workers who hold "C" cards to use them with the utmost care is contained in a letter from OPA Administrator Leon Henderson sent to CIO President Murray this week. The letter follows in full:

"During the last week heavy military demands made it necessary to suspend nearly all gasoline sales in the East. This freeze was lifted on Sunday night, but our civilian economy in the Eastern States must be adjusted to smaller supplies of gasoline.

"This adjustment will be accomplished by the cut in the value of the "A", "B" and "C" coupons to three gallons in the 17 Eastern States and the District of Columbia; by eliminating unessential commercial travel; by suppressing black market operations; and by exercising ever stricter controls over all aspects of the Mileage Rationing Program.

APPEAL TO WORKERS

"The cut in coupon value will bear heavily upon many essential industrial workers. Very properly they have been given preferred position and this position must be maintained.

"Obviously, it is necessary that war workers continue to get to and from work.

"What we are asking is that every worker cooperate by absorbing the cut in mileage by every means within his power. We ask that workers endure crowded street cars, busses and trains wherever possible; and that passenger car use be reduced to an essential minimum.

RESPONSIBILITY

"We hope that every worker will regard his "C" ration, his preferred status, as a grave responsibility and not as a personal privilege. Workers who are clearly eligible for "C" rations should exert every effort to form new ride-sharing clubs which can function on "B" or even "A" rations.

"We ask that home necessity driving be cut to the bone. In short, we ask that every possible mile of essential transportation be squeezed out of every gallon of gasoline.

"This appeal is being made directly to labor in the East through you and Mr. William Green; a similar appeal is being made to the farmers through Mr. Wickard. We know that we can count upon the fullest cooperation of both labor and agriculture in meeting this war-time emergency."

Clothing Union Cites Big '42 Gains

New York, Jan. 9—Substantial economic gains were won for members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers during 1942, it was disclosed today in a year-end summary released by President Sidney Hillman and Secretary-Treasurer Jacob Potofsky.

In the clothing industry, employing some 125,000 workers, wages rose 11 cents an hour to a national average of 93 cents. Cotton garment workers organized by the Amalgamated won an 11½ cents boost to 57 cents an hour—a far cry from the 19 cents average in 1933 when the ACW started organizing the field.

New York laundry workers, also in the Amalgamated's ranks, had an average weekly pay of $24.70—a jump of over $3 from 1941. In addition, Stabilization Director James Byrnes gave his o. k. to an additional 8 per cent boost on Jan. 1 of this year.

Similar wage improvements have been achieved in the glove, neckwear and sportswear industries, the ACW declared.

Rabbits Beat Shortage For Texas Workers!

INGLESIDE, Tex.—Under a Jan. 1 inventory just completed, a militant, win-the-war CIO local union here reports it has developed a program to get the jump on meat rationing with a stock of 835 rabbits.

Henry W. Wier, president of Local 316, Oil Workers Intl. Union (CIO), reports that the membership of Local 316 is "more than pleased" with their rabbit project which started six months ago when 30 members purchased 40 breeding does.

MULTIPLY—AND HOW!

"In thirty days we had an inventory of 304 rabbits of various breeds and colors. A check-up two and a half months later revealed the population had grown to 584. Today we have 835 and our estimate for the month of January will bring us to a total of 2,010.

"Up to the present time we have eaten approximately 600 rabbits (counted in the totals) and in May we expect to have well over 19,000 including the hundreds that will have been eaten by our members," Weir said.

The local here, which recently won a major NLRB election in the Humble Oil refinery and is regarded as the most progressive local in Texas, reports that rabbits are clean, their meat is delicious and tastes like a cross between frog legs and the finest fried chicken.

Rabbit raising is economical and is an excellent hobby.

Unionists who desire more information should write S. A. Tiner, V. A. Kirkpatrick or R. M. King, all of Ingleside, Tex.

Breeding does can be obtained from almost any rabbit breeder. A hutch is simple to build—and the rest you leave up to the rabbits.

NAM Boss Cited For Law Evasion

By JACK ORR

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16 — Frederick C. Crawford, the union-hating new president of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers and owner of Thompson Products, Inc., must have received a jolt this week when the National Labor Relations Board ordered his local plant to "cease and desist from interfering with its employes' right to choose their own union" and ordered the disbanding of Crawford's pet company union.

Acting on a petition of the CIO United Auto Workers Union, the NLRB found that the company had dominated the formation of the company union called the Pacific Parts Workers Alliance—and was guilty of other unfair labor practices, including threatening to close the plant if workers joined the CIO.

Further, the board said, the company used labor spies at UAW meetings and distributed to all employes articles blasting unions.

The decision also ordered the company to stop recognition of the PPWA as representative of the workers and ruled that the existing contract between the association and the company was void.

Hit Kaiser 'Back-Door' Labor Pact

PORTLAND, Oreg., Jan. 16— The Natl. Labor Relation Board's hearing on charges that Henry J. Kaiser violated the Wagner Act by signing two "back-door" closed shop shop contracts with the AFL, got under way this week with company and AFL metal trade officials bitterly attacking the NLRB for enforcing the law.

The case hinges upon a complaint of the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers that Kaiser's contracts with the AFL were made when the two yards—now employing scores of thousands of workers—had almost none on the payroll.

The company and the AFL have been running a full-blown publicity campaign against the board, a campaign that has been echoed by leading Congressional tories.

NAIL ILLEGAL ACTS

As the hearing opened, Walter S. Pollard, Jr., west coast organizational director for the CIO shipyard union, issued a statement accusing the company and the AFL of illegal collaboration.

"The real issue," Pollard said, "is whether Mr. Kaiser's company executives, in conjunction with AFL officials, have a right to select the union which all employes must join before even a handful of the prospective employes are hired.

"We believe the Natl. Labor Relations Act is clear that the signing of a closed shop labor contract and the enforced collection of exorbitant initiation fees of $50 and more for each employe is definitely illegal when done without the consent of those involved and when such a labor agreement is signed before any substantial portion of the employes is hired.

WORKERS' CHOICE

"Federal law provides that it is the employes' right to designate the union of their choice. The law does not convey to Mr. Kaiser, or to the AFL, or to both jointly, the right to designate a union for them."

Pollard said thousands of dollars have been extorted from the men through the AFL's deal with the company "illegally . . . because the labor agreement signed with Kaiser was illegal."

The NLRB's complaint charges that 700 Kaiser employes were fired when they refused to pay the big initiation fee to the AFL.

Wisconsin CIO Backs Tolan Bill

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Jan. 16 —The Pepper-Tolan Bill to centralize the nation's war production planning under an "economic general staff" received endorsement this week from the board of the Wisconsin State CIO and from a one-day production conference attended by representatives of many Milwaukee unions.

The state CIO board also took action to united labor, farm and liberal groups into a joint legislative "task force" to work for the passage of win-the- war measures in Congress and in the state legislature.

The production meeting said passage of the Pepper-Tolan Bill, which would create a top "Office of War Mobilization" is a necessity to "solve the problem of the full mobilization of our country's resources for the war."

It welcomed Pres. Roosevelt's declaration that "in Europe we are going to strike and strike hard," and hailed the proclamation of Jan. 12 as Farm Mobilization Day.

The group declared its readiness "to meet with the bona fide organizations of the working farmers to discuss cooperation between labor and the farmers for victory in the war effort" and hit disruptive activities of the reactionary "farm bloc" leaders.

Labor-Employer Action Urged To Cut Accidents

CHICAGO, Jan. 16—Management must learn to work with organized labor if American industry is ever to cut down its high accident and illness rate, Wendell Lund, director of the WPB's Labor Production Division told the American Medical Assn.'s Council on Iudustrial Health this week.

Lund estimated that in 1941 "American industrial accidents alone cost the labor power of 1,000,000 workers for one year" and that time lost through illness "is undoubtedly" many times greater. Expansion of industry and an inflow of millions of inexperienced workers into the nation's war factories have helped increase the casualty rate, Lund asserted.

"I am convinced that a major reason why we have failed sofar to lick the accident-and-sickness enemy is that our approach has been one-sided," he told the doctors' group.

WORKERS' RIGHTS

Declaring that "the responsibility for industrial health and safety has rested largely on the shoulder of the employer for many years, by his own choice," the WPB labor official asserted that "workers have a right and duty to demand participation in industrial hygiene programs."

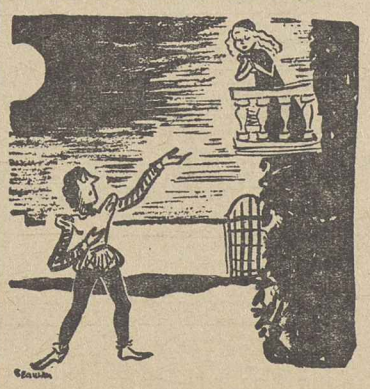
"Organized labor," he continued, "frequently feels about the company safety program the way it has felt for decades about the company union—that both are designed primarily for the benefit of management."

Lund cited instances where unions and management have worked together to bring down the illness rate and guarantee medical attention for employes.

CIO Technicians Sign With Shell

Oakland, Calif.—At the order of the National War Labor Board, a union security contract was signed between the CIO Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians and the Shell Oil Co of Martinez for the laboratory employes.

"It Takes Both"



It takes both . . . a Romeo and a Juliet to enact the famous love scene from the Shakespeare play. It takes both . . . War Bonds and Taxes to win this war . . . War Bonds and Taxes are the price we must pay for a Victory over the Axis powers.

U. S. Treasury Department

Addes Heads Sen. Nowak Defense

Detroit, Jan. 16—(FP)—The anti-labor character of the federal indictment of State Sen. Stanley Nowak for alleged 5-year-old naturalization violations was underscored at a huge defense rally when Intl. Sec.-Treas. George F. Addes of the UAW-CIO was elected permanent chairman of the Committee for Defense of State Sen. Stanley Nowak.

Nowak was scheduled to take his seat in the state senate for a third term Jan. 6 and the conference voted to send a letter to each of the other 31 senators asking them to put no difficulties in the way of letting the labor spokesman take his oath of office. It requires a two-thirds vote to exclude or expel a senator.

Other labor men among the defense committee officers are UAW Vice-Pres. Richard T. Frankensteen, Chairman Percy Llewellyn of the UAW Natl. Ford Council, Director C. Pat Quinn of the UAW competitive shop department, and Michigan Director Mort Furay of the State County & Municipal Workers (CIO).

Approve Funds For Nurseries

Washington, Jan. 16 — President Roosevelt has approved continuance of 39 war nurseries and child care centers, to be financed by Lanham Act funds, it was announced this week by General Fleming, head of the Federal Works Agency.

U. S. 'Beveridge Plan' For Security Due Soon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—An American "Beveridge Plan" to give added security to the common people, will shortly be presented to Congress by Pres. Roosevelt, it was predicted here this week.

The Plan will be the report of the Natl. Resources Planning Board, which has been examining the nation's security program in much the same way that Sir Arthur Beveridge did during his study of the same problem in Britain.

The Plan will be submitted to Congress along with recommendations of the Social Security Board for simplification for the unemployment compensation system along federalized lines, it is understood.

Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, sponsor of the Natl. Labor Relations Act and the present social security system, will introduce a bill in the Senate incorporating many features of the two reports.

FOLLOWS FDR SPEECH

The actions by President Roosevelt and Sen. Robert Wagner constitute an immediate follow-up to the Chief Executive's historic address to Congress in which he told the nation's legislative body that the people of this country are determined to press forward toward greater liberty, more security and lasting peace.

"The people at home and the people at the front—men and women—are wondering a little about the third freedom, freedom from want," the President told Congress.

"To them it means that when they are mustered out, when war production is converted to the economy of peace, they will have the full right to expect full employment—full employment for themselves and for all able-bodied men and women in America who want to work. . . .

WANT SECURITY

"They do not want a post-war America which suffers from undernourishment or slums—or the dole. They want no get-rich-quick era of bogus prosperity, which will end for them in selling apples on a street corner, as happened after the bursting of the boom in 1929."

Lashing out at Tory critics who hope that lack of planning for a comfortable post-war world may give reaction a chance to emerge the victor, President Roosevelt commented:

"I have been told that this is no time to speak of a better America after the war. I am told it is a grave error on my part. I dissent.

"I say this now to this 78th Congress, because it is wholly possible that freedom from want—the right of employment and the right of assurance against life's hazards—will loom very large as a task of America during the coming two years."

Carey Shows Unity Need In Radio Talk

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 16—We need "much more than declarations of unity of purpose—we need actual, working unity, the kind that gets things done," James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the CIO, said in an Atlantic Network broadcast from here today.

"Such unity is possible to achieve," he said. "Our country has had it before, in previous historic periods when our future as a nation was at stake.

"We can have it again, despite opposition, despite the reluctance of some, despite the fact that a handful of powerful individuals are still more concerned with their special privileges than they are with the fate of their country."

CIO PROGRAM

CIO's 1943 victory program is built on this basis, Carey pointed out, citing CIO demands for rationing, price control, win-the-war taxation, and the abolition of the poll tax and discrimination against minorities.

CIO also looks to unity among the United Nations as a basic need for victory, he explained, calling for "full and equal cooperation among the unions of the United Nations, including Latin America," to speed victory and to secure a just and democratic peace.

"Every attempt in this country to break our unity, whether by attacks on minorities, whether by Negro-baiting or Jew-baiting or Catholic-baiting or alien-baiting or any kind of baiting, must be resisted as the work, conscious or unconscious, of the enemy," he declared.

Heavy Schedule Faces Murray In Detroit

Detroit, Jan. 16.—CIO Pres. Murray will have a busy schedule when he comes to this city next week.

On Jan. 23 he will be principal speaker at a CIO War Relief victory banquet to celebrate CIO members' $900,000 gifts to the city war chest. On Jan. 24 he'll cross the river to Windsor, Ont., to receive the 1943 Christian Culture Award from Assumption College.

The following day Murray will be the speaker at a luncheon meeting of the Detroit Economics Club.

Maine Poll Won By CIO Shipbuilders

Portland, Me., Jan. 16—The CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers this week rang up a big margin to win the largest NLRB poll ever held "down East."

Workers at the Todd-Bath Iron and South Portland yards of the South Portland Shipbuilding Corp. participated in the election. The results:

The results bring into one bargaining unit the employes of the two yards. The CIO has had a union shop agreement with Todd-Bath Iron, while workers in the South Portland yards had been represented by AFL craft unions.

Leaders of the IUMSWA hailed the vote as a solid endorsement of industrial unionism and predicted the union shop would be extended to protect workers in both the yards.

Newark CIO Parley

Washington, Jan. 16—The Greater Newark Industrial Union Council was congratulated by CIO President Philip Murray on the substantial growth of CIO membership in the area, in greetings sent on the occasion of the Council's second convention, to be held Jan. 24 at the Continental Auditorium in Newark, N. J.

CIO Blasts Halt To Bias Probe On Railroads

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—With its whole future effectiveness at stake, the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee this week called a meeting for Jan. 22 to consider a "postponement" order halting its probe of racial discrimination in the country's huge railroad industry.

The postponement announcement—tantamount to a cancellation of the probe—was announced by Paul V. McNutt, to whose War Manpower Commission the FEPC was transferred a few weeks ago.

McNutt's statement brought immediate and vehement protests from Negro, labor and liberal groups, who saw in the postponement order an appeasement of conservative political forces within the Democratic party. The railroads have long maintained a Jim Crow policy which bars Negroes from better jobs.

To prepare for its hearing, the FEPC had retained Henry Epstein, former solicitor-general of New York State, to round up material. Epstein resigned in protest when McNutt's decision was made public.

COMMITEE REFUSED

Members of the committee, it was learned here, refused to announce the postponement themselves and told McNutt the responsibility must be his if the committee's work was to be throttled. The FEPC functions under a Presidental Executive Order through which government contracts can be denied to corporations practising discrimination.

In recent months the committee has held hearings in several cities and succeeded in breaking down to some degree the reluctance of many companies to hire Negroes or members of other racial and religious minorities.

John Brophy, CIO councils director, acts as alternate on the FEPC for Pres. Philip Murray, while Boris Shiskin, AFL research director, acts in a similar capacity for William Green.

CAREY HITS DECISION

One of the first to blast McNutt's decision was James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer and head of the CIO's anti-discrimination committee.

Carey described the postponement order as "unfortunate" and charged that it constitutes "a serious blow to the war morale of more than ten million Negro citizens and to all white persons who know that racial discrimination is a Hitlerite weapon."

Describing the announcement as a "setback of the first magnitude on the home front," he predicted that "unless speedily corrected, it may well develop into an equally serious obstacle to achieving full unity among all the peoples of the United Nations, regardless of color or creed, in their global war against the Axis. . . .

"The time has come for Mr. McNutt to show the same courage and valor at home as our fighting servicemen, regardless of color or creed, are displaying in their daily engagements with the enemy. . . .

"Act now, Mr. McNutt, to correct this grievous error before we lose the faith of millions of people, at home and abroad," Carey concluded.

Flays Lewis Attitude Toward War

Washington, Jan. 16—"War effort be damned" is the policy of John L. Lewis and his handpicked gang in the UMWA, Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland-Washington CIO Council, said this week in a report to affiliated locals answering an attack in the United Mine Workers Journal.

Katz's report dealt with proposed amendments to the 48-hour law limiting womens' work in the capital, which the UMWA paper had distorted into a smear campaign against Katz and against the CIO as a whole.

LISTED SAFEGUARDS

For this reason the state CIO Council was extremely careful to set down four rigid conditions under which it would support amendments to relieve the critical manpower shortage in the District.

These conditions, wholly ignored in the Journal's attack, included:

1 Certification of urgency by a committee of three labor people; 2 Assurance of proper safety, health etc., conditions by the Labor Dept; 3 Time and a half for all work over eight hours a day and 4 Certification by the Fair Employment Practices Commitee that there is no discrimination against Negroes.

LEWIS SMEAR

The John L. Lewis officials, on the other hand, have taken the position that the war effort be damned.

"They not only interfered with the passage of an urgent war measure without offering any alternative solutions to the police, but in a scurillous and thoroughly dishonest manner, attempted to deceive the public into believing that CIO support for HR 7447 was support for abolition of Federal Wage-Hour legislation and overtime rates."

Katz's report also pointed out that Thomas Kennedy, UMWA secretary-treasurer, was a member of the subcommittee of the CIO Executive Board set up in March, 1942, to work out CIO's policy on this matter. The report, signed by Kennedy and unanimously approved by the Board, recommneded that CIO unions waive double time for Sundays and holidays worked during the regular work week, and was adopted in response to a request from President Roosevelt.

Group Named To Study N. Y. Transit Issues

New York, Jan. 16—Bowing to urgent requests by CIO Pres. Murray and the Transport Workers Union, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia has appointed a five-man board to study the issues in the union's demand for wage increases on the city-owned transit lines.

LaGuardia instructed the new committee "to study labor relations in the city transit system and to submit findings and recommendations."

The TWU, commenting on the Mayor's action, said it "welcomes such a study in the belief that it will lead to the establishment of machinery for the stabilization of labor relations on the New York City transit system."

Named to the committee were Dean I. M. Wilkinson of Fordham Law School, Prof. J. P. Chamberlain of Columbia, Atty. George Alger, Thomas Murray, former federal receiver for the transit line when it was privately-owned, and H. S. Cullman, vice-chairman of the Port of New York Authority.

Murray, Cowan Stress Need For 'Hard Work' By Unions on War Bills

BY C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—"The job ahead of us is a tremendous job in the legislative field as in other fields," President Philip Murray told the special CIO legislative conference called here to map out action plans for the new session of Congress.

Murray sharply warned the conference against the "spirit of indifference," that could easily lead to defeat of CIO's 1943 victory program and to severe crippling laws against labor threatened by some reactionary members of the new Congress.

"It is the spirit of indifference that at such times results in defeat," he said. "People say: 'Somebody in Washington will take care of that.' The somebody in Washington can take care of that only when the people back home make up their minds to help in 'taking care of that.'"

Close to 40 representatives of CIO national unions attended the meeting, which worked out the technical apparatus for the CIO victory program as well as endorsing the program itself, offered by President Murray. (See full text, page 5.)

ANALYSIS OF HOUSE

In an analysis of the new House of Representatives, given by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, the conference delegates got a tough lesson in the facts of life concerning the outlook for support for the Administration and of labor's win-the-war program.

Cowan pointed out that of 222 Democrats returned, "the rock-bottom of labor's defenders" amounts to about 81 this year, as compared to 136 last year.

This figure was arrived at by subtracting the poll taxers, the other anti-labor Democrats and the weak or questionable Administration supporters from the total of 222 Democrats in the House.

Even this rock-bottom is further cut down when you consider the number who voted against the Dies Committee last year—48 all told, of whom only 20 are left.

"I might say I am not telling you these things in order to frighten you," Cowan said. "But that wouldn't be the truth. I am saying these things to frighten you.

"It is absolutely essential that I scare you, and through you the entire CIO, into recognizing the kind of job that we have got to buckle down to do starting today. It is a job that can well be a matter of life and death, not only to the CIO, not only to the labor movement, but really to the nation and the war."

FIRST LESSON

First lesson out of this situation, Cowan said, is that labor must learn to work with everyone who will listen to a victory program, regardless of party lines.

"If anti-labor and defeatist legislation is pushed in this next Congress, it will be pushed by a coalition of the reactionary wings of both the Democratic and Republican parties. If progressive unifying war-winning measures are to be passed, it will be only by lining up behind them every Congressman upon whom we can bring any influence to bear."

This in turn requires a day-to-day approach to legislative work and an end to the three-alarm fire system on which too much of CIO's campaigning has been done in the past.

This means keeping representatives in Washington constantly, means constant pressure from the field, constant demands from the home grounds. The job cannot be done merely by letters from the national office of the CIO.

DAY-TO-DAY WORK

Legislation is not decided simply by votes in Congress, Cowan pointed out. It is decided weeks in advance by day-to-day work among the Congressmen, who meet and caucus regularly on party and political lines. To influence them, we must match this day-to-day work with our own steady campaigning.

In addition, the new Congress will not present labor and the nation simply with more or less recurrent crises, as in the past when a Smith bill or a Dies Committee renewal or a poll tax bill came up. Every issue in this Congress will be critical, and related to every other issue, since they will be concerned with the course of the war.

"It is our job to keep in constant contact with members of Congress every day of the legislative session and in the intervals keep them constantly aware of how their constituents feel, constantly aware of the fact that CIO and all its members are following their actions and looking to him to maintain a united front behind our Commander-in-Chief to support measures really calculated to win the war," Cowan said.

LOCAL SETUPS NEEDED

This job requires a drastic shake-up and speed-up in local union legislative and political work. First step is the immediate formation of a legislative committee in each local, with the same standing and the same high quality personnel given to a grievance committee or a shop steward setup.

These local committees have to learn that a wage increase won through union action in the field or through the War Labor Board can be very easily taken away by a sales tax passed by Congress in Washington, that good war production ideas worked out in the plants can be queered by defeatist legislation on capitol hill.

"They have got to realize that the things that happen in Washington are not only as important to them as the things that happen in their own plants."

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—Any feeling of smug contentment with America's war production record is a dangerous luxury in view of the facts, the Tolan Committee said in releasing its final report to the new Congress this week.

"We cannot afford the luxury of self-congratulation on the production record of 1942," the report said. "It represents substantial gains, to be sure, over low levels of 1941, but is the product of America's unorganized might and far short of our organized productive capacity, to say nothing of the stated goals.

"Not only have our Allies suffered severely for lack of the lend-lease supplies we have been unable to deliver, but even the equipment of our own forces is very uneven."

The committee, headed by Rep. Tolan of California, with Reps. Sparkman, Ala., Arnold, Ill., Curtis, Neb. and Bender, Ohio, as members, comes to an end with the new session unless Congress enacts H. Res. 36 to continue its life. It has been frequently praised by Pres. Murray, by other CIO leaders and by the 5th CIO convention of last November.

This failure to plan and to organize, which would be corrected by creation of a central Office of War Mobilization as provided in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill offered in the last session, has been the subject of extended CIO criticism of the entire war production and war mobilization drive.

HIT LABOR 'DRAFT'

Compulsory manpower legislation is not the answer to the present muddle, the committee said, and the agitation for such coercive laws in Congress is a reflection of "a fundamental failure to understand the job in hand."

"Those who are advocating the application of a strait-jacket upon either production or manpower are living in the past. This is not a war we can win with our surplus energies."

Anti-Poll Tax Parley Set For Mar. 9

Washington, Jan. 16—Leaders of unions, farm groups and other progressive organizations will meet here March 9 for a national conference on repealing the polltax, the Natl. Committee to Abolish the Polltax announced this week.

"Abolition of the polltax requires effective organized action,' the committee said.

"The national conference will be a working affair with the purpose of securing maximum support behind the fight. The second day of the conference will be devoted to visiting Congressmen to secure their signatures to a discharge petition on the House bill and pledges of support for early passage."

SIX BILLS IN

Meanwhile, Congressional action was shown in introduction of six anti-polltax bills in the first four days of the new session. The Natl. Committee is supporting the bill offered by Rep. Baldwin, (R., N.Y.), HR 987.

Rep. Baldwin plans to put a petition on the House floor for quick collection of the 218 signatures needed to get around the polltax dominated Rules Committee.

Pres. Murray In CBS Talk January 19

Tune in this Tuesday, Jan. 19, at 10:30 p.m., EWT, for President Murray's most important radio speech of the new year, to be broadcast over the Columbia Broadcasting System national network.

President Murray will talk about CIO's victory program for 1943 action in Congress.

Murray Hails Auxiliary's Week, Jan. 18

Washington, Jan. 16—Greetings from President Murray to the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries start off "National Auxiliary Week," beginning Jan. 18, which the CWA is holding as a means of stimulating growth of the auxiliaries for help to CIO unions and for work on the home front.

Murray's letter, addressed to the CWA, said: "I am happy to extend greetings and commendation to the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO on the occasion of National Auxiliary Week, scheduled for January 18-25.

"Your organization has been doing excellent work, both in aiding the unions of the CIO in their organizing campaigns and in their war activities, and in promoting the strength and well-being of the home front for the common victory over fascism.

"It is my considered opinion that the affiliated unions of the CIO should lend their every support to the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, during National Auxiliary Week and in the weeks and months to come. In this way, they will be helping the growth of the CIO itself and will be making a major contribution to the nation in our war of survival."

OK To Drive To Union Meetings

Washington, Jan. 16—If you're a motorist in the 17 eastern states, it's o.k. for you to drive your car to a union meeting.

"Union meetings fall within the category related to the occupation or profession of the owner or person using the vehicle," as a basis for necessity driving, Charles F. Phillips, OPA Automotive Supply Rationing head, declared in a memorandum to Director Robert R. R. Brooks of the OPA Labor Office.

All pleasure driving along the Atlantic seaboard states has been banned to help avert a severe fuel oil transportation crisis.

The President's Message

Paying glowing tribute to President Roosevelt, in a recent nation-wide broadcast, CIO Pres. Murray praised in particular "his aggressive war leadership, which is designed to weld together our whole people in unbreakable unity, to put into effect domestic policies which will assure national well-being and the maximum war effort, and to drive forward for the speediest and most complete victory over the fascist enemies of humanity."

President Roosevelt's message to Congress on the state of the Union illustrated some of the reasons why "our fighting Commander-in-Chief," as Murray called him, earns such tributes and is entitled to the united and loyal support of our whole people.

The President's message breathed the spirit of national unity and United Nations unity from start to finish. It was not only a report on the progress of the war but a call to action.

It was a pledge applauded by all true Americans that we will fight through to complete victory, and seek to preserve the unity of the United Nations after the war to establish world peace and security.

The President promised the opening of that second front in Europe which was urged by the CIO convention in Boston "for the complete destruction of the main Nazi forces on the European continent by the combined . . . might of the U. S., Great Britain and the Soviet Union."

He was particularly vigorous in advocating domestic policies which will assure a more stable war economy and progress toward that freedom from want which is one of our main war aims.

"The people at home and the people at the front —men and women—are wondering a little about the third freedom— freedom from want," the President said. "To them it means that when they are mustered out, when war production is converted to the economy of peace, they will have the right to expect full employment. . . . .

"They do not want a post-war America which suffers from under-nourishment or slums—or the dole. They want no get-rich-quick era of bogus 'prosperity' which will end for them in selling apples on a street corner, as happened after the bursting of the boom in 1929. . . . .

"When you talk with our young men and young women, you will find that with the opportunity for employment they want assurance against the evils of all major economic hazards—assurance that will extend from the cradle to the grave. And this great government can and must provide this assurance."

In his budget message, President Roosevelt also advocated tax principles closely in harmony with the CIO's victory program.

"Care should be taken," he said, "that the fiscal measures do not impair but actually promote maximum war production. . . . .

"I cannot ask the Congress to impose the necessarily heavy financial burdens on the lower and middle incomes unless the taxes on higher and very large incomes are made fully effective.

"At a time when wages and salaries are stabilized, the receipt of very large net incomes from any source constitutes a gross inequity undermining national unity.

"Fairness requires the closing of loopholes and the removal of inequities which still exist in our tax laws."

At its Boston convention, the CIO repeatedly pledged its wholehearted support for the win-the-war policies of our Commander-in-Chief. It will do everything within its power to promote the adoption of these policies by the present Congress, in the spirit of all-out and united effort for victory so inspiringly expressed by the President himself in his message to Congress.

Double Standard

Press surveys reveal that an overwhelming majority of the daily papers are hot under their editorial collars about the $25,000 (net after taxes) salary limit.

On the other hand, not one of these advocates of unlimited compensation for the big shots, objects to limiting the wages of a $25-a-week war worker.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ONE OF the great qualities of President Roosevelt as a democratic leader is his ability to present issues of high policy in simple, logical and easily understandable terms. His recent message to Congress is a good example.

The CIO legislative program for 1943 is in keeping with the spirit of this message in more ways than one.

It is inspired with the same sense of the urgency of national unity and all-out mobilization for victory.

It is also a brief, simple and logical document, which presents the major issues before Congress and the country this year in a way that every citizen can readily understand.

The chief goal of the American people today is the immediate total mobilization of the resources of the United Nations for victory, says the CIO program.

But there is a minority of appeasers and defeatists, in Congress as well as outside, that obstructs this goal. It is at present showing its hand by sniping at the lend-lease program.

The CIO, therefore, pledges its complete support to our Commander-in-Chief for the indestructible unity of the United Nations and for the supply of all necessary materials to our allies.

Along with the United Nations unity, the CIO places first the total mobilization of all America's war-power—through nation-wide planning and utilization of all its material and manpower resources.

To bring this about, the CIO asks that the recommendations of the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills be placed into speedy effect through executive action. These call for a single civilian administrative body to combine the activities of war supply, war manpower and economic stabilization.

Such total mobilization, the CIO points out, must include the direct and full participation of labor.

The next points on the CIO program are real price control and over-all rationing.

Because these policies have not yet been applied, food prices have risen to an alarming degree; and many workers' families cannot buy many foods because of artificial shortages and hoarding.

The CIO, therefore, calls for immediate over-all rationing of all foods and other necessities; and for effective enforcement of price ceilings—with price cuts in certain cases by compelling profiteers to absorb increased costs.

To make these policies effective, the CIO asks for labor representation in all price-fixing and rationing bodies, and for a sufficient appropriation for the OPA.

The CIO tax program for 1943 calls for guarantees that sufficient income will be left to wage earners to maintain maximum health and efficiency for production.

It absolutely opposes any sales tax, as soaking those who can least afford to pay.

It calls for the complete elimination of war profiteers, through increased taxation of profits and higher incomes.

And it asks the plugging of present tax loopholes, through compulsory joint income-tax returns for married couples, through taxing tax-exempt securities and through increased gift and estate taxes.

One of the major points of CIO's program—which was emphasized also in the President's message—is the fight for freedom from want through an expanded social security system.

The CIO asks for single federal systems of old-age insurance and unemployment compensation to cover all aged people and unemployed, and for increased benefits to guarantee decent living standards.

In addition, the CIO asks for provisions covering permanent and total disability and losses through sickness; for a national health program to insure medical care for all, and for adequate protection of the rights of the men in the armed forces.

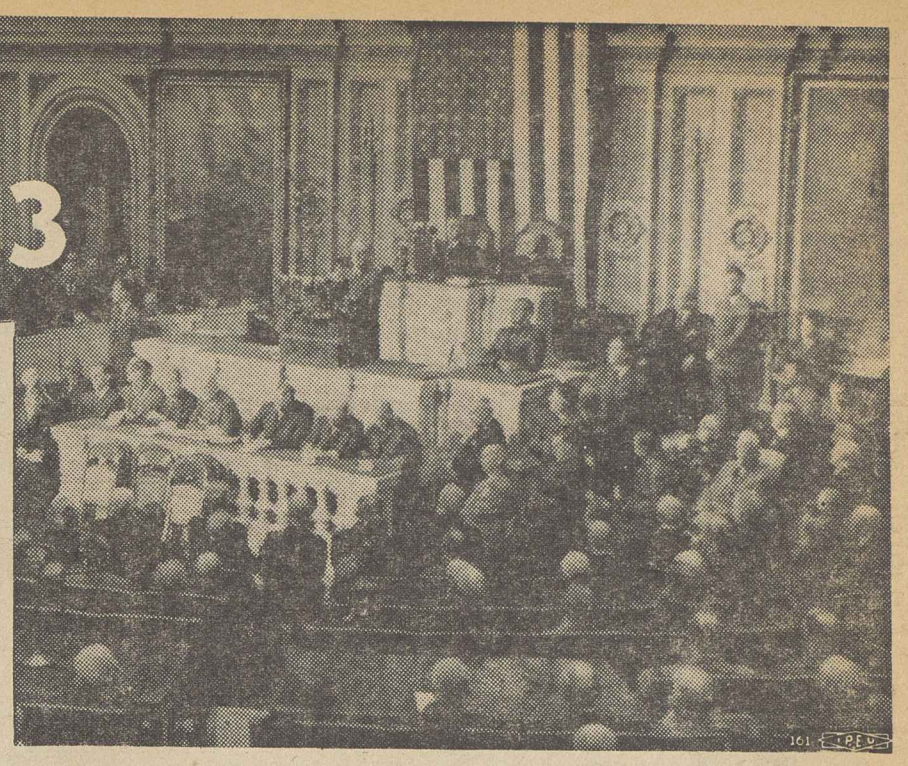
The CIO program reiterates labor's demands for discontinuance of the Dies committee, for abolition of the poll tax, and for opposition to all anti-labor legislation as disruptive of our national unity.

In regard to the War Labor Board, the CIO opposes legislation to hamper its activities in aiding the flexible adjustment of wages through collective bargaining, and opposes all rigid wage-freezing devices. It calls for the streamlining of Board procedure to assure the prompter disposition of labor grievances.

Collective bargaining for government employes, and cooperative action with the working farmers to assure adequate food supplies, are other important points on the CIO program.

CIO's Legislative Program For 1943



THE PRESENT objective of the American people is very clear—to achieve an immediate total mobilization of the resources of the United Nations on the basis of a firm unity for an early decisive destruction of the fascist enemy forces. The question arises what means shall be adopted to make certain that the full energy of all our people will be directed toward this end.

We must recognize that there are a few in our midst who, either through lack of understanding or sinister motive, sow the seeds of disruption and disunity. These persons, often under the guise of furthering the war effort, create friction and disunity and frustrate the desires of the people.

It is the task of organized labor, so keenly aware of the issues involved in this life and death struggle, to present a program of action to the American people which will accomplish what they so earnestly desire—immediate and decisive victory.

We hereby submit the CIO Victory Program:

I. United Nations Unity

Just a year ago the United Nations was forged as an instrument to assure victory against the fascist forces. Just as national unity is so essential for a total mobilization within our nation, so it is equally important that there be united action among those nations dedicated to an absolute and utter defeat of fascism. The United Nations represents this undertaking.

The full strength of the United Nations can be mobilized for offensive striking power only on the basis of unified military and economic action. This is the policy of our nation. Under the lend-lease program we have furnished essential military assistance to the United Nations in our common struggle against Hitler and the Axis forces. We have also undertaken to provide food and other assistance to the peoples of the re-occupied countries.

A small group of appeasers and defeatists seek to defeat the essential keystone to our national policy. Fearful to openly oppose the war effort, they snipe away at the lend-lease program and the efforts of this nation to supply necessary food and other necessities of life to the peoples of the United Nations.

The CIO pledges its complete support to our Commander-in-Chief in his efforts to forge an indestructible United Nations as the instrument for achieving Victory and through their concerted action to assure the kind of a peace that the peoples of the world desire. We pledge our support to all measures for the furnishing of military and other supplies to the various members of the United Nations so that the fullest world-wide mobilization of economic and human resources can be achieved in our offensive attack against the fascist aggressors.

II. Total Mobilization

One year after Pearl Harbor this nation has not as yet achieved complete and total mobilization of all its resources. True, we have made a great stride forward, but our total economy has not as yet been geared to total warfare.

The problems of production are still divorced from the problems of manpower and economic stabilization. The Tolan Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives, and the Pepper Committee of the Senate have issued reports based upon thorough investigations describing the imperative need of achieving a total and unified mobilzation of all of the nation's resources.

The CIO is opposed to so-called "national service legislation" or to attacks upon statutory and contract provisions for adequate payment for work done beyond 40 hours in a week. Any such approach does not result in a war mobilization but rather in a destruction of the morale and the productive efficiency of American workers.

The CIO pledges its effort to attain a national mobilization based upon a nationwide planning and utilization of all the material and manpower resources of the nation. A single civilian administrative body must be established incorporating the activities of war supply, war manpower, and of economic stabilization. The recommendations to this effect, contained in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills introduced in the last session of Congress, must be put into effect with the utmost speed which can be done through executive action.

Such total mobilization cannot operate without, and therefore must be organized with, the direct and fullest participation of labor.

III. Prices & Rationing

The President of the United States, many months ago, presented to Congress and to the nation a national economic stabilization program. The CIO immediately gave its complete support to the proposal. Unfortunately, only a very small portion of the program has been put into effect and even this portion is now threatened with extinction. We have permitted the appeasers and defeatists who have obstructed the fulfillment of the program to harp on the resulting difficulties and grievances of the people at the expense of the nation's total mobilization.

Prices of food commodities have risen at a rapid rate. From bitter experience the wage earners know that there is very little, if any, effective enforcement of price ceilings. Black markets are rapidly developing. Only within the past few days the Office of Price Administration has announced that the price of milk in several large areas is being increased.

Because of the failure to impose an overall rationing of all necessities — the families of wage earners are finding it impossible to buy many foods because of artificial shortages and hoarding. In the face of the present situation, workers in many areas and industries cannot buy enough food or assure other needs to keep up their health and efficiency levels.

The situation is a national disgrace and is one that cannot be tolerated. Total mobilization of the resources of our nation for all-out war is thus threatened.

FIVE POINTS

A. An immediate overall rationing of all foods and other necessities. This program can and must be put into effect at once.

B. An effective enforcement of price ceilings. In many cases present prices can be reduced by the OPA by compelling profiteers to absorb increased costs and decrease the prices on certain foods and other necessities with adequate protection for the interests of the small businessmen.

C. A widespread introduction of representatives of labor organizations in all local and state bodies who have control of price fixing and rationing, in order to give the people a direct participation in this program and to assure effective policing and compliance.

D. A sufficient appropriation for the Office of Price Administration to permit it to really tackle the questions of price control and overall rationing.

E. The replacing of the complicated present price ceiling which relates to March, 1942, with a simple system of fixed cash levels for all basic foods. This will eliminate existing confusion and make price evasion more difficult. This simple system should be combined with a standardization of foods and other necessities.

IV. 1943 Tax Program

The CIO tax program seeks to assure all people that they will have sufficient money to permit them to buy the necessities of life and maintain themselves and their families on a basis that will guarantee maximum health and efficiency for production. Under an overall system of rationing, wage earners should have sufficient income to guarantee that they will be able to buy the goods available under their ration coupons and meet their obligations. Toward this end we recommend:

A. Absolute opposition to any sales tax which would be a blow against the war program in that it merely takes away money from those who can least afford to pay.

B. Complete elimination of all war profiteers. This can be done by increasing all corporate taxes, increasing taxes on middle and high income groups, and imposing an effective war profits tax.

C. All unjust and special privileges should be eliminated. This includes requiring married couples to submit joint returns, taxing present tax-exempt state and local securities, and increasing gift and estate taxes.

V. Social Security

The needs and problems of the war emphasize the necessity for an expansion of the social security program. We must now establish the basis for attaining Freedom from Want.

This program must include provision for:

A. A single federal system of old-age insurance with equivalent coverage for all the aged people, including the presently and self-employed. Such a system should exempt groups of wage earners, farmers assure a guaranteed monthly minimum income that will provide the essentials of a decent standard of living.

B. A single federal system of unemployment compensation with extended coverage to all workers, adequate benefits, low eligibility standards, provisions for benefits for partial unemployment and elimination of employer experience rating schemes.

C. Adequate provision for workers who lose their earning ability through permanent and total disability.

D. Adequate provision to workers for losses due to illness.

E. A national health program which would include insurance for medical care on a federal basis covering all persons and families with free medical cars for those who cannot afford insurance.

F. Adequate provision for the protection of the rights of men in the armed forces, particularly with a view to the situation that may face them on their return.

VI. Dies Committee

In the past the activity of the Dies Committee has been viewed wtih apprehension by organized labor as an unprincipled attack upon civil rights and as an unprincipled utilization of legislative investigatory power for the achievement of collateral political ends. During the past year it has become increasingly evident that the committee's actions were far more than that.

Prosecution of enemy agents, the barring of the mails to seditious publications, and other actions of government agencies during the year have sharply indicated the extent which the organizations whose line Dies has followed, the organizations which have supported Dies, and the organizations and individuals with whom Dies has openly consorted, have been direct representatives of interests of enemy powers.

It is inconceivable that there are in Congress today any who would support the continued expenditure of federal funds for the activities of a committee which has so obviously abused its powers and actually engaged in activities detrimental to our war program . . .

The CIO, therefore, believes that it has an obligation to our Victory Program to seek to impress Congress with the absolute need of rejecting any request for the continuance of the Dies Committee.

VII. Poll Tax

The past year has seen significant advances in the fight for the extension of democracy in the poll tax states. Posing the issue as a matter of war necessity to solidify our ranks and defeat enemy propaganda, the CIO has played a leading role in the movement to secure federal legislation outlawing the poll tax.

The House of Representatives, at the last session of Congress, passed the anti-poll tax bill. An outrageous filibuster in the Senate prevented the senators from exercising their obligation to vote on this measure.

The CIO pledges itself to an all-out drive to secure the early enactment of this bill . . .

VIII. War Labor Board

The National War Labor Board is of tremendous significance as an agency in which there is equal participation of government, management and labor representatives.

Throughout the brief period of its existence to date, the National War Labor Board has been subject to innumerable tests, strains and attacks.

Opponents of its flexiblity, interested in shackling labor in the war emergency, threaten to replace the Board with rigid wage freezing devices, calculated to deprive workers of an opportunity to alleviate substandard conditions or to remove inequities or in any other way to adjust wage levels in the light of the war emergency.

Others, in violation of the joint pledges and agreements reached at the National Joint Labor-Management Conference, have sought to deny the Board's jurisdiction to deal with the problem of union security.

The CIO is opposed to any legislation which seeks the elimination of or interference with the Board as an effective aid to collective bargaining for the flexible adjustment and the determination of wages and working conditions during the period of the war in the interest of the war effort.

However, organized labor will continue to insist upon the streamlining of the procedure of the Board so as assure a prompt and expeditious disposition of the grievances of wage earners arising in industry and requiring the determination of the Board.

Further, the CIO, in the interest of the war effort, will seek to impress the Board with the necessity of meeting the needs of war production through the upward adjustment of wage levels to assure the maximum efficiency of war workers through adequate food, clothing and medical budgets.

IX. Govt. Employes

Through legislation and executive action the CIO shall seek to obtain for federal, state, county and municipal workers improvement of their wages and other working conditions, and provision through collective bargaining for the expeditious and impartial disposition of grievances on the same basis as the workers in private industry. This objective must be recognized as a necessity for the full mobilization of all our people in the all-out war effort.

X. Aid to Farmers

The farmers and the farm workers of the nation are performing a vital task in our war effort of producing food for Victory. In performance of that task they take their places side by side with the armed forces in the battlefields and the workers in the mines, mills and factories in our single national job of producing and fighting for the defeat of the Axis.

The CIO pledges its complete support to the program enunciated by the National Farmers Union which seeks to assure adequate food supplies for the United Nations by an immediate war conversion and expansion program for American agriculture.

The CIO pledges to join in cooperative action with the working farmers of America in their bona fide organizations to secure sound and effective operation of our farm lands and adequate mobilization of farm manpower as a part of our entire national productive machinery for ultimate victory.

XI. Anti-Labor Laws

A few Congressmen, aided by enemies of the war program, may seek the enactment of legislation directed against labor. Such legislation is designed to provoke a struggle between the wage earners and other groups in our nation with a callous disregard of the effect which this would have upon our war effort.

Today the outstanding objective is national unity. No legislation should be sought which does not contribute to the nation's effort to obtain a full and total mobilization of all of our resources. Legislation emanating from those who disregard the present burning need for national unity and who are more anxious to destroy labor organizations than to defeat our Axis enemies must meet the treatment which it deserves—utter and complete defeat . . .

U. S. Study Bares Huge Profit Grab

By HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—Federal income taxes have scarcely dented the war-inflated super-profits of American industry.

Profits of 1,753 corporations jumped 56 per cent in 1941 over 1939—after all taxes had been paid.

Some 200 holders of government contracts increased their profits—after taxes — from $781,292,000 in 1939 to $1,401,722,,000 in 1941—a rise of 79%.

These are some of the startling figures revealed in a confidential, closely-guarded Study of Wartime Profits made by the OPA's Division of Research and Analysis. Now getting a restricted circulation in Washington, the study blasts sky-high the laments of corporation executives and their stooges that government tax policies are robbing them of all "incentive."

The figures strongly support the contention of labor and New Dealers that Congress must act at once to close the numerous leaks in the federal tax structure through which billions of dollars are being kept from the government's war effort.

Subject of the OPA study was a group of 1,753 companies—including 100 holding the government's biggest war contracts.

TREND SLOWING

The survey indicates that after three years of uninterrupted rise, the skyrocketing profit trend was halted—perhaps only temporarily—in the first half of 1942. Despite the somewhat heavier tax burden on the companies, the net profit level is still far above the 1939 average.

"In 1939, income taxes absorbed 18 per cent of the profits of all 1,753 corporations," OPA said, "while in 1941, almost 50 per cent was paid in taxes.

Nevertheless, aggregate 1941 profits after taxes showed an increase of 56 per cent over the 1939 level.

DOUBLED PROFITS

"Despite the progressively higher taxes, 11 of the 50 industrial groups more than doubled their profits (after taxes) from 1939 to 1941, and only half of them showed less than a 50 per cent gain."

During 1941, 15 typical war contractors earned 13.7 per cent profits—after taxes were paid—on their private invested capital. Twenty-three "war subsidiaries," organized specifically to handle government work, earned 14.9 per cent."

That was an average figure. But OPA found aircraft companies raking in 54.8 per cent profits, after taxes, on their invested capital. Much of the aircraft producers' capital came, of course, from the government, which has already invested well over a dozen billions in war plants.

SLIGHT DECLINE

It was only in the first six months of 1942, the OPA indicated, that taxes started cutting into the war-inflated profits of American big business.

Taking an average from 354 companies, the study found that profits after taxes were 21 per cent lower in the first half of 1942 than they had been in the first half of 1941.

Although the average profit decreased in the early 1942 period, almost one-third of the 354 companies studied had registered an increase in earnings over the first half of 1941.

Indication of the increasing power of the large corporations was the OPA's remark that "practically all of the increase in profits before taxes reported by the 'war' group was concentrated among the prime contractors." These companies, most of them large, have a disproportionate share of government contracts.

"For subcontractors," the OPA study continues, "combined earnings were about the same this year as last. Through the close of 1941, subcontractors and prime contracts had fared equally well."

HUGE RESERVES

One device which kept 1941 profit figures lower than they might have been was the practice instituted by many companies of setting up huge "reserves" for taxes. These reserves, the OPA study said, proved to be much more than needed. Some of this huge reservoir of corporate cash will be used to pay for 1942 taxes, it is believed.

"The probabilities are," the government agency declared, "that profits after taxes will show less decline for the full year than for the first six months" of 1942, the latest period for which figures are available.

Although the last session of Congress was extremely cautious in its handling of corporate taxes, the bill as finally passed probably stopped profits from rushing clear through the ceiling.

"Profits before income taxes in 1942 are continuing to rise substantially above the high levels of 1941," the OPA study said. "It is estimated . . . that 1942 profits of all manufacturing industries will show about a 40 per cent rise over the 1941 levels."

Profits of the 1,753 companies studied by OPA increased by 4½ billions in the 1939-41 period, with "about three-quarters of the increase occurring from 1940 to 1941."

The profit increases among various industrial groups ranged from a mere 11 per cent to 955 per cent—almost 10 times the pre-war level.

"The greatest gains were in the durable goods industry, where every group but one showed at least a doubling for profits between 1939 and 1941," OPA said.

In 1939 less than one-third of the 50 industrial groups made 10 per cent profits on its sales, but as the boom developed, the figure rose to two-thirds by 1941.

How Profits Zoomed

1941 profit figures based on a study of 15 companies and 23 of their "war" subsidiaries organized specially to handle government war work.

	Total Parent Companies and Subsidiaries	"WAR" Subsidiaries
	1936-39=100
Profits before income taxes	323	1,696
Profits after income taxes	176	1,203
Net return, after taxes, per $1,000 of companies' own invested capital	$137	$149
Govt. Funds as a percentage of total invested capital	7.7%	11.5%
Net return after taxes per $1,000 of total invested capital, including government financing	$127	$133

Plan Analysis

An analysis of the profit figures contained in the OPA Study on Wartime Profits will be contained in the next issue of the CIO Economic Outlook, published by the CIO Dept. of Research and Education.

Accidents to production "soldiers" on the home-front since Pearl Harbor have lost more Americans to the war effort than battle casualties, reports Paul McNutt, War Manpower chairman. Battle casualties totaled 58,307 and casualties to workers on and off the job have numbered 46,300 dead and 4,000,000 injured.

Monty-Ward Resumes Tory Battle

Washington, Jan. 16—Not content with being slapped down twice by the President and the War Labor Board, Sewell Avery's Montgomery-Ward Co. came back swinging its blackjack against union security in new hearings before the WLB.

In a second case, involving stores at Jamaica, N. Y., Detroit and Denver, the company refused to consider extending the WLB's order for a maintenance of membership pact in its big Chicago mail-order house with the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes.

DISTORT ISSUES

As in the earlier dispute, when its obstructionist policies gained nationwide attention, the Monty-Ward executives screamed that maintenance - of - membership is equivalent to the "closed shop." And once again the company bought advertising space worth thousands of dollars in newspapers throughout the country to spread its misleading gospel.

Maintenance of membership, as frequently ordered by the WLB, requires members of a union to keep their membership for the duration of the contract. The union shop compels all workers covered by a contract to join the union.

The difference makes no difference to Monty-Ward, and its advertising has been echoed by reactionaries throughout the country who want to gang up on the WLB and labor.

CHARGE BAD FAITH

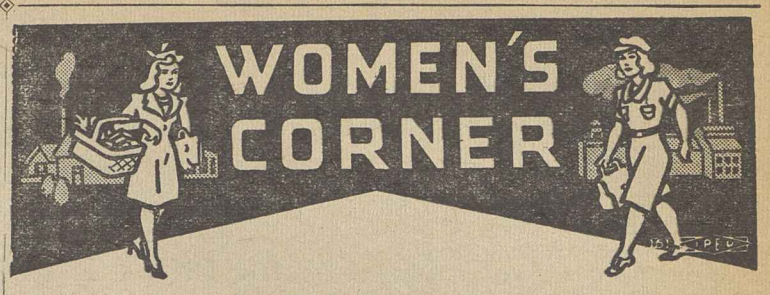
The latest Monty-Ward case came before the Board at the request of the URWDSEA, which charged the company with failure to bargain in good faith.

The New York State Labor Board had ordered management of the Jamaica store to negotiate with the union last May. When the firm refused, the union gained an enforcement order from the state's Supreme Court Justice Kadien.

Samuel Wolchok, union president, who has led the fight for security for Monty-Ward employes, lashed out at the company's latest propaganda blast.

"At a time when millions of citizens are making every sacrifice," he said, "Sewell Avery wants to give the Commander-In-Chief the run-around, go on persecuting his workers, and in general continue in the same merry fashion as if there were no Hitler in the world."

For Victory in 1943 Buy U. S. War Bonds



By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

January 18 through 25 is CWA Week—National Auxiliary Week. In Cleveland, in Detroit, in Los Angeles—all over the country—CIO auxiliaries are showing their unions the importance of having the women in CIO homes organized to help carry out the union Victory program.

Thousands of penny post cards are coming into Washington urging immediate extension of rationing. Auxiliary women are going house to house getting those cards written by explaining to other union wives how important it is to have rationing of every essential commodity so workers' families can get the food and clothing necessary to all-out production. And they're getting new auxiliary members at the same time.

The auxiliaries are raising money, too. Money for organizational work to build the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries in the important industrial areas of our country. Money to make the CIO auxiliary congress grow so that it can make a greater contribution to victory over the Axis.

HELP PRESSURE CONGRESS

President Murray told us at the CIO Legislative Conference last week that political action is one of CIO's most important jobs for Victory. Winning the war depends on maintaining a free labor movement and on protecting living standards of working people so they can do their job on the production line.

It isn't going to be an easy job to put our CIO program across in Congress this year. We've got to get the support of many men and women we didn't vote for, but we can get it if we make it clear that our program is essential to Victory.

The auxiliaries can give their unions real help on the legislative pressure job. The first thing we can do is to get an active legislative committee going in every CIO auxiliary. The job of that committee will be to see to it that the importance of action on political issues—on the tax bill, on the poll tax, etc.—is brought home to every woman in every union family.

The campaign we're working on right now for thousands of post-cards urging rationing to Director of Economic Stabilization Byrnes is an example of how we can do that job. By the way, how many cards is your auxiliary getting ready for CWA WEEK?

But we can do more than write post cards, even in thousands. We can see that leaflets like the new CIO leaflet on the Tax Bill are read in every home. We can work with the union legislative committee and participate in delegations to call on our Congressman when he is home, and write him letters afterwards.

UNITED ACTION

CIO national legislative director Nathan Cowan emphasized the need for united action with all friendly groups in order to support the President and defeat the appeasers in Congress. That's where we auxiliary women can do a big job, too. First of all we ought to get in touch with the other auxiliaries—AFL and Brotherhood. Then with other women's groups in our communities.

In Denver, auxiliary women have joined with other women's groups to organize a Women's Industrial War Council. CIO and AFL auxiliaries, League of Women Shoppers, YWCA, etc. The Council is holding a series of meetings on child care, rationing and other pressing wartime problems and planning action on these issues. The Los Angeles Auxiliary Council is calling all women's organizations to a city-wide anti-Poll Tax Conference. We can do things like these other places.

The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries would like to hear from every CIO auxiliary regularly; what you are doing to help in the legislative program of your union and your council. Send the name of your legislative chairman to 1019 15th St. N.W., Washington. We will send her suggestions and materials for your program. Let's make the most of this opportunity to prove to our unions how important auxiliaries are.

Big Cartridge Plant Goes CIO By Big Margin

St. Louis, Jan. 16—Five thousand workers at the U. S. Cartridge Plant—largest small arms plant in the country—voted CIO this week in a big victory for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The vote was won by the UE in the face of an AFL contract that covered some 1500 workers at the plant. The vote clears away a completely unsatisfactory contract situation, since the AFL agreement had no provisions for union security, paid vacations, recognition of the shop stewards, etc.

Local 825 of the UE is now preparing to win a further election among some 20,000 production workers employed by the same company, which has a long and smelly record of attempted union busting.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The United Steelworkers of America continue their splendid showings by coming through with more victories as follows: After threats and intimidation, the USA-CIO beat the AFL Machinists at the Bison Casting Company, Buffalo, N. Y., by a vote of two to one; at the American Locomotive Company, Dunkirk, N. Y., the USA-CIO won the election by a vote of 800 to 600 for the company union. This is a good omen for the Van Raalte Plant for Textile Workers. These victories are reported by Brother Joseph Maloney, district director for the USA in Buffalo.

The UAW-CIO won a victory in getting the last Mack Truck plant under UAW-CIO by winning the election with a vote of 563 for UAW to 280 for no union, so advises Alex D. McGowan.

PWOC Wins Election

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, as reported by Pete Mosele, CIO regional director in New York City, won the election at the Cap Sales Corporation with a vote of 23 for CIO to nothing for the AFL, neither union six. After an organizing campaign of about three weeks the independent union which had been in existence at this plant for five years affiliated with the PWOC by unanimous vote.

The Oil Workers International Union has been successful in winning an election at the Panhandle Eastern Pipe Line Company and two subsidiaries, Michigan Gas Transmission Corporation and Illinois Natural Gas Company. The OWIU-CIO received 283 votes to 251. The Oil Workers International Union has also been certified as the bargaining agency at the Continental Oil Company resulting in a vote of 14 for OWIU-CIO to 12. A. R. Kintsley, vice-president of the Oil Workers International Union, reports two additional victories, as follows: Lone Star Gasoline Company, covering half a dozen towns, in a secret ballot conducted by the NLRB, the Oil Workers received 144 votes to 24 for no union. At the Gas Company, the Oil Workers received 23 votes to four.

Morris Wright, assistant editor, International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers reports the following elections won: Torrington, Connecticut, among employes of the Torrington Standard Manufacturing Company, with a vote of 1,118 for MMSWA-CIO to 234 for no union; Canaan, Connecticut, where they won the election at New England Line Company with a vote of 89 to 52 for the AFL; in the election at Wiley Machine Company in Los Angeles, where they came out ahead with 84 votes to 45 for no union.

District 50 Loses

August Scholle, CIO regional director in Detroit, advises of the disaffiliation of Local 404, United Construction Workers from District 50, UMWA and its transferment into the International Fur and Leather Workers by unanimous vote of the membership. The local is composed of employes of the Bessemer Manufacturing Company in Alpena, Michigan, and there are approximately 400 in the local. William Tryon, representative of the Michigan CIO Council assisted in this transfer.

CIO Field Representative Kempton Williams reports that the 350 members of District 50, UMWA local employed at the Gelatin Products Company in Detroit, voted to disaffiliate with district 50 and affiliate with the United Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers, CIO.

An inspiring victory was won by Industrial Union Marine and Shipbuilding Workers at Todd & Bath shipyards, South Portland, Maine, where AFL had previously had a contract at one of these yards. Results of election: CIO received 10,631 vots, AFL 8,499. In the election among guards, CIO received 171 votes and AFL received 169, which now requires a runoff. Congratulations to the representatives of the IUM&SWA and also to CIO Representatives C. C. Smith, Robert Davis and Charles Lyons, who participated.

The Farm Equipment and Metal Workers came through with another election victory at International Harvester, winning the election at the Tank Arsenal plant, Rock Island, Illinois, by a vote of 761 for CIO to 346 for the AFL. This is the eighth Harvester plant under contract with UFEMWA. Tennessee Coal & Iron Company commissary election was a fine victory in behalf of CIO, as reported by Regional Director Noel R. Beddow of Birmingham, with a vote of 237 for USA-CIO to 48 for no union out of 371 eligible to vote.

Litvinov Thanks U. S. For War Aid

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16. — Relief supplies sent to the Soviet Union by the American people through Russian War Relief during the last 15 months have contributed to the military successes of the Red army as well as to "friendship and unity," between the American and Soviet peoples, USSR Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff said at the annual meeting of the relief agency's board of directors.

President Philip Murray, a board member, was represented at the luncheon by Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey. Russian War Relief is one of several wartime agencies which receives gifts collected through the CIO American & Allied War Relief Committee.

The directors were told that the American people had exceeded the RWR board's goal of $6,000,000 by 50 per cent for the 15-month period.

SOLDIERS GRATEFUL

"It is hardly possible," Litvinov said, "to put into words the gratitude to America felt by wounded Red Army men receiving anaesthetics during surgical operations; by those who, thanks to other medicaments from this country, have received alleviation from pain or a cure of their ills, or by those who have kept themselves warm in American clothes on the field of battle and in the trenches during freezing winter days and nights.

"I am quite certain that this sympathy and this response in establishing contacts between American and Soviet citizens, will have a very favorable effect on that friendship and unity between our two peoples, which are so essential now, in time of war, and will be no less essential during the conclusion and consummation of peace."

RELIEF MEETING: Mrs. Ivy Litvinov, wife of the Soviet Ambassador to the U. S., talks over war relief problems with CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey at a meeting of the Russian War Relief, Inc. Carey represented Pres. Murray, a member of the organization's board of directors.

Union Sets Blood Donor Record

Chicago, Jan. 16—CIO members of Local 43, International Fur and Leather Workers, today gave the largest mass donation of blood on record to the Red Cross here.

Over 100 of the leather workers, the first of the Chicago unions to participate in the new mass Red Cross blood donor drive of the CIO American and Allied War Relief Committee, gave their blood.

John C. Pierce, Chicago area director for the CIO American and Allied War Relief Committee, declared that this mass union donation marks a significant step in insuring a continuous flow of blood to men in our fighting forces.

Labor has been giving blood generously, said Pierce, but not in its most effective way—the organized way.

Sam Berland, International representative and manager of Local 43, who lead the group, said that they would reappear regularly at Red Cross blood donor headquarters until such time as arrangements could be made with a mobile blood unit.

Chileans Assail Arrest of Union Heads in Bolivia

SANTIAGO de CHILE, Jan. 16—(ALN)—A strong appeal for the release of the labor leaders arrested during the recent Bolivian tin trike was sent this week to President Penaranda of Bolivia by Bernado Ibanez, general secretary of the Chilean Confederation of Workers (CTCh).

Ocampo, who is also secretary of the Southern Zone of the Confederation of Latin American Workers, made a thorough inspection of the Bolivian tin mines last month when he accompanied Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, on his visit to Bolivia.

Among the Bolivian labor leaders arrested were Turelio Alcoba, secretary to the Confederation of Bolivian Workers, and Waldo Alvarez, former labor minister.

NAZI PROVOCATION

"We do not want to meddle in the internal affairs of Bolivia," Ibanez said in the letter to the Bolivian president, "but we would not be fulfilling our duty to the Chilean workers if, on their behalf, we did not protest the false accusations made against the Bolivian labor leaders.

"We are aware of the insolent and provocative acts which the Nazi-fascists perform in your country, just as they do in Chile and other Latin American nations.

"We know that these Nazi-fascists seek to prevent unity between your government and the workers. It is not the labor leaders, but these fascist enemies of liberty and progress, who are responsible for creating national disunity.

"It is impossible for any true labor leader to be in the service of Nazism, since the trade unions themselves would denounce him as a traitor to labor and to his country."

Pointing out that Bolivian unrest is due to the exploitation of the workers by the mining companies, the Chilean labor leaders declare: "The wages of Chile's workers are miserably low, yet those of Bolivian workers are even lower.

"The cost of living has risen more in Bolivia than in any other Latin American country. We urge you to release the prisoners and conduct an impartial investigation of the conditions which led to the strike."

U. S. Labor Urged To Aid Bolivians

Mexico City, Jan. 16—(ALN)—In a letter to national officers of the CIO and the AFL, Vincente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), this week formally requested U. S. labor to intervene on behalf of the 30,000 unionized Bolivian Indians who mine virtually all the tin used by the U. S. and Britain.

Toledano, who had previously appealed to Vice President Henry A. Wallace to help settle the recent strike in the Patino mines, said that U. S. labor has every "practical and moral reason" for supporting the cause of the Bolivian miners.

"Generals cannot win a war with hungry and ragged soldiers; workers who are half-dead of hunger cannot work efficiently," he said.

Recent dispatches from Bolivia have reported declining tin production, due primarily to the miserable working conditions in the mines.

AXIS PROPAGANDA SOURCE

Pointing out that Axis propaganda is able to exploit the fact that the miners' living standards have declined in the past year while the profits of the tin corporations, largely owned in the U. S. and Britain, have increased, Toledano said:

"Popular enthusiasm in Bolivia and other Latin American countries for the cause of the democracies cannot be aroused by promises of post-war liberation. The workers of the United States have a splendid opportunity now to express their solidarity with the workers of Bolivia."

MOSCOW, Jan. 16—(ALN)—The newly completed four-mile stretch of the Moscow subway, connecting Red Square and the center of Moscow with the industrial suburbs, will increase production in Moscow arms factories, union leaders predicted last week at ceremonies opening the new line.

All non-essential construction work in the Moscow area stopped abruptly at the start of the war. Work on the famous Palace of the Soviets, the world's tallest building, was abandoned and the towering steel framework, which had been almost completed, was torn down and used for scrap. But the extension of the Moscow subway continued because of its importance as a production measure.

MANHOURS SAVED

Now more than 150,000 workers at the Stalin Auto Works (at present manufacturing tanks) and Dynamo and Electro-Zavod, the big Moscow electrical plants, can get to work in four minutes flat instead of spending an hour or more on Moscow's crowded trolleys. Even if they do not put in more time at the factories, with almost two hours out from their working day, they can get more rest and recreation and thus increase their labor productivity.

Building this section of the subway was complicated by the fact that the tunnel crossed beneath the Moscow River no less than four times.

Many of the best workers were women; a team of women track layers who a year ago were Moscow housewives regularly outdistanced teams of men and broke all records for speed and efficiency.

While the subway was being built, many construction workers had to learn new trades. Crews of sandhogs installed the brown Georgian marble facing, brought across the Caucasus from Stalin's home town of Gori, in the Stalin Works station. Concrete mixers learned to operate rock drills.

Uruguayan Labor Seeks United Anti-Nazi Front

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay, Jan. 16.—(ALN)—After a series of strongly pro-democratic speeches by President-elect Juan Jose Amezaga, the Union General de Trabajadores of Uruguay (UGT) issued a manifesto last week urging the formation of a united anti-Nazi front.

Modelled after the Chilean National Democratic Alliance, it would consolidate the democratic successes of the last presidential elections and frustrate the maneuvers of the native Fifth Column headed by Luis Alberto Herrara.

"Despite the efforts of organized labor," the UGT manifesto says, "all anti-Nazi forces in the elections did not unite behind a single candidate. The outcome, even so, was entirely favorable. The unanimous hope of everyone who forged this victory is that all pro-democratic forces will now unite in a common front and agree on a minimum program.

"Unity is as necessary as the ocean and the sun, and it must be achieved in the interests of our country and the cause of democracy.

"The declarations of Dr. Amezaga on the need to fight Nazism and the Fifth Column, seconded by similar declarations by outstanding personalities of other democratic parties, coincide with the fighting program of the UGT."

Fly In Ointment! Girl's Hair In Machines

London, Jan. 16 (ALN)—One of the most frequent causes of industrial accidents in Britain today is the tangling of women workers' hair in machines, the Chief Inspector of Factories, an official of the Labor Ministry, declares in his latest report.

Investigation of 179 such accidents, he says, shows that the fundamental remedy is to enforce the Factory Act requiring secure fencing of machinery. Caps and bandanas then become a secondary precaution.

"I suggest that joint production committees take this matter up," he says.

CIO All-Out For Paralysis Drive

Murray, in Network Speech, Hails Health Crusade

BY HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16—Wholehearted support of the CIO to the annual drive for funds to combat the scourge of infantile paralysis was pledged by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a speech broadcast over a national network last Tuesday on behalf of the annual campaign of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

"Union organization by its very nature is a movement to alleviate human suffering and hardship by common cooperative effort," Murray said. "It is founded on human sympathy, on the desire of the strong to aid the weak, and so to advance the common welfare of all."

TRIBUTE TO FDR

Asserting that the campaigns of the Infantile Paralysis Foundation have a special appeal for CIO members and workers generally because of their intimate association with Pres. Roosevelt, Murray declared that "they do honor to the greatest friend of the common man who has ever occupied the White House, by celebrating his birthday in the worthy fashion which he himself has chosen."

The country is now engaged in the greatest war in history, a people's war in defense of freedom "against the most hideous forces of brutality and oppression that have ever threatened the world," Murray said.

"We must mobilize all our manpower and material resources for total war effort. We must achieve a degree of national health, strength and efficiency that has never been reached before. Every man, woman and child must be kept fit to play his or her full part," he added.

MENACE TO ILLNESS

Ill-health and the danger of epidemics are one of the greatest threats to our national efficiency, he said.

"Sickness and industrial accidents are now taking a greater toll of America's man and woman-power than all the instruments of war of the Axis. This toll must be reduced—and greater effort to reduce it must be considered one of our very first war tasks.

"The outbreak of epidemic diseases is a calamity which may strike us at any time. But in time of war, there is much greater danger of such epidemics, and their results are especially calamitous.

"For one thing, the war has brought about a tremendous migration of workers and their families to new war jobs. Countless families have had to establish themselves in new surroundings in crowded war-boom centers.

"Adequate housing has not yet been provided for this new influx of population. As a result, all too many families are worse housed than they were before and living under conditions that inevitably tend to lower health standards."

HAILS FDR LEADERSHIP

Pres. Murray paid tribute in his speech, in the name of the CIO "to the magnificent national leadership" of Pres. Roosevelt. He said that the working men and women of America have found him a true friend "who knows that the welfare of labor is also the welfare of America."

The CIO president also paid tribute to Roosevelt's "aggressive war leadership, which is designed to weld together our whole people in unbreakable unity, to put into effect domestic policies which will assure national well-being and the maximum war effort, and to drive forward for the speediest and most complete victory over the fascist enemies of humanity."

DEFY POLL-TAXERS: Check for $516.92 sent to the Democratic Natl. Committee by CIO ore miners after reactionary heads of the partyin Alabama refused to solicit funds in protest against FDR policies.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 16 — Southern labor today gave a vigorous answer to Southern poll-tax politicians who have been waging a bitter campaign against President Roosevelt and his war policies.

The workers' answer was in the form of a check for $516.92, gathered in small donations from more than 567 persons by several Alabama Locals affiliated to the Bessemer Red Ore Council of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers' Union, CIO, and presented to the Democratic National Committee as a "token," according to the Council, of "what the people of Alabama, the rank and file Democrats of the state, are ready to contribute in money, effort and devotion in support of President Roosevelt and his war policies of victory."

According to the letter of the Red Ore Council which accompanies the check, the raising of this fund was intended as a direct challenge to Gessner T. McCorvey, Chairman of Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee. He and other state party leaders had refused to raise Alabama's share of the Democratic National Committee's budget in protest against President Roosevelt's policies.

ATTACK TORIES

The Red Ore Council's letter was signed by its president, Howard Mooney, and by the some 600 persons who had already made contributions.

They sharply attacked Governor Dixon, Congressmen Hobbs and Starnes, and other Alabama Democratic bosses for their threat to "secede" from the National Democratic Party and make an alliance with certain Northern Republicans in a move against President Roosevelt and the policies for which he and the Democratic Party nationally stand.

The inference was clear: the Democratic poll-tax politicians in Alabama may desert President Roosevelt; may fight against his war policies; but the rank and file Democrats of the state, including labor, will stand solidly behind the commander-in-chief.

The check and the letter which accompanied it were sent to the National Democratic Committee through Senator Lister Hill, one of the few win-the-war Senators from the South. Copies of the letter were sent to President Roosevelt; Edward J. Flynn, Chairman of the National Democratic Committee; and CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

TO CONTINUE DRIVE

Commenting on this action, Howard Mooney, Red Ore Council President, stated that the fund raising campaign had barely begun. "Less than one-fourth of our affiliated locals have had an opportunity to participate so far," he said.

"All of the other locals are equally aroused over these reactionary attempts to discredit the President and his war policies and are determined to voluntarily raise a sizable additional contribution."

Fur Union's War Activity On Broadcast

New York, Jan. 16—Eighty thousand CIO Fur and Leather Workers took the air this week to tell the nation what they're doing for victory on the production front and on the home front, speaking through a dramatic radio show in the regular CIO Labor for Victory series, presented over the NBC Red Network Sundays at 1:15 p.m., EWT.

The nationally known fur vest project, which is supplying 50,000 fur vests for merchant seamen on the Atlantic and Murmansk convoy runs, the Red Cross, war relief, blood donations, civilian defenses, etc., were all featured in the program.

Interviewed after the dramatic script by Len De Caux, Fur and Leather Workers leader Irving Potash told more in detail of the union's war activities and made a strong plea for national unity to win the war.

"One of the things we've got to do to prevent Nazi ideology from spreading confusion is to get rid of that venomous creature known as a baiter," he said.

"You know who these baiters are. They're the labor-baiters, Negro-baiters, red-baiters, Jew-baiters and Catholic baiters. They're out to try and keep the people from uniting behind our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt."

Next scheduled show in the series is set for Sunday, Jan. 24, on the need for universal rationing of all necessities and for strict price control. Earl Robinson, composer of "Ballad for Americans," is writing songs and other special music for the program.

Oregon CIO Sets Program For War

Salem, Ore., Jan. 16—Pledges of full cooperation with the nation's war effort highlighted the annual convention of the Oregon State Industrial Union Council, held here Jan. 8-9.

The delegates heard addresses by labor and public officials, and adopted a program calling for federalization of unemployment insurance and liberalized benefits, better enforcement of the occupational disease law, increased salaries for school teachers, an improved state civil service act and other win-the-war measures.

At a Saturday banquet the convention heard Adolph Germer, CIO national representative, attack the public press for its labor-baiting editorials. Frank Bonacci, CIO director in Colorado, represented Pres. Murray at the parley and brought his message of greetings.

RE-ELECT BAKER

Ernest Baker of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union and Ray W. Brown of the Textile Workers, were renominated without opposition for president and vice-president. Stanley Earl of the Intl. Woodworkers was nominated without opposition for secretary-treasurer. Ralph Peoples, incumbent, was not a candidate for re-election.

A referendum on the officers, members of the board and constitutional amendments will be conducted within the next 60 days.

Negroes Make Good

New York—Negro workers are making good in office jobs, the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, announced in an end-of-the-year report on job placement of Negro white-collar workers. Every Negro worker placed by the union in a permanent office job has proved satisfactory, UOPWA employment directors of Local 16 and Local 18 reported.

Haywood Tells Europe Of CIO Strides

New York—As a British miner who had brought his union card to the United States, Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization and one of its vice-presidents, told the workers of Europe, in a short-wave broadcast, that organized labor is the bulwark of the "four freedoms" and its members are willing to give their lives to maintain them.

"A remarkable degree of industrial democracy has supplanted the old, worn-out and dangerous policy of industrial absolutism," Haywood said, and "a greater degree of cooperation is now being demonstrated between labor and management. Wages and working conditions have been improved."

The CIO aims to supply the implements of war to such an extent, and in as quick a time as possible, that it will enable our armed forces to smash the Axis aggressors and bring complete victory to the United Nations, he pointed out.

Beyond its labors, he observed, the CIO Committee for American Allied War Relief is raising funds to be sent to the peoples of the United Nations to provide food kitchens, ambulances, clothing and medical supplies.

Seek Union Action In Oklahoma Case

New York, Jan. 16—In an appeal to all union bodies, the Labor Committee on the Oklahoma Criminal Syndicalism Prosecutions this week urged all locals to take protest action during January on these cases, decision on which is now before the Oklahoma Criminal Court of Appeals.

Among the members of the Committee are Reid Robinson, Grant W. Oakes, J. F. Jurich, Lewis Merrill, Willard F. Townsend, Joseph P. Selly, and several other presidents of CIO unions, as well as prominent officials of many leading CIO and AFL labor bodies, including officials of 17 industrial councils.

The Oklahoma cases have been in the courts since 1940. Three men and one woman were sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary and fines of $5,000 each. The evidence against the defendants consisted exclusively of books available in most large libraries. Eight others still face trial. All are free on bond provided through the International Labor Defense.

FOR UNIONISTS: New labor pamphlet of the American Red Cross, which carries details of new Honor Roll plan for encouraging workers' help to nationwide blood donor program.

Red Cross Program Seeks Union's Help On Blood Donors

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Faced with a need for sharply increased blood donations, the American Red Cross this week put into effect a nationally organized program for recruiting volunteer donors among union members.

Endorsed by leaders of all branches of American labor, the plan has been drawn up to provide an adequate and steady stream of donors to provide the 4,000,000-pint goal for 1943.

The plan calls for establishment of Blood Donor Committees by central labor councils in 24 major cities, with affiliated locals forming their own committees to help spur the donor campaign.

Each council will receive an honor roll to chart donations of the locals, and each local will get a similar chart for checking on blood gifts by its members.

Arrangements for the Honor Roll plan, which will centralize blood donation activities in a special committee in the central labor body of each of the cities, were worked out by the Red Cross with the CIO War Relief Committee and a similar committee of the AFL.

MURRAY ENDORSEMENT

It has the endorsement of CIO President Murray, who declared:

"To the worker at home, the donation of a pint of blood means little sacrifice. To the men wounded in war's conflict, it may mean life or death. Let every member of the CIO who can do so make his contribution to the blood plasma bank of the American Red Cross. This is the least we can do."

Increased activity by the Army and Navy has considerably lifted the Red Cross' blood needs, with the current goal ranging about 70,000 pints weekly, and increases thereafter as required.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23.—Total mobilization of all our resources and those of the United Nations for total war and victory is "our first and all-important objective," CIO President Philip Murray told a nationwide audience in a radio speech broadcast over the Columbia network this week.

Murray's speech, which reviewed the CIO victory program put forward by him at the special legislative conference called here last week, reiterated CIO support for President Roosevelt in all measures necessary for victory.

He urged joint action by workers, farmers and all win-the-war forces to impress this program on Congress and to see that it is enacted in the present session. At the same time, he hit sharply at disruptive factors in the national picture, naming the Dies Committee and the polltax as two that must be immediately abolished.

"We subscribe completely to the splendid principles enunciated by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress when he expressed our determination to fight through to complete victory, in unbreakable unity with the United Nations, and to make the Four Freedoms a living reality," he said.

"The CIO's victory program is designed to mobilize our whole people behind our Commander-in-Chief for the attainment of these objectives."

To achieve this, he pointed out, we must achieve national planning of the victory drive, must strengthen the home front by rationing and strict price control, by a real win-the-war tax bill for 1943, wide extension of social security, and real guarantees of adequate wages to keep war workers in top health for top war production.

Ask Workers Help Tin Scrap Campaign

Washington, Jan. 23.—President Philip Murray today wrote to all CIO affiliates and to all affiliates of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO urging them to enlist their members in the tin-can salvage drive, for recovery of tin, copper and steel scrap.

"The demand for steel scrap is still most important to keep the steel mills operating at maximum capacity. To increase the flow of scrap it is now planned to launch a campaign to gather and salvage tin cans," the CIO head declared.

"To make the drive a success it is necessary to call on the housewives of the country to do their part; and in this matter, I would request that you enlist the aid and cooperation of the women's auxiliaries of your organization."

Murray urged two main steps:

"1. You urge on your members and your women's auxiliaries, to organize a tin can sub-committee to work with the Salvage Committee in their community."

"2. That you urge all homes to prepare their tin cans by cleaning, opening top and bottom, removing label and crushing flat, and then delivering can to the collection depot, or making them available for collection by the regular collection service of the community."

CIO Family All Helping U.S. Win War

Portsmouth, Ohio, Jan. 23—The Covert family is doing its all for the war effort, both on the battle scenes and on the home front.

Mr. and Mrs. John Covert both work at the Selby Shoe Co. here, making shoes for WAAC's and helmets for our airmen. They're both members of the CIO United Shoe Workers.

Their three sons all enlisted in the armed services and have been in the thick of battle. Lonnie, 21, was a first class seaman aboard the U. S. cruiser San Francisco which participated in the big battle of Guadalcanal. His younger brother, Donald, was a radio man on the same ship. Harold, oldest of the boys, is in the Army Coast Artillery.

CIO Council Aids Drive At Weirton

Steubenville, Ohio, Jan. 23.—Local 1612 of the CIO United Steelworkers of America has affiliated with the Jefferson and Harrison Counties Industrial Union Council.

In a statement published as quarter-page advertisement in a local paper, the council's officers pledged its complete support of USA-CIO efforts to unionize employes of the Weirton Steel Co., one of the industry's few remaining open shop corporations.

The council called upon "each member in this vicinity to take part as a volunteer organizer to help organize their members and friends who may be now working at the Weirton Steel plant."

Officials of the council are Charles Campbell, president; Daniel E. Neal, financial secretary; Kenneth Callender, recording secretary, and James A. Servais, treasurer.

"Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, War Workers and Taxpayers," is CIO's action program for a win-the-war tax bill in 1943, written in informal letter style and printed in two colors. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. 100 for 75 cents, 500 for $3.25, 1,000 for $6.00.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Labor and Negro groups joined this week in the widespread public protest against War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt's ban on a probe of racial discrimination in the railroad industry by the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

McNutt ordered an "indefinite postponement" of the committee's investigation a week ago. His action was immediately taken as a challenge to future functioning of the committee, which was named by Pres. Roosevelt to help root out discrimination in American industry.

The FEPC was scheduled to meet with McNutt for what may be a show-down argument on the committee's rights and status. There have been rumors that the committee may resign in protest against the barrier placed on its activities. John Brophy, CIO councils director, serves as an alternate for Pres. Murray on the group.

SEND DELEGATES

A delegation of Negroes, led by A. Philip Randolph, head of the AFL Sleeping Car Porters, sought to meet with McNutt during the week. Told that only four of the group of more than 20 delegates might enter McNutt's office, the group left without an interview.

Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, who heads the CIO's anti-discrimination committee, will address a weekend protest mass meeting in Washington, along with Randolph. Carey last week voiced strong protest at McNutt's action against the bias probers.

Another mass meeting will hear talks by Pres. Willard Townsend of the CIO United Transport Service Employes, and by Max Yergan, head of the Natl. Negro Congress.

McNutt's action was seen as an effort to appease the southern polltax bloc in Congress. His stand against the bias probe is in sharp contrast with his repeated speeches and statements in recent months that Negroes must be given jobs in war industry and that "discrimination against every race must go."

Connecticut CIO Backs Victory Bills

Hartford, Conn., Jan. 23—A win-the-war action program for the coming year that included support for centralized, national planning of the war production drive, vigorous backing of the national CIO legislative program, and sharp attacks on all disruptive groups and forces such as the Dies Committee and the poll-tax featured the fifth annual convention of the Connecticut State CIO Council held here.

A major part of the emphasis of the convention was given to the report of the legislative committee, which stressed the need for sustained work both in the state capital and in Washington, and called for enactment of a national tax bill based on the needs of the war and on ability to pay.

"Immense growth" of CIO unions in the state was noted in the report of the outgoing Council president, Thomas J. Molloy, who was succeeded by Clarence Wyman of UAW Local 626. John J. Driscoll of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Local 251 was re-elected state secretary.

BROPHY, CAREY SPEAK

James B. Carey, CIO secretary-treasurer, and John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, spoke as representatives of the national CIO. Brophy declared:

"We should be content with no temporary palliatives and half measures. . . . Only so can we guarantee domestic harmony and only so can we be sure that the influence of our country in postwar political and economic affairs on an international scale will be a just and democratic influence."

Steel Union Probes Dispute In Canada

Washington, Jan 23—Acting under authorization of the executive board of the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, President Philip Murray this week sent a three-man commission to Canada to meet with employers, union representatives, and the Canadian government on the steel strike there.

John Doherty, Elmer J. Maloy and Patrick Conroy, the latter an officer of the Canadian Congress of Labor, were chosen to make up the commission sent from the USA-CIO board meeting here.

The strike began in Nova Scotia and Ontario steel plants, and was due to basic wage rates of 43.5 and 45.5 cents an hour, according to Canadian USA-CIO officials. The USA-CIO has been seeking an increase to 55 cents for more than a year, but were refused in a report of a three-man government commission.

An offer by Premier MacKenzie King of an increase was described as inadequate by C. H. Millard, Canadian director of the USA-CIO, who indicated that it would only equal 2.5 cents in Nova Scotia and 4.5 cents in Ontario.

Plan Parley On Govt. Jobs For Negroes

Washington, Jan. 23—A conference to plan methods of defeating racial discrimination in some government departments has been called for this weekend by the CIO United Federal Workers.

Pointing out that the war has given "a new and over-riding urgency to this problem," the union parley will study the status of Negro government employes, map plans for getting better conditions and opportunities, and devise proposals for making the Fair Employment Practices Committee more effective.

Legion Chieftain Incites Soldiers Against U. S. Unions

FORT BRAGG, N. C., Jan. 23—(FP)—American Legion Commander Roane Waring, who wants to shoot strikers, has been permitted by the U. S. Army to make a provocative anti-labor and anti-democratic speech to soldiers in this training camp.

Using almost the same language that William P. Witherow, chairman of the board of directors of the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers, used in a recent speech attacking Vice President Henry A. Wallace and others who want a better postwar world, Waring told the soldiers they must return from war prepared to fight social reform.

SLAPS V. P. WALLACE

Too many people are concerned about the future of "Sandwich Island Hottentot or the Patagonian booby" than with fighting the war, Waring said. Although he did not mention Wallace, his reference to Hottentots paralleled that of Witherow's in attacking the vice-president.

Ignoring the tremendous contribution which unions have made to the war effort and the sabotage of production by business-as-usual interests, Waring magnified the few strikes which have occurred and demanded the strikers be drafted into the armed forces.

"If a man won't work," the Legion leader said, "he should be drafted into the army and drafted summarily, as a warning to all other slackers. Your sergeants of this new army know how to deal with gold bricks, just as our non-coms knew in the last war. If these men won't work, let the sergeants make them fight."

FIGHTS LIBERALS

Speaking of the postwar world, Waring resorted to the old NAM trick of calling those who advocate social change crackpots and long haired reformers.

"You must never let this country be conquered from within," Waring said. "We have witnessed in the last few years the springing up of a lot of strange and foreign ideologies and alien philosophies of government totally at variance with fundamental Americanism.

"The Legion has fought and will continue to fight these unAmerican tenets. When this was is over there will be more freak isms, more Utopian crackpots, social politicians and long haired reformers, prophets and demagogs, who will trot out schemes for bringing on the millenium. They will advocate all kinds of panaceas for the troubles of the world except honest-to-goodness hard work.

"Your job will be to fight them to the last ditch. These fellows are charlatans and economic quacks. Their false doctrines can only end in misery and loss of your American birthright as a sovereign American citizen."

Gerald Smith Reviving 'First' Party

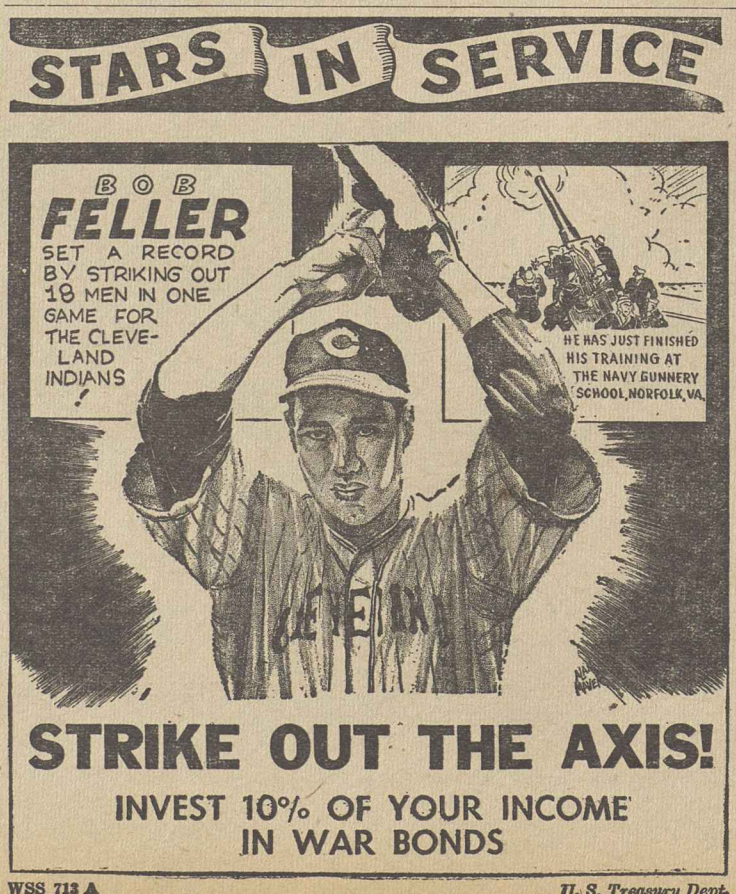
Chicago, Jan. 23—(FP)—A campaign to revive the America First movement as a political party to promote isolationism during and after the war was started here Jan. 16 by Gerald L. K. Smith, whose anti-labor activities have been denounced by unions as fascist.

Smith, who was an unsuccessful candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination in Michigan last year, started his campaign with a 2-hour speech to 500 former American First members at a rally here.

The former lieutenant of the late Huey Long, Louisiana dictator, said his new party might seek to nominate Charles A. Lindbergh, former America First leader, as its presidential nominee in 1944.

Machinery for the new party will be set up in the midwest immediately, Smith told his audience, adding that he eventually hoped to organize a committee of 1,000, with members in all states, which would direct the party.

Smith has been concentrating his activities in Michigan, publishing a magazine called the Sword and Cross since Charles E. Coughlin's Social Justice was barred from the mails by the government.



CIO Growing At Kaiser's Steel Plant

By JACK ORR

Fontana, Calif., Jan. 23—Henry J. Kaiser, the highly-publicized industrialist, presided over ceremonies here last week at which the first blast furnace of a new Kaiser steel plant was blown in as newsreel cameramen ground away and newsmen wrote reams about the significance of the event.

At the same time—over at United Steelworkers of America headquarters—USA Organizer William J. Brunton signed up another Kaiser worker—bringing USA membership in the first west coast steel producing plant to more than 90 per cent.

In less than four weeks, USA Local 2900 has brought into the union nine out of every 10 workers in the new plant.

READY TO JOIN

Before the first worker was hired, the local had established headquarters and was ready to organize as the first worker came on the job. And it was surprisingly easy. Kaiser had imported many workers from the highly-organized sections of the east, New York, Detroit, Chicago, Gary, Ind., and Pittsburgh, Calif., and these CIO workers merely transferred their books from their home locals to the new one in Fontana.

And these skilled workers soon had convinced home town boys coming to work in the plant, that they too belonged in the CIO.

Brunton said the union did not intend to file for a Labor Board election until the majority of the workers are hired. In the meantime, he said, USA will stay on the job, establish a strong shop steward system and prepare to make the plant 100 per cent CIO.

Win Pay Hike For 8,500 At GM Plants

Detroit, Jan. 23—An agreement between the United Automobile Workers and General Motors Corporation for wage increases for 5,000 tool, die and pattern makers, and 3,500 skilled maintenance workers employed in plants of the corporation, was announced today by Walter P. Reuther, vice-president of the union and director of its skilled trades department.

Reuther at the same time announced that the union is collecting data regarding classification and rates of skilled workers in all companies under contract with the union. This data is being collected, he said, in furtherance with the UAW-CIO's determination to "do a proper over-all job toward stabilizing skilled trades rates, establishment of uniform standards, apprentice programs, and other matters affecting this type of worker."

As a result of negotiations with the Corporation, just completed, some 5,000 tool, die and pattern makers in General Motors plants receive a 5c an hour increase, Reuther said.

Chicago CIO Plans Parley

Chicago, Jan. 23—An all-day War Labor Conference on Jan. 31, sponsored by the Chicago Industrial Union Council, will give Windy City CIO members a chance to exchange views with government labor officials.

Fullerton Fulton, council secretary, said invitations have been extended to Sen. Claude E. Pepper of Florida and to regional officials of the War Manpower Commission, War Production Board, War Labor Board and the Office of Price Administration.

"This will be a working conference dealing with problems of war production, manpower and maintenance of a fit working population," Fulton said.

C of C Head Hails Labor Teamwork

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—The olive branch of co-operation between business and labor — sternly rejected last December by the Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers—was offered this week by Eric Johnston, head of the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Speaking over a national radio hook-up, Johnston acknowledged that his address to workers was "unusual," but he pointed out that "labor and management are working as a national team these days to assure the swiftest possible drive to victory for the forces of freedom."

The Chamber of Commerce executive's plea for harmony in American industry was in strong contrast with the NAM's "beat labor first" program, and marked a distinct break with much of the national C of C's record of bitter hostility to organized labor.

AREAS OF AGREEMENT

The war has shown, Johnston said, that "areas of agreement" between labor and management far outweigh the disagreements and has brought about an understanding of "our common stake in our traditional political and economic institutions."

"Teamwork between management and labor has paid enormous dividends in planes and tanks, guns and ships," the C of C head declared, adding that "without the cooperation and determined efforts of American workers, industry's war production achievements could not have been attained."

Johnston cited the existence of 1,900 labor-management production committees "which have the purpose of promoting maximum production" as a bright spot on the industrial scene, but warned that output must be sharply increased to meet the goals set by President Roosevelt.

Obstacles in the way of maximum war production must be rooted out by labor, industry and government, Johnston said.

"War has proved that we are capable of unity as a people, no matter what our occupations," he concluuded. "It has shown us the possibilities of unity.

"We can and will project our war-born unity into the peace. And, with God's inspiration and help, we will build the kind of world tomorrow we dream of today."

Legislative Program in Pamphlet

Washington, Jan. 23—"Road to Victory," CIO's newest pamphlet, contains full text of the 1943 legislative program presented by President Murray to the special CIO conference called here last week to work out an action program for the new Congress.

The program deals with basic war issues such as unity of the United Nations, total mobilization, rationing and price control, taxes, social security, the Dies Committee, polltax, etc.

"Road to Victory" is a must for every worker who wants to make the new Congress a real victory Congress. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. Price: 100 for $1.75; 500 for $5.75.

Brothers

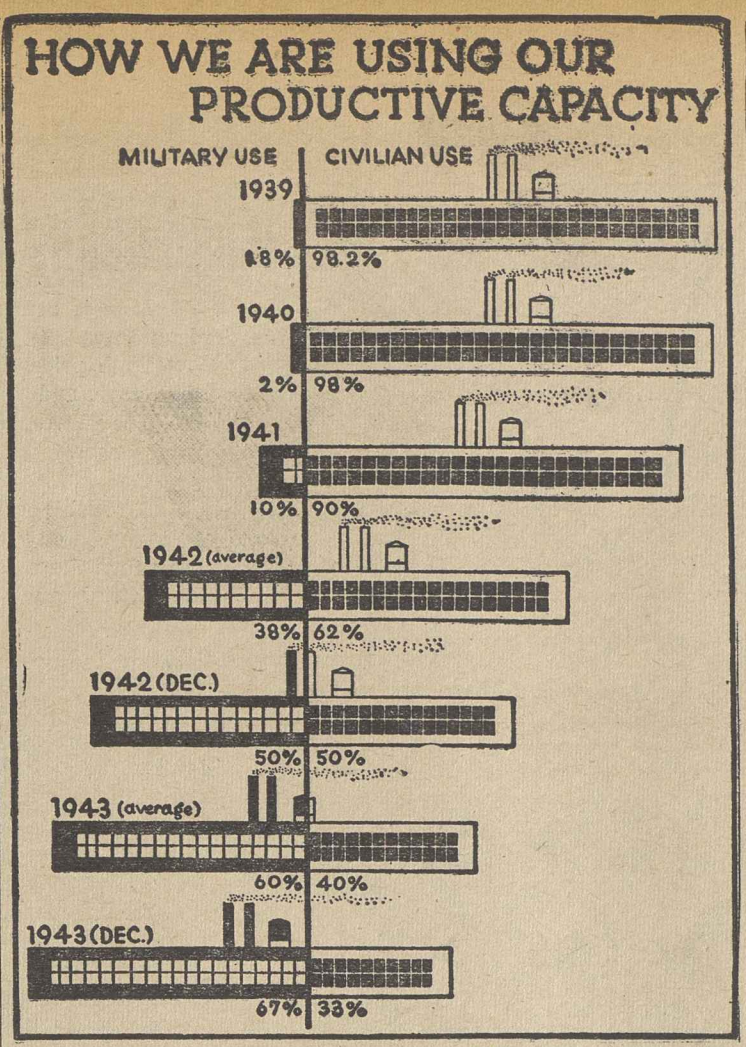
In a moment, the money was sucked up through the fire blower, and Barden's money was in ashes.

Fellow workers passed the hat, collected $4.50 more than Barden's $28 pay.



PROGRESS CHART: This chart, prepared by Consumers Union, shows that American industry has been converted to the war effort. While in 1939 some 98.2% of our productive effort was engaged in the manufacture of civilian goods, it is estimated that by December 1943, 67% will be required to service the war machine.

Chilean Labor Head Invited to Visit U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—In a new "good neighbor" move, Pres. Philip Murray today extended an invitation to Bernardo Ibanez, secretary of the Chilean labor movement, to visit the United States as a guest of the CIO.

Murray's invitation, which was accompanied by a similar message from AFL Pres. Green, was sent within 48 hours after Chile broke off diplomatic relations with the Axis countries. Ibanez is secretary-general of the Confederation of Workers of the Republic of Chile.

Murray urged Ibanez to spend at least two weeks in this country, visiting with labor leaders in Washington and in principal cities of the nation. His invitation noted the "importance of developments now taking place between our two countries," and of the common interests of the workers of the democratic nations.

"It seems to us, as it has to you, that we should plan together for maximum understanding and cooperation," Murray said.

"Hence the CIO hopes that you will be able to accept our invitation as soon as possible so that we may all be able to contribute the fullest advantage to each other and the democratic cause."

Florida Citrus Drive Moves Fast

Philadelphia, Jan. 23 — Swift progress in the drive to organize the Florida citrus industry, launched less than a month ago by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO indicates that the 30,000 workers will soon be part of the Food-for-Victory union.

"To include Florida citrus workers in our union has long been an ambition of UCAPAWA," said Pres. Donald Henderson, who recently returned from Florida.

UNION IS NEEDED

"The workers have desperately needed a union for years. With a war to win in which food is a major weapon, not only the workers, but the industry, and the entire country needs the union to help assure this food supply."

Scene of some of the blackest pages of terror in the history of the labor movement, the ridge region around Orlando is now a beehive of union activity.

Poll-Tax Bloc Renews War On New Deal

Washington, Jan. 23 — Poll-tax Congressmen, leading a "revolt" against Administration forces, marked up a victory this week in the defeat of Rep. Vito Marcantonio of New York for a place on the powerful House Judiciary Committee.

The fight, led by such Congressmen as Dies of Texas, Rankin of Mississippi, and Woodrum of Virginia (all poll-taxers), came in the Democratic caucus after party leaders had appointed Marcantonio. It was the first time in many years that the majority party leadership has been repudiated on a committee assignment.

"The real issue against me was my fight to extend democracy by the abolition of the poll-tax and to wipe out the disgraceful fascist blot on America, lynching, as well as my fight in defense of American workers," Marcantonio said.

Meantime, the first week of the new Congress saw some 1020 bills and resolutions put into the hopper. On the positive side of the major bills were a resolution to extend the life of the Tolan Committee and a series of measures for repeal of the poll-tax.

On the negative side, bills were offered threatening rationing and price control, both by refusing OPA authority to lift ration books of gas violators and by a "probe" of OPA, and a number of minor measures with anti-labor riders were slipped into the hopper.

Still to come as THE CIO NEWS went to press are the 1943 tax bill, expected soon, and the resolution for renewal of the disruptive Dies Committee. The report is that Dies will ask for $60,000 as a starter for the committee this year.

Guaranteed 48-Hour-Week Held War Need

DETROIT, Jan. 23—The 48-hour work week should be established in all war plants within the next 60 days, Walter Reuther, United Automobile Workers vice-president, declared this week.

A member of the War Manpower Commission's Labor-Management Policy Committee, Reuther gave the nation's reactionaries a big cud to chew. They have been insisting on removal of 40-hour wage standards, allegedly in the interest of the war, but they haven't met the problem of increasing war production through guaranteed long working hours.

The auto union official's program for lifting arms output was based upon greater utilization of the nation's working force, and on preservation of income standards necessary to keep morale and health at wartime high levels.

The government should undertake immediately to provide every war worker with 40 hours of employment, Reuther said, and increase that to 48 hours a week within 60 days.

At the same time he advocated "the immediate release to other war plants, with full seniority protection, of all employes who cannot be given full employment" in their present jobs.

NATIONAL WAGE POLICY

To implement the full-work plan, Reuther called upon the government to set a National Wage Policy guaranteeing at least 40 hours' pay a week to each worker employed less than 40 hours, with the cost to be borne by the government "when the short work-week is due to material shortages, changes of schedules and specifications, etc., and by management where they are responsible."

He also urged establishment by the War Labor Board of an industry-wide stabilization agreement for the automotive and allied industries, with a master contract based on the principle of equal pay for equal work in all plants.

"Achievement of increased production during 1942 was chiefly a problem of plant conversion, proper organization of production facilities and the most efficient use of critical materials," the UAW-CIO vice-president recalled.

"While there remains much to be done in these fields in 1943, a major increase in war production this year must come from the maximum utilization of labor through full and complete employment, and through the building of high labor morale from which we will secure the maximum effort on the part of our millions of production soldiers."

Compulsory planning for full employment, he added, would help eliminate labor hoarding and manpower shortages, would bolster morale and would end the fear among many workers that greater output will lead to joblessness.

"Labor's desire to cooperate is being short-circuited and replaced by resentment and cynicism," Reuther warned.

He cited instances at the Olds plant in Lansing, Mich.; the Chevrolet factory in Flint; the Bay City Chevrolet plant; and the Dodge plant in Detroit. In all these cases, record-breaking production under the impetus of union appeals was followed by lay-offs due to shortages of material or other evidences of lack of planning.

"No change in existing laws nor any new legislation would be required to establish a guaranteed 40- and then a 48-hour week," Reuther said. "Those who talk about repealing 40-hour laws are thinking of wage cuts not of increasing production."

Widespread dissatisfaction is being caused by wage inequalities throughout the auto industry, he asserted, adding that since the government is footing the war-cost bill, "the rates for equal work should be the same."

Pay As You Go

To pay as you go has a real appeal to all income-tax payers who dread the approach of March 15.

Certainly it is better to have tax payments spread over the year, instead of having to pay one big lump sum at one time.

So many people are fooled by the highly-financed propaganda for the Ruml plan, because it calls itself a "pay-as-you-go" plan.

But actually the Ruml plan is an attempted grab, promoted by wealthy interests who want to do the grabbing.

Its chief purpose is cancel 1942 income taxes. Its advocates say that won't make much difference, as similar taxes will still be paid this year on 1943 incomes.

But it makes this much difference—that 1942 was a year of top income and profits. So over a period, many wealthy individuals will pocket the difference between top 1942 taxes and the lesser taxes of leaner years to come.

The Ruml plan would also mean windfalls for the estates of wealthy persons upon death. And there are other similar financial inducements that are making the big-money crowd push the Ruml plan so vigorously.

The pay-as-you-go idea is fine, and the CIO will push vigorously for a real pay-as-you-go tax plan. But we don't want the Ruml plan

Congress Committees

There are many ways in which a standing committee of Congress may thwart majority rule, if it sets out to do so.

It may delay considering or reporting out an important bill. It may pigeonhole it indefinitely and prevent a majority vote on the floor. Or it may report a bill out in such a way, and under such rules, as to prevent a fair vote on the real issue.

Of course, a well-intentioned, well-balanced and representative committee should not do any of these things.

But under present Congressional procedures, the most important standing committees are not really representative; and they are largely controlled by a reactionary tory clique.

Seniority is supposed to determine the key committee appointments. And unfortunately the Congressmen who have been longest in office are usually those from the poll-tax states—elected by a small minority of the citizens in the first place, and repeatedly re-elected because the poll tax prevents any substantial popular opposition.

So a tory minority of poll-tax Bourbons, themselves representing minorities, exercise committee control out of all proportion to the popular support for their policies.

And this reactionary minority control is worse in this Congress than ever before. The poll-taxers are more strongly entrenched in the committees, and together with other reactionaries they constitute a majority in most cases.

This makes the task of labor and other progressives all the more difficult in this Congress. The poll-taxers are little responsive to popular pressure, for the reasons indicated. But redoubled efforts will have to be made to impress the people's will on the other Congressmen, who are elected by unrestricted popular vote.

More Courage Needed

Anything that holds back any part of the American people from playing their full war part—anything that divides the United Nations or dampens their ardor—means lengthening the war and killing more Americans to win it.

President Roosevelt recognized that one of our first war measures must be to end job discriminations against Negro workers, when he set up the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

This is necessary to mobilize all our manpower. It is also necessary to promote close and enthusiastic cooperation between all the races and nationalities in the United Nations.

The Committee has been doing a fine and courageous job to end racial discriminations. But it has suddenly been stopped in its tracks by Manpower Director Paul McNutt, just as it was to hold hearings on one of the worst sectors of discrimination, the railroad industry.

Why were these hearings postponed indefinitely? Was it due to timid counsels of political expediency? An explanation is long overdue. For the war calls for courageous leadership at home as well as on the fighting fronts.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IT'S getting so the only things we aren't short of are those that are rationed.

And that's no kidding.

The only civilians who don't have trouble getting meat these days are those who don't need it.

Milk is being taken from babes to be given to debutantes.

High prices are the best way to give to those that have, and to take from those that have not.

They fatten the parasite and starve the useful war worker.

A Washington Navy Yard worker recently had to take the day off to comb the city for condensed milk to make a formula to feed his baby.

But high-priced Hollywood restaurants have all the meat, butter and eggs their customers can eat.

Food prices are now 42 percent above pre-war levels. But wealthy club-men don't feel the pinch—only women, children and low-paid workers.

Sure, there are bound to be shortages for civilians in a war like this.

Every good American will gladly tighten his belt, if he has to, so our fighting men can have first call on the grub.

Everyone with the will for victory will cheer shipments to fighting allies whose need is greater than ours.

But no good Americans—and least of all, the members of the CIO—will be satisfied until the food that is available here is properly distributed.

That's why the CIO demands immediate over-all rationing of all food and other necessities; and the effective enforcement of price ceilings.

Over-all rationing means a chance for everyone to get his or her fair share—not a surfeit for some and nothing for others, as at present.

Properly applied, as in Britain and other countries, it means that the man doing heavy work will be entitled to more meat than the club-man.

It means more milk for children, and less for debutantes.

But over-all rationing calls for its partner, real price control, if low-income families are to buy what their ration entitles them to.

Some food shortages are inevitable. But it is not inevitable that we should be as short as we are.

Herbert W. Parisius, who recently resigned as Food Production Director, estimates that food production quotas can be raised by 20 percent by "converting American agriculture on an all-out war basis."

The National Farmers Union agrees. It has advanced a program to assure adequate food supplies for the United Nations, by an immediate war conversion and expansion program for American agriculture.

The CIO was the first to call for the conversion of American industry on an all-out war basis, and for nationwide planning to expand its production.

It is now among the first to give its complete support to the program of the National Farmers Union for a similar conversion of food production.

Rationing and price control require the cooperation of the whole people to make them effective.

It will take a lot more popular demand to get them, in the first place.

Then the people have to understand the need and the purpose, to insure willing compliance; and so they may contribute their practical ideas and initiative to meeting a mass problem.

Finally, the vigilance of all the people is needed to shame and expose chiselers, hoarders and profiteers.

The labor unions, representing the biggest single organized group of consumers, have most to contribute along these lines.

That's why the CIO calls for labor representation, not only in top policy-making and administration, but also in all state and local bodies that have control of price-fixing and rationing.

But all of the above plans to meet our food crisis are incomplete, and may be upset, unless we also have a real victory tax program.

In 1943, it is estimated, there will be a national money income of $110 billion, as against $70 billion worth of consumers' goods.

If that $110 billion goes into the market unchecked, it will force prices sky-high and cause the worst inflation.

So a sound savings, social security and tax program is needed to reduce surplus spending money, as well as to finance the war. It must also leave workers with enough income to buy their full share of living necessities.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

With this issue, the CIO News starts a new series—a running box score on what's doing in Congress. The service will necessarily be a selective one, since it is humanly and technically impossible to give a full account of all bills that are put in the hopper. By January 21, for example, some 1,400 bills had been offered in the House.

This service will, therefore, be limited to those measures that shape up as important, around which major campaigns can be expected to develop. If you need information about any bill that is not listed here, write to Nathan Cowan, legislative representative, CIO, and it will be sent to you.

The service is intended for working legislative committees and for all CIO members who want to keep tabs on their Congress. Remember, this new Congress will be a Victory Congress if we make it one. That requires constant attention on our part, requires just as much attention as we give our production committee or our grievance committee or any other part of CIO's win-the-war apparatus.

Food Price Gouge Brings Action Calls From CIO Unions

DETROIT, Jan. 23—Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers, today urged OPA Administrator Prentiss M. Brown and Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard to inform the Detroit City Council that proposed changes in the city's bread-weight ordnance requested by bread bakers would be a violation of OPA regulations on price ceilings.

Thomas also wired Mayor Jeffries urging that the request of bread manufacturers be refused. The UAW-CIO leader at the same time urged that effective and immediate steps be taken to halt the "farm bloc's" drive for increased prices of agricultural products.

TEXT OF WIRE

Thomas' wires to Wickard and Brown were identical. They said:

"Detroit bread manufacturers are seeking to have City Council amend bread-weight ordinance so that they may raise price per pound of bread. This would be an indirect way of violating ceiling on bread prices. I urge, in behalf of hundreds of thousands of Detroit consumers, that you inform City Council no violation of price ceilings will be tolerated in any form.

"Meanwhile, I want to urge that you take strong steps to stem the drive of the so-called 'farm bloc' for further rise in prices of flour and other farm produce.

"Rising price of bread and other food stuffs is continuously driving down real wages of labor. Most serious repercussions on wage standards and labor morale in war plants is taking place. Urge you act quickly and effectively."

CIO Asks Meat Rationing Now

Washington, Jan. 23—An appeal to Claude R. Wickard that immediate steps be taken to make meat rationing more effective was sent today by Sec.-Treas. Sidney Katz of the Md.&D.C. Industrial Union Council.

The council official said a survey of the meat supply in the area near the big Glenn Martin Aviation factory outside Baltimore revealed that the quantity available for working consumers "is very far below the 2½-pound quota to which citizens are urged to restrict themselves."

OPA Gets 'Go Sign' On Milk Rationing

Washington, Jan. 23—Authority to ration canned milk, to meet the pressing needs of war workers with small children, was given to the OPA by Claude A. Wickard, food administrator and secretary of Agriculture, this week.

The order to the OPA also included such foods as jams and jellies, fruit butters, (apple butter, etc), processed fish and food products that contain meat. These will be added to canned goods already on the list to be rationed some time within the next month.

At the same time, the Senate voted confirmation of Prentis Brown, former Michigan New Deal Senator, the successor to Leon Henderson as OPA head. Brown stated that "rationing and price control should not be looked at as an imposition but rather as a protection."

He also said that he believed prices would continue to rise despite price control, estimating the increase at an average rate of 1.5 percent a month.

'Make This A Victory Congress'

(Following are excerpts from President Murray's speech on the CIO's 1943 legislative program, as delivered over the national network of the Columbia Broadcasting System on Jan. 19).

AT the opening of the present Congress, the greatest applause greeted an expression of hope and determination that this should come to be known as "the victory Congress." That hope is shared by the American people. Tonight, on behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I should like to give you some of labor's ideas as to how the 78th Congress will in fact become our victory Congress.

At the outset, let me point out that the 1943 legislative program of the CIO runs solely to the interests of our nation. The American working people desire only such legislation as will promote the welfare of the whole country.

Support FDR Policies

We subscribe completely to the splendid principles enunciated by President Roosevelt in his message to Congress when he expressed our determination to fight through to complete victory, in unbreakable unity with the United Nations, and to make the Four Freedoms a living reality. The CIO's Victory Program is designed to mobilize our whole people behind our Commander-in-Chief for the attainment of these objectives.

We know that the American people agree with the CIO that our first and all-important objective must be the immediate total mobilization of the resources of the United Nations for the earliest possible victory.

The first point, therefore, on the CIO legislative program this year is a pledge of complete support to our Commander-in-Chief in his efforts to achieve the indestructible unity of the United Nations for winning the war and winning the peace.

This total war mobilization also calls for overhauling the administrative procedure within the United States. The CIO—through our Industry Council Plan—was the first to call attention, more than two years ago, to the imperative necessity of nationwide planning under centralized direction for all-out production and the mobilization of all our resources. Experience has since vindicated these contentions of the CIO; and they are now supported by exhaustive reports of the Tolan committee in the House of Representatives and the Pepper committee in the Senate.

The CIO fully supports the findings of these committees, as embodied in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills. These call for the establishment of a single civilian administrative body to coordinate the activities of war supply, war manpower and economic stabilization. We point out that these recommendations can most speedily be placed into effect through executive action. We also point out that such total mobilization cannot be made effective without the direct and fullest participation of labor—through adequate representation in policy-making and administration.

I now come to a subject that very intimately affects every man, woman and child in the United States—namely the shortages of food and other civilian goods, and the means we must adopt to assure the proper distribution of such goods.

There are some who keep harping on the difficulties and inconveniences caused by such shortages. But I can tell you right now that the members of the CIO welcome all steps to ration available goods and to control their prices. We complain only that these steps have so far not been sufficiently vigorous or far-reaching.

To meet this situation, the CIO calls for immediate over-all rationing of all foods and other necessities, and for the effective enforcement of price ceilings. Rationing and price control are not only a means of preventing some people from buying too much; if properly applied, they are also a means of assuring more living necessities to many people who aren't getting enough.

Fair War Taxes

President Roosevelt, in his recent budget message, laid down certain principles for a fair tax program to which the CIO most emphatically subscribes. He said that care must be taken that tax measures "do not impair but actually promote maximum war production." That is why the CIO strenuously opposes any sales tax, which would fall heaviest on those who can least afford to pay; and any other measures that would not leave low-income families with enough to guarantee their good health and productive efficiency—or to buy the goods available under their ration coupons.

The CIO supports our President's position that not only salaries but all net incomes should be limited to $25,000 a year for the duration. We urge an end to all war profiteering, through increased taxation of high incomes and war profits. We also call for the plugging of the tax loopholes to which the President refers. This can be done by requiring married couples who have separate incomes to make joint income-tax returns, by taxing tax-exempt securities, and by increasing gift and estate taxes.

Labor recognizes the imperative need for greatly increased taxation to win this war. It is willing to pay its full and fair share. But it wants a real victory tax program. It wants taxation based on ability to pay, to help prevent inflation and give us a healthy and stable war economy.

Freedom From Want

These words of our President ring true to all thinking Americans, and the CIO legislative program calls for a great expansion of our social security system this year, to lay the basis now for attaining Freedom from Want.

At the present time, the variety of state social security laws create many troubles and inequities. We therefore call for a single federal system of old age insurance, and a single federal system of unemployment compensation. These systems should be extended to cover all aged people and all unemployed, and their benefits should be increased to insure to all a decent standard of living.

One of the first matters to come before Congress will be a request for more funds to renew the life of the Dies Committee. We believe this committee has done great damage to our national unity by its factional political approach. It has failed to take any effective action against the real enemies within our midst. It has earned the denunciation of the Vice President of the United States. Congress should reject all requests for the continuance of the Dies Committee.

One of the most important war measures advocated by the CIO is the abolition of the poll-tax. This tax disfranchises some 10 million Americans and denies to them their right to play their full part in our war effort.

Finally, the CIO holds out the hand of fellowship and cooperation to the working farmers of our country, to secure the sound and effective operation of our farm lands and adequate mobilization of farm manpower. We pledge our complete support to the program of the National Farmers' Union, to assure adequate food supplies for the United Nations and an immediate war conversion and expansion program for American agriculture.

Naturally we shall oppose all anti-labor bills with every means at our disposal. We regard any legislative attempts to cut wages and hamstring the unions—to turn group against group in the midst of a national emergency—as disruptions of our national unity that can only aid our Axis enemies. We shall defend the National Labor Relations Act and the War Labor Board against all attempts to cripple their present constructive activities; though at the same time we shall insist on the streamlining of procedure within the War Labor Board for the speedier disposition of the wage earners' grievances.

Further, the CIO in the interests of the war effort will seek to impress the Board with the necessity of meeting the needs of war production through the upward adjustments of wage levels, to assure the maximum efficiency of war workers through adequate food, clothing and medical budgets. We believe the so-called "Little Steel" formula now being used by the Board for wage adjustments is inadequate for these needs and is unfair because of the 15 per cent yardstick. The dollar-an-hour worker, for instance, gets a much larger increase than the 50-cents-an-hour man.

Food Shortage Crisis:

California CIO Asks Immediate Action To Feed War Workers

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 23—Immediate rationing of meat and other essential foods is an absolute necessity if California's war workers are to stay on the job, state CIO leaders said in an urgent plea for action and for a Congressional investigation of the situation there.

According to Harry Bridges, CIO state director and Mervyn Rathborne, state secretary, "the people on the west coast who need meat and other nourishing foods in order to manufacture war goods and ship them to our fronts are unable to get them, while others of money and leisure, able to traffic with what amounts to a black market, are getting all they desire.

"Unless an immediate rationing program is instituted, malnutrition is bound to follow among workers who are now toiling long hours at great speed. That production schedules will be disrupted is a foregone conclusion."

WAR WORKERS HUNGER

The CIO statement cited longshoremen in San Pedro who have been unable to get meat for a 10-day period, since working class neighborhood stores and restaurants have none, and San Francisco shipyard workers who have been unable to buy eggs or butter for several weeks.

"At the same time high-priced restaurants and swanky hotels are still selling juicy steaks and fancy meat cuts to a selected few," the CIO said.

"The absence of ceilings on livestock and improper allocation has created what amounts to a black market on meat in this area. Restaurants and hotels, unrestricted by price ceilings, have taken advantage of the meat shortage to jump their prices on meat dishes over a short period of time as much as 100 per cent."

OPA SENDS OFFICIAL

Meantime, it was announced in Washington that John Edelman of the OPA was flying to the coast to take up the critical situation with Bridges and Rathborne and other CIO representatives.

West coast CIO demands for quick action included immediate rationing and price ceilings on meat, eggs, butter and other dairy products, with ceilings on hotel and restaurant prices, plus special allocation of meat to restaurants patronized by war workers.

They also called for real labor representation on rationing boards and other food and price control agencies, pointing out 90 per cent of OPA's staff in the western region "are men with no previous production experience."

Farmers Seek 'Fast Action' On Food Crisis

Washington, Jan. 23—Putting the nation's farms on "an all-out war basis requires bold, fast action," James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, said here in commenting on the resignation of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Food Production Director, H. W. Parisius.

Parisius resigned with a sharp protest to Agriculture Secretary Claude A. Wickard against what he described as "indecision" and "defeatism" in the acceptance of food shortages as inevitable. He urged his successor, Clifford M. Townsend, to speed up the program for a 20 per cent increase in food production, which he said was still possible.

Full conversion to war needs has been hampered, Patton explained by the throttling of the Farm Security Administration, which aided small working farmers; and by the allocation of farm financing to the Farm Credit Administration, which he described in turn as "a victory for banker-minded administration of farm credit and the entire farm production program."

URGES PROGRAM

To get top food production for victory, the government must set up an "ammunition dump" from which all farmers, especially the smaller ones, can get credit, for seeds, machinery, fertilizer and manpower needed for a 20 per cent increase, Parisius said.

Hit Absence Of Consumer Spokesmen

New York, Jan. 23.—Citing increased efforts by large food distributing companies to further pierce food price ceilings, the Greater New York CIO protested to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard the complete absence of labor, consumer and small farmer representation on the 18 member committee recently appointed by the Agriculture Dept. to study and make recommendations in respect to distribution and prices of essential foods in the New York area.

Joseph Curran, President, and Saul Mills, Secretary of the Greater New York CIO Council, in a letter of formal protest to Secretary Wickard, declared:

1. Worker-consumers and small farmer-consumers comprise 97 percent of the New York population but are not given any opportunity either by the Department of Agriculture or the OPA to have a say in determining food prices.

2. The 18 member New York City Area Committee of the Food Distribution Administration with the exception of New York City's Markets Commissioner, consists wholly of big business interests such as the A. & P., Bohack's, Borden's, American Meat Institute and the NAM.

PUBLIC BLACKMAIL

3. The big food trusts are resorting to public blackmail to force food price increases.

4. The baking trust is seeking a 400 percent profit on added costs of flour forced through the OPA.

5. New York milk distributors are pressuring OPA for further increases in the cost of retail milk, over and above the increase ordered less than 2 weeks ago by the Department of Agriculture.

6. Shortages in many essential foods are being forced by distributors to blackjack OPA into granting price increases.

Americans in 1943 will pay a Victory Tax estimated at $2,000,000,000, or about $15 each per year.

Hollanders in 1943 will pay Hitler and Occupation Tax of $675,000,000 or more than $75 for each of the 8,700,000 Dutchmen who are forced to forge their own Nazi chains.

CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Last week the San Francisco CIO Council wired Food Administrator Wickard that war workers were taking time off from jobs to look for meat. That's how serious the meat shortage is on the coast. And it's not only causing absenteeism, of course; it's causing under-nourishment of war production workers who need meat for an adequate diet. The West Coast unions are demanding immediate rationing of food and other essential articles to meet the situation.

The Federal Workers Auxiliary in the District of Columbia found a similar situation on evaporated milk. A navy yard machinist failed to report for work because he was going from store to store in southeast Washington trying to find a can of milk for his baby's formula. Reports from other parts of the city showed a wide-spread crisis.

The auxiliary enlisted the cooperation of the League of Women' Shoppers and called on the Evaporated Milk Section of the Department of Agriculture to urge immediate rationing. When that brought no results they called an emergency meeting of a number of civic groups and presented the problem.

The result was a letter signed by representatives of the Federation of Women's Clubs, the Council of Church Women, the League of Women Shoppers, the League of Women Voters, the Industrial Union Council (CIO), the Phyllis Wheatley YWCA, the Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority and the consumer chairman of civilian mobilization in one area of the city, as well as the auxiliary.

The letter pointed out that "neither the release of evaporated milk reserves without rationing, nor the improvement in market conditions without rationing, will solve this question for the immediate present and probably not for the future." It went on to ask that immediate action be taken to ration canned milk in the District.

TEMPORARY SOLUTION

"We propose as an immediate temporary method that coupons No. 28, 27, and 26 in children's ration books be each designated as authority for purchase of one week's supply of evaporated milk. This will provide rationing for three weeks during which time we propose that special ration books be made available locally similar to those issued in Cleveland."

The Department of Agriculture has not yet met the challenge of these consumers and they are continuing their pressure. A large supply of evaporated milk has been released by the Department to meet the immediate shortage, but that won't solve the problem for long because it is estimated that only 37 million cases will be available for civilians this year as compared with 59 million last year.

Why not start rationing now while we still have a government reserve instead of exhausting that by unrestricted sales and then facing the problem?

The same question applies to butter—and other commodities.

Forest Movie Available For Unions

Atlanta, Ga., Jan. 23—A pictorial story of the important contribution which forests make, both directly and indirectly to the workers of the nation, is dramatically presented in a colored motion picture film just released by the United States Forest Service.

In this film an old lumberjack carries you back to the "Hell Roaring Nineties" when he was a young fellow just starting out in the lumbering industry. It takes you through the cutting of virgin forests in New England, the Lake States, the South, and finally winds up in the Pacific Northwest with "his back against the Pacific."

It shows the effect of forest cutting practices on labor, and the need for a nationwide Forest Program to stop destructive cutting of this vital resource in order to keep the forest producing, so that they will furnish more permanent jobs and better and more permanent communities.

Copies of this 16 mm sound film, which requires 45 minutes showing time, may be secured by writing Regional Forester Joseph C. Kircher, United States Forest Service, Atlanta, Georgia.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes report the following election victories: Colorado Milling & Elevator Company, Denver, Colo., employes voted 18 to 5 for CIO. By a vote of 85 for URWDSEA and three against, this international won the election at the South Center Department Store in Chicago, thus ending an 11-months' old fight against the combined efforts of the firm and the company-influenced AFL group to keep CIO out of the plant. The result is a fine tribute to the South Side workers who have been so persistent in their determination to force the company to deal with the legally elected employe representatives. At the Soo Woolen Mills, Lock City, Michigan, the URWDSEA won the election by a vote of 41 to eight.

Joseph Appelbaum, Gas, Coke & Chemical Field Representative, reports winning an election among employes of the United Drug Company, St. Louis, Mo., by a vote of 210 for CIO to 80.

Robert J. Davidson, CIO Regional Director in Cincinnati, reports the results of two elections as follows: Joyce Kridland Company, Dayton, Ohio, where UAW-CIO got 112 votes to 15 for neither and Sorg Paper Company, Middletown, Ohio, where the UPNTWA received 252 votes to 61 for neither. Director Davidson also reports the following victory at the Wright Aeronautical plant: UAW-CIO approximately 59 per cent; AFL 18 per cent; neither 22 per cent—another great victory in aviation.

Shipbuilders Win Polls

George Craig, CIO regional director in Philadelphia, reports winning two election victories, as follows: Industrial Union Marine & Shipbuilding Workers were successful in the election at the Cramp's Shipyard in Philadelphia, with the following results: Timekeeper and Counter Unit, IUMMSWA—161 out of 171 total votes cast; Lead Men Unit, IUMMSWA—174 to 114 for no union. The National Maritime Union won the election held among the Atlantic Refining Company Tanker Crew, with a vote of 121 for CIO to 81 for an independent and 10 for no union.

Ernest B. Pugh, CIO regional director in Virginia, reports the following election victory: Glamorgan Pipe & Foundry Company, Lynchburg, Va., by a vote of 176 for CIO to 71 for the independent. Representative Earl A. Crowder of the USA put on a whirlwind campaign in the last 10 days to overcome the apparent strength of the independent union, which was supported by the company.

Walter Smethurst, director of the Shoe Workers Organizing Committee reports the following election held at the Vulcan Paramount Plant, St. Louis, Mo., among the production workers, 340 votes cast—CIO 321.

Edward Homer of Local No. 208, United Optical Workers, gave us the following results of an election held at the Farrand Optical Company, New York City, N. Y.: 68 votes cast; 48 for UOW-CIO; 20 against.

Canadian Victories

Charles H. Millard, PWOC director in Canada, reports the following election victories: Canadian Packers Plant, Toronto; CIO, 1125 to 561. Swift & Company, Toronto; CIO, 585 to 187.

The Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America; CIO, won the election in the Greenport Basin & Construction Company shipyards in Greenport, L. I., by a vote of 774 for CIO to 78 for no union.

C. H. Millard, district director United Steelworkers of America, Toronto, Canada states that within a day or two of the passing of an Order in Council (Executive Order), which placed employes in government-owned plants in the same position as employes of private corporations, as far as conciliation and arbitration are concerned, affecting wages, working conditions, etc., a vote was taken by the USA at Research Enterprises, Ltd., Toronto, as follows: USA—3,338; 1,922 for the plant council or company union. Out of 6,000 employes eligible to vote, 5,260 cast their ballots.

Railway Union Hails U. S. Aid to Mexican Transport System

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 23 —(ALN)— The Railway Workers Union of the Mexican Republic, affiliated with the Mexican Confederation of Workers (CTM), has welcomed the agreement recently concluded with the United States of rehabilitating Mexico's dilapidated railway system.

It has pledged to cooperate "with all our strength and in a disciplined manner" with the U. S. technical mission which is now attempting to improve the transportation of Mexico's essential raw materials. The Railway Workers were the first to propose the negotiations which led to the agreement.

Under the terms of notes exchanged by Mexican Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla and U. S. Ambassador George S. Messersmith, the U. S. will provide the financial basis for a reorganization of the roads.

The Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs will furnish the necessary equipment and technical assistants, including a group of experts headed by Oliver Stevens, formerly of the Missouri Pacific Railroad; it will bear the cost of additional road gangs and maintenance workers, and will send the most run-down engines and cars to the U. S. for repairs.

Even before the recent completion of the Suchiate River Bridge, linking the transportation systems of Mexico and Guatemala and opening up Mexican railways to traffic from Central America, the antiquated Mexican roads were seriously over-burdened.

WORN-OUT EQUIPMENT

Aged, wood-burning engines regularly brought their trains in 36 hours behind schedule. The worn condition of the roadbed and the absence of modern maintenance equipment made it difficult to operate efficiently the few modern U. S. locomotives and the small amount of rolling stock acquired before priorities ended purchases of U. S. equipment.

Only strict discipline and determined efforts by the railway workers kept the lines operating at all. This did not prevent the anti-labor dailies of Mexico City from blaming "lazy" and "inefficient" workers for the railways' troubles.

The Railway Union has been a particular target for the anti-labor press since the period between May 1, 1938 and Jan. 6, 1941, when it administered the railways.

The Mexican railway system and a large part of the U. S. railway system went into bankruptcy at the same time, for approximately the same reasons. The Mexican government had found it impossible to operate the lines at a profit because of their large bonded indebtedness, and the Railway Workers, after trying for two and a half years, found it equally impossible.

The union was additionally handicapped by several hampering provisions, including one that it had to pay the government 5.64% of all gross revenues. These are not included in the constitution of the public corporation which now operates the roads.

Teachers, Kids Helped Drive Nazis From Stalingrad

(By Wireless to The CIO NEWS)

KUIBYSHEV, USSR, Jan. 23—The teachers of Soviet Russia, organized in the School Teachers Union of the USSR, are taking their part in the war against Nazi aggression, as shown by their conduct during the siege of Stalingrad.

Despite the fact that German siege guns and planes had levelled all school buildings in the besieged city, and reduced the great central library to rubble, the teachers carried on, not only caring for the children but also taking up guns themselves against the enemy.

Children of more than 62 schools and children's homes — many of them containing refugees from the Ukarine — were evacuated from the city without the loss of a child, according to reports. On the fighting side, one complete battery of anti-aircraft guns was manned by teachers, with a high score on Nazi bombers.

One teacher, Kuznetsova, a research worker at the Stalingrad Teachers Institute, distinguished herself by her work in rescuing children from wrecked houses and in arranging for their shipment to the rear, while her husband, director of the Institute, fought in the front ranks of the city's defenders.

OLDER KIDS HELP FIGHT

Older children of high school age also did their share, bringing up food and ammunition to the defenders and helping in the removal of wounded Red Army soldiers. Many others helped in building barricades and in repairing tanks, working in half ruined factories beside the older workers.

These older children also helped their teachers in the evacuation of younger ones, many thousands of whom were ferried safely across the Volga at night, despite constant Nazi shelling and bombing.

Labor Unites Forces in Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia, Jan. 23 (ALN)—Unity of all democratic forces against the nation's enemies was brought closer this week when the Federation of Agricultural and Native Workers, holding its first convention, voted unanimously to affiliate with the Confederation of Colombian Workers (CTC), central body of all trade unions in the country.

Total membership of the CTC, affiliated to the Confederation of Latin American Workers, is now 95,000. Its largest units are the Federation of Maritime and River Workers (FEDENAL), with 10,000 members, and the Federation of Railway Workers, with 15,000 members.

Despite its small size, and despite the fact that Law 83, enacted in 1931, forbids trade unions "to interfere in politics," the CTC is playing an increasingly important part in the political life of the nation.

FOR WAR ON AXIS

"We are throwing all our weight into the fight against the Nazi-fascist Axis," Guillermo Rodriguez, secretary of the CTC and vice-president of the CTAL, told Allied Labor News.

"We fight for continual solidarity, for the defense of democratic liberties, for the resumption of diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union, as promised last November by Foreign Minister Gabriel Turbay, and for an immediate declaration of war against the Axis."

The CTC is at present giving all its support to the bitter fight for the Colombian oil workers to organize the U. S. petroleum companies. Last year the employes of the Gulf Oil Co. in Catatumbo succeeded for a while in forming a union, but the company quickly smashed it and fired the workers en masse.

Lash Papers' Anti-Labor Hysteria

New York, Jan. 23—A violent anti-labor propaganda campaign, drum-majored by the Scripps-Howard and Hearst press, received a scorching reply today from the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The ACW charged the papers with conducting a political conspiracy against Charles A. Poletti, veteran New Dealer, who served as lieutenant-governor for almost four years and became chief executive of the Empire State when Gov. Lehman resigned to take charge of foreign relief distribution.

Object of the press campaign was the "Christmas pardon" issued by Poletti to Alexander Hoffman, former manager of the Cleaners and Dyers Local 239 of the union. Hoffman was sentenced to two-to-four years in jail on charges of violence during an organizational campaign at a chain of cleaning establishments. His sentence was commuted after he had served eight months.

His release signalled one of the most violent press campaigns against unionism in years.

APPEASERS ACTIVE

The ACW described the attacks as "calumnious" and said that "ominous political elements, representing reactionary and appeasement groups, have injected themselves into the situation in a determined effort to discredit Gov. Poletti and undermine his position as the acknowledged leader of the progressive forces of the Democratic party in New York State.

"Gov. Poletti is one of America's most distinguished anti-fascists . . ."

The Amlagmated officials pointed out that Hoffman had a distinguished record as a union leader, that he had been re-elected to office several times and that "the evidence linking Hoffman with the crime was tenuous in the extreme."

The company had a long record of anti-unionism and evasion of state labor laws, the union asserted, and Hoffman's conviction rested "almost entirely" on the testimony of the company president.

Gov. Poletti, the ACW continued "was obviously justified in exercising executive clemency as a matter of simple justice and fair play in relieving a presioner from the full effect of a harsh and unjust sentence."

Legislative Drive Set By Erie CIO

Erie, Pa., Jan. 23—The Erie Industrial Union Council this week adopted a legislative program aimed at hastening victory over the Axis, and appointed a special committee to bring the council's message to legislators and the community.

"It is of paramount importance that the contacts be made with political leaders and the work done jointly with them solely on the basis of the issues confronting the whole people and solely for the purpose of furthering the war effort," the council said.

Special committeemen were named to contact local political groups, AFL unions, farm groups, and business and professional organizations.

The legislative program, based on the need for "full unity of all the people," called for better centralized production planning; a democratic tax program; effective price control, and more efficient rationing, and preservation of the health and morale of war workers.

No Geese

Goose Creek, Tex. (FP)—It was a fine idea—giving away a goose as a door prize at meetings of the Oil Workers Intl. Union (CIO) here. There was just one catch.

Nobody in Goose Creek has a goose—or even a gander. Clyde Johnson, southern director of the Oil Workers Organizing Campaign, had to drive 30 miles to Houston for the fowl.

Poll-Taxers Plan Smear of FCC

'Punishment' For Exposing Cox's Deal

Washington, Jan. 23—Southern poll-tax Congressmen and their northern reactionary allies in the House ganged up this week on the Federal Communications Commission.

Led by Rep. Eugene Cox of Alabama and the notorious Ham Fish of New York, they won the House's permission to investigate the FCC, in what will undoubtedly develop into one of the major "smear" campaigns of the current session of Congress.

Named to the probe committee by Speaker Rayburn were Cox, who will act as chairman; Reps. Hart, Magnuson, Wigglesworth and Miller.

COX GOT $2,500

Cause of the Tories' wrath was the FCC's effort to get further information about $2,500 paid to Cox when the Albany Herald—Cox's home town paper— applied for an FCC broadcasting license in 1941.

Cox admits receiving the $2,500. He bought stock of that amount in the radio company and then turned it over, he says, to an unnamed charity.

The FCC's interest in the poll-taxer's financial deal is stimulated by the U.S. criminal code, which makes it a felony for a Congressman to represent a client before a federal agency.

Cox has denied serving as counsel for the newspaper-radio outfit, but he hasn't yet fully explained away a series of letters—now in the FCC's possession—in which he urged various employes of the FCC to hasten action on the company's application.

WILD ORATORY

Cox followed up with a few choice diatribes, describing the FCC as a "nest of rats" and accusing Commission Chairman James Fly of heading a "gestapo." Much of his argument was based on the fact that the FCC monitor service —which listens in on foreign propaganda broadcasts and analyzes their objectives—has employed William Dodd, Jr., son of the former liberal Ambassador to Germany in 1934-37.

Ask Elections In Southern Shipyards

Camden, N. J., Jan. 23—The CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers rolled up another NLRB election victory this week and petitioned for two more on the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts.

At Greenpoint, L. I., the CIO affiliate rolled up a 10-1 victory among nearly a thousand employes of the Greenport Basin and Construction Co. Some 774 voted for the IUMSWA, with only 78 casting ballots for no union.

The union's Miami petition followed near-record breaking speed by the NLRB in ordering disestablishment of a company union. The Board's final order was handed down just five weeks after initial charges had been filed.

At Wilmington, N. C., an NLRB examiner's intermediate report recommended dissolution of a company union and rehiring of CIO workers at the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co. plant.

Time Is Here For Unions To Push Recreation Plans

By HOWARD BRAUCHER

President, National Recreation Association

One of the most severe problems facing industry today is that of providing adequate community recreational facilities for war workers. Home recreation is either difficult or impossible for many people living in emergency accommodations. Some communities have fewer recreation areas than before the war as industrial playing fields have been used for plant expansion and parks and playgrounds have been appropriated for military use.

The growing employment of women in industry has created a major problem in the day and night care of children. Nursery schools solve part of the problem but not that of the boys and girls of school age with time on their hands when school is out. Unless recreation programs are provided for boys and girls of school age whose parents work in war plants, a rising tide of juvenile delinquency may be expected.

LABOR MUST ACT

Many workers, especially the young, are earning more money than they have ever seen before. In their hands this new wealth can lead to undesirable and sometimes harmful activities unless wholesome recreation opportunities are made available to them. Also, unless these opportunities are provided, their long commuting and working hours leave them with little incentive to use their leisure constructively.

Recreation programs are carried on by private organizations, labor unions, industries, workers' recreation organizations, associations representing several labor unions or industries, many of which use the facilities of municipal recreation departments where those departments exist.

But municipal programs cannot exist without public support, especially under the heavier burdens of war conditions. Labor has such an important stake in the recreation of its workers that it cannot afford to let public departments, which serve all the people, fail because of inadequate financial support.

1. Taking steps to establish recreation departments in cities where there has been no official provision made for recreation.

2. Urging the appropriation of adequate municipal funds to provide satisfactory community recreation program, including service to industrial and other workers.

3. Serving as leaders or as helpers in the recreation set-up.

4. Insisting that only trained, competent workers be employed by the municipality for recreation service.

LABOR REPRESENTATION

5. Securing the appointment of a man or woman who thoroughly understands the point of view of labor to the advisory or administrative body responsible for the municipal recreation program.

6. Cooperating with employers in providing facilities and in conducting activities to supplement the municipal program.

7. Assisting workers' organizations to secure necessary recreation leadership and indoor and outdoor recreation facilities where such service is not otherwise available.

No matter what group undertakes to solve the recreation problems of thousands of workers, it will discover that workers themselves must have a share in the development of whatever recreation program is designed for them.

If a comprehensive year-round program is feasible, paid leadership is necessary. Otherwise, volunteers can help by refereeing athletics, conducting orchestras and choral groups, instructing in hobby clubs, planning parties, working on committees, leading boys' and girls' clubs.

CIO Sweeps 2nd Poll At Wright

Cincinnati, Jan. 23 (FP)—The United Auto Workers (CIO), carried another NLRB election in a Wright Aeronautical plant here Jan. 20, receiving 59.4% of the votes cast by the huge production and maintenance unit.

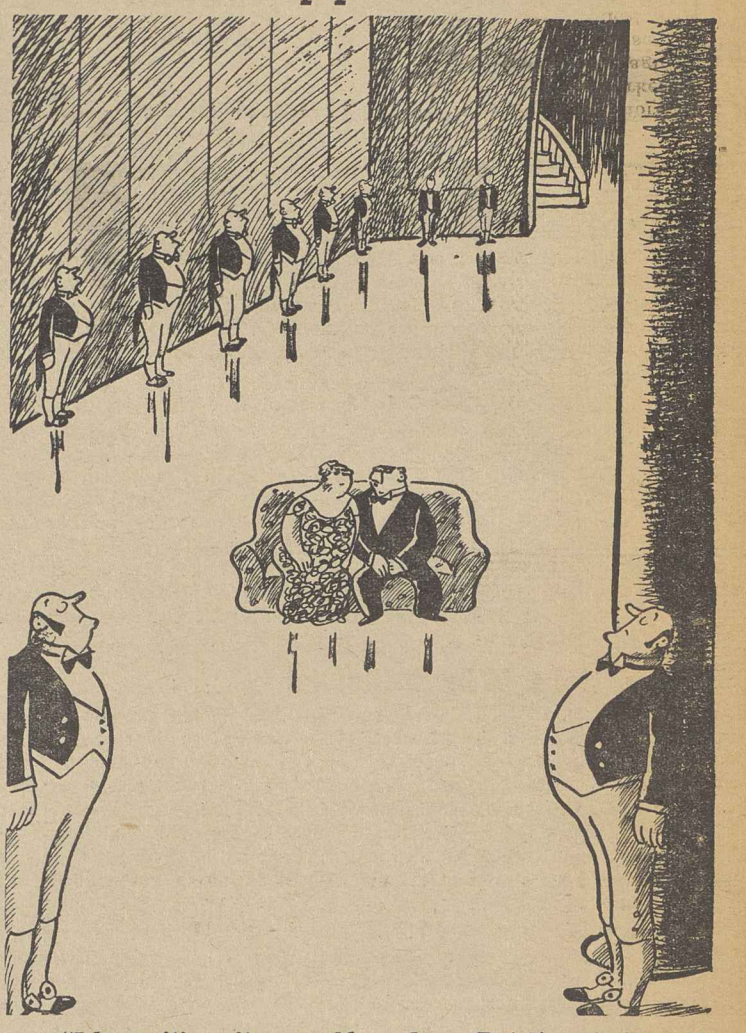
In smaller elections held at the same time, the office and clerical workers went overwhelmingly against both the AFL and CIO; Patternmakers League AFL, received 97% of the patternmakers' ballots; and plant guards voted indecisively.

The NLRB did not release the actual vote counts because of war regulations.

The Upper Crust



"I know it's quite a problem, dear. But I'm afraid we'll have to get along with one less. Godfrey simply insists on being a riveter."

Know Your Taxes

Who Must File A Return

Every single person must file a Federal income tax return whose gross income for the year from all sources was $500 or more; that is, as much as $9.62 per week. Widows, widowers, divorcees, and married persons separated by mutual consent, are classed as single persons.

Every married person, living with husband or wife throughout the year, must file a return if his or her gross income, together with any income of the spouse, was as much as $1,200 for the year; that is, as much as $23.08 per week. If husband and wife both have incomes, they must both make a return. Such return may be made separately, or, if they are both citizens or residents, they may make a joint return.

JOINT RETURN

A joint return must be signed by both husband and wife and verified by a written declaration that it is made under the penalties of perjury.

Where separate returns are filed by husband and wife on Form 1040, the joint personal exemption allowable ($1,200 where the married status has existed throughout the year) may be taken by either, or divided between them in any proportion agreed upon. If separate returns are filed one may not report income which belongs to the other, but must report only the income which belongs to him (or her).

Moreover, all income from whatever source, unless specifically excluded by statute, must be reported in the return. The types of income specifically exempt are listed in the instructions accompanying the return form.

SIMPLIFIED FORM

A person whose gross income does not exceed $3,000, and consists wholly of salary, wages, dividends, interest, or annuities, may make a Simplified Return on Form 1040A, in which the tax due may be readily ascertained by reference to a table contained in the form.

A husband and wife living together on July 1 of the taxable year may file separate Simplified Returns if the gross income of each is from the prescribed sources and does not exceed $3,000, or they may file a single joint return on that form if their combined income is from the prescribed sources and does not exceed $3,000.

A taxpayer may not, however, file a Simplified Return if the other spouse files a return on Form 1040.

Seamen Want To Handle Anti-Sub Guns

New York, Jan. 23—(FP)—The men who deliver the goods are asking for the chance to protect the cargoes with their own gun crews.

The Natl. Maritime Union, CIO, national council at its semi-annual meeting here Jan. 18 voted to ask government authorities to release present Navy crews for duty in combat ships and replace them with crews manned by regular seamen under the command of a single Navy gunnery officer.

Pointing out that a serious shortage of able-bodied seamen exists, Pres. Joseph Curran suggested that part of the government's training program be transferred from present maritime centers, where training is mostly academic, to the actual merchant ships in combat areas.

Under the present government program, Curran said, 10 times as many ordinary seamen were being turned out as were needed. He proposed that the gun crews consist of ordinary seamen who could, at the same time, acquire training necessary to reach higher skill classifications.

WLB OK's Wage Boost For 5,500 At Western Union

New York, Jan. 23—More than 5,500 Western Union workers will get a wage boost averaging 5.3 cents an hour, due to action of the American Communications Association in bringing and winning the workers' case before the War Labor Board.

The board decision follows a panel report in which Arthur S. Meyer of the N. Y. State Mediation Board and John Brophy of the CIO recommended the increases.

Murray Endorses 'Pay-As-You-Go', Hits Ruml Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—The CIO today requested an opportunity to present its views on pay-as-you-go taxation and the wide-publicized Ruml Plan to the House Ways & Means Committee which is starting its study of 1943 tax proposals.

In a letter to Committee Chairman Robert L. Doughton (D) of North Carolina, Pres. Murray indicated the CIO will oppose the Ruml Plan, which would free big 1942 incomes from taxation this year.

"The millions of new taxpayers in the ranks of labor will welcome a program that lightens their burden of tax payments by spreading the obligations out over the entire year," Murray said. "They will oppose any program which couples with this a series of windfalls to large incomes at the expense of the national Treasury."

The Ruml Plan, Murray said, has received an "obviously well-organized and well-financed publicity campaign," and added that much of the public favor for it has been based on two misconceptions. These, Murray wrote to Rep. Doughton, are that the Ruml Plan would free citizens from the necessity of paying taxes this year, and that it directs itself to the problem of taking small, regular tax payments out of current income throughout the entire year instead of in a lump sum.

"The essence of the Ruml Plan is a change in the label attached to the tax payments of this year, so that they become payments on 1943 instead of 1942 income with a complete waiver for the taxes on 1942 income," he declared.

While that "change in label" may not seriously affect Treasury receipts this year, Murray continued, it would mean "in future years heavy gains for the highest income brackets—particularly those which have benefited most from the swollen war profits of 1942 . . .

"This is an issue upon which I assume that your Committee will wish to hear the views of the millions of war workers who are today called upon for ever greater physical efforts in the interest of expanded war production, and who at the same time have already been hard hit by tax and price programs which have given inadequate attention to the food and clothing needs of working men and women."

Plan Fight On Wire Merger Bill

Washington, Jan. 30—With a bill permitting the merger of Western Union and Postal Telegraph passed by the Senate, the CIO American Communications Assn. today was preparing for a campaign to prevent its passage in the House of Representatives.

Pres. Joseph Selly of ACA has criticized the bill would hamper efficient handling of the nation's big wartime communications load, and that it might lead to Axis domination of this country's telegraph and telephone system.

This week Selly accused Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, a leading isolationist, of having railroaded the measure through the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which he heads. The union official said also that sponsors of the measure have also ignored a 350% rise in the value of the common stock of corporations which would benefit by the merger of the two companies.

He told Wheeler that although the Board of War Communications has made a thorough study of the domestic telegraph industry, the committee acted in "indecent haste to do the bidding of a few Wall Street finaglers."

Council Meeting

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 30—The fifth convention of the Washington State Industrial Union Council will be held here at the Moose Temple, March 13, according to the official call sent out by President Jack Bell.

Southern Paper, Fed Up With Lies, Bounces Pegler

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Readers of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, one of the South's most influential papers, will henceforth be spared the burden of reading Westbrook Pegler's daily diatribes against labor and the New Deal.

The action against the nation's prime sourpuss was taken by Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond paper, who became incensed by the columnist's continued misrepresentation. Background of his action was described in a copyrighted story in In Fact, a weekly newsletter published by George Seldes.

Seldes contrasted Dabney's decision with the refusal of five Connecticut papers to meet requests of union delegates that they also ban Pegler's poison.

EXPLAINS ACTION

The Times-Dispatch, in explaining its decision said:

"Mr. Pegler may hate the (Vice-Pres. Wallace) program . . . But he cannot misrepresent another man in this newspaper by placing in his mouth words he did not utter, or by charging him with beliefs he does not hold, and then fall back on freedon of speech . . .

"It is not on account of Westbrook Pegler's argument, but because of his mispresentation that we have ceased to carry his articles. When he charged Vice-Pres. Wallace with being by intent a poisoner of American minds, he not only lost our confidence, he also lost a customer."

CIO Aids Soldiers' Book Drive

Washington, Jan. 30—The National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief is working hand-in-hand with the 1943 Victory Book Campaign now in progress, and has launched its own campaign to collect millions of books in good physical condition from CIO men and women for the reading needs of the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guardsmen and merchant seamen, it was announced here today by Monroe Sweetland, national director.

He expressed confidence that CIO men and women would make an excellent showing, rallying to the slogan: "This is not a SCRAP drive—but a GOOD book drive!"

SPECIAL EMBLEMS

The CIO drive is designed to encourage donations of books by CIO members to be forwarded to American camps, naval bases, and United Service Organizations. The committee's area directors, cooperating in the campaign which ends March 5, are distributing special CIO bookplate emblems, to be pasted in the books donated to identify the giver, individual or union.

The preference of the men is for books of the "best seller" type, both fiction and non-fiction. They enjoy novels, biography, mystery and adventure stories and books by war correspondents.

Eisenhower Thanks Local For Pledge

New York, Jan. 30—Receipt of a communication from Lt. General Dwight D. Eisenhower dated January 5, in which he expresses appreciation for a resolution sent to him concerning the offensive in North Africa, was announced today by Local 16, United Office and Professional Workers of America.

In thanking the union for sending him the resolution, General Eisenhower said, "The enthusiastic support reflected by this resolution is most gratifying."

The resolution was adopted unanimously by 5,000 members of the union and stated in part: "We pledge that every member of our Union will not only do his or her share but that we will encourage the thousands of white collar workers who are not in our organization to make their full contribution."

Unions Demand Raise For Subway Workers

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—The trade union movement of the City of New York both AFL and CIO, has united behind the fight of the Transport Workers Union for arbitration of the union's demands upon the City of New York.

The unions supporting the transit workers have pledged to Pres. Michael J. Quill of the Transport Workers Union of America, that they will pack Madison Square Garden to the rafters on the evening of Feb. 9, at the public rally called by the TWU for the purpose of obtaining public support for its demands.

CIO Pres. Murray has been invited to be principal speaker at the rally.

MILLION LEAFLETS

More than 4,000 AFL and CIO unionists representing some 212 local unions turned out last Saturday in their first demonstration of support to distribute one million leafles calling upon the public to "Save Your Transit System."

The leaflet pointed out that hundreds of the skilled employes of the transit system are leaving and that thousands more are expected to quit.

The union's case was also brought before the public in large advertisements appearing in New York City papers. "Is the Safest Railway in the World Cracking Up?" the advertisements asked the public, and cited the union's long-standing grievances, the discrimination in pay rates and the exodus of skilled workers to jobs with better wages and working conditions.

HIT SWEATSHOP

The Transport Workers Union charges that the city is running a sweatshop in the subway systems, having refused to accede to the union's four-point victory program which called for the following:

1. An increase in wages to meet the "Little Steel" formula;
2. Union security and the application of a maintenance of membership clause;
3. A revision of the rules to improve working conditions;
4. A labor management committee for the purpose of expediting the operation of the subway system and saving needed materials for the prosecution of the war.

WLB HIT OFFICIAL

The Transport Workers Union has taken its fight to the War Labor Board which, while rejecting jurisdiction on technical grounds, castigated John H. Delaney, chairman of the Board of Transportation, as one who is unqualified to deal with labor.

In carrying its fight to the public, the TWU expects that thousands of letters will be sent to Mayor LaGuardia urging him to pay a decent living wage to men who have received no increases for nearly three years in spite of the rising cost of living.

The support of the entire trade union movement of New York and throughout the country has been pledged and it is the feeling of the TWU leadership that the constant pressure by trade unionists and other citizens will compel the Mayor and the Board of Transportation to improve conditions sufficiently so as to prevent the breakdown of the New York City Transit System.

SCATTERED RAISES

Delaney's method of combating this public pressure has been to quietly gives raises amounting to 45 cents a week to a small proportion of the subway employes and larger raises to an even smaller group.

More than 20,000 have received no increase whatsoever.

Office Union Prepares To Bargain With 'Pru'

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—The United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, was certified today as bargaining agent representing the majority of the 18,000 industrial insurance agents employed by the Prudential Insurance Company of America in all states except Wisconsin.

The certification was made as a result of a card check conducted by the American Arbitration Association. The check, conducted by mutual agreement between the company and the union, was attested by Prof. W. B. Cornell of New York University, member of the AAA's National Panel of Arbitrators.

Totaled in the vote for the union were election results in four states—New York, New Jersey, Michigan and Massachusetts—in which the UOPWA had formerly established majorities through state-wide labor elections.

Collective bargaining negotiations will begin immediately with the company. The union will be represented by a negotiating committee headed by Lewis Merrill, UOPWA president, and includes Leon Berney, director of National Insurance Agents Division; Roy Whitman, president of the New York City local; George Hansen, president of the Chicago local; Joseph Lehman, president of the Philadelphia local; Kenneth O'Dell, president of Trenton, N. J., local, and Ralph Sullivan, Prudential agent representing the Massachusetts area.

Allan Haywood, CIO director of organization, will also participate.

Press Plea For Racial Bias Probe

Washington, Jan. 30—A campaign among labor and Negro groups to force a probe by the Fair Employment Practices Committee of racial discrimination on the nation's railway system continued this week.

The FEPC's investigation was "postponed" on orders of War Manpower Commissioner Paul McNutt a fortnight ago.

At week-end meetings Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey and John Brophy, CIO councils director, appealed for continuation of the fight against race bias in American industry.

In a message to a protest meeting in Washington, Carey commented that "treatment of the Negro becomes a challenge to our sincerity on the Four Freedoms, the Atlantic Charter and every other statement of lofty war aims."

Declaring himself in favor of "all speed possible" to eliminate discrimination, Carey warned against plunging "recklessly ahead in such a way as to wreck or stall our democratic institutions.

"Do not break with those forces in labor, and others of good will, who are working for a greater measure of political and economic and social freedom and equality for all the people of all colors."

HITS DECISION

Brophy, an alternate member of the FEPC, told a United Federal Workers meeting in the capital that McNutt's postponement of the committee probe was "regrettable".

"As far as the CIO is concerned, we propose to continue to fight for the sort of hearings which will shed light on this and all similar unfair employment practices in private industry, and in the government as well," he said.

"I am hopeful that the railroad hearings will be re-scheduled."

Brophy complimented the federal workers union for "taking a strong position" against discrimination in government agencies, pointing out that there "is no excuse whatsoever for any laxity in compliance with a national policy against racial discrimination on the part of government agencies."

Secret U.S. Survey Shows Kaiser 'Wasting' Workers

CAMDEN, N. J., Jan. 30—Charges that the big Kaiser shipyards in the Pacific Northwest are wasting the services of thousands of skilled workers, largely because of AFL craft union job restrictions, were forwarded today to President Roosevelt by John Green, CIO vice-president and president of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

Green told FDR that a War Manpower Commission study confirming the charges had not been released, and "there is reason to believe that the study was suppressed because of pressure exerted by those interests which were adversely affected by its contents."

The CIO leader, who is a member of the WMC's Labor Policy Committee, said the pressure was the same type as that used in an unsuccessful effort to prevent the Nat'l. Labor Relations Board from hearing charges of collusive, illegal agreements between the Kaiser management and the AFL metal trades unions. The hearing is now in progress at Portland, Oreg.

HITS ATTACK ON NLRB

Green's letter to the President followed a letter by President William Green of the AFL, who sharply condemned the NLRB for investigating Kaiser's labor policy and hinted the federation might seek drastic amendments to the Wagner Act.

The Kaiser-AFL closed shop contracts were signed when the company had only a handful of employes on its payroll. Subsequently, some 700 workers have been discharged for refusing to pay the craft unions' high initiation fees and dues.

The CIO union head suggested to President Roosevelt that the AFL "does not desire a fair and impartial administration of the act" but prefers protection for its craft unions' vested interests.

New York Unions Unite For Single Relief Drive

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Formation of a CIO War Chest here to mobilize New York City CIO members in a united war relief drive with the AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods was unanimously voted by a special meeting of CIO leaders here January 26.

The CIO Chest will be part of the newly-formed New York Labor War Chest, in which the CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhoods have united to raise $4,000,000 in the Greater New York area for Russia, China, Britain, USO, the Red Cross and all other war and community relief needs. The CIO Chest will direct the campaign among CIO unions, aiming at a goal of $2,000,000 from CIO members.

The New York Labor War Chest is the first and only agency to unite all organized labor in a single relief campaign. Featured by extensive radio, car card and other publicity to inform the public of labor's important role in relief, the Chest will run an intensive campaign from February through May.

SEEK DAY'S PAY

Purpose of the Labor War Chest is to make but one appeal—a day's pay in 1943—to cover all war relief and community appeals. Funds raised will be allocated by the unions and the Chest to those relief agencies and causes that labor deems in greatest need.

CIO officials cited two major advantages for labor in its united relief campaign. First, the drive will prevent the multiple appeals to which unions are now subject from many worthy causes. Beneficiary agencies of the Chest have agreed not to make additional solicitations of the unions.

Second, the Labor War Chest, together with the unions contributing to it, will have a voice in the allocation and administration of the funds raised by labor. Union leaders consider this an important step forward which will put war relief and local charity activities on a more democratic plane and end what organized labor has long regarded as "taxation without representation."

Steel Workers Get Pay Hike

Washington, Jan. 30—A wage boost of 5½ cents an hour retroactive to July 24, 1942, was granted this week to some 1400 employes of the Oliver Iron & Steel Corp., Pittsburgh, by the War Labor Board. The workers are represented by the United Steelworkers of America.

The Board's directive order stipulates that clauses providing for voluntary maintenance of union membership and the check-off shall be inserted into the contract between USA Local 1736 and the company.

Wire Employes To Get $6 Pay Boost

New York, Jan. 30—The wage increase granted to 5,500 Western Union workers in a recent case before the War Labor Board, will amount to a boost averaging about $6 a week for adult employes, the American Communications Association, CIO, declared here this week.

A statement released by the ACA said that a news release issued by the WLB which reported the increase as 5.3 cents an hour was inaccurate and was corrected later.

In addition to the general increase for all workers, existing inequalities in wages are to be adjusted which will mean that "hundreds of workers will get raises ranging from 30 to 60 per cent, the ACA stated. "The exact distribution is to be worked out between the company and the union."

Set Policy On Food Crisis

New York, Jan. 30—A joint committee to meet the war emergency in the food service industry was formed here at a conference of union leaders representing Local 338 CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes and Local 1500, AFL Retail Food Clerks Union.

The unions agreed to call a joint labor-industry conference on rationing; to abide by labor's no-strike policy, and to aid the government's food program.

Charter New Stone Local

Barre, Vt., Jan. 30—Employes of the Alcoa Brick and Tile Company, Knoxville, Tenn., organized by Representative Robert Boyer, have been chartered as Branch 63 of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers.

The Muncie, Ind., Industrial Union Council signed up Standard Rock Wool, Inc. workers at Yorktown, Ind. This group will be Branch 64 of the union.

Md. CIO Head Joins Army

Cumberland, Md., Jan. 30—George A. Meyers, 30-year-old president of the Maryland & District of Columbia Industrial Union Council, CIO, and president of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union of America, has been inducted into the Army.

The State CIO Council has appointed Boyd E. Payton, vice-president of Local 1874, to the presidency of the state council.

Oklahoma CIO Forms Council

Oklahoma City, Okla., Jan. 30—Delegates elected by CIO unions throughout the state attended a special convention held here January 24-25 which set up an Oklahoma CIO Industrial Union Council.

Strong support for the CIO's position on the war effort and other resolutions determining the policy of the new State CIO Council were adopted by the delegates. Joe McGee from the Oil Workers was elected the first president.

Other officers elected at the convention included Thomas Nulik of the United Automobile Workers, first vice president; Mike Westerman, Packinghouse Workers, second vice president; Charles Childers, United Steelworkers, secretary-treasurer; and A. W. Mitchel, Oil Workers, recording secretary.

AFL Council OKs Peace Agreement

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 30 — The Executive Council of the AFL, meeting here for its annual mid-winter parley, this week ratified an agreement with CIO to arbitrate inter-union disputes.

Approval of the pact by the CIO was announced a few weeks ago by President Murray, who had polled members of the CIO Executive Board in a mail ballot.

The pact was worked out—subject to later ratification by the governing bodies of the two organizations—at CIO-AFL unity meetings in Washington early in December.

ARBITRATE DISPUTES

The agreement provides that disputes between CIO and AFL unions will be submitted to a board of arbitrators named by the two groups. If that panel is unable to agree, it will select an impartial arbitarator to decide the issues.

AFL President William Green said members of the disputes panel would be selected by the federation's peace committee: Harry Bates of the bricklayers, Daniel Tobin of the teamsters and William Hutcheson of the carpenters. CIO members are President Murray, R. J. Thomas of the auto workers, and Julius Emspak of the electrical, radio and machine workers.

Green, commenting on the council's action, said further meetings of the peace committee would be held soon.

Parley Asks War With Finland

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 30—Declaring that the U.S. can "no longer afford to be soft, lenient or indifferent to any nation or people aligned against us in the camp of our enemies," 200 representatives of Finnish-American workers today called for an American declaration of war against Finland.

The meeting, called by the Natl. Conference of Finnish-American Trade Unionists, wired to Pres. Roosevelt pledging support of his war policies and pledging full assistance in helping "take Finland out of the war" on the Axis side.

NAME DELEGATION

A delegation was elected to carry the meeting's sentiment to Washington was picked by the conference, which speaks for some 300,000 organized workers and farmers.

Named to the three-man group were Rudy Hanson of the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union; Carl Nykkanen of the CIO Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; and Victor Lapakko of the AFL Building Laborers Union.

Greetings were sent to the parley by CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas, AFL Pres. William Green and Pres. Michael Quill of the Transport Workers Union.

The delegates addressed a message to the people of Finland urging them to drive the Nazis from their country and to align themselves with the people of the United Nations.

CIO Board Meets Feb. 5

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—A meeting of the CIO Executive Board will be held at CIO national headquarters on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 5-6.

It will be the first meeting of the board since the CIO convention in Boston last November. One representative of each national union and organizing committee, together with Pres. Murray, Sec.-Treas. Carey and nine vice-presidents comprise the group.

RECEIVES AWARD: The Very Rev. Vincent J. Guinan, president of Assumption College at Windsor, Ont., pins the college's annual Christian Ideals Award medal on CIO Pres. Philip Murray. Citation praised Murray's Christian endeavors to further industrial democracy in the United States and Canada.

Slam Labor Dept.'s Sudden Shift On Premium Wages

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 30—Action of the Department of Labor in suddenly changing regulations pertaining to double-time pay for work on a seventh consecutive working day, today brought sharp and severe criticism from CIO Pres. Philip Murray.

In a wire to Pres. Roosevelt and in a letter to Sec. of Labor Frances Perkins, Murray assailed the Labor Dept. for taking action on the matter before getting suggestions from organized labor, and asked President Roosevelt to transfer jurisdiction over premium wage payments to some other branch of the government.

Murray told FDR that the CIO accepted a Presidential request in June, 1942, to abandon premium pay for "Saturdays and Sundays as such," but that supplementary regulations issued by Madame Perkins which "purported to cover this subject . . . caused tremendous confusion in American industry pertaining to operation of work schedules."

MENACES UNIONS

Now, "without warning or consultation," the Secretary of Labor has changed the regulations in such a fashion as to cause reshifting of work schedules, and "disastrous effects in many plants, with devastating impact on morale of workers.

"It is my considered judgment," Murray telegraphed the President, "that to permit the Secretary of Labor, who has no knowledge of operating problems in war plants, to continue to handle this problem constitutes a menace to the labor movement and to the objective we all seek, namely: continuity of war work and maximum production in war plants.

"I urge that you transfer this entire problem to some agency other than the Secretary of Labor's, in order that the Executive Order as originally interpreted, can be enforced."

LABOR NOT CONSULTED

In his letter to Madame Perkins, the CIO leader recalled that the change in premium pay regulations before labor had a chance to present its victims.

"This action on your part is quite consistent with your usual attitude toward labor organizations," he told the Secretary. "It is impossible to obtain any consultation with your department before action is taken that directly concerns and affects millions of workers."

Murray demanded that the Department restore the original premium pay set-up, and said he would submit the issue to the CIO board meeting on Feb. 5.

Murray to Talk On CIO Program

Washington, Jan. 30—CIO Pres. Philip Murray will talk about government workers, their union problems and their role in the war, on the CIO Labor for Victory program on Sunday, Feb. 7, at 1:15 p.m., EWT, on the NBC network.

The program will describe the activities of the State, County & Municipal Workers and the need of several million national, state and local government employes for union organization.

Files Bill to Kill $25,000 Limit

Washington, Jan. 30—Conservative opposition to the $25,000 salary limit on big incomes took definite form this week.

Rep. Wolcott of Michigan (R), ranking GOP member of the House Banking Committee, filed a bill that would kill the government's authority to put a $25,000 ceiling on salaries, a step put into effect several months ago through a Presidential order.

Wolcott's bill also called for stripping the OPA of its right to limit rents. Rent control is a matter of prime necessity to every worker, and has helped keep the cost of living from rising even higher.

Workers Aid War

To the tune of $75,000 in War Bonds, UERMWA, CIO, workers in three Westinghouse Electric plants invested a retroactive pay increase recently, the result of an idea contributed by Josephine Brzozowska, a worker.

CIO Demand: 'End Dies Committee'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—The CIO moved on several fronts this week in a quick offensive to seek discontinuance of the notorious Dies un-American committee.

While Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, appealed to the House Rules Committee for a chance to testify against the Dies group, unions throughout the nation were beginning to pour messages into the House of Representatives calling for courageous action against the Texas poll-taxer and his red-baiting committee.

The bill to continue the Dies Committee is H. R. 65, which would give the group two more years of life. In the past, Dies' authorizations have been of only one-year duration.

The campaign in the field was strengthened by a letter from Cowan to all CIO unions in which he called upon all locals to "bend every effort toward insisting that your Congressman not merely vote against this resolution, but that he arise on the floor of Congress to expose and publicize the Committee for what it is."

FRIEND OF FASCISTS

In his letter to the Congressmen, Cowan reminded the House that many of Dies' friends and consorts have been subsequently discovered by the Dept. of Justice to be either Nazi agents or close associates of Nazi agents.

He recalled that Vice-President Wallace, himself the butt of one of Dies' many red-scare publicity stunts, had asserted "the effect on our morale would be less damaging if Mr. Dies were on the Hitler payroll." Statements of Dies, Wallace had noted, "might as well come from Goebbels himself."

Events of the past year have shown more clearly than ever the "absolute and overwhelming necessity" for abolishing the committee, Cowan wrote. In earlier years the Dies Committee has interfered with the regular activity of professional law enforcement agencies of the governor, but in wartime the committee's lack of responsibility and its friendliness to fascist groups has become even more grave.

Pointing out that a large number of seditionists and Nazi agents have been indicted by the Dept. of Justice in the past year, Cowan told the Congressmen:

"The indictments secured by the Dept. of Justice in these cases have revealed to a shocked American public the sordid picture of the extent to which the persons with whom this committee and its chairman have consorted . . . have been working at all times in the interests of the nations whose armies seek the destruction of our country and our democracy.

". . . The members of Congress can render a great service to national unity and to the strengthening of national morale by ridding the nation once and for all of the obstructive tactics which have characterized the entire existence of this committee."

WISCONSIN CAMPAIGN

One of the most active campaigns against the Committee has been staged in Wisconsin. There scores of labor, civic and fraternal organizations have collected thousands of signatures condemning the committee and asking its discontinuance.

Urges Unions Act Fast On New Bills

Washington, Jan. 30—An appeal to all CIO unions to get legislative committees functioning quickly was sent out this week by Nathan Cowan, legislative director, who emphasized the extreme need for labor to mobilize for win-the-war measures and against defeatist proposals.

"It would be suicide for us to sit back and wait for important bills to come up," Cowan wrote. "With each preliminary battle that they win, these reactionary blocs become bolder and are able to build toward bigger and bolder attacks on the war effort."

A few preliminary skirmishes have shown that the poll tax bloc and the "worst elements in the Republican party have made it clear that they are paying no attention to the leadership of President Roosevelt or to basic administration policy," the unions were told.

He cited the smear probe of the Federal Communications Commission and efforts to tie the hands of party leaders on questions of Congressional personnel and policy as part of the same pattern.

CHARTS PROGRAM

To meet this situation, Cowan counseled the unions to get their own legislative groups functioning fast, and to meet with all progressive organizations in the community in order that the people's voice may be heard in Washington.

Placed high on the agenda of unions throughout the country were actions on these issues:

Tolan Committee—send wires to the House Rules Committee, House Majority and Minority leaders, and to individual Representatives, to insure continuance of the committee, which has made valuable proposals for increasing the efficiency of our economic planning.

Dies Committee—Wires to Congressmen and the House Rules Committee asking that the committee be discontinued.

Hobbs Bill—Wires and letters to Congressmen asking defeat of the bill, already favorably reported by the House Judiciary Committee.

Smear Season

Labor's enemies have high hopes of using the new Congress to cut wages and cripple unions.

To put through their plans, they need to create the impression that "public opinion is aroused" and demanding anti-labor legislation.

So the neatest trick which labor's enemies can pull is to plant news stories about alleged incidents that are calculated to stir the genuine indignation of those who read and believe them.

A particularly glaring case of this kind is a widely reprinted story quoting some unnamed Marines as saying that a National Maritime Union crew had refused to unload a ship in Guadalcanal on a Sunday, on account of union rules.

The story has been given the lie by Admiral Halsey, commander of U. S. forces in the South Pacific and by the NMU. The union points out that seamen have always worked on Sundays, and there is nothing in any of its agreements to prohibit such work.

Labor welcomes the Congressional investigation of this story. It hopes that full exposure of its falsity may help to check the whole slander campaign.

The public should be aroused by such stories. But its indignation should be directed against those who falsely smear American seamen. For the seamen daily face death serving their country, and their casualty list of 3,211 is actually greater proportionately than that of the armed services.

The Axis is the chief gainer from slander stories that turn Americans against Americans. That's why its agents inspire so many of them. Watch out for anti-labor smears and scotch them. They do the work of the enemy.

Two Committees

It is hard to imagine two more opposite Congressional committees than the Dies committee and the Tolan committee.

The Dies committee from the first has been an instrument for anti-New Deal political factionalism. It has been slapdash and sloppy in its methods. It has sought cheap and sensational publicity by unsubstantiated smears directed against the administration, against labor and against all liberals and progressives.

Since the war, the Dies committee has grown from a nuisance into a positive danger. It has been a chief source for Axis radio propaganda. It has constantly tended to disrupt national unity and the unity of the United Nations. It has associated with, and been supported by many fascist-inclined individuals whom it should have exposed, and who have since been shown by Dept. of Justice indictments to be working in the interests of our country's enemies.

In fact, the Vice President of the United States has declared that Dies could not have served better the interests of our enemies if he had been in their pay.

The Tolan committee, on the other hand, has devoted itself entirely to promoting our country's war effort. It has been careful and thorough in its studies and hearings, and has produced some of the most brilliantly constructive reports that have emanated from Congress.

The Tolan committee has served the country well by emphasizing the necessity for total war planning and mobilization. It has outlined a program for centralized coordinated gearing of our entire war machinery under labor, management and government cooperation. And its findings have been wholeheartedly endorsed by the CIO and by most forward-looking Americans.

But the Tolan committee is now officially out of existence, until action is taken to continue it, while a big drive is on in Congress to give more funds to continue the Dies committee.

The CIO's stand is very clear on these two committees. It urges the passage of House Resolution 36 to extend the useful existence of the Tolan committee, and asks all its members to impress on House leaders and on their individual Congressmen the importance of continuing it.

As to the Dies committee, it's thumbs down. Everyone who wants to win the war should urge his Congressman to vote against the Cox resolution for its refueling, and to expose its true character on the floor of Congress in no uncertain terms.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ABSENCE makes the heart grow fonder — but not absenteeism.

This new and much cussed 'ism does not apply to absentee owners, it seems, but only to the sons and daughters of toil.

It's an 'ism without any 'ists. No one believes in it or proudly calls himself an absenteeist. It's practiced but never preached.

Yet absenteeism is a serious drag on war production—as well as a stick used by anti-labor propagandists to belabor the working folks.

To be absent from a war job, when you should be working, is an obvious interference with all-out production to lick the Axis.

But absenteeism is not a disease that can be cured by yelling and making faces at labor, as some of our modern witchdoctors imagine.

Still less is it due to unions and "high wages", as they falsely claim.

It's business executives rather than workers who take a morning off for a game of golf, who suffer from too much night-life, or who "just can't get through the winter without a few weeks in Florida."

Workers too, like to celebrate once in awhile —just as do absentee coupon-clippers, or soldiers, or sailors, or even anti-labor propagandists.

And sometimes some of them lay off without a justifiable excuse, just as soldiers are sometimes AWOL.

But the organized workers particularly have a stronger sense of their war responsibilities than have most other Americans.

The unions work constantly to strengthen this sense of responsibility, to shame or discipline the irresponsible, and to cut down absenteeism to an absolute minimum.

But even if every worker were perfect, tireless and beyond reproach, absenteeism would still remain a serious problem. For its chief causes lies beyond the individual worker's control.

Government studies reveal that most absences from work are caused by sickness, accidents, housing shortages, transportation difficulties and other similar reasons.

Much sickness is caused by poor housing, overcrowding, lack of adequate eating facilities, as well as by the war strains of more intense work. And the sickness of children, under such conditions, is a frequent cause of absenteeism, particularly on the part of working mothers.

Housing shortages near war plants also mean that many workers have to travel long distances to their jobs. Hours spent standing in packed buses or street cars, increase fatigue; and poor tires, auto breakdowns, as well as inadequate public transportation, cause many absences from work.

Then too, when all adult members of a family are working, someone has to take time off for household shopping; and the services of doctors, dentists, etc., are often not available except during working hours.

Employers' business-as-usual practices and governmental failures to plan production properly are among the worst causes of absenteeism.

The workers' morale inevitably drops when they see stocks of unused materials in their plants; when work is poorly organized leaving them time on their hands; or when they know the speedy completion of one job may mean a layoff until the company gets more materials or another order.

Another cause of absenteeism is the long hours worked by many skilled and key workers. Some of them are working seven days a week and are humanly bound to need more rest.

Actually the CIO and its unions are doing the most that is being done to reduce absenteeism—not only through their morale-building activities, but also by striking at its basic causes.

The CIO from the first has taken the lead in demanding nation-wide planning of all-out production—so every plant and machine may be utilized to the full and the workers may be kept steadily on the job.

Then the unions work for adequate wages, and for safe, healthful and tolerable working conditions —to assure work at top efficiency, and to avert absences due to undue strain, over-long hours, ill-health or accidents.

Finally, the CIO and its women's auxiliaries combat absenteeism by demanding adequate community health services, care for the children of working mothers, and a national health program; by working for better housing, eating facilities and transportation; by urging rationing to make food and other necessities more readily available to war workers; and in dozens of other similar ways.

Murray To U. S. Industry:

MEET LABOR HALF-WAY

CIO Relief Gifts Pass 10-Million Mark

DETROIT, Jan. 30.—One of the most enthusiastic CIO meetings ever called in Detroit greeted Pres. Murray here Jan. 25 at a dinner in the huge Masonic Temple Crystal Room.

Host at the dinner was the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief. August Scholle, CIO Regional Director, state president and member of the National Committee, was chairman.

At the speakers' table were members of the National Committee, members of the local Detroit committee, CIO Vice-Pres. R. J. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. Jim Carey; Detroit's Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, Father Raymond Clancy, director of Catholic Social Action in Detroit, and three visiting labor officials from other Allied nations.

The three union representatives were Haakon Lie, general secretary Norwegian Federation of Labor; Ernest Liu, general secretary Chinese Association of Labor, and Lloyd Ross, secretary Australian Railways Union.

LAUDS GOOD WORK

The meeting was addressed by Mayor Jeffries, the three visitors from the labor movement abroad, Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, and Mr. Pierott.

President Murray electrified the audience with the announcement that the committee raised and distributed an estimated $10,000,000 in 1942 and that the total would be even greater for 1943. He told how a considerable part of the money had already been sent to Russia, China and Britain to carry out labor projects, and bring aid to suffering civilian victims of the Axis gangsters.

Detroit alone, he pointed out, has contributed $1,232,090 and is still giving increasing participation in a plan that is gathering momentum.

President Murray personally presented Certificates of Award to Murray Body Local 2, UAW; Local 155, UAW; Local 339, URWDSE, and Local 83, United Dairy Workers, for their outstanding accomplishment in contributing as groups to the CIO War Relief Fund.

After paying high tribute to the work done by the committee and staff, President Murray then turned his attention to deficiencies and inefficiencies in the administration of the war effort. He poined ou numerous failures to plan and execute the war effort in a manner that will tend toward speedy victory over the Axis.

CIO Wins At Pan-Am Oil

St. Rose, La., Jan. 30—By more than four to one, the CIO defeated a company union in the Destrahan, La., refinery of the Pan American oil company Jan. 21. The vote was 132 for the Oil Workers International Union and 29 for the company union.

Fred Pieper, CIO regional director at New Orleans, assisted Local 447, OWIU, in organizing the workers of this Standard Oil subsidiary company.

CIO Head Gets Ideals Award

Windsor, Ont., Jan. 30—CIO Pres. Murray received the 1943 Christian Culture Award of Assumption College, the third of its kind, before an audience of labor representatives and others who jammed a local theatre this week.

In presenting the award, the Rev. J. Stanley Murphy, registrar of the college and founder of the Awards, said: "In honoring you today we feel that we reflect honor upon ourselves, for you have ever been, in manifold public life, an uncompromising exponent of Christian ideals. You have ever displayed the virtue of prudence, especially by waiving aside all appeals to fanaticism, intolerance, and the use of totalitarian techniques, as well as the facile temptation to 'moral purism' . . .

"We have two great wars to win: The battle against totalitarianism abroad and the struggle against the anti-democratic and reactionary forces at home, sometimes upheld by certain powerful sections of the press and the radio.

PROGRESS TO DEMOCRACY

"To allow these forces to impede and possibly crush not only industrial democracy, but many hard-won gains, would be worse than tragic. It would be breaking faith with our brothers and friends who are so valiantly dying in fox-holes, on land, in the air, and on the sea—for those same ideals of liberty, and fraternity, and justice which must not be betrayed.

"Your own contribution, as a statesman-like leader of integrity and sincerity, to the furtherance of Christian democracy has been recognized for some years by all classes. This award symbolizes tangibly what millions and millions of men think of you in their hearts."

Detroit Industrialists Hear Co-Operation Plea

By HARRY READ

DETROIT, Jan. 30—Uttering a ringing challenge to industry to meet labor half-way in an all-out effort for victory in the war against the Axis, CIO Pres. Philip Murray concluded on Jan. 25 one of the busiest three-day periods of his life in an address before an overflowing luncheon meeting of the Economic Club of Detroit.

The group numbers in its membership virtually every important executive in the war industry that makes Detroit the arsenal of democracy.

President Murray's busy schedule began when he arrived in Detroit about 10:30 Saturday morning, at which time he went into conference with local CIO leaders. His initial purpose in coming to Detroit was carried out Saturday afternoon when he sat in on a full meeting of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief. Saturday night a dinner given by the same committee lasted until after midnight.

On Sunday morning, President Murray spoke before another overflowing meeting of the Association of Catholic Trade Unionists at a communion breakfast in the grand ballroom of the Statler Hotel. A large number of local CIO leaders, including UAW President R. J. Thomas and State CIO President August Scholle, were also guests at the breakfast.

The same night, President Murray spoke again before a packed throng in the Palace Theatre at Windsor, Ontario, across the river from Detroit, where he was presented with the 1943 Christian Culture Award of Assumption College.

MAIN THEME

In all of his public appearances, President Murray sounded a terse formula over and over again:

"We must win this war!"

"We must preserve America!"

"We must co-operate and work together, all of us."

"It is my firm conviction that all the people are interested in one outstanding duty and that is the winning of the war," he told the Economic Club at the outset of his address.

"There are no workers, and I am sure there are no employers, who would care to stoop over a dying soldier and say, 'Buddy, you are dying because I failed you.' We can all agree on that and if there is agreement to win, then there should be a lessening of disagreement as to the means of winning.

WORKERS ARE LOYAL

"No group of citizens can point the finger of scorn at American workers to question their loyalty to their country and to our boys overseas. God knows, that from almost every home, sons have gone forth to fight and bleed and die. Then why all this hauling back and forth, this confusion and misunderstanding?"

He told them that labor does not claim to be right always and went on to point out how the CIO has promoted many plans to increase efficiency and productivity in the war effort.

"No other organization," he said, "has gone that far."

"We have joined with management in planning, always with the understanding that there will be no intrusion on the prerogatives of management or employer. Every suggestion has been offered with one thought, to win the war."

Pres. Murray was critical of the percentage system formula of wage increases instituted by the War Labor Board that has resulted in higher paid workers getting bigger increases than workers in the lower brackets.

"The solution of these problems will tax your energies and ours, but if these problems are settled, many confusions will be eliminated," he said.

TELLS PLAN'S HISTORY

He told them of the difficulties he has encountered since that day in 1939 when he took his Industry Council plan to President Roosevelt, to the Cabinet, to Congress and to leaders of industry.

"The politicians said it was too revolutionary. Business men said it interfered with managerial privileges. Some people said it was socialistic. Certain other elements called it reactionary. Well, the War Production Board in one of those sidewise movements, is gradually getting up to it. They concede it is a good plan.

"We all want to win this war. Then let us stop our internal disruption, stop the pulling and pushing and see if there is not a more practical way to solve these problems. Some day this war will end and we want to make sure that there will be no more wars. Who is better qualified to perfect the necessary device than management and labor, during the war and during the peace?"

This is a new CIO NEWS service—a running box score on what's doing in Congress. The service will necessarily be a selective one, since it is humanly and technically impossible to give a full account of all bills that are put in the hopper.

This service will, therefore, be limited to those measures that shape up as important, around which major campaigns can be expected to develop. If you need information about any bill that is not listed here, write to Nathan Cowan, legislative representative, CIO, and it will be sent to you.

The service is intended for working legislative committees and for all CIO members who want to keep tabs on their Congress. Remember, this new Congress will be a Victory Congress if we make it one. That requires constant attention on our part, requires just as much attenion as we give our production committee or our grievance committee or any other part of CIO's win-the-war apparatus.

Adm. Halsey Blasts Lies About Seamen

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—A fraudulent story, widely publicized by the anti-labor press and designed to smear the Natl. Maritime Union and its merchant-seamen members, was nailed as a complete and utter lie today in a U. S. Navy statement written by Admiral William Halsey, commander of U. S. Naval forces in the Solomons area.

His statement came as NMU leaders were calling upon a House Naval Affairs sub-committee to make a complete and thorough investigation of what the union termed an "Axis-inspired story."

NMU Pres. Joseph Curran sent wires to Pres. Roosevelt, Sec. of the Navy Knox and Atty.-Gen. Francis Biddle in which he cited the union's distinguished service to the war and said the union had no rules whatsoever that would interfere with the war effort.

He called upon Biddle to launch a Dept. of Justice probe of the incident.

NAVY STATEMENT

Following is the Navy's statement about the yarn that U. S. seamen refused to unload ships at Guadalcanal, and forced sick American servicemen to do the job:

"Adm. William F. Halsey, Jr., commander of U. S. forces in the South Pacific, informed the Navy Dept. today that in no instance have merchant seamen refused to discharge cargo from their vessels at Guadalcanal or in any other way failed to cooperate with U. S. forces ashore in that area.

"In a report to the Navy, Adm. Halsey asserted that more than a dozen vessels manned by merchant seamen have reached the Guadalcanal area since start of the Solomons Islands campaign on August 7, 1942. Under the supervision of naval officers, the crew participated in unloading all of them. They report that none of the crews ever has refused to discharge its ship's cargo, and that the merchant seamen's cooperation, efficiency, and courage, on some occasions in the face of enemy attack, have won high praise."

Meanwhile NMU Pres. Joseph Curran indicated the union would seek to find who was behind the morale-damaging smear campaign against the seamen.

The CIO marine union branded the story as "Axis-inspired" and "completely false" and said it welcomed an investigation of all the facts. It suggested a thorough probe of Helen Waterhouse, Akron, Ohio, Beacon-Journal reporter who wrote the yarn allegedly on information received from half-a-dozen anonymous Marines on leave in Akron.

The Akron writer should be forced to show proof of the evidence in her story, NMU leaders declared. The slander piece was widely reprinted in newspapers throughout the country and has been a favorite talking-point with anti-labor Congressmen.

In New York, Curran pointed out that the story is the latest and worst in a series of slanders against U. S. merchant marine seamen which have been appearing in the Chicago Tribune and which have been using "unnamed Naval officers" as a convenient source upon which to peg a variety of reactionary lies about union seamen.

Answering details of the Akron Beacon-Journal story, Curran said that seamen have always worked on Sundays, that nothing in any one of the union's 110 agreements with shipping companies prohibits working on Sundays, and that ships' articles definitely provide for "work at the suggestion of the Master."

In its wire to Atty.-Gen. Biddle, the NMU branded the story as "obviously Hitler-inspired and damaging to the morale of seamen who daily brave death."

"It is obvious that these charges are part of a deliberate campaign to attack any organization that is doing a job of fighting the war," he said.

The House Naval Affairs Sub-Committee to investigate the charges was appointed by Rep. Carl Vinson, committee chairman. Members of the committee include Reps. Magnuson, Hebert, Morrison, Anderson and Margaret Smith.

Hobbs Bill, To Hit Labor, Nears Vote

Washington, Jan. 30—The Hobbs bill, which threatens to cripple union activity, was reported favorably by the House Judiciary Committee and now awaits action by Congress.

The measure (H. R. 653) was introduced by poll taxer Representative Sam Hobbs (D) of Alabama, a constant supporter of anti-labor legislation.

Ostensibly a law protection bill, the Hobbs measure would punish coercion or the use of violence and force by heavy penalties. But its real purpose is to make it easy for employers and friendly police to crimp severely legitimate union activities.

1942 CARRY-OVER

Indication of that is the fact that the bill duplicates existing law enforcement measures, while failing to contain any safeguards for unions. A similar bill was offered last year by Hobbs after he failed in an attempt to get through labor clauses on an anti-racketeering measure.

Hobbs' project is the first anti-labor measure to get through a House committee at this session.

CIO Legislative Director Nathan Cowan called on all unions to demand that their Congressmen vote against the bill.

Citizenship For Bridge's Asked of FDR

New York, Jan. 30—A campaign to win immediate citizenship for Harry Bridges, CIO longshoremen's leader, is receiving widespread support, the Citizen's Victory Committee for Bridges announced today.

The committee cited letters from unions, professors, lawyers and writers urging that charges against the CIO union official be dropped.

One of them, Prof. William Houk of St. Lawrence University, said that "teachers are distinctly handicapped in their work of morale building by attacks on people of Harry Bridges' ability and integrity.

"Pres. Roosevelt can untie our hands by seeing to it that citizenship for Harry Bridges is delayed no longer."

Convoy Vet on Air

Los Angeles, Jan. 30 — Russell Riddell, veteran member of the Natl. Maritime Union who was twice torpedoed while serving on convoys headed for Murmansk, Russia, will talk on the Phillip Morris program, Tues, Feb. 2, at 8 p.m., EWT, on the NBC network.

Here Are Helpful Hints For Union Shop Stewards

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—It's no easy job to be a good union shop steward, as an excellent illustrated booklet put out recently by the Textile Workers Union of America makes clear. A really good shop steward has to know as much (or more) about the business as the boss, and be as smart as the company's lawyers.

He has to be wise, patient and fearless, if he is to do his duty by the union members he represents. As one of his main tasks is to deal with the management in behalf of his fellow members, he should know thoroughly the terms of the contract between the union and the company.

In negotiations with the company or conferences with the foreman on grievances, he has to know when to listen and when to speak up, and must not be scared or allow himself to be bluffed. He has to know all about the various jobs in his department, what they require, what expected and actual production is, and basis of payment, whether piece or hour work.

These are a few of the duties and responsibilities explained in the TWUA handbook for shop stewards and department committees, called "So You're a Steward!" published by the TWUA's Educational Department. The booklet is attractively made up and is enlivened with a numberof humorous drawings.

So You're a Steward! Order from Educational Dept., Textile Workers Union of America, 15 Union Square, New York City; price 5c a copy; $1 for 25; $3.75 for 100.

Victory Begins At Home

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Today, when all of us are being called on to bend all our energies toward winning the war, it's more important than ever for us to do our utmost to keep America healthy.

It's a challenge to every one of us to keep our families well, despite price increases, empty store shelves and shrinking incomes.

It means we must plan and plan better, to get the most in good health out of every dollar we spend on food. That's a tall order for any housewife to fill. But it's one of the most important jobs we have to do.

This column is the first of a series to help you do that job. Make it your column. Send in your questions and suggestions on how to stretch the meals, any special hints or problems in cooking that will help the rest of us, or perhaps some favorite recipe that costs very little but goes a long way. Let's have your ideas.

PLANNING FOR HEALTH

To plan for good health, we must start with a carefully planned market list. Check your list with the Nutrition Yardstick that follows; be sure to include all the foods necessary for a balanced diet. Shop for these foods first; then, if your budget allows, fill in with some family favorites.

THE NUTRITION YARDSTICK

(Cut out and pin up in your kitchen so you can see it every day)

Milk—1 quart for each child. 1 pint for adults. Drink it whole or used in cooking.

Fruits—1 serving of fresh citrus fruit—oranges, grapefruit or tomatoes, raw or canned. 1 serving of other fruits, fresh, or dried, cooked or raw.

Vegetables—1 or more servings of potatoes. 2 or more servings of vegetables other than potatoes, one green or yellow.

Eggs—1 egg for each child and each adult. At least 3 or 4 a week.

Lean Meat, Fish and Poultry—1 serving daily or 1 serving at least 5 days a week. On the other days, dried beans, dried peas, peanut butter, nuts, cheese or eggs.

Cereals and Breads—Whole grain or enriched cereals and breads. Cereal—1 serving daily. Bread—a serving at each meal. More cereals and bread should be used if the energy needs are high and the income limited.

Fats and Sugars—Butter or oleomargarine with Vitamin A added —1 serving at every meal. Sugars —as desired to complete the energy requirement.

(Next week—"HOW TO FEED A FAMILY OF FOUR".)

This column is for you. We want your questions and suggestions. Send them to Sunny Pressman, c/o CWA-CIO, 1019 15th Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Push Drive Against Paralysis

BY ELEANOR FOWLER
Cio Women's Auxiliaries

The CIO Auxiliaries are whole-heartedly behind the drive for funds to combat infantile paralysis which is dramatized in the March of Dimes and the President's birthday balls. Here's what Faye Stephenson, president of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO has to say about it:

"Pres. Philip Murray expressed exactly what we women feel about the annual infantile paralysis fund drive when he said that it has new significance and new importance for us this year because of the war.

"We're fighting to beat Hitler and all he stands for and to assure to our children a future free from want and fear. As we read descriptions of the tragic waifs, starving and maltreated, that the victorious Red Army is freeing from the bestial Nazis with the capture of each new populated place, we vow to redouble our efforts to protect the children.

FIGHT AGAINST ILLNESS

"The funds raised in the drive culminating on the birthday of our President and Commander-in-Chief to banish fear of lifelong invalidism from the lives of thousands of young Americans. Let's do all we can to make freedom from fear a reality for our own children while we are contributing in every possible way to the Victory of our armed forces to banish fear from the world."

AUXILIARIES AND OPA

Appointment of Faye Stephenson, president of the CIO Women's Auxiliaries, to the Advisory Committee of the Standards Division of OPA constitutes recognition of the important role which auxiliary women can play in assisting the government in the consumer field. The auxiliaries have constantly stressed that price control will not mean much unless the quality of the goods on which the price is set is specified in the regulations.

The Standards Division of OPA is working out those specifications of quality. One of the functions of the Advisory Committee will be to help in wording the labels so that the consumer will be able to understand them, and be sure that the quality he gets is the quality he pays for.

The appointment of Edith Christenson as Labor Relations Advisor in OPA is another step in recognition of the importance of auxiliaries. Miss Christenson is to work as a liaison person between the Group Services Division of OPA and the Labor Division. An important part of her job is to work with the CIO and AFL auixiliaries to see that their members get full information on new developments in OPA.

Edith Christenson is an old friend of the CIO Auxiliaries. She spoke at our national conference in Boston. She organized the CIO-AFL Auxiliary Conference at which Mrs. Roosevelt spoke in July at the Hudson Shore Labor School.

Municipal Union Starts Bright New Magazine

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—Some of the unnamed, unsung men and women who make the wheels of government go round will be given their day in write-ups which will be one of the features of the new monthly magazine published by the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers.

On page one of the paper is a story of how 1,200 workers for the Detroit Street Railway won more than $500,000 annually in wage increases and overtime pay. Another article is about Hamtranck, Mich., "Union Town, U. S. A., a city of 50,000 whose population is predominantly labor.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

G. Geo. De Nucci, CIO Sub-Regional Director in Columbus, reports a United Steelworkers victory, as follows: Globe Abrasive Co., Mansfield, Ohio, USA-CIO, 27 as against 9. In a membership card check at the Great Lakes Steel (E. T. Weir), Mansfield, Ohio, the NLRB gave the USA 344 members out of 524 employes. Both of these situations were handled by USA Representative Henry Johnson under the direction of District 24 Director Howard N. Porter. The USA-CIO won another fine victory at the Cleveland Cliffs Mining Co., with a vote of 377 for CIO as against 53 for no union.

D. K. Harris, regional director for the UPNTWA of America in Cincinnati, advises that the election victory won last week by this organization at the Sorg Paper Company plant in Middletown, Ohio, is the first CIO election victory in Middletown except the one also at Sorg in 1937. The campaign was conducted by Brothers D. K. Harris and Logan Goff. Charles Bridgewater, UPNTWA regional director in Pennsylvania, reports that the employes of the Downington Paper Company of Downington, Pa., voted for the CIO as their collective bargaining agent by a vote of 250 as against 46 for no union.

Big Victory At Wright

Richard T. Frankensteen, vice president of the UAW-CIO, in charge of the Aviation Division, reports the winning of the election at the Lockland plant of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the world's largest aircraft engine plant, by a vote of 7,687 for CIO as against 2,300 for the AFL and 2,800 for no union.

Paul E. Miley, director, Region 2-A, UAW-CIO, reports the following additional victories: International Steel Wool Company, Springfield, Ohio, UAW-CIO won the election by a vote of 2 to 1. International Representative Dale Toler was in charge of this drive. The UAW-CIO also won the election at the Mitchell Metal Company, Cleveland, Ohio, by a vote of 8 to 1. Organizational work was done by A. J. Petersen, International representative, and John Michitsch, business agent, Local 217.

T. H. Bent, president, and D. Great House, secretary-treasurer, Local 166, UAW-CIO, as well as CIO Field Representative Albert Glenn, report the winning of the election by the UAW-CIO at the Pressed Steel Company in Brookfield, Illinois, by a vote of 1,794 for CIO as against 769 for District 50, UMWA.

George Brown, assistant director of organization, IWA-CIO, advises that the results of the run-off election at Big Lakes Woods, were 36 votes for CIO as against 9 for the AFL.

Standard Oil Goes CIO

A. R. Kintsley, vice president, Oil Workers International Union, reports two victories as follows: Pan-American, a Standard Oil Company refinery, New Orleans, La., results in a vote of 132 for CIO as against 29 for the independent union and 2 votes for no union. CIO Regional Director Pieper assisted this organization in this situation. They also won a victory with the Pure Oil Company production employees at Mexia, Texas, by a vote of 46 for CIO and 36 votes for no union. Representative C. Massengale organized this group and assisted in winning the election.

John C. Lawson, secretary-treasurer, United Stone & Allied Products Workers, advises that the employes of the Alcoa Brick & Tile Company, Knoxville, Tenn., and Standard Rock Wool, Inc., Yorktown, Indiana, have been organized and chartered into local unions of this international. Representative Robert Boyer and the Muncie IUC assisted in these jobs.

Furniture Victories

Morris Muster, president, United Furniture Workers of America, reports the following election victories: Berkey & Gay plant in Grand Rapids, Michigan, UFWA-CIO received 264 votes as against 191 for the AFL. Ideal School Supply, Chicago, Ill., results were: UFWA-CIO, 32 as against 19 for no union. Last year they lost an election in this plant and are proud of the outcome of their second tackle. Jasper Seating Company, Jasper, Indiana, results were: UFWA-CIO, 64 as against 54. Congratulations! Keep 'em rollin'.

The American Newspaper Guild, according to Wilbur E. Bade, director of organization, has a solid majority of all eligibles on the Chieftain and Star Journal in Pueblo, Colorado, and has chartered a new local union there.

Intl. Labor Unity 'Pays Off' Benefits

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (ALN)—The highly practical results achieved in recent months by cooperation between allied labor movements is causing workers in all parts of the world to show special interest in the inaugural meeting of the Anglo-American trade union committee, to be held in Miami next week, reports from Allied Labor News correspondents in Bolivia, Australia, China, Britain and other allied nations reveal.

Trade unionists no longer regard international labor unity simply as a question of "morale" and "goodwill," these reports indicate, but as a precise weapon which can concretely aid in winning the war in the shortest time possible.

Bolivian labor, according to the ALN correspondent in La Paz, is convinced that the decision of the U. S. government last week to send a commission to investigate conditions in the tin mines, which gave rise to a two-week strike in December, is largely the result of pressure brought to bear by North American unionists.

FOIL TORIES' PLOT

Attempts by Australian tories and their opposite numbers in the United States last month to blacken the reputation of trade unions in the Dominion, accusing them of sabotaging the war effort, were decisively nipped in the bud by widespread publication in the U. S. labor press of the Australian workers' side of the picture.

Further, Harry Bridges' invitation to Australia's longshoremen to send a delegation to the U. S. West Coast to study ILWU loading and unloading methods is believed likely to speed up turn-around in Australian ports.

In China, much good is expected to result from Wendell Willkie's startling disclosure last October, following his tour of China's war factories, that Chinese workers are not permitted to organize trade unions of their own choosing.

This revelation has caused labor leaders in Britain and the United States to be all the more anxious to include China's workers in any international labor group. Such representation, it is believed, would result in greater freedom for China's workers and a consequent stepping-up of their whole war effort.

Similarly, Salvadore Ocampo, sub-secretary of the Chilean Confederation of Workers, and other allied labor leaders have expressed the view that inclusion of the Indian trade unions in a United Nations' labor group would greatly aid their struggle to mobilize the workers and peasants of India for war against Japan.

ANGLO-SOVIET GROUP

Exchange of labor delegations between Britain and Russia, following the formation of the Anglo-Soviet trade union committee in September, 1941, has resulted in improved production technique, better training of women workers, and a more effective role for labor-management committees, British labor leaders report.

"Operations of the Anglo-Soviet committee have greatly stimulated the production of war materials," Jack Tanner, president of Britain's Amalgamated Engineering Union, told the AFL convention in Toronto last October.

In London the National Council of Shop Stewards has indicated that close study of U. S. mass production methods by British stewwards would pay big dividends in planes, tanks and guns. British shipbuilding union leaders, after a recent tour of U. S. shipyards, said that they were taking back with them many ideas which would greatly improve output at home.

Conversely, U. S. labor, faced with urgent problems concerning centralized planning of war production, control of manpower, women in war industry, and labor representation on government agencies, is increasingly looking to Britain to see how trade unionists in that country, now in its fourth year of war, have dealt with similar problems.

Canadian Steel Workers Vote Return to Jobs

Ottawa, Jan. 30—Establishment of a basic minimum wage of 55 cents hourly in Canada's steel mills helped end a strike of 13,500 workers, members of USWA, this week, when the Dominion Government agreed to declare steel a national industry.

The strike was provoked by the Government's stalling and delay over more than a year in granting justice to the steelworkers. Basic wages of 45½ cents hourly at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and 43½ cents hourly at Sydney, N. S., will be raised under the settlement. The Nova Scotian workers voted 3-1 to return to their jobs, while the Ontario local voted by a small margin to continue. The over-all majority favored ending the walkout.

Sault workers have been receiving a 5-cent hourly and Sydney a 9-cent hourly cost-of-living bonus. The settlement provides that the cost of living bonus will be included in the 55-cent basic rate, but applications may be made to the National War Labor Board to have the bonus excluded from the basic rate. Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell has agreed to resign as chairman of the Board if such an application is presented.

Workers will be eligible for any increase in the cost of living and the 55-cent minimum is retroactive to Nov. 1. The final settlement was an improvement over one previously offered by the Government and rejected by the workers, which did not provide for any future increase in the cost-of-living bonus.

The settlement was approved by National Director C. H. Millard and other USWA officers as being the most the workers could obtain at the moment without embarking on a prolonged and bitter struggle with the Government

They also praised Pres. Philip Murray for his assistance and the action of the International Executive Board in naming a special commission to facilitate negotiations.

Commonwealth Labor Parley Slated Soon

London, Jan. 30—(ALN)—A British Commonwealth trade union conference, first of its kind in history, is to be held sometime in the spring, it was announced here this week.

Initiated by the British Trades Union Congress, the conference will probably be held in London. The trade union movements of Canada, South Africa, Australia and New Zealand have already agreed to send delegations, and it is considered likely that the All-India Trades Union Congress will also be represented.

Prime Minister Curtin of Australia has announced that his government will provide travel facilities for the Australian delegates, and pay part of their expenses.

Hundreds of Miners Slain in Bolivia, Capital Rumors Hint

LA PAZ, Jan. 30 (ALN)—Persistent rumors that several hundred striking miners in the Patino tin mines at Catavi—producing half of the tin used by the U. S. and Britain—were brutally massacred Dec. 21 were partly confirmed this week by Minister of the Interior Pedro Zilvetti Arce, who reported the death of 19 workers and the wounding of 30 others between Dec. 18 and 23.

Since the outbreak of the strike, the Catavi district has been cut off from the rest of the country; parties of soldiers patrol all the roads and railroads. Nevertheless, information from Catavi inhabitants reaching La Paz by roundabout routes shows that the massacre was far worse than admitted by Arce.

Estimates of the number killed range from 250 to 500, including many wives and children of the miners. There is little doubt that Dec. 21 will be known as one of the blackest days in the history of Latin American labor.

On Dec. 24 2000 miners returned to work on the payment of bonuses of 100 bolivianos, and a few days later the other workers who were not able to escape were forced to follow. Recalcitrant miners are escorted to the mines daily in small groups by heavily-armed soldiers, instructed to fire at the first sign of opposition. Meetings of more than three persons, following the practice of occupied Europe, are prohibited. The most disquieting news from Catavi for the United Nations is that several thousand miners, after the massacre, fled into the hills. More are leaving each week. Production continues to decline.

More than 40 Bolivian labor officials have been arrested. Among the prisoners, in addition to top leaders of the Confederacion Sindicale Trabajadores de Bolivia (CSTB), are national officers of the Miners Federation and heads of miners' locals in Potosi, Oruro and Pulacayo.

Big Landlords Fight Rent Control

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (FP)—The Natl. Federation of Apartment House Owners Assns., which organized many locals the better to fight rent control, is running a well financed lobby to force action on three bills which would wreck rent control, Federated Press learned Jan. 27.

The bills are HR 993, introduced by Rep. Fred L. Crawford (R., Mich.), HR 1192, introduced by Rep. Harry R. Sheppard (D., Cal.) with the active aid of the California Republican, Rep. Thomas Rolph, and HR 1491, by Rep. Jesse P. Wolcott (R. Mich.)

Chief instigators of the movement to send rents soaring and allow landlords to increase their already sizeable profits are the San Francisco realtors. An elaborately printed pamphlet obviously costing thousands of dollars to print and distribute recently was sent to all members of congress by the Apartment House Owners of San Francisco, setting forth their pitiful condition under OPA.

OPA RENT SURVEY

How pitiful is shown by figures OPA will release shortly based on a recent survey in 13 cities. OPA accountants worked directly from the books of management companies local real estate boards picked as typical. They found owners of apartments were getting 14% greater net income under rent control than for the previous 2 years.

In parts of California landlords and owners have been particularly obnoxious. In San Diego a federal judge recently fined 4 out of 5 defendant landlords a total of $6,750 and sentenced them to 6 months in prison. He suspended sentences of three, but not that of Stanley Taylor, prominent realtor, as distinct from common landlord. Taylor spent a night in jail before supplying bond on appeal. A jury had found them guilty of falsifying registrations and demanding above-ceiling rents.

WOULD HAMPER OPA

The Californian's bill would leave almost everything to the area rent director, making it unnecessary to come to Washington with lobbies. The Wolcott bill would throw out the so-called sales amendment to the rent regulaitons which has prevented the wholesale eviction of workers that was going on in Mobile and elsewhere.

It would prevent OPA from making investigations, examining records or requiring reports, and would outlaw the triple damage provision whereby tenants may go into any court and collect thrice the overcharge a month, or $50.

But the Crawford bill (the owners' association headquarters are in Detroit) is the worst. Doing away with registration, rights at litigation or ability to get a landlord to fill out any form are just a beginning. It orders rent increases plenty.

Carolina Shipyards Hit By NLRB

Wilmington, N. C., Jan. 30—Charges of unfair labor practices filed by the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers against the North Carolina Shipbuilding Corp. and its parent, the Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., were upheld in an intermediate report made recently by an NLRB trial examiner.

He recommended that a company union at the Wilmington yard be abolished and that a small group of workers be reinstated with back pay.

News of the examiner's report upholding the union's accusations, was greeted with jubilation by the union, according to Lyman C. Covert who is directing an organization drive among the 14,000 workers at the North Carolina yard.

He said that the union was planning to file a petition for an election and was confident of winning sole bargaining rights.

'Rickenbacker Errs in Assailing Unions'—Murray

DETROIT, Jan. 30—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's plea for legislation to restrict unions was based either on lack of information or misunderstanding, President Philip Murray declared here last weekend.

The CIO leader emphasized that he had no desire to "engage in a controversy" with Capt. Rickenbacker, hero of a 21-day life-raft vigil on the Pacific ocean, but he added that American workers are doing everything possible to win the war.

In the motor capital for a 3-day visit, Murray said:

"Every member of organized labor in the United States during his period of suffering, prayed to God that he would be returned to his country and to his family. I regret that he should permit himself to be involved in a discussion about matters on which he has been misinformed or does not understand.

SEEK MORE OUTPUT

"The CIO organizations have consistently advocated greater efficiency and increased productively. I conceived the original Industry Council Plan more than two years ago for the purpose of promoting labor-management co-operation in order that our country would secure for itself the maximum in production of all goods essential to the nation and primarily to winning the war.

"Our prime object is to win this war and win it speedily. The membership of our unions has made many sacrifices and contributions to the nation in so doing. It is regrettable that industry as a whole has refused to accept the wholehearted cooperation of labor in this work.

"The regularly scheduled meeting of the CIO Executive Board will be held on Feb. 5th in Washington. One of the prime considerations before the board at that time will be the matter of further increasing the efficiency of plant and industry.

"A member of the Rickenbacker party lost at sea was a member in good standing of Local 26, United Textile Workers-CIO of Freehold, New Jersey. This is no time for partisanship because every individual, I am sure, is fully prepared to make whatever sacrifice is necessary to win the war."

(President Murray's reference to a CIO member was to Private John Bartek, now promoted to sergeant, who was one of those adrift on the Pacific with Rickenbacker.)

TOUGHEN UP: Brrr . . . University of new Hampshire co-eds go through their paces in the snow, as part of the school's special war training program. The girls will be going into war work after graduation.

Every Dime Helps!

This is the story of a busy electrical crane in the Kearny Shipyards in New Jersey and its operator, an American named Stephen Langer, one of America's unionized workers.

That crane helps turn out the warships and the merchant vessels needed for victory. And it moves faster, more efficiently these days than Steve Langer ever thought he could run it a few months ago.

For Steve has had a first-hand lesson in the miracle that is America. This nation has come to mean something to him now that it never meant before. And he has two debts to pay, a national one and an international one.

SAVED BABY'S LIFE

The life of Steve Langer's baby was saved a few months ago by an Australian and 18,000 Americans. The Australian is Sister Elizabeth Kenny and the 18,000 Americans are scattered around somewhere among 130,000,000 people. Steve doesn't know them nor do they know him, but each one chipped a dime into a cause they believed in and it happened to be for little Johnnie Langer.

Last September 14 Steve was sound asleep in his home in Carteret when he was awakened by his wife's cries: "Steve, get up quick. Johnnie can't walk—can't even stand on his feet. His legs seem paralyzed."

Steve rushed into the baby's room. Johnnie had been sick to his stomach for two days. A doctor had treated him but he failed to respond. Steve had not been worried until then. He had seen his other boy, Robert, seven, very sick one day and in perfect health the next. But now he was worried.

Steve telephoned the shipyard that he would not be able to work that day. He did not have much money but he decided to go to the best baby specialist in the vicinity, Dr. H. P. Fine, in Perth Amboy, nine miles away.

While Mrs. Langer held the baby, he drove their old car as fast as he could through the heavy morning traffic. Twenty-one minutes later they walked into Dr. Fine's office.

FOUNDATION HELPS

A few minutes later Dr. Fine was examining the child. Then he shook his head and looked the father in the eyes. "He has infantile paralysis," Dr. Fine said.

"What can I do?" asked Steve, desperately. "I haven't any money."

"Don't worry about money," said Dr. Fine. "There's a local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis right here. You take the baby home and I'll take care of everything else."

But taking the baby home was something else. He was shaking so he could not drive. A Perth Amboy policeman was called. He drove the couple home.

Meanwhile, Dr. Fine called Joseph F. Fitzgerald, chairman of the Middlesex County chapter and New Jersey representative of the National Foundation. Action began. Fitzgerald telephoned the police in Carteret. A special siren on a building there gave three sharp blasts to call the first aid squad of the community—volunteers from their jobs in factories or business places.

The baby was whisked away to Medical Center in Jersey City, the nearest hospital prepared to give the famed Kenny method of treatment. Within an hour and a half of the diagnosis, little Johnnie Langer was receiving that treatment.

Today in Medical Center in Jersey City you can see little Johnnie, lying flat on his back with warm moist packs of wool around his little arms and legs. A kindly woman is standing over him, giving him a lesson in the art of quirking a little finger—a matter of vast moment.

Patiently, hour after hour, day after day, this well-trained physiotherapist instructs little Johnnie in the literal process of lifting his little finger—part of the Kenny method of re-educating affected muscles to do their work again.

Little Johnnie's life was saved by the prompt action made possible by the 18,000 Americans who gave a dime each. That will keep him in the hospital for a year. The success of the Kenny method in relieving crippling results depends so largely on prompt treatment, Dr. Emilie Rundlett, the doctor in charge, explains.

And in Johnnie's case, swift action was needed to save his life because he had a respiratory involvement. But today Dr. Rundlett believes that one day—not soon, but eventually—Johnnie will walk out of that hospital.

Because 18,000 Americans helped him when his baby was first taken sick, Steve lost only four days from work instead of being quarantined tion for victory and wages for him.

That's why the other night Steve Langer took a small collection can around the neighborhood and urged his neighbors to join the March of Dimes in celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday January 30.

Most of the neighbors knew his story and it was not long before he had collected $71.30. For Steve has now enlisted on a two-front war—one abroad, the other at home!

Jersey Labor Discusses War Problems

Newark, N. J., Jan. 30—Two CIO officials will be among the featured speakers scheduled to address a conference on labor's wartime problems to be held here Sunday, Feb. 7, at 10 a.m., at the Continental auditorium.

Walter Reuther, vice-president of the United Automobile Workers, and Julius Emspak, secretary, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, will address the conference to which officers and leaders of trade unions in New Jersey have been invited. The meeting is being sponsored by the American Labor League of N. J.

Board Asks Fair Taxes, Rationing, Strict Price Lids

Stories & Texts on Inside Pages

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—CIO policy for action on wages, taxes, production, economic stabilization and legislation was discussed at the Executive Board meeting here this week.

The meeting, called by Pres. Murray to implement the CIO program as worked out at the convention and in the 1943 victory legislative program, centered on major problems created by the wage question and the problem of economic stabilization, plus new problems created by the reactionary, anti-victory drives in the Congress.

As a first major step toward checking this anti-victory alliance, Pres. Murray announced that a joint legislative committee of CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and the Natl. Farmers Union would start work on a united farmer-labor program within the next few days.

Keynote of the legislative drive was made in the board's statement that the "unholy alliance of poll tax Democrats with the most reactionary wings of the Republican party" must be blocked by joint action of CIO with all sections of the labor movement and with progressive organizations of farmers and other civic groups.

The wage question, coming to a head with the rapid increases in living costs and with the inadequacy of the Little Steel formula, was related to the whole problem of economic stabilization in the board's report, which called for "an over-all and centrally planned national policy covering the entire field of economic stabilization."

PREMIUM PAY STATEMENT

A similar approach was made on the question of premium pay under Exeecutive Order 9240, the board urging creation of a special CIO committee to work with Economic Director Byrnes and the Secretary of Labor on problems of interpreting the order.

The board also dealt with the tax bill in some detail, setting forth CIO policy for a 1943 tax program that would fit in with economic stabilization by protecting minimum health and living standards of the war workers and other low income groups.

On production, the board report hailed the "unconditional surrender" theme of the President's Casablanca conference, and called for "re-vitalization" of production drives, plus creation of a central civilian war production agency as urged in the Kilgore-Pepper bill.

Army Hails Union's Production Ideas

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6—From one CIO union's relentless and successful fight for greater production, the U. S. Army this week had derived experience data which may provide the solution to a critical manpower shortage in West Coast foundries.

The union is Local 1440, United Steelworkers of America at Pittsburg. Whose hard-driving production soldiers helped win the Army-Navy "E" pennant for outstanding production effort which flies over the Columbia Steel plant there.

To get the blueprint of the union's production leadership, particularly in meeting manpower problems in the foundry department, two Army representatives met with a group of key men in the local. The Army men were Capt. P. M. Kenefick of the Services of Supply, and Walter Burroughs of the division of industrial relations, Army ordnance.

STREAMLINING

They learned how the union was shortcutting the training of skilled men, streamlining production techniques and getting "extra mileage" out of the highest-skilled men in the department by a process of extending skills.

At the conclusion of the session, Burroughs told the unionists:

"We came here because you seemed to have solved the problem of labor supply in an industry where there is a notable shortage of labor.

"You have given us a great deal more information than we had hoped to get, and it is all of vital interest to us. It becomes our job now to see that some of this information is put to use in plants where production is not quite on such a high level."

TEAM METHODS

Outstanding innovation of the union is the "team method" of molding, in which the men with the greatest degree of skill are able to work continuously and exclusively at the highly-skilled operations, moving from job to job. The less-skilled and unskilled operations on these same pieces of work are handled by workers with less experience.

The shortage of highly-skilled journeymen molders which has become a production bottleneck in some foundries is thus overcome at the Pittsburg plant because the union has recognized the wartime need for temporarily setting aside the job standards so carefully guarded in peacetime.

CIO Wins Poll

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 6—A Labor Board election held among workers in the Maas Mine of the Cleveland Cliffs Co., Ishpeming, Mich., resulted in a vote of 377 to 53 for the CIO United Steel Workers, adding another victory to the list of elections won by the CIO in mines throughout Minnesota, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Worker's Family Fights Axis ---3 Ways

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 6 (FP)—The family of Benny Marx, member of Local 1874, CIO, Textile Workers Union, is a United Nations all by itself.

Marx has a son, a former Local 1874 member, fighting with U. S. Army troops in the Solomon Islands. A daughter works in Edgewood Arsenal, Md., passing the ammunition.

One nephew is serving with Gen. MacArthur in Australia after escaping from the Philippines. A niece is an army nurse and is soon to go overseas.

Two other nephews are serving with the Red Army of the Soviet Union against the Nazis. And two more nephews are with the English army, one as a doctor with the Royal Air Force and the second as a member of the intelligence corps.

Brotherhood Week Set By FDR

Washington, Feb. 6—Pres. Roosevelt has proclaimed Feb. 19-28 as Brotherhood Week and called for increased tolerance among people of all faiths.

"The perpetuation of democracy depends upon the practice of the brotherhood of man," FDR's proclamation said. "The American conviction in war and in peace has been that man finds his freedom only when he shares it with others. People of every nation, every race, every creed are able to live together as Americans on this basis."

WOMAN'S WORLD:

Tory Bills Stem from Secret Source

Same Measures Sprout In State Legislatures Throughout Nation

BY HENRY C. FLEISHER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—A flood of anti-labor bills are flooding state legislatures throughout the country, with strong evidence that many of the proposals for crippling bona fide unions stem from a secret, central source.

While many of the measures introduced all the way from Columbus, Ohio, to Salem, Oreg., have the same objectives, some of the bills use almost identical language.

SECRET OUTFIT

Their source is a new alliance of leading poll-tax southern Democrats and a quiet semi-fascist organization known as the Christian Americans.

According to an expose by Helen Fuller in the New Republic magazine, the Christian Americans, Sen. Lee O'Daniel of Texas and Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama have formed an unholy alliance to secure passage of nearly identical anti-labor bills.

The Christian Americans organization, which is reputed to be financed by southwestern oil companies, was active a year ago in Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

It is now expanding its field of operations as a result of conversations with Dixon, is spreading its activities. Head of the outfit, which preaches labor-baiting, religion-baiting and race-baiting, is Vance Muse. He is an old friend and spokesman for big-shot southern industrialists, who contributed heavily to an earlier "Southern Committee to Uphold the Constitution" back in 1935.

Christian Americans' anti-labor bills were defeated last year in Louisiana, though they passed in Texas and Mississippi. This year the smash-labor crew is out in greater force.

Both the Tennessee and Oklahoma legislatures, for instance, have under consideration bills "relating to violence over labor disputes" and prohibiting assembly of persons at or near labor disputes."

WARNS UNIONS

The effect of the Tennessee version of the bill was indicated by State CIO President Paul Christopher, who warned affiliated locals that "if this should become law, labor unions in Tennessee would just about have to go out of business and the working people of this state would be headed for slavery."

In Oklahoma City, CIO Regional Director James Dean reported that we have "organized great opposition against these anti-union measures and infringements against civil liberties."

Another Oklahoma bill would regulate the salaries paid to representatives of national or international unions, and would make it an offense punishable by a $500 fine for such an official to be paid more than 25 per cent of the dues or initiation fee paid by any local to the national union.

Since almost every union has in existence a number of very small or inactive locals, the bill would in effect make it a crime to pay a union organizer a living wage. At the same time, it would throw the books of every union open to inspection by hostile employers or petty government officials.

Other Oklahoma bills would give sledge-hammer treatment to the delicate post-war task of getting workers back into industry by virtually outlawing union shop contracts and throwing into discard agreements worked out in many factories for replacement of members of the armed forces in their old jobs.

GROWING UNITY

A study of the state legislative situation compiled by Federated Press, labor news service, revealed a growing unity among CIO, AFL and railroad brotherhood locals to fight the reactionary wave and launch a counter-offensive for win-the-war legislation. Such movements have occurred in California, Ohio, Illinois, Missouri and Indiana, and in scores of cities.

California—CIO and AFL join in asking a truce on controversial legislation for the "duration". Earl Warren, new GOP governor, has set out to wreck progress made under previous administration by removing New Deal officials from important state departments.

Colorado—Republicans introduce bills to incorporate unions, control union finances and limit picketing and boycotts.

Indiana—Although newly-elected GOP majorities promised no labor-baiting, bills have been introduced to suspend all laws governing hours in war industries. Coalition of CIO, AFL and independent unions formed to fight for win-war measures.

Minnesota—Resolution was introduced to ask U. S. Congress to repeal wage-hour law.

Missouri—Wide range of anti-union proposals introduced. Among them are bills to force all labor officials to be real estate owners, ban "intimidation of employers", use union funds in political campaigns and outlaw union shop contracts.

New York—Republican Governor Thomas Dewey has proposed a budget which would cut funds for administration of labor and social welfare laws.

Ohio—State Chamber of Commerce preparing legislation to force "cooling off" periods before strikes, compulsory mediation, ban on boycotts and strict limits on picketing.

Pennsylvania—Reactionaries seek to strip state of control over public welfare powers and return relief, old-age assistance, child care etc., to the haphazard control of county governments.

Texas—This state has one of the worst anti-union laws in the U. S., but legislators are planning to put more teeth in it by seeking legislation of unions state audit of union funds, registration of union officers. Sales tax being discussed.

COUNCILS ACTIVE

Several CIO bodies have taken steps to counteract the flood of hostile propaganda being poured on to the desks of the legislators.

Dealing less with specific issues than with broad principles, the leaflet quoted statements made by leading public officials, cited statistics on the small amount of time lost by strikes, and described the active part that American unions have played in helping the war.

In Michigan, State CIO Sec.-Treas. Ben Probe distributed a detailed state legislative program to all locals and to state legislators.

"The proposals contained herein, if adopted, would contribute to the welfare of all the people," a foreword signed by members of the Council Executive Board pointed out.

"The program . . . would go far toward lifting the morale of the workers in the state as well as furthering the war effort in this state of Michigan—the heart of industrial America and center of the Arsenal of Democracy."

Included in the platform are planks for improved social welfare, compensation and accident payments, for a democratic tax law, for improved education facilities and a re-assuring of the state legislature to make it more democratic and for adoption of state wage-hour and labor relations acts.

PEOPLE'S PROGRAM

In Maryland, State Pres. George Meyers and Sec.-Treas. Sidney Katz wrote to legislators that "we prefer to consider our program not merely a labor program but rather a people's victory for a state ready and willing to give its best to the war effort of our nation."

The program called for removal of restrictions that bar many war workers from voting, enactment of a state labor relations law, and creation of wartime emergency boards to handle questions of industrial accidents, nutrition, wage-hour exemptions.

Act to Forestall Ruml Tax Plan, Unions Are Warned

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—The Ruml plan for forgiving 1942 taxes is simply "a tax grab for the rich," Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, warned this week in a letter to all CIO affiliates.

"With so many new taxpayers this year, many of us have failed to save up the taxes we will be called upon to pay on and after March 15," Cowan warned. "Many people have been fooled into thinking that the phony Ruml plan will help meet this problem.

"There are ways to make it possible to pay our taxes out of each paycheck, but the Ruml plan is just a tax grab for the rich. It is important for unions to clear up certain false notions that have been fostered concerning the Ruml plan."

Many people are supporting the Ruml plan because they think it will let them off their 1942 tax payments, Cowan pointed out, but the plan merely changes the label on the tax bill "so that it would be called a tax on 1943 income instead of a tax on 1942 income."

The real backing, however, comes from the rich "because by cancelling taxes on 1942 incomes the plan excuses them from paying taxes on the high dividends they received out of the swollen war profits of 1942."

WARNS ON SALES TAX

Cowan also reminded CIO unions that an increase in the so-called Victory Tax and a sales tax were still very present dangers, saying:

"Our campaign must emphasize our opposition to any form of tax which cuts into low incomes so that workers cannot buy the amount of food and other necessities of life which are their fair share of the limited national supply. Such a tax interferes with war production because it endangers the health and efficiency of war workers."

The same gang in Congress that backs the Ruml plan for the relief of the rich and the sales tax for extra burdens on the poor is also out to knife the President's order putting a top of $25,000 on net salaries, Cowan said.

PROTESTS TO CONGRESS

He urged unions to send protests and demands for a win the war tax bill to members of the House Ways and Means Committee and to their own Congressmen at once.

The letter wound up by asking each union: "Has every local in your union formed a legislative committee?" and urging them to see that committees are kept up to date on tax and other Congressional developments.

Tenn. Union Speeds War Relief Gifts

Chattanooga, Tenn., Feb. 6—In a whirlwind labor-management campaign, workers at the Lucy Boiler Mfg. Co. went over the top 100 per cent in the Chattanooga War Fund campaign.

The men, members of Local 1614, United Steelworkers of America, were the first in the city to go 100 per cent on the quota of two days' pay for each worker.

After the drive was completed, a victory meeting brought together both workers and company officials. Speakers included President T. C. Ervin of the company and Mr. Train, company secretary-treasurer; Supt. Luke Freeman; B. T. Judd, CIO representative; O. S. Baxter, USA-CIO sub-regional director; President Rhea and Secretary-Treasurer Henderson of Local 1614, and Matthew Lynn of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers.

Steel Local Hails 'Surrender' Terms

Baltimore, Feb. 6—Whole-hearted support for the terms of "unconditional surrender" by the Axis nations, as outlined by Pres. Roosevelt and Premier Churchill at the historic Casablanca meeting, was voiced this week by the 10,000 members of United Steelworkers Local 2610 at the Bethlehem Sparrows Point plant.

At the same time, the local endorsed the CIO's 1943 legislative program as a blue print to help "give America an immediate and decisive victory." Suggested in the program were complete United Nations' unity, total mobilization of the country's resources, price control and rationing, democratic taxation, expanded social security, abolition of the Dies Committee and an end of the poll tax.

Toronto, Can., Feb. 6—Employes of the Electro-Metallurgical Co. of Welland, Ontario, voted 1411 to 127 for the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers in an election held recently by the Ontario Dept. of Labor.

Yale Law Journal Blasts Biddle Action on Bridges

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Feb. 6—The Yale University Law Journal, one of the country's most highly respected juridicial publications, asserts in its current issue that Harry Bridges, California CIO leader, has been given a raw deal.

In a study of the entire deportation case against the longshoremen's president, the Journal concludes that "to discuss the Bridges case is to write a brief in his behalf."

"Seldom has an individual in American life been subjected to so relentless a hunt," the magazine declares after reviewing the two long government hearings on the Bridges' enemies.

"Now that the case has reached the courts, the law provides plenty of doctrines by which justice can be vindicated and Bridges freed."

The law magazine was particularly sharp in its criticism of Atty.-Gen. Biddle's reversal of the pro-Bridges decision of the Immigration Appeals Board. It said:

"None can say that the treatment given Bridges was the best an administrative agency can offer. Taken as a whole, such treatment was unfair.

"To take a case without notice or hearing, to reverse the decision of the Board below, without affording argument on proposed findings, and then to refuse a petition for rehearing — this is harsh action . . . ample justification can be found for the invocation of denial of due process of law."

Tennessee CIO Helps End State's Poll Tax Set-Up

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 6—Reacting to strong pressure organized by the Tennessee CIO, the State's General Assembly this week sounded the death knell for the poll tax in the Volunteer State.

The Senate passed the abolition measure by a 22-10 vote a week after the House had passed a similar measure by a 73-19 margin.

Pres. Paul Christopher of the State CIO Council and other union leaders hailed the legislature's action, which had ranked high on labor's "must" list at the present session. Several counties previously had exerted local option to remove the voting tax within their jurisdiction.

The Tennessee Legislature's move left only seven states, all southern, where the constitutional right to vote is restricted by taxation. The others are Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Texas, Arkansas and Mississippi.

Increasing influence of the CIO throughout Tennessee was demonstrated by the fact that the anti-poll tax bill was sponsored by Gov. Prentice Cooper and the administration. Christopher, who acts as state CIO legislative representative, mobilized the campaign of labor's support from temporary headquarters in the State Capital and sent out frequent bulletins to unions on the progress of the bill.

Ask Action Against 'Unholy Alliance'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Joint action of the entire labor movement to push win-the-war action in Congress and to block "the unholy alliance of polltax Democrats with the most reactionary wings of the Republican party" was stressed in the legislative report of the Executive Board of the CIO meeting here this week.

"In this present session of Congress an unholy alliance of poll-tax Democrats with the most reactionary wings of the Republican party has served notice of its intention to ride roughshod over any considerations of national welfare, war policy, national unity and health for war workers," the report said.

CONSPIRACY

"They have served notice of their intention to sabotage rather than to support the Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. . . . This conspiracy will not go unchallenged.

"CIO unions have already formulated a program of legislative action to meet this threat. Every CIO national union, every local, if it has not already done so, must take active steps to carry out that program."

Joint action must take place "at all levels from top to bottom," the board report said.

"The CIO as a national organization must enter into consultation with the AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods and farm organizations, on legislative problems for purposes of coordinated action on the legislative front."

Demands Mount For New WLB Policy On Wage Boosts

WASHINGTON, Feb 6—Mounting resentment in the ranks of American labor against the failure of government agencies to hold down the cost of living was expected to provide a major subject of discussion at the CIO Executive Board meeting this weekend.

CIO Pres. Murray, in Detroit a fortnight ago, pointed to a 40 per cent increase in food costs and warned that "soaring prices of food and other essentials necessary to maintain health and efficiency are going beyond reach of the average working man and woman."

To Detroit newspapermen, the CIO leader explained that "the time has come when action must be taken by the government, designed to protect the lives of American working men and women through effective rationing of civilian goods and effective price control.

Earlier, on his nationwide broadcast Jan. 19, Pres. Murray called public attention to the fact that the War Labor Board's 15 per cent Little Steel formula works unjustly against low paid workers. A worker earning $1 an hour who receives a 15 per cent increase gets 15c more each hour, but a less fortunate employe, getting only 50c an hour, benefits by only 7½c under the formula.

UAW'S ATTITUDE

Murray's criticism of the present economic situation, where wage increases are based only on earlier increased living costs—without regard for higher living expenses since Jan. 1, 1942—was seconded by Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

The auto union leader, who is also a CIO vice-president, called for adoption of a "realistic formula recognizing an advance of at least 30 per cent in the cost of living since January, 1941, so that workers through their unions can commence to bargain now for comparable increases in wages."

Operations of black markets on food, which have been made possible by faulty OPA administration handling of the whole rationing and price program, were also blasted by Pres. Thomas.

"The real increase in the cost of living in Detroit, Chicago, Los Angeles and other manufacturing cities, is far beyond the government index of living costs," he added. "Black market operations and prices do not get into the index."

In New York, the general executive board of the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers charged that the Little Steel 15% formula no longer serves its purpose of keeping real wages at the Jan. 1, 1941 level.

Government Employes Seek Pay Hikes

New York, Feb. 6—The continued low wages of government workers "are a disgrace in our democratic country," the State, County & Municipal Workers executive board asserted this week.

A resolution passed by the union officials called on government officials "to establish state and local-wide minimum wages sufficient to maintain health and decency standards" and to adjust wages in order to "compensate fully" for rising living costs.

"Thousands of trained government workers are driven from essential public services by low wages, poor working conditions and the lack of machinery to resolve their grievances," the SCMWA board asserted.

The union quoted statistics to show that the average pay of all state, county and municipal employes was only $110 a month in July, 1942. This represented an increase of merely 2.8% in 18 months, at a time when living costs were

CIO Board Discusses 'Win-War' Issues

Tax on Ability To Pay, Board Asks Congress

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—The 1943 tax bill must be part of the whole picture of economic stabilization for victory, and must help in the proper distribution of food and other needs to war workers and low income groups generally, the CIO Executive Board said this week in releasing CIO's win-the-war tax program.

"The 16 billion dollars asked by the President must be raised by taxation which for the duration must cut sharply into those income brackets in which cuts can be made without endangering 'the health and productivity of the civilian population'," the Board report said.

"The problem is not one of distribution of sacrifices or of punishment or of soaking any portion of the population. In the grim reality of this war, while men and women in battle areas are losing their homes, their loved ones and their lives, this nation must for the duration cut very sharply into the areas of luxury and abundance.

"This nation cannot afford in the interest of health and productivity to cut lower into the areas of want and starvation."

To achieve this, the board's program called for tax exemption of $1,500 for married couples, $800 for single persons and $400 for dependents, as a means of guaranteeing that workers will be left with at least the average of $500 worth of goods and services the President has said would be available for every man, woman and child in the country.

Income taxes should be increased in the upper brackets, starting at $3,000 and increasing sharply above $5,000 a year. They should hold net income after all taxes down to $25,000 a year, as sought by the President.

All special privileges, such as tax exempt bonds, separate returns for wealthy couples, depletion allowances for oil and mining corporations, etc., should be wiped out.

Taxes on corporate profits should be raised to 55 per cent as urged by the 1942 Treasury program. This rate was cut down to 40 per cent in the 1942 Congress, despite terrific profit figures for big corporations.

A 100 per cent excess profits tax should also be levied on profits above 5 per cent of the first 10 million dollars of capital, 4 per cent above that. The 10 per cent post-war kickback to corporations should be killed, the program stated.

Pay Adjustment Held Big Need

Washington, Feb. 6. — The national wage policy "must be an integral part of the entire economic stabilization program," the CIO said this week in a report made public at the Executive Board meeting here.

"This requires an over-all and centrally planned national policy covering the entire field of economic stabilization, the Board said.

"The CIO is interested solely in the development of a policy which will assure all people, and particularly the workers, that they will have sufficient money to purchase enough food and to meet their other basic needs to maintain their health and efficiency levels for maximum production."

Wage stabilization, the Board pointed out, was accepted by the CIO as an essential plank in the seven-point economic program of President Roosevelt. Despite this acceptance, there has been "a dismal failure on the part of Congress and government officials to effectuate the remaining portions of the economic stabilization policy."

To correct this, and to fit the wage question in with the whole win-the-war drive, the Board proposed a program based on these main points:

1. Immediate and universal price control and rationing to guarantee enough food and other necessities to all the people, plus a win-the-war tax bill that would ensure workers enough income to take up their ration tickets and maintain health and efficiency.

2. Wage stabilization, not wage freezing, to strengthen "the morale and health of the workers to guarantee maximum production."

This requires "allowance for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living"; elimination of inequalities and a dropping

Murray To Talk At Toledano Banquet

New York, Feb. 6—Pres. Vicente Lombardo Toledano of the Confederation of Latin American Workers will be honored at a dinner here Feb. 10 to be sponsored by all CIO unions of New York.

Toledano, CIO Pres. Philip Murray and Sec.-Treas. Jacob Potofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers will speak.

Ready To Meet Casablanca Challenge

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—The challenge of Casablanca, where "the sights were fixed for an invasion of Europe which will lead to the utter destruction of the Axis" will be met by new production records through total war mobilization, the CIO Executive Board declared at its meeting here this week.

"The challenge is now before the workers in the war production plants," the Board said. "We must provide the sinews of war to our armies of liberation. Words and mere promises are not sufficient. Our answer must be measured in terms of actual production."

To bring the Axis to unconditional surrender as quickly as possible, national mobilization of all resources must be speeded through passage of the Kilgore-Pepper bill setting up a central civilian Office of War Mobilization or through executive action the Board said.

OUTPUT COMMITTEES

Effective labor-management production committees are an absolute must in every war plant, and those now in existence "must be revitalized and their efforts intensified for increasing and smashing all production records."

Conferences should be called on CIO initiative "to marshall the resources and energies of all for ever-increasing production," it added. Labor must have full participation in all the work of the War Production Board at every level.

Bulletin:

Labor Unites On Legislation

Agreement on joint legislative activity of CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and the Natl. Farmers Union was announced by Pres. Murray at the end of the first day of the Executive Board meeting here.

"This is the first time in the history of the labor movement that such a coalition has been formed," Murray said, pointing out that it would bring the win-the-war program of 13 million organized people to Congress.

Preliminary discussions have already been held and the first meeting of the nationwide labor-farmer coalition will take place at an early date, Murray said. Joint program for action will be worked out at this meeting.

CIO Wage Policy

Wages are at present being cut, instead of stabilized, due to constantly rising living costs.

Labor patriotically accepted the principle of wage stabilization as part of President Roosevelt's seven-point anti-inflation program.

But while wages were stabilized, Congress and government officials failed to put into effect the rest of the economic stabilization program.

As a result, dangerous inflationary trends have developed, and labor has been the first to suffer.

But even more serious than the immediate effects of this inflation on labor's living standards and productive efficiency, are the dangers which it threatens for our whole war effort.

The CIO does not approach the present situation from any narrow viewpoint of pushing its own group interests, regardless of results to other groups and to our victory drive.

It does not wish to be party to any mad race between wages, prices, profits that can only end in disastrous inflation.

Its chief aim is to remedy the present failure of inflation controls and to achieve the sound economic stabilization which was the purpose of the seven-point program.

The wage policy just announced by the CIO Executive Board treats wage stabilization as an integral part of the whole economic stabilization program.

This program has failed to date chiefly because of the failure to effectuate the most basic of the President's seven points—namely price control, rationing and progressive taxation.

The CIO therefore, calls for a sharp halt to rising living costs through immediate application of an over-all system of rationing of all foods and other necessities, and through an effective enforcement of price ceilings.

The 1942 tax legislation, by soaking the poor to spare the rich, violated the whole purpose of the seven-point program and leaves low-income groups with insufficient income to buy living necessities and to maintain high productive efficiency.

The CIO therefore calls for tax legislation this year to take most from those who can best afford to pay, and to leave low income groups with enough funds to buy their share of available goods and meet their basic obligations.

Finally, the CIO wage policy calls for equitable wage stabilization directed toward strengthening the morale and health of the workers to guarantee maximum production.

This means that allowance must be made for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living since May, 1942.

That was the date to which wages were supposed to be stabilized under the so-called Little Steel formula. But since then living costs have risen sharply, resulting in actual cuts in real wages most damaging to the workers' morale and productive efficiency.

The CIO wage policy also stresses the importance of equal pay for like work for men and women, and the need for improved wage policies to encourage increased war production, with a minimum guaranteed work week of 40 hours.

It points out that the wage adjustments necessary for fair wage stabilization can easily be met out of the enormous increase in profits, after taxes, with subsidies if necessary for small businesses that cannot meet the necessary adjustments.

Outstanding substandard wages, wage inequalities and inequities must be eliminated, the CIO points out, noting that the Little Steel formula works hardships upon the lower income groups by its policy of fixed percentage wage adjustment.

All in all, the CIO wage policy is a sincerely patriotic contribution to the economic stabilization and increased production we must have for victory.

The Hobbs Bill

Opening wedge for the threatened anti-labor drive in the present Congress is the so-called "anti-racketeering" bill of Congressman Hobbs.

It has evidently been picked for first consideration as one of the more camouflaged anti-union bills and because all true labor unionists hate racketeering like poison.

But the fact of the matter is that federal and state anti-racketeering laws are already on the books, and all the Hobbs bill does is to eliminate present language protecting legitimate labor activities and to insert language that may be used by anti-labor courts to destroy union organization.

This union-busting bill has been rushed through the House Judiciary Committee without any hearings. Urge your Congressman to insist on hearings and to see that the bill is defeated.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

CAPTAIN EDDIE RICKENBACKER is a hero of two world wars. His exploits have won for him undying fame. But his recent speeches have raised a host of disturbing questions.

Fresh from his ordeal on the Pacific, Rickenbacker toured a number of war plants. He was cheered to the echo by the workers when he demanded they give their utmost in production to back up our fighting men.

Labor has also applauded Rickenbacker's attacks on absenteeism, which the unions are doing their best to fight.

He has given credit to one CIO union at least by expressing his satisfaction at having "seen members of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union performing in an all-out fashion."

But Rickenbacker's latest speeches have been largely anti-labor tirades, little distinguishable from the union-busting propaganda of the National Association of Manufacturers.

On production and absenteeism he has lambasted the workers without saying a word against employer practices responsible for most hold-ups in production, or exposing the chief causes of absenteeism over which the workers have no control.

Even such unfairness might not be too hard to take from a man who, in civilian life, has been a manufacturer and big business executive.

But Rickenbacker has gone further. Claiming to speak for the men in the armed forces, he has demanded anti-union legislation so they may return to work under open-shop conditions.

He has spoken as if there were a conflict of interest between servicemen and labor unionists.

He has attacked New Deal social legislation, claiming the government "has spent billions of dollars to destroy self-reliance, initiative, imagination and individuality."

He has asserted that our fighting men will return as "rugged individualists," opposed to any "planned economy."

Finally, because of such speeches, Rickenbacker has been hailed as leader, presumably without his permission, by near-Fascists like Gerald L .K. Smith.

Claiming Rickenbacker as "one of the original organizers of the America First Committee," Smith at once organized an America First Party rally in Detroit for the announced purpose of booming Rickenbacker for president.

Rickenbacker is a war hero certainly. But how far do his recent anti-labor outbursts represent the viewpoint of other war heroes, or of the rank-and-file of our fighting men?

Untold thousands of this war's heroes are union men. In fact, three of the men who shared Rickenbacker's long ordeal on that raft in the Pacific were labor unionists.

Labor's heroes include many who have won high honors, and many more who are just good soldiers bravely enduring all the hell of modern warfare.

They include the union workers of the merchant marine, whose casualty lists have so far been nearly four times greater proportionately than those of the armed forces.

Have these union heroes delegated to anyone the right to make union-busting propaganda on their behalf, or to say they want the open-shop "rugged individualism" of Hoover's days?

And does not that phrase stir bitter memories of the bonus marches of ragged and hungry ex-servicemen under "rugged individualism"—before the New Deal spent those "billions of dollars" of which Rickenbacker complains, to give our forgotten men a better chance in life?

Labor is the first to demand real job opportunities for ex-servicemen. It is the unions that have been fighting for their seniority rights, often against strong employer opposition.

Labor also fights for expanded social security, to give full protection to our soldiers upon their return—so they may not be reduced to the ragged individualism of selling apples on street corners in an unplanned economy.

Do the men at the front want union-busting legislation and open-shop conditions? Or do they not rather want to return to decent union conditions, and look to the unions to save them from coming back to a hell of open-shoppery, low wages and exploitation?

Let us hope that Rickenbacker will speedily repudiate the American Fascists and union-busting bosses who tarnish his glowing fame by their applause. Let us hope he will avoid the pitfalls into which that other air hero, Lindbergh, fell. And let us hope he will give more thought to the real interests of our fighting men, so closely bound with those of labor and all the common people, before he makes another speech.

CIO Committee To Meet Labor Dept. To Straighten Out Premium Pay Mess

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—A special CIO committee to meet with Economic Director James Byrnes and Labor Secretary Frances Perkins and straighten out the premium pay situation was urged in a report on Executive Order 9240 made to the CIO Executive Board meeting here this week.

Main job of this committee would be to repair the damage to workers' standards and morale done by recent interpretations of the order issued by the Secretary, whose latest directive was vigorously protested by President Murray last week.

After describing the Secretary's refusal "to enforce the order wherever it was of any benefit to the workers" and her latest interpretation as a license to employers "to work men on any schedule they see fit without the payment of premium pay for the seventh consecutive day worked as long as there is one day of rest in the fixed work week," the Board statement outlined a four point program as follows:

1. Since the order was intended to eliminate absenteeism and not "to impose a wage cut" all agreements providing for premium pay should continue "where their application would not in any way encourage or permit absenteeism." Also, where premium pay "was actually part of the wage structure, provision should be made for a necessary wage adjustment to avoid a wage cut."

2. In line with President Roosevelt's announced policy of one day's rest in seven or double pay for the seventh day, double time should be paid "regardless of whether the seven days are within one or more work weeks."

3. Union contracts that "in no way violate the essence" of the order by encouraging absenteeism should not be set aside.

4. An effective enforcement system should be set up, including acceptance of cases under the order by the War Labor Board.

ORIGINAL INTENT

The original intent of the order was to discourage absenteeism through failure of workers to report on a certain day "in order to come out on Saturday and Sunday at which time they would receive premium pay," the Board report said.

This intent has been distorted by employers who took advantage of the order to set aside agreements, by the refusal of the WLB to handle cases under the order, and by the twisted interpretations of the Secretary of Labor, the report declared.

It also revealed a proposed bulletin of Secretary Perkins that "abrogates previous interpretations which had protected employes." Included in this is a proposal to cut out a holiday as one of the seven consecutive days if it is not worked.

Ten Senators Back 'Over-All' Planning Bill

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Powerful backing for the Pepper-Kilgore bill to create a central agency for overall war planning and production came this week with the announcement that 10 Senators are endorsing the bill, which already has the backing of CIO and other win-the-war forces.

TORIES ACT FAST

An immediate reflection of this was seen in a hasty move in the Senate to sidetrack the bill to the Military Affairs Committee, where opponents of national planning will try to bury it. This fight was won by anti-victory forces who defeated a proposal to commit the bill to the Senate Labor Committee, where progressive forces are better represented.

Senators Pepper and Kilgore, sponsors of the bill, used the "unconditional surrender" theme of the Casablanca conference of President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill to illustrate the need for over-all planning, declaring:

"The Casablanca committment calling for unconditional surrender of the Axis requires immediate and decisive action by the Congress to smash once and for all the bottlenecks choking the output of the arms and food demanded by an all-out assault on Germany and Japan."

STEPS TO VICTORY

Passage of the bill will mean four long steps toward victory, Pepper and Kilgore said. These include fitting government officials, farmers and workers into the total war picture; breaking "the bottlenecks now throttling war production at dozens of points"; a reduction in red tape and paper work now choking the war drive and a cut in surplus personnel "now engaged in operating the complex programs of government agencies involved in getting out production."

"We are pledged to destroy the enemy," the two Senators said. "We will be a long time doing it unless we wipe away these conflicts and settle down under a single economic command that knows where it is going and is determined to get there by the quickest and shortest route.

"The quicker this bill becomes law, the quicker will this war end with our Commander-in-Chief's great challenge — unconditional surrender of the Axis."

15 Workers Get $30,000 In NLRB Order

Gadsden, Ala., Feb. 6—Labor Relations Board Order has led to payment of more than $30,000 in back wages to 15 members of the United Rubber Workers Union of America who were discharged for union activity by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company here.

Payments to the workers are being made after many months of court proceedings which followed charges brought against the company by the United Rubber Workers Union.

The Union carried the cases of the discharged workers before the National Labor Relations Board in August, 1937. In March, 1939, the Board ordered reinstatement of the union members at the Goodyear plant, with payment for the time lost from their jobs.

The Company bitterly fought the Board order, and it was not until the Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the decision of the Labor Board in June, 1942, that the Company agreed to carry out the order.

Two of the largest payments in back wages, approximately $8,000 each, went to two men in military servive.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Things are moving with extreme speed in Congress this week, particularly where bills and resolutions that threaten to sabotage the war are concerned. Every action called for on these measures must be taken at once. For convenience, the most pressing matters are carried in bold face type. They call for wires and letters at once, as soon as you read this.

For example, the Dies Committee renewal was rushed through the Rules Committee without hearings this week. As the CIO NEWS goes to press, there is grave danger that it will be rushed through to the House floor without a chance for proper debate and opposition to get mobilized.

The same situation is true on the anti-labor Hobbs bill that will sabotage war production by hamstringing unions. Debate has begun on the Pepper-Kilgore bill (S 607) in the Senate to centralize war production. Immediate action is needed there as well.

CIO's 1943 Tax Program:

Ask Taxes Based on 'Ability to Pay'

(Following is the taxation report released by the CIO Executive Board at its Feb. 5 meeting.)

The President's budget message delivered to Congress on Monday, January 11th, sounded the call to the people of the United States for the formulation of a tax program which will represent, in the words of the President, "the maximum program for waging war."

"Total war," said the President, "is grim reality. It means the dedication of our lives and resources to a single objective: Victory." The CIO dedicates its fullest efforts and energies and its resources to the achievement of that single objective. The President's budget message has given us the basic principles upon which a tax program must be constructed.

First and foremost: The funds necessary to finance the war to supply the necessary arms and munitions to our fighting forces and those of our Allies must be assured. The President has called for new revenue of 16 billion dollars. The nation must get it.

"GRIM REALITY OF WAR

The President has called attention to the fact that the demands of the fighting forces throughout the world are such that the available supply of goods and services for our civilian populaion is strictly limited. The American nation must face the solemn fact, in the "grim reality of war," that we will not have in the months to come, the unlimited supply of food, clothing and other necessities of life which would make it possible for every one, no matter how rich, to buy as much as he or she wants. It is our national duty to take every measure necessary to see to it that the limited quantity of food and clothing that we do have is distributed and used in a manner which will contribute most toward victory in the war.

The nation's problem in framing our national economic policy, therefore, is not how much money people should have or how much should be taken away from them by taxes, but rather, fundamentally, how much of the carefully treasured national supply of food and clothing and other goods should be available to each.

FDR GAVE ANSWER

The President's budget message gives the answer: "In spite of a 100 billion dollar war program civilians can be supplied with an average of about $500 worth of goods and services during the next year." The President has noted further that "the health and productivity of the civilian population" must be maintained.

The national tax program must not be permitted to defeat the fundamental aim of price control and rationing. There can be no justification for a tax program which deprives any civilian of the minimum amount necessary to enable him to buy his allotment of the limited amount of food, clothing and other necessities in which we must all share in this critical period. If we are to maintain the "health and productivity of the civilian population" there can be no attempt to cut into the income of the $30 a week married couple whose income is barely enough to enable them to purchase their equitable share of our civilian production.

The 16 billion dollars asked by the President must be raised by taxation which for the duration must cut sharply into those income brackets into which cuts can be made without endangering "the health and productivity of the civilian population." The problem is not one of distribution of sacrifices or of punishment or of "soaking" any portion of the population.

In the grim reality of this war while men and women in battle areas are losing their homes, their loved ones and their own lives, this nation must for the duration cut sharply into the areas of luxury and abundance. This nation cannot afford in the interest of health and productivity to cut lower into the areas of want and starvation.

The CIO herefore proposes the following as a tax program calculated to raise the funds necessary to win this war and to raise them in the manner which will contribute most toward the winning of the war.

I. Exemptions

The tax laws should be amended to exempt from taxation all single persons earning $800 or less, all married couples earning $1500 or less with an additional allowance of $400 for each dependent. This minimum amount will guarantee to the low income groups that under an effective rationing and price control system, they will be able to obtain their share of the available basic goods necessary for life and productive efficiency.

On the basis of the President's estimate that there will be an average of about $500 worth of goods and services for the entire population during the next year, it should be obvious that for industrial workers living in industrial centers they will need at least the tax-exempt amounts recommended by the CIO to buy their minimum share of available basic goods and meet their minimum obligations such as rent, medical needs and insurance, and for other essential services.

II. Income Taxes

A. Increased rates.

To the extent that the funds requested by the President are not raised by other portions of this tax program, rates in all upper brackets starting at $3000 and increasing rapidly and progressively after $5000 must be moved sharply upward. The increased taxes should be such so that the maximum net income, after taxes, should not be permitted to exceed $25,000.

B. Abolish special privileges.

1) State and local securities. The interest from state and local bonds should be taxed.

2) Joint returns. Require joint tax returns by husband and wife so that wealthy families may not divide their incomes in such a way that a husband and wife each pay only the rates applicable to lower income brackets.

3) Depletion deductions. The oil and mining industry should no longer be given the special disgraceful privilege of making an unwarranted deduction for so-called "depletion."

III. Corporate Taxes

A. General Taxes on Corporate Profits. Taxes on corporate profits should be increased to 55 per cent. This is the figure which the Treasury proposed last year but which Congress cut down to the present level of 40 per cent.

All available figures show an all-time high in the profits of war industries, after taxes, for 1942 as against all preceding years. Even these profits do not reveal the acutal profits due to the establishment of increasingly large "contingency reserves," provision for rapid write-off of costs of expansion of war plant facilities and the payment of excess salaries and bonuses to company officials. All of these dodges practiced by corporations should be vigorously investigated and rejected by the tax authorities.

For a limited number of cases appropriate relief can be afforded those companies who have legitimate debt obligations outstanding.

B. Taxes on Excess Corporate Profits.

1) For the duration, no corporation should expect to earn more than five per cent on its first 10 million dollars of invested capital and four per cent on all amounts above that. We therefore propose a 10 per cent excess profits tax on profits above these levels. Appropriate allowances can be made for those small business concerns with less invested capital.

2) There are many very large corporations which have over the years always had substantial earnings but, because of the tremendous invested capital, figures of these corporations' earnings have never in peace times reached the four percent or five per cent level. The tremendously increased earnings of such corporations during the war—clearly war profits—should be taxed more heavily than normal profits.

3) Under the present law 10 per cent of the taxes placed on the excess profits of corporations are to be returned to the corporations after the war. This constitutes an unwarranted discrimination in favor of those corporations which are showing swollen war profits. We propose, in lieu of this discriminatory provision, that post-war tax refunds to corporations be limited to and determined by the real need for rehabilitation after the war.

IV. Estate & Gift Taxes

We propose that taxes on estates and on gifts be merged into a single system of graduated rates drastically increased over present levels and lowered exemptions. The present provision allowing gifts completely free of taxation up to $3000 in any year for each person receiving such a gift, should be replaced by a provision limiting the tax-free amounts to a small fixed total for any one person making the gifts.

V. Victory Tax

The victory tax which imposes a flat five per cent burden on all wages down to the worker earning only $12 a week with no regard to living costs, family obligations, and dependents should be repealed.

VI. Social Security Tax

An expanded social security program is not merely a necessity for post-war reconstruction. It is a war necessity today which may strengthen and toughen the morale of our armed forces and of our civilian population by an immediate assurance of the nation's present dedication to the freedoms for which the war is being fought. To the extent that additional funds are needed for such a program adequate provision should be made immediately for an equitable social security tax adjustment.

VII. "Pay As You Go"

We support and urge a system of tax collection which will spread the liability throughout the year by deducting taxes from income as it is earned. We oppose the program of the Ruml plan which has nothing to do with true pay-as-you-go principles, but merely provides for a change of labels as to which year's tax is being paid and at the same time affords a special favor to those in the high income brackets who would benefit from a cancellation of an entire year's taxes, particularly in a year in which their incomes happened to be excessively high.

VIII. Sales Tax

The sales tax or any other similar form of taxation must be firmly opposed. Such taxes cut into the food and clothing budgets of war workers and impair the health and working efficiency of workers by preventing them from acquiring their minimum share of the limited supply of available goods.

CIO Policy on Premium Pay Rules

(Following is the CIO Board statement on premium pay.)

Executive Order 9240 originally was supposed to cover the simple question of how to avoid absenteeism in war plants and thereby assure maximum production. In other words, employes were to be discouraged from failing to report on a certain day in order to come out on Saturday and Sunday at which time they would receive premium pay. Instead of meeting this one issue the Secretary of Labor drafted, and the President issued, Executive order 9240 which entered the entire field of collective bargaining contracts and work schedules in a manner so as to practically disrupt American industry.

Through conferences between representatives of the CIO and the Department of Labor an interpretation was obtained from the Secretary of Labor which eased the problem somewhat by covering the following issues:

1. Double time for the seventh consecutive day worked was held to mean any seven consecutive days regardless whether they fall within one or more work weeks.

2 In computing seven consecutive days any one of the enumerated holidays would constitute a day worked regardless whether work was performed or not.

3 By collective bargaining agreement it could be provided that the sixth and seventh days of the work week (regardless whether it was Saturday or Sunday or not) would be premium days, i.e., time and one-half for the sixth day and double time for the seventh day. Further, by agreement it could be provided that the first five days of the regularly scheduled work week would constitute days of work regardless whether they were worked or not as long as the employe did not fail to report due to his own absenteeism.

In other words, this type of contract provision was not to be construed as an evasion of Executive Order 9240 which simply prohibited premium pay for Saturdays and Sundays as such.

Workers Took Cuts

Employers immediately took advantage of Executive Order 9240. Provisions of collective bargaining agreements which in no way encouraged absenteeism were abrogated and ignored. Employes thereby took wage cuts. Enforcement of Executive Order 9240 broke down. The Secretary of Labor refused to enforce the Order wherever it was of any benefit to the workers but referred the issue to the procurement agencies of the government. This never proved to be effective.

The War Labor Board practically refused to take cases involving Executive Order 9240. Where employers had abrogated agreements and unions attempted to get provisions which would have offset the loss in weekly earnings due to the effect of Executive Order 9240, it was impossible to get those cases before the Board.

In addition, as a direct act of discrimination against the CIO, the Secretary of Labor completely exempted the Building Trades and the Trucking industry of the AFL from the Executive Order. At the same time, the Secretary refused to entertain any requests from CIO unions, though joined by the employers, for similiar exemption and though the CIO unions were prepared to show that the outstanding agreements would in no way interfere with maximum war production.

'Without Warning'

Finally the Secretary of Labor, without any warning to or prior consultation with the representatives of organized labor, issued a new interpretation in which she revoked her previous one.

Under the new interpretation double time will be paid for the seventh day worked only where the seven days are within the regularly scheduled work week. The work week must commence with the same day each week. As long as there is one day of rest within that work week no double time will have to be paid.

The actual work week for the individual employe will of course vary from this artificial work week established by the Secretary of Labor. But the company will be permitted to work the men on any schedule they see fit without the payment of premium pay for the seventh consecutive day worked as long as there is one day of rest for the fixed work week.

In addition, the Secretary of Labor has submitted to the CIO a proposed bulletin interpreting Executive Order 9240 which in many respects abrogates previous interpretations which had protected the employes. For instance, under this new proposed bulletin a holiday will not be computed as one of the seven consecutive days if it is not worked.

Policy of the CIO

It is suggested that a committee be designated by the CIO to meet with the Secretary of Labor or Economic Director Byrnes and submit the following program:

1. Executive Order 9240 was not intended and should not be interpreted so as to impose a wage cut upon any group of employes through loss in weekly earnings. The Executive Order was intended to eliminate absenteeism. Therefore, collective bargaining provisions which provide for premium pay for the sixth and seventh day of the work week should be continued where their application would not in any way encourage or permit absenteeism. Further, where premium pay had been provided for by contract for Saturdays and Sundays or additional holidays as such, and where such premium pay was actually part of the wage rate structure, provisions should be made for a necessary wage adjustment to avoid a wage cut.

2 Double time should be required for any work performed on the seventh consecutive day regardless of whether the seven days are within one or more work weeks. It was the announced policy of President Roosevelt that no man should work seven days without one day of rest unless he receives double time on the seventh day.

3 Contract provisions which in no way violate the essence of Executive Order 9240, namely do not in any way encourage absenteeism, should not be set aside or abrogated by any interpretation of Executive Order 9240.

4 An effective enforcement system should be established for Executive Order 9240. It is absurd to be referred to the procurement agencies to obtain enforcement, Where employers simply refuse to comply with the outstanding interpretations of Executive Order 9240, the War Labor Board should accept and determine the issues with dispatch.

CIO Board Asks:

Higher Wages to Meet Rising Costs

(Following is the report made public by the CIO Executive Board Wage Policy and Economic Stabilization at its meeting Feb. 5)

The wage policy of the nation must be an integral part of the entire economic stabilization program. The national program was projected by President Roosevelt as part of our offensive on the domestic front against inflation. The CIO immediately extended its complete support for this objective.

Wage stabilization, as one point of a 7-point plan, was accepted wholeheartedly by organized labor but at the same time there has been a dismal failure on the part of Congress and Government officials to effectuate the remaining portion of the economic stabilization policy. Thus:

Plans Broke Down

1. President Roosevelt called for a 1942 tax program which would meet in part the financial burde of the nation through increased taxes on those who can best afford to pay. Instead, the 1942 tax legislation became a device to "soak the poor and spare the rich." This will result in actually preventing low income groups, because of their increased tax burden, from having sufficient funds to buy the necessities of life and to maintain a high productive efficiency level.

2. Because of the absence of overall rationing and effective price control, the ravages of the black market are beginning to spread. The workers in war production centers are finding it either impossible to buy the goods they need or can buy them only at prohibitive profiteering prices. Statements from Government officials such as "Butter is too scarce to be rationed" smack of Alice in Wonderland.

While the National War Labor Board has sought to stabilize wages, there has been a breakdown in the control of the prices of these essential items that go into the cost of living.

Price-Control Breakdown

The approach to this problem cannot be the destruction of the National War Labor Board or the undermining of a sound economic stabilization program. No solution can be based on the appeasement of any one group which urges merely its selfish narrow interests at the expense of the war effort.

The program of the CIO is one designed to meet the need for mobilizing the total effort of all our people toward Victory on a basis which shall be fair to all—with special privileges to none. We must therefore continue our unabated offensive against inflation and for the stabilization of our entire economy.

This requires an overall and centrally planned national policy covering the entire field of economic stabilization. The CIO is interested solely in the development of a policy which will assure all people, and particularly the workers, that they will have sufficient money to purchase enough food and to meet their other basic needs to maintain their health and efficiency levels for maximum production. All Americans, regardless of their walk of life, must be prepared to contribute whatever may be necessary toward the complete and total mobilization of our nation for the single purpose of winning the war.

Two Main Steps

1. Price Control, Rationing and Taxes. Economic Stabilization Director James Byrnes was granted the responsibility and authority to formulate all necessary plans for the stabilization of our domestic economy. This included the questions of price control, rationing and taxation. This responsibility must be met. The American people will not tolerate any continued hesitation and delays on the part of the various Government agencies charged with these tasks.

The CIO calls upon Economic Director Byrnes to direct the immediate application of an over-all democratic system of rationing of all foods and other necessities. Black markets must be eliminated through an effective enforcement of price ceilings. In many cases present prices must be reduced by the OPA by compelling profiteers to absorb increased costs and decrease the prices on certain goods and other necessities with adequate protection for the interests of small businessmen.

Protect Health

At the same time, tax legislation for this year must be predicated upon the basic principle that low income groups must be left with sufficient funds to buy their share of available goods and meet their basic obligations. Whatever revenue the Government needs must be obtained from other income groups and through increased corporate taxes, and the elimination of special privileges.

2. Wage stabilization, as part of a national economic wage stabilization policy, should continue. Stabilization of wages does not and cannot mean a freezing of wages. An equitable wage stabilization policy must be directed toward strengthening the morale and health of the workers to guarantee maximum production. To accomplish this, the following must be done:

A. Allowance must be made for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living which has resulted since May, 1942. Failure to do so will mean that the wages of the workers instead of being stabilized would be cut into with resulting privation and inability on the part of wage earners to maintain a productive efficiency which we need for the war effort.

End Inequalities

B. The policy of eliminating outstanding substandard wages, wage inequalities and inequities must be effectively enforced. This is particularly necessary in the face of our objective to stabilize and to achieve a maximum utilization of available manpower. The application of the Little Steel formula which calls for the same fixed percentage wage adjustment for all wage earners works unfairly and with resulting hardships upon the lower income groups. For these employes this inequity must be eliminated.

C. The policy of the War Labor Board for equal pay for like work to men and women should be enforced. Employers should not be permitted to evade this policy through subterfuge.

D. Encouragement should be given to plans for improved wage policies and job classifications which result in increased weekly earnings for increased production, with a minimum guaranteed work week of 40 hours.

The wage adjustments to be made under this equitable wage stabilization policy can be met by industry due to the enormous increase in profits, after taxes, resulting from the rapidly expanding volume of production, and where small businesses, due to factors beyond their control, cannot accomplish these adjustments that these enterprises be directly subsized by the government.

Cite Need For Higher Wage Rates

of the Little Steel formula as unfair to lower paid workers; equal pay for women for equal work; encouragement of incentive pay systems and upward job classifications of jobs.

"The wage adjustments to be made under this equitable wage stabilization policy can be met by industry due to the enormous increase in profits, after taxes, resulting from the rapidly expanding volume of production," the report said.

FAILURE ON 7 POINTS

Principal failures in enforcing the President's seven point program came in the refusal of Congress to pass a win-the-war tax bill in 1942, choosing instead to dump the burden of war revenue on the workers and other low income groups, and the flat failure to ration or control prices, the Board added.

"No solution can be based on the appeasement of any one group which merely urges its selfish narrow interests at the expense of the war effort," the Board said.

"The program of the CIO is one designed to meet the need for mobilizing the total effort of all our people toward victory on a basis which shall be fair to all—with special privileges to none.

"We must therefore continue our unabated offensive against inflation and for the stabilization of our entire econoomy."

Dies Vote Due Soon; CIO Witness Barred

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5—The Dies Committee wrangled a promise of two more years of life from the conservative-minded House Rules Committee this week, after a CIO spokesman had been denied the right to testify.

The fight against continuance of the Dies group, which has been assailed by Vice-President Wallace and other high government officials as well as by unions throughout the country, now moves to the floor of the House of Representatives.

Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, who was turned down when he sought permission to appear before the Rules Committee, later issued a statement accusing the Dies Committee of building a "long record of disruption and sabotage of the Administration's prosecution of the war, and an equally long record of smearing labor and all progressive groups."

He described the ban on CIO testimony as a "denial of democracy."

VOTE DUE SOON

Action by the House on Resolution 65, which would extend the Dies Committee for another two years, is expected shortly. A number of Congressmen are expected to voice their opposition to its continuance.

The Rules Committee hearing was not without fireworks, despite the limited number of witnesses. It was marked by constant clashes between Rep. Sabath (D.) of Illinois, Rules Committee chairman, and Rep. Hamilton Fish (R.) of New York. The notorious Fish tried in vain to interrupt a bitter attack on Dies by Rep. Folger (D.) of North Carolina.

"A bona fide investigation of anything un-American is all right," Folger declared, "but I'm opposed to widespread publicity for an attack on a government and a people who are our allies."

Folger recalled that most of Dies' "probes" have been directed against suspected Communists rather than against Nazi and fascist agents in this country.

Cowan Assails Disruption Fostered By Dies Committee

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative this week issued the following statement:

"The House Rules Committee has abruptly reported out the resolution for the renewal of the Dies Committee without a hearing and without testimony. Representatives of the CIO and other organizations had requested an opportunity to express their views before the committee, were present when the matter came before the committee, and were summarily denied any such opportunity.

"The committee acted without even affording to many members of Congress who had expressed a desire to appear before it an opportunity to meet with the committee. Last week the anti-labor Hobbs bill was reported out summarily and without hearings by the Judiciary Committee.

"These actions are dangerous indications of the intent of the poll tax Congressmen to act, unless checked by public indignation, in complete disregard of the democratic process in Congress. It denies both to Congressmen and to the public the right to be heard on legislation of vital concern to the war.

RECORD OF DISRUPTION

"The Dies Committee has a long record of disruption and sabotage of the Administration's prosecution of the war and an equally long record of smearing labor and all progressive groups and organizations. The attempt to rush this resolution through Congress is an obvious indication that the friends of the Dies Committee are afraid of the facts that testimony before the Rules Committee would bring out.

"The American people and their representatives have a right to be heard on legislation that affects their well-being and the national security. To try to choke off this right by tactics of this kind is a direct blow at national unity and morale, and a flat denial of democracy.

"The Dies Committee has been at its disruptive work for nearly four years now. It is time and more than time that the representatives of the American people be given a full chance to drag this group of irresponsible disrupters into the light of day."

Will Rogers Jr. Answers Poll Taxer's Oratory

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Rep. Martin Dies (D) of Texas once again hoisted the red herring to the top of his mast, and kept it fluttering in the breeze of a 105-minute burst of oratory this week.

The Texas poll-taxer's speech adhered closely to tradition. It was intended to scare Congress into extending his Committee on Un-American Activities, this time for two years.

For an hour and three-quarters, Dies raved on about the value of 18th Century liberalism, attacked the New Deal indirectly for centralizing government, and presented case studies intended to smear some 40 government officials. All were pictured as "bureaucrats" or "radicals".

QUIET ABOUT FASCISTS

Dies had nothing to say about Nazi sympathizers or fascists in this country, although last summer he specifically promised that the committee's future activities would be directed towards rooting out Hitler's fifth column in this country.

Captial observers have pointed out that scores of these Nazi stooges have been given the full cooperation of the committee at various times in the past.

ROGERS REPLIES

When the wide-mouthed Texan had finished his long oration, the rebuttal came in a terse one-minute maiden speech from "freshman" Rep. Will Rogers Jr. (D) of California. The son of the famous humorist, who was elected to the House with labor and liberal support while he was serving in the Army, declared:

"We have just had an oration delivered in the more classic vein. I should like it be known that at least one member of this House disagrees; that I disagree with the sentiments expressed, the flamboyant manner of expression, and the use of this great public forum as a means of what we in Hollywood would call personal publicity."

Dies' smear speech against the New Deal and New Dealers in government was announced as a reply to a long, well-documented criticism of the Texas Congressman that was distributed by the National Lawyers Guild, an organization of liberal attorneys.

Last week Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, called on CIO unions to mobilize their members to protest against permitting the committee's extension by the House of Representatives. Simultaneously, he wrote to members of Congress and called for opposition to the Dies group.

HITS POWER TRUST: U. S. Power Commission Chairman Lelands Olds, who told a national convention of REA co-ops that the power trust has launched a new campaign to destroy labor's rights and do away with publicly-owned utilities.

CIO Board Warns:

Locals Must Act To Increase Labor's Political Power

Following is the Statement on Legislation adopted by the CIO Executive Board, meeting in Washington Feb. 5:

The CIO and the labor movement generally are founded on a determination to extend and preserve democracy and to advance the economic welfare of the working men and women of the country. In years past this has meant that our local unions have focused their primary attention on efforts to improve conditions of their members through negotiations with employers, through activities of grievance and negotiations committees.

With a war period the very things for which the CIO and unions generally have been formed are the things for which this entire nation and its Allies are now fighting for. It is this fact which has made the union and its members the leading and most militant force in the mobilizing of the country for victory.

Greater Responsibility

At the same time the members of our unions have come to realize in a way that they never saw before an additional responsibility of the labor movement and the CIO particularly. Our national economic problems are problems which go far beyond any question of mere negotiations with employers and the statement of grievances with employers.

Today the War Labor Board in Washington must pass upon all wage matters. The Office of Price Administration and the Department of Agriculture and other Washington agencies make policies which will decide whether we will have a really effective price control or whether prices will skyrocket upwards so that wage adjustments will become meaningless. These same agencies in Washington decide whether we will have a fair distribution of food and other necessities of life through overall rationing or whether those with the most money will get the largest share of our limited supply. Congress passes on all of these matters and also decides whether through tax cuts there will be taken out of paychecks of our members taxes to such an extent as to cut down their food budgets and their health.

All of this has placed on the shoulders of CIO and its members an increased responsibility which goes far beyond wage negotiations and grievance adjustments. Our members paying a victory tax out of their pay envelopes each week have realized that the real questions relating to their every day working life are being decided in legislative and political fields.

Tories Alliance

In this present session of Congress an unholy alliance of polltax Democrats with the most reactionary wings of the Republican party has served notice of its intention to ride roughshod over any considerations of national welfare, war policy, national unity and health for war workers. They have served notice of their intention to sabotage rather than to support the Commander-in-Chief of the United States. They have served notice of their intention to attack labor and to reduce labor standards without regard to the health, or productive efficiency of war workers.

This conspiracy will not go unchallenged. CIO unions have already formulated a program of legislative action to meet this threat. Every CIO national union, every local, if it has not already done so, must take active steps to carry out that program.

Every local union in the CIO must have a legislative committee. Wherever possible, legislative committees of local CIO unions should organize and join with other CIO locals in organizing on Congressional district lines for purposes of basic contact with our representatives in Congress.

Must Function Well

These local organizations must function every day throughout the year to maintain constant contact with their Congressmen, to bring home to them at every opportunity by personal visits, by letters and by wires, the views of America's workers. These views must be before the Congressmen not merely when the time comes for a vote on any issue but from the beginning of the session until the end as a guide to his deliberations, his committee work and his contacts and discussions with other Congressmen.

These local legislative committees must also operate jointly with AFL and Railroad Brotherhood locals, farm organizations, church and community organizations in their respective localities or Congressional districts. The views of these groups must be brought to Congress by joint committees of these various organizations, by joint rallies or demonstrations, joint communications and delegations to the Congressmen.

This cooperation with other organizations must be established as far as possible at all levels from top to bottom. The CIO as a national organization must enter into consultation with the AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods and farm organizations, on legislative problems for purposes of coordinated action on the legislative front.

All national unions in the CIO, industrial union councils and local unions must awaken to the dangers that confront the nation in this Congress and the responsibility which falls on the shoulders of organized labor.

PRODUCTION FOR VICTORY

Our Commander-in-Chief has just completed his historic conference at Casablanca. This conference forged an unshakeable alliance among the United Nations based on a program of decisive and offensive action against the aggressors until their defeat has been obtained through unconditional surrender.

The initiative has been grasped by the United Nations. The sights have now been fixed for an invasion of Europe which shall lead to the utter destruction of the Axis forces.

The challenge is now before the workers in the war production plants. We must provide the sinews of war to our armies of liberation. Words and mere promises are not sufficient. Our answer must be measured in terms of actual production to be accomplished as follows:

1. Effective labor-management committees must be initiated in every war production plant. Where they are now in existence they must be revitalized and their efforts intensified for increasing and smashing all production records. The Herculean task which American industry has already accomplished shall be surpassed with expanding production in every department in every war plant throughout the nation.

2. The CIO shall initiate and carry forward production conferences in every war industry to marshall the resources and energies of all for ever increasing production.

3. Labor must take the initiative in eliminating every possible obstacle in the way of total production—the real causes for absenteeism, such as poor housing conditions and inefficient scheduling of manpower and material must be eliminated; a more effective utilization of manpower must be achieved, and a more coherent and integrated scheduling of work and material must be attained.

4. There must be initiated an immediate and effective participation of labor in the War Production Board—at every level—with labor being given the highest responsibility in the formulation and execution of our policies and activities pertaining to production.

It must be recognized that such total production demands a national mobilization based on a nation-wide planning and utilization of all the material and manpower resources of the country. A single civilian administrative body must be established incorporating the activities of war supply, war manpower, and economic stabilization. The recommendations to this effect contained in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill recently introduced in Congress and sponsored by 10 Senators, must be put into effect with the utmost speed which can be done through executive action.

The man in the mill and the man in the mine, the girl in the airplane factory and her child in the day nursery — they and America's other millions — are faced with the fact that their gigantic war effort may be sabotaged in 1943 by hunger!

Business-as-usual machinations of a gang of insurance companies, banks, plantation owners and vested farmers, known as the farm bloc, have brought the United States face to face with a serious food shortage for the first time in its history and at a time when it is fighting for its very life.

The gravity of the situation has been brought home in the last few weeks by the resignations of H. W. Parisius as U. S. food production director and Donald E. Montgomery as the agriculture department's consumer counsel in courageous protest against the farm bloc's continued triumphs over the American people.

H. W. PARISIUS
Ideas Over-ruled

In an exclusive Federated Press interview, Montgomery boldly outlined the farm bloc program for starvation, hopeful that his words would reach men's minds before famine strikes their bellies.

Little to Ration

The enormity of the situation is illustrated by today's meat crisis. Labor unions have been demanding to know why meat isn't rationed. The answer, according to Montgomery, is simple and shocking.

"England is distributing meat on a basis of 32 ounces a person a week. The U. S. food administrator hadn't rationed meat in January, because the vast black market had taken so much meat that two pounds per capita can not be found in the legal U. S. market."

This, Montgomery points out, could have been prevented by overall rationing long ago and rigid price control. But even if rationing and rigid price control are established in 1943, the food situation will still be serious unless there is all-out conversion of the American farming to war production.

Farm Bloc Wins

Parisius' resignation, Montgomery asserted, means that Food Administrator Claude Wickard—a big Indiana farmer himself—has capitulated to the farm bloc and is not going to aim at all-out production in 1943.

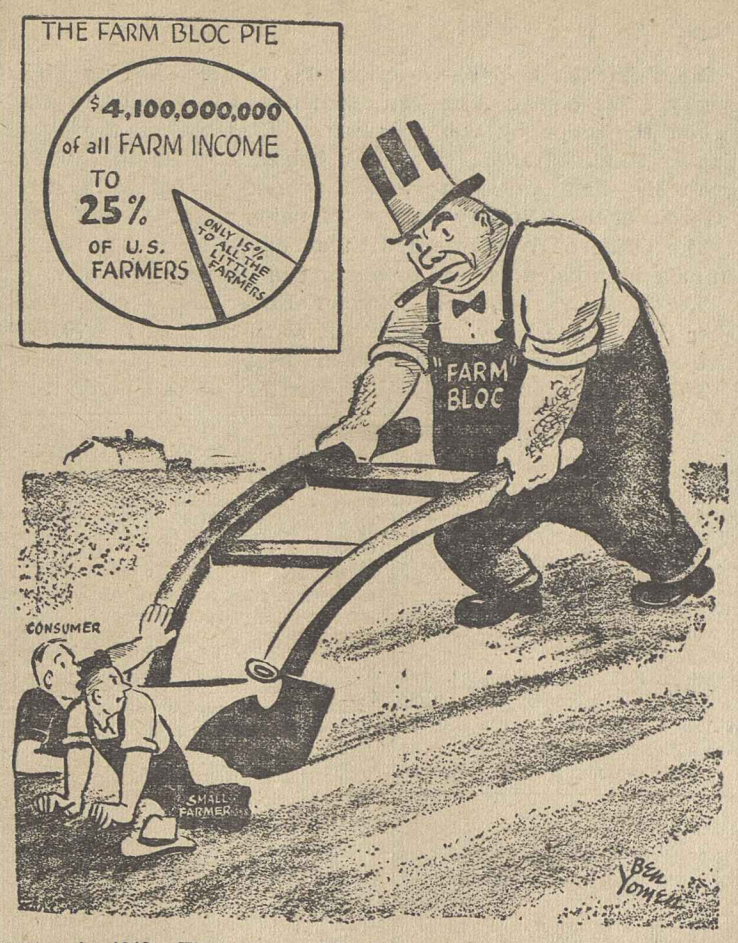
"There are two views on how to increase food production. One is that of the farm bloc, which Wickard has accepted — raise prices. The other is that advocated by Parisius, the Natl. Farmers' Union, the Farm Security Administration and progressives generally—arm the small farmers, who represent two-thirds of them all, for peak production.

"The second view means the pooling of machinery, changing the size of farms, shifting of farmers from unproductive soil to productive soil, giving small farmers the credit and subsidies they need to produce. It means planning and assigning crops on the basis of our military and civilian needs and not on the old basis of restricting production to raise prices."

Feed It to Hogs

Montgomery isn't talking theory. He can cite practical examples of how the lack of a production plan sabotages our food production. But here are just a couple:

1. Although there is a two-year supply of short staple cotton on hand in the U. S., two million man-years were used in producing cotton in 1942. Those two million manyears could have been converted to food production.



2. In 1942, the U. S. produced 120 billion pounds of milk, of which 30 billions went in skimmed milk for the feeding of hogs—hogs for which there was food aplenty from our enormous grain surplus. Skimmed milk is the most important part of the milk for human consumption because it contains three nutritional necessities—calcium, riboflavin and thiamin. Britain and the Soviet Union both are begging America for all the powdered skimmed milk we can send because it is so vital.

DON MONTGOMERY
Warns of Shortages

The food administration decided the way to solve the problem is by raising the price of whole milk.

"This is nonsense," Montgomery says. "In the first place, the farmer doesn't have enough cans for shipping whole milk if he has been shipping only butter fat. Furthermore, if he is a butter fat shipper, the dairy company would only charge him for separating the cream from the milk. And then either send the skimmed milk back to the farmer or worse—dump it. This, while our Allies want.

"What is needed is a real plan for getting whole milk. It means equipping the small farmer so he can produce and ship it. And it means giving him grain cheap enough so he can afford to raise dairy cattle.

"But the farm bloc won't let the government sell him cheap grain and the food administrator has refused to tell the average farmer what he must produce and has not given him the means to do it.

"What would have happened to our plane and tank production, if the government had merely raised the price of planes and tanks instead of ordering the auto manufacturers to convert from auto production?"

Much of the trouble, Montgomery insists, arises from the "ash can theory" which the farm bloc has forced the agriculture department to pursue for years and which it is still pursuing.

Ash-Can Approach

"Consumers, in the eyes of the farm bloc," Montgomery explained. "serve as an ash can for a surplus of something the farmers don't want. The idea that food is something to eat would be revolutionary to these fellows who have always thought of it as something whose production you restrict in order to get higher prices for the nuisance of raising it."

Because of the lack of centralized planning, Montgomery says, the civilian supplies of various foods in 1943 will range from 10% to 50% below 1941 consumption, and, unless there is immediate overall rationing, the great majority of the people will find they can't buy much of what is available.

Furthermore, by abandoning the federal food stamp relief plan which, as Wickard said when he killed it, "is only needed by the aged, physically incapacitated and children," the food administration left no way for these millions of Americans to get rationed or unrationed food.

Rationing and planned production together are not enough. If Congress surrenders again to the business-as-usual farm bloc, and allows farm prices to continue upward, Montgomery predicts uncontrolled inflation and actual starvation.

Profits and Famine

"If the farm bloc has its way," he points out, "farm prices will be raised another 10%. That means 3½ billion dollars added to our food bill. It means swollen profits for the big farmers and in turn speculation and inflation."

Firing, Resignation Hit Friends of Small Farmers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—A dismissal, a resignation and charges of suppressed statistics this week enlivened the battle over food production within the Department of Agriculture.

At stake is whether the department's program for obtaining sufficient food for our soldiers, our civilian population and our allies should be attuned to assisting the small farmers produce or to giving more profits to the rich.

Donald Montgomery, Consumers Counsel at the Agriculture Department, and H. W. Parisius, director of food production, both resigned several weeks ago when their ideas were ignored or overruled.

Last week the department announced that it had eliminated the job of Gardner Jackson, a former Labor's Non-Partisan League official, who had been serving as an agriculture economist. Jackson had been active in behalf of the FSA and worked closely with the National Farmers Union, which represents the smaller farmers.

This week Mary Taylor, a former assistant to Montgomery, also resigned. As editor of Consumers Guide, she had turned out one of the government's most popular publications and had agitated for a tight control over food prices and assistance to the small farmers.

Jackson issued a statement describing the conflict around FSA as a "fundamental clash between two methods and possibilities in food production and between individuals who have the burning desire to push all-out production and those who are so conditioned by their scarcity, high-price activities that they can't reverse themselves."

He added that the Farm Bureau Federation bloc is out to protect its special interests, "just as too many of our industrialists all along have been tackling their war production in terms of their competitive position after the war."

Meanwhile the newspaper PM revealed that an Agriculture Department study of food production had been held up within the department after it was disclosed that the Farm Security Administration's program had obtained results that might be embarrassing to its foes."

Map Labor-Farmer Agreement

CHICAGO, Feb. 6—A program of cooperation between the National Farmers' Union and the CIO Farm Equipment Workers was worked out at a recent conference in Kansas City between James G. Patton, president of the NFU, and Grant Oakes, president of the FEW, Oakes announced in a statement issued here after his return.

"The main problem facing us right now," Oakes said, "is the question of what percentage of 1940 production should be used for war material and what quota allotted for farm equipment."

Oakes declared that both organizations agreed that the 1943 farm equipment production quota should be based on "the needs of the farmers for utilization of every possible acre of productive ground for all-out food production for war material."

Further meetings to discuss a detailed program of cooperation will be held in Washington in the immediate future, Oakes said.

Outlook Warns:

Jobless Aid Reform Needed Now

Washington, Feb. 6—Unless sweeping changes are made in the unemployment compensation systems now in effect, the return of peace may find war workers and soldiers coming back from the war forced on the breadlines, states the current issue of Economic Outlook, monthly publication of the CIO Department of Education and Research.

In the period of reconstruction which must inevitably follow the armistice, the Outlook points out that men and women who have given vital aid in winning the war "will discover that they have no insurance and no security unless present laws have been amended."

SERVICEMEN EXCLUDED

Among those not entitled to unemployment benefits, the Outlook lists soldiers and sailors who have never worked in occupations covered by unemployment compensation laws; employes in government navy yards and arsenals and maritime and agricultural workers. In addition to these, some three million others are excluded under the present law because they work in establishments employing less than eight persons.

The increase in net profits for 1941-1942 revealed in figures of the U. S. Dept. of Commerce and the startling rise in some industries shown in studies by the OPA are also reviewed in the Outlook.

It asserts that "clearly corporate earnings in 1941 and 1942 were sufficiently high to justify the CIO program on wage increases and corporate taxes."

In a section on Post-War Planning, the Outlook states that "the economic forces unleased by war will, if uncontrolled, lead inevitably to economic disaster when peace comes, but if properly directed, they can insure better levels of living for all."

Soup To Pie--- Nothing In Between

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6 (FP)—Soup to nuts was slimmed down to soup and pie for 7,000 shipyard workers at the Los Angeles Shipbuilding & Drydock Corp. in San Pedro one day last week.

Those two items were the only ones available at the local cafeteria, which threatens to close down shortly because it can't get meat or substitutes, Rep. Walter S. Pollard jr. of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, CIO, wrote U. S. Food Administrator Claude Wickard.

Diets of the workers at the Lockheed and Vega airplane plants are equally incredible, the American Aeronaut, publication of Lodge 727, Intl. Assn. of Machinists (AFL) reveals.

"The hot dog stands of 'Ulcer Gulch' on Empire Ave. are as bad as the leased places within the Lockheed or Vega plants," it comments.

Seamen's Heroism Wins Govt. Praise

LASHES SMEAR: Admiral William F. Halsey, U. S. Naval "boss" in the southern Pacific, who gave the complete lie to newspaper stories that CIO seamen refused to unload ships at Guadacanal on Sundays. Union added that the story was Axis-inspired propaganda.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Government statistics showing high casualty rates among American seamen and a tribute to the men on the ships by Admiral Emory S. Land of the War Shipping Administration, this week helped counter the year's biggest lie—that American seamen refused to unload a ship at Guadalcanal on Sunday because of union rules.

The Office of War Information announced that 3,200 seamen have been listed as dead or missing in the first year of war.

The casualty rate, OWI Director Elmer Davis said, was higher than in the Navy. Altogether, some 3.8% of the 70,000 active seamen have lost their lives or disappeared.

The Navy's figure is only three-quarters of one percent.

Admiral Land, who gained temporary notoriety with a statement that union organizers should be "shot at sunrise," backtracked this week and praised the highly-unionized workers of the merchant marine. He said they were loyal and efficient, spend a big proportion of their time "on the front line" of the world's sub-infested seaways.

NAILS BIG LIE

Admiral Halsey's statement, released by the Navy, brought a quick and ignominious end to a lie of tremendous proportions that was being widely used by the newspapers and reactionary Congressmen.

The Navy said that Admiral Halsey's report "stated that none of the crews had ever refused to discharge its ship's cargo, and the merchant seamen's cooperation, efficiency and courage, on some occasions, in the face of enemy attack, have won high praise."

CURRAN'S COMMENT

"We maintain that this story was Hitler-inspired and was promoted by the 6th column press in an effort to shatter civilian morale and slander merchant seamen who have already lost more men, proportionately, through enemy action than any branch of the armed services.

"We now reiterate our demand for an investigation into the source of this story by Atty.-Gen. Biddle, and we expect every newspaper that printed the original falsehood to give Admiral Halsey's statement, in the spirit of fair play, equal prominence and it in full."

Capt. Rickenbacker 'Misled by NAM', Unions Charge

DETROIT, Feb. 6—Regret that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker is being used as a mouthpiece for reactionary labor-haters was expressed by President R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

Capt. Rickenbacker, hero of a 21-day vigil in the mid-Pacific after his Army plane made a crash-landing into the sea, has been touring the country telling of his experiences and urging greater production. But his speeches, both in Detroit and in other industrial centers, have given the impression that labor is lying down on the job.

Thomas said that Capt. Rickenbacker seems to be "repeating misinformation and anti-labor propaganda handed out to him by manufacturers."

"We resent his implication that labor is responsible for absenteeism," Thomas continued.

FIRMS RESPONSIBLE

"The fact is that the large measure of absenteeism can be charged to management, which is responsible for lack of coordination in production, shortage of materials, failure to inform workers of what they are working on, and permitting surplus war supplies to pile up in and around points within sight of the workers."

In a subsequent speech Capt. Rickenbacker told members of the Los Angeles Advertising Club of his belief in rugged individualism and in effect endorsed anti-labor legislation which has been cropping up in a number of state legislatures.

WORKERS AROUSED

That Detroit workers were thoroughly aroused by Capt. Rickenbacker's slurring remarks about unions was apparent in the letter columns of Detroit papers, according to Federated Press, labor news service.

The Packard local of the UAW-CIO bought a full page ad in the Free Press to reprint an editorial in the local paper. The Packard local has been a leader in working out successful joint labor-management cooperation.

The Packard union editorial reminded Rickenbacker that Lindbergh too had once been a hero. It added:

"Fascist elements, here and abroad, used him. The Nazis in this country tried to make of Lindbergh the American fuehrer, a fascist man-on-horseback. They failed, and today Lindbergh sits on the sidelines, enjoying the crumbs of charity from an old admirer"—the last a reference to Henry Ford, for whom Lindbergh has been working in recent months.

Ask Chance To Testify Against Dies

Washington, Feb. 6—Officials of the CIO United Shoe Workers have asked the House Rules Committee for permission to appear before it and present testimony against the Dies Committee.

Pres. Frank McGrath pointed out, in making public his message to Rep. Sabath, Rules Committee chairman, that "some of the fifth columnists have been dealt with, but the most important of them are still at large. I refer to people like Congressman Dies and his friends, such as Gerald L. K. Smith."

A campaign for reconditioning and re-using old cotton bale ties is expected to save 10,000 tons of steel.

The More You Eat, The More You Produce

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 6 (FP)—Workers who eat more, produce more. That's the conclusion drawn from a scientific experiment conducted by two Yale University professors and disclosed in a report by the Bureau of Industrial Health of the California Health Department.

The professors compared for a period of two weeks groups of workers who ate three meals a day with those who had two extra small meals at mid-morning and mid-afternoon. They found out:

Productivity increased as much as 9.7 per cent among workers fortified by the extra snacks. Absenteeism declined generally 38.9 per cent and in some cases as much as 69.6 per cent among workers on the five-meal schedule.

Planning For Good Health

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Planning for good health is no longer a problem restricted to the very low income groups. Today, it is a problem that concerns all of us.

How many of us have carefully worked out a market list only to find upon reaching the stores that the budget just wouldn't stretch far enough to take care of everything? Some foods, obviously, would have to be left out. But which ones?

Knowing the answer to this very perplexing but most important problem would go a long way toward helping each of us to plan for good health more intelligently and more confidently.

It means learning our vitamins—knowing what part each food plays in building good health, in order to get the most in food value out of every war-trimmed dollar.

THREE CLASSES OF FOODS

If you will look at your Nutrition Yardstick, printed in last week's column, you will see that all the foods listed fall into three classes, all of them necessary for good health:

1) Proteins . . . foods that the body uses for growth. Such as milk, fish, meat, cheese, eggs.
2) Carbohydrates and fats . . foods that provide energy and warmth. Such as bread, cereals, butter, potatoes, fats, bacon, and sugar.
3) Vitamins or Protective Foods. . . . foods that protect the body and regulate its functions. Such as fruits, vegetables, dairy products, liver, eggs, wholegrain and enriched breads and cereals.

To help you plan balanced meals that will include as many of these essential foods as your budgets will allow, I've drawn up the following market list for a family of four—2 adults and 2 children (age 6 and 12). This list is based on a detailed study made by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. Use it as a guide toward better planning for your family.

Minimum Weekly Market List for Family of Four (Two Adults and Two Children)

(Cut out and pin up next to your Nutrition Yardstick, printed in last week's column).

Food	Quantity
Milk or its equivalent in milk products	20 qts.
White potatoes and sweet potatoes	10 lbs.
Dry beans, peas, nuts	2 lbs. 4 oz.
Tomatoes, citrus fruits	6lbs.
Lemons, oranges, grapefruit.
Leafy green or yellow vegetables	12 lbs. 8 oz.
Green cabbage, kale, snap beans, carrots, squash, spinach, etc.
Other vegetables and fruits	10 lbs.
Apples, bananas, peaches, onions, corn, celery, etc.
Eggs	15
Meat, poultry, fish	5 lbs. 6 oz.
Not including bacon and fat back
Flour and cereals	14 lbs. 12 oz.
1½ lbs. bread, counts as 1 lb. flour
Fats and oils	2 lbs. 15 oz.
Include bacon and fat back, salad oils, butter, oleomargerines with Vitamin A added.
Sugars, syrups, preserves	3 lbs. 4 oz.

Count as 1 qt. of whole fluid milk: Five ounces of dark yellow American cheese or 1 qt. of skim milk and 1½ oz. butter, or 17 oz. of evaporated milk (a little more than 1 large can).

Flour and cereals: Use chiefly whole grain or enriched products, whole wheat bread, pumpernickel, rye bread, oatmeal, ralston, etc.

Your Nutrition Yardstick will give you the required servings for each person.

If you can plan your meals to include at least the foods listed on this working market list, you can feel reasonably sure that you're giving your family the best nutrition your money can buy.

Food Crisis Worse—Act Now!

By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

We received three letters about food this week.

The first letter is from Helen Daggett, Los Angeles CIO Auxiliary Council organizer. She says:

"Winifred McKay is working at North American on a punch press. She has not had beef but twice in the last six weeks because she can't get to the stores in time to get any.

"The girls all complain about being 'tired of eating nothing but rabbit.' I don't know where they get that regularly since I haven't seen any for weeks. Winifred says she and the others are tired most of the time, and of course there is more absenteeism because of staying home to shop, etc.

RESTAURANTS CLOSING

"Restaurants are closing every day—particularly in the industrial areas where the workers were accustomed to eating. We have had four close within one block of the CIO building. I understand that some 200 have closed throughout the city.

This is no help to the working women who have been in the habit of eating at least a few of their meals out."

BLACK MARKETS

Our second letter is from Faye Stephenson, President of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, about the food situation Cleveland. She says:

"The delay in instituting rationing of meat has developed black markets and violations of sanitary laws, grading and inspection. It is causing hardship on thousands of production workers in Cleveland who have to do without essential food which they need to maintain their efficiency in producing for the war effort.

"It is estimated that black market operations have cut delivery of Ohio cattle to Cleveland by 40 per cent. The bootleg meat is transported and handled in dirty trucks by men who violate all rules of sanitation.

CALL MEETINGS

"Every union and auxiliary should call special meetings to flood Washington with letters and postcards demanding that the government act now to stop the menace of the black market and prevent further price increases."

Our third letter is from Food Administrator Wickard's assistant, Mr. Overby, in answer to a letter from us urging immediate rationing of all food. He says:

"Under the President's executive order of December 5, 1942, the Secretary of Agriculture has the responsibility for taking all appropriate steps to ensure the efficient and proper distribution of the available supply of food."

We want to know why Food Administrator Wickard doesn't take appropriate steps to meet the critical food situation in war industry areas which these letters show.

State Hour Law

Sacramento, Calif., Feb. 6—Efforts to abolish the 8-hour law for women were defeated in the state legislature here when an amendment was passed to a proposed bill permitting a 10-hour day, 60-hour week for women.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

An outstanding victory for the United Office & Professional Workers of America in the field of industrial insurance agents has been accomplished this week. President Merrill and his staff succeeded in a nation-wide campaign in organizing these employes of the Prudential Insurance Company and on Wednesday, February 3, succeeded in signing a contract covering 18,000 agents, excluding Wisconsin, Ohio and Minnesota. The pact provides for coverage of workers in those states after NLRB elections have been held. It provides for check-off, maintenance of membership, satisfactory grievance procedure, an increase of a minimum of $2.58 per man per week and a review of the wage question in one year's time.

This is the largest insurance company so far that has signed an agreement with this union. The pact was obtained after securing a substantial majority of the company's employes. CIO Regional Directors and staffs were called upon and did give splendid cooperation to this International in this endeavor. I had the pleasure of sitting in on the final session and signing this agreement with President Merrill and his associates.

The way is now paved for completing the entire job in the insurance field by extending these gains into the Metropolitan Insurance Company domains. Plans are well under way to accomplish this. Congratulations to the officers and members of the UOPWA.

Win Steel Election

Following a big rally in Butler, Pennsylvania, last Sunday at which Brother Irwin L. DeShetler, CIO Regional Director in Cleveland, represented the CIO, the United Steelworkers of America won an outstanding victory at the Pullman Standard Manufacturing Company plant in an NLRB election with the following results: 1,195 for CIO as against 123 for No Union. Wm. Hart, USA Executive Board Member, and his staff are to be complimented on this splendid achievement. This lays the foundation for more victories in that area.

Regional Director Frank Carmichael reports the election victory at the Davis Furber plant in Andover, Mass., with a vote of 392 for USA-CIO as against 98 for No Union. CIO and USA representatives team-worked to accomplish this.

The United Rubber Workers of America won the NLRB election among the employes of the Rex-Hide Corporation at East Brady, Pa., with a vote of 71 for CIO as against 3.

The Utility Workers Organizing Committee came through with a splendid victory repeated in Michigan, according to Chairman Straub and National Representative Shedlock, at the Detroit Edison Company sub station department by a vote of 297 for CIO as against 214.

The UAW-CIO is continuing its election victory parade towards the million membership mark. Alex D. McGowan, Regional Director, UAW-CIO, reports three victories, as follows: Autocar Plant, Ardmore, Pa., CIO, 1,017 as against 505. Regional Director Craig and staff with Organizer Willard Rittenberg and staff assisted in this victory. Time Clerks, Mack Truck, Plainfield, N. J., CIO, 18 as against 2. National Tool & Manufacturing, Kenilworth, CIO, 227 as against 130 for the company union and 21 for no union.

Charles Kerrigan, Regional Director for the UAW-CIO Aviation Division in the East, reports a fine victory at the Dzus Fastner Co., Inc., Babylon, Long Island, by a vote of 269 for CIO as against 37 for No Union. This company manufactures fastners for aircraft plants.

Many Electrical Polls

Regional Director George Craig, of Philadelphia, reports an election victory for the UERMWA at the Thornton-Fuller Company, with a vote of 228 for CIO as against 10 for No Union. James J. Matles, Director of Organization, UERMWA, reports their union is rolling 'em along with six more victories, as follows: Ideal Electric Co., Mansfield, Ohio, 238 to 52; GE Nottingham Equipment, Cleveland, Ohio, 272 to 56; Fawick Airflex Co., Cleveland, Ohio, 93 to 52; GE Trenton, N. J., 308 to 5; American Safety Razor Co., New York, N. Y., 422 to 262. Then they go over to the Dominion of Canada and at the Electro Metallurgic Co., Welland, Ontario, win a splendid victory by a vote of 1,411 for CIO as against 127.

The United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes report the winning of the election among the employes of two warehouses of Sears, Roebuck & Company, Philadelphia, Pa., with a vote of 201 for CIO as against 182 for the AFL.

Rap Air Force 'Jim Crow' Policy As Setback to War

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Accusing the Army Air Force of setting up curbs aimed at keeping Negroes out of this service, William H. Hastie, former Federal judge and dean of Howard University Law School, resigned recently as civilian aide to Secretary of War Stimson in protest against "reactionary policies and discriminatory practices."

In a statement explaining his resignation from the post he had held since Nov. 1, 1940, Dean Hastie said that although all questions of policy and important proposals relating to Negroes were supposed to be referred to him before final action, he had been practically ignored since he had objected in December, 1940, to a plan for a segregated training center for Negro pursuit pilots at Tuskegee, Ala.

IGNORED ADVICE

"I expressed my entire disagreement with the plan," Hastie said, "giving my reasons in detail. My views were disregarded. Since then the Air Command has never on its own initiative submitted any project to me for comment or recommendation."

Hastie stated that the climax of this situation was reached last month when he learned that the Air Command was setting up a segregated school at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., to train Negro officers for ground duty.

"Here was a proposal for a radical departure from present Army practices," Hastie declared, "since the officer training program is the one large field where the Army is eliminating racial segregation. Moreover, I actually had written to the Air Command several weeks earlier in an effort to find out what was brewing at Jefferson Barracks.

"The Air Command replied as late as Dec. 17, 1942, giving not the slightest hint of any plans for a segregated officer candidate school.

"The conclusion was inescapable that the Air Command does not propose to inform, much less counsel with, this office about its plans for Negroes."

Charge U. S. Copper Firm Provokes Chilean Strike

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Feb. 6 (ALN)—Executives of the Braden Copper Co., subsidiary of the Kennecott Copper Co., are attempting to provoke a strike among the 6000 anti-Axis miners in the rich El Teniente fields in O'Higgins Province, in disregard of the United Nations' need for copper, the Confederation of Chilean Workers (CTCh) declared last week.

The O'Higgins Provincial Council of the CTCh revealed that Braden Copper has refused to raise wages more than three pesos daily (12 cents), despite rapid increases in the cost of living, and has rejected demands by the workers for labor - management - government committees to increase production.

UNION SEEKS ACCORD

"Organized labor, conscious of the war emergency, is seeking a peaceful issue of the conflict," a manifesto issued by the council says.

"We do not wish to put difficulties in the way of the copper output so much needed by the United States and its allies, but the Braden Copper Co. is waging war against our unions."

Declaring that the company's rejection of the workers' wage demands is particularly indefensible in the light of its 1941 profits of $7,158,483, the council says:

"We wish to emphasize again that our main task is to win the war against fascism. We are ready to do our best to reach a solution, but the company must refrain from offering an increase which only makes a mockery of Chilean workers."

W. J. Turner, general manager of the Braden company, has announced that the company will negotiate on wages but not on the other points in the workers' petition.

In Rancagua, company officials have posted notices offering wage increases if the workers will withdraw their demands for the removal of foreman and mine managers who, the union says, are violently anti-labor and interfere with the workers' attempts to raise production.

British Workers Hold Industrial Unions Needed Now

BY GARRY ALLIGHAN

LONDON, Feb. 6 (ALN) — Because unity is recognized as labor's main source of strength in wartime, a merger of the three unions of Britain's half-million railway workers is regarded as an almost certain outcome of the wage dispute now causing a crisis in the industry.

The Amalgamated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen has voted to strike Feb. 6 unless by that date Ernest Bevin, Minister of Labor, has revised the recent award by the National Railway Tribunal to ASLEF'S 65,000 members of a wage increase amounting to less than 2-pence (4 cents) a day. The National Union of Railwaymen, with 360,000 members, and the Railway Clerks Association, with 30,000 members, received wage increases last December.

Aware that independent action by the ASLEF will weaken the bargaining position of all railway workers, the NUR has urged that the three unions form a single brotherhood. In the past, ASLEF has opposed such a move on the ground that the interests of its skilled members would be prejudiced.

The merger, if it takes place, will give strong impetus to the development of industrial unionism in this country. With the exception of the Mineworkers Federation and the National Union of Public Employees, the 223 unions affiliated to the Trades Union Congress are craft in character.

Within the TUC, however, a move towards industrial unionism is growing. The powerful Amalgamated Engineering Union, because of its tremendous growth in the war industries, is taking on an industrial form, and at last year's TUC convention a resolution introduced by the NUR calling for a complete reexamination of the TUC's present craft structure was defeated by a majority of only 923,000—2,153,000 against 3,085,000.

Chief opponents of the resolution were the Transport and General Workers, with more than one million members, and the General and Municipal Workers, with half a million members, catch-all unions embracing workers in more than 200 different trades.

LOW WAGE RATE

The present crisis in the railway industry originated last August, when wage demands by the NUR and the ASLEF were rejected by the companies.

The unions' claims went to the National Tribunal, which awarded a general increase of 5 shillings ($1.25) a week for men and 3 shillings and ninepence for women. This award, accepted by the NUR, was rejected by the ASLEF because it included the 4-shillings raise given the locomotive men last March, and thus represented an actual increase of only 1 shilling per week.

The executive committee of the ASLEF termed the tribunal's award "degrading and insulting to the footplate fraternity."

"The general public must surely be shocked by such a decision," Percy Collick, assistant secretary of the union, declared. "Our men have endured the worst that Hitler's bombers could do. They stand up to the machine gunning of the enemy without complaint and carry on."

Wages for British railwaymen, who have suffered severely from Nazi air bombardments, are considered below the 102 shillings-a-week ($25.50) average for workers in the war industries. Locomotive drivers get 89 shillings ($22.25) a week until their seventh year, when they get 101 shillings.

Union Girls Send Gift To Servicemen

Bloomfield, N. J., Feb. 6—"I have received your package, and I am at a loss for words of thanks."

This is the message which the girls of the War Relief Committee of Local 410, UE-CIO, at Westinghouse Lamp Division, received this week from far-off Guadalcanal.

The sender of the note was Pvt. Raymond Canfield, Jr., a former member of Local 410, and now one of the fighting Marines in the South Pacafic.

Marine Canfield and 293 other former members of Local 410 who are now in Service, received packages of "goodies" from fellow workers in the shop each month.

Watch British Example, Mrs. Roosevelt Bids Women

New York, Feb. 6—(FP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt told American women war workers here to follow the example of the British women who are heroically proving that they can do almost anything a man can. She spoke at a jammed meeting sponsored by the joint AFL-CIO Women's Committee on Civilian Defense Feb. 2.

"The equality of sacrifice of British women has made for a state of morale that is perfectly astounding," she said, describing her impressions of a recent trip to England. "They have to produce or face the enemy across the Channel."

Referring to postwar conditions, she said: "A great deal of the hope of the world will be decided by the workers. If they know the conditions and know what they want they can get it done. You can't have peace without justice. You must be willing to work for justice or you can't get anywhere working for peace."

Mary Anderson, head of the Women's Bureau, U. S. Dept. of Labor, called for a program of equal pay for women doing the same work as men and an end to discrimination against Negro women and older women workers.

Role For Labor

Yellow Springs, Ohio, Feb. 6—"Labor standards must be fitted into every phase of an over-all reconstruction policy," Carter Goodrich, chairman of the International Labor Office, told a post-war planning confernece at Antioch College here.

Subway Men Ask Fair Deal

Murray To Address Mass Meeting Feb. 9

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Union security and joint labor-management councils were urged this week as a method of bringing badly-needed harmony on New York's city-owned subway lines this week.

Harry Sacher, counsel for the Transport Workers Union, CIO, made the plea to a special committee named by Mayor LaGuardia to investigate labor relations on the lines, which employ some 32,000 workers. The TWU is seeking a contract providing wage increases and union security.

OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

Other developments in the TWU fight for a pact:

1. The New York City CIO appealed to all members to rally behind the TWU demands, and set in motion a campaign to collect funds in behalf of the union.

2. CIO national and local unions and councils were called upon by President Philip Murray to send messages to Mayor LaGuardia urging the dispute be turned over to arbitrators in accordance with a plan advanced by Murray several weeks ago.

3. The union went ahead with plans for a giant meeting at Madison Square Garden on Feb. 9, with President Murray as principal speaker, to show labor's solidarity with the subway men's demands.

The transit dispute has been simmering ever since the city took over the subway lines several years ago and refused to honor the TWU's union-shop contracts with the private companies that had previously operated the vital transport lines.

RAP CITY BOARD

The Board of Transportation, which handles management of the subway network, was criticized this week by its own grievance committee for failure to settle almost a thousand grievances during the past year despite recommendations of the committee. The committee had been appointed about a year ago in a settlement of an earlier dispute between the Board and the TWU.

In calling for union gifts to a "fighting fund" to help the transit workers, New York Council President Joseph Curran said their plight "is the most important issue before the people of New York City."

MAJOR ISSUES

He added that the issues at stake are whether the morale necessary to efficient operation of the subways will be impaired by the Board of Transportation's "anti-labor officials," whether responsible city officials can ignore the demand for labor-management cooperation, and whether "the Mayor shall continue to ignore his responsibility to the people of New York by his adamant refusal to permit the differences between management and employes of the city-owned transit system to be resolved by arbitration."

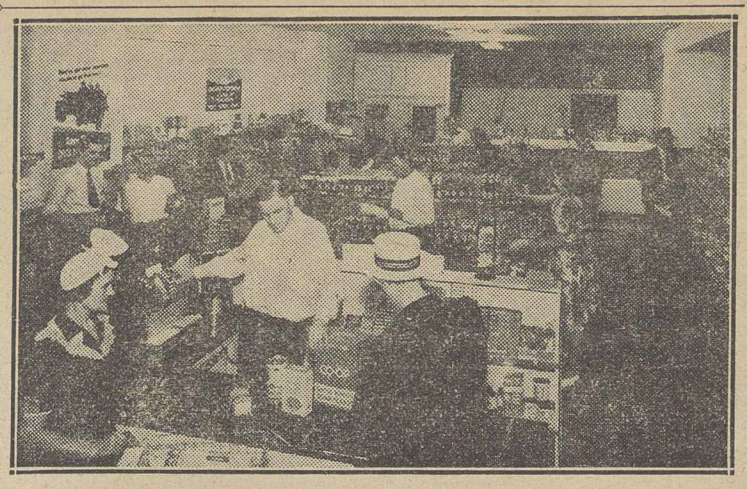
Sacher, the TWU's counsel, told the committee hearing that increased efficiency brought about through establishment of such cooperation would make possible the release of many transit employes to other war industries, while retaining their subway seniority ratings.

He suggested formation of a top labor-management council on which TWU President Michael Quill, local President Douglas MacMahon and James J. Fitzsimon, local director of organization, would be the principal union spokesmen.

Furniture Union Meets May 17

New York City, Feb. 6—The next convention of the United Furniture Workers will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, beginning May 17, it was announced here at UFW headquarters.

Three other cities considered were Fort Smith, Ark., Los Angeles, Calif., and New York City. Cleveland won out because it was felt that war transportation problems made the city more suitable.



UNION CO-OP STORE: This consumers cooperative is called the "most attractive, efficient and modern store" in South Bend, Ind. It's located in headquarters of Local 5 of the United Automobile Workers. The co-op, started by 10 members of the local, has grown fast, and now helps hundreds of customers keep a partial check on the cost of living.

Eastern Cooperative League

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—Two price tags on every rationed item will be hard for you and me to get used to. Planning to meet the high cost of living with both dollars and coupons is going to take some new thinking and some smart buying. But lots of others are in the same boat and have begun to find a way of doing something about it.

Stories of how members of seven CIO Unions have organized themselves as consumers to tackle problems like these were carried in the January 25 issue of the cooperator, published by the Eastern Cooperative League.

Here's an angle that makes sense to shipyard workers in New Jersey, auto workers in South Bend, rubber workers in Erie, Pa.; Rationing doubles the importance of having a Co-op—a store owned by consumers, controlled by consumers, working for consumers; a store whose objective is more for your money and more for your coupons because the owners and the patrons are the same people.

Consider peaches. A can of ordinary clings is a can; and so is a can of the new famous CO-OP Elbertas. Both make about the same demand on your pocketbook and on your ration book. But the CO-OP Elbertas are superior in flavor. When a coupon is good for only one can, which would a smart shopper buy?

INFORMATIVE LABELS

Consider tomato juice. How many ounces in a can? Maybe you never looked before, but you're likely to now. You'll find that while some brands hold 20, the CO-OP can holds 24 ounces. You'll check grades and find that not all labels tell you the quality. The CO-OP label which pioneered a combination of grade and informative labelling, does.

Benefits like these have been obtained by consumers taking the trouble to set up, finance and control their own Co-op stores. In the East there are over 200 where all a consumer has to do is wake up to the advantages of cooperative buying—someone else has done the ground work.

HOW TO FORM CO-OPS

In other towns and cities new co-ops are being started. A new Handbook, "How to Organize a Cooperative Buying Club" has just been printed by Eastern Cooperative League and can be had for 50c.

OPEN TO ALL

Anyone can shop in a Co-op, nonmembers as well as members. But anyone who sees the value of a consumer controlled store and a consumer controlled wholesale which runs a consumer controlled testing kitchen, soon wants to join and have a vote in policy matters. Membership is always open to all.

You've heard about Co-ops for a long time. The CIO Executive Board has passed resolutions endorsing cooperatives and recommending this means for its members to protect their interests as consumers.

In recent months patrons of Co-ops have found paper goods, butter and canned goods on the Co-op shelves when other stores have been out. With rationing just around the corner, smart consumers will find another reason for wasting no time in getting acquainted with the Co-op idea.

Prudential OKs First CIO Pact

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—The largest union contract covering white collar employes was signed this week between the United Office and Professional Workers of America, CIO, and the Prudential Insurance Company. Allan S. Haywood, CIO Director of Organization, came up from Washington to be present at the signing of the agreement, which gives the CIO a significant organizational advance among the 350,000 employes in the insurance office field.

18,000 AGENTS COVERED

The pact will bring increased wages and union security to 18,000 industrial insurance agents throughout the United States. It will go into effect immediately in all states except Wisconsin, Ohio and Minnesota and several other areas where NLRB petitions are pending. Agents in these areas will be guaranteed union conditions, the contract provides, as soon as the pending petitions are disposed of.

The agreement was negotiated in a spirit of war unity by both the company and the union. It brings to a dramatic finish a story of war-welded labor-management unity begun when the company agreed to bargain for agents in New York State in March, 1942, after three months' threatened conflict.

SHOW UNITY

Significant of the win-the-war position taken by both the company and union is a special clause which provides that the agents' production records shall be taken into consideration in determining wage increases. This, the union pointed out, will act as incentive to the men to increase the sale of insurance, recognized by the government as a factor in combatting inflation, and to carry an increased debit in a period of growing manpower shortage.

OTHER TERMS OF CONTRACT

Main terms of the agreement provide for maintenance of membership with a voluntary dues deduction system; full grievance machinery and submission of all disputes to arbitration by the American Arbitration Association; two weeks' vacation and wage increases of approximately $2.50 a man (subject to approval by the War Labor Board).

The contract will run for two years, but provides for re-opening of discussion the wage clause in one year. It will be submitted for ratification to all organized district groups.

"Mr. and Mrs. Joe Smith, War Workers and Taxpayers," is CIO's action program for a win-the-war tax bill in 1943, written in informal letter style and printed in two colors. Order from CIO Publicity Dept., 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. 100 for 75 cents; 500 for $3.25; 1,000 for $6.

CIO Defeats Lewis Outfit

St. Louis, Feb. 6—John L. Lewis' catchball unit, District 50, caught one on the chin and was knocked out of the St. Louis area by the United Gas, Coke and Chemiccal Workers, CIO, in an NLRB election this week.

UG whipped District 50 in an election at the American Agricultural Co. plant by a 50 to 15 vote. The victory gave UG a 100 per cent batting average in elections against District 50.

The 'Chief' Orders— And Hearst Papers Obey

This was disclosed today by the publication In Fact, which published telegrams sent by "the Chief"—as Hearst is known to his editors. The wire called for major emphasis on the Texas poll-taxer's speech on the front pages of all Hearst papers, with the text of the 105-minute oration printed in installments on the editorial page.

"Use easily read type to make people read it," Hearst wired his underlings.

Backing up the boss's own instructions was a wire to all editors from J. Willicombe, Hearst's assistant. It read: "Chief instructs to play up Dies' speech today sensationally."

Noted Writers Hit Rickenbacker's Anti-Labor Speeches

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—Eddie Rickenbackers national speaking tour, in which he mixes sincere patriotism and blatant anti-unionism in about equal proportions, came in from a panning this week from two important sources.

One of them was Quentin Reynolds, noted foreign correspondent. The other was Joe Cummiskey, sports writer for the New York paper PM, who listened to Rickenbacker call for a forced draft of labor in a speech delivered to the Baseball Writers Assn. in New York City.

Both writers were vehement in condemning the reactionary line that Rickenbacker is peddling on his cross-country tour.

Reynolds, speaking in Detroit shortly after Rickenbacker had visited the motor capital, declared:

"I understand that lately it has become quite popular around here to give labor a kick in the pants. I don't know how many plants Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker has seen. But I know that I've seen 30 since my return three months ago and I've seen hundreds of plants in Russia and England and in other spots on this globe.

"And I say that nowhere in the world is labor digging in and working as hard as it is right here in America."

Cummiskey, writing in PM, said he couldn't swallow Rickenbacker's "labor draft" ideas and most of the 1,300 person attending the banquet couldn't either.

"When the feet of a one-time idol turn to mud, which he forthwith picks up and throws, we in sports know that score," he wrote. "I've sat through many a yawning evening while a pompous stuffed shirt made with the big talk, but I never saw a crowd react to a national hero as it did to Rick's new credo the other night . . .

"I know he fought and was ready to die for his country. On that, no man may say him nay.

"But the gathering thunderhead of resentment he's whipping up by his pseudo-patriotic blatherings hits me—and millions like me—in the back. I don't like it and in my own tiny voice I rise to say so."

Rick Retired From Army, Talks on Own

Washington, Feb. 13—Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker is on the retired list and does not speak for the Army, which has no control over him. The CIO NEWS was informed this week.

Rickenbacker gained his captaincy as a daring aviation ace during the last war, but has not been on active service in years. He was acting as a civilian on a special War Dept. mission when his plane was downed in the Pacific last autumn. Rickenbacker and several officers and soldiers—three of them union members—were rescued after 22 days afloat on small life rafts.

Rickenbacker is head of Eastern Airlines.

Guild Wins In Two Polls

New York, Feb. 13 — The American Newspaper Guild won two National Labor Relations Board elections by employes of The Seattle (Wash.) Times, long a holdout against the union.

Times editorial employes voted 42 to 18 for the Seattle Newspaper Guild as their collective bargaining agent. Circulation employes gave 14 votes to the Guild and 10 to the Teamsters Union as their bargaining representative.

Congress Hears CIO Tax Proposals

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—American workers know the tax problem because they know what taxes mean in terms of efficiency on the war production line, Pres. Murray told the House Ways and Means Committee his week in the first labor testimony on the 1943 tax bill.

Testimony was devoted chiefly to the "pay-as-you-go" angle, which the committee is considering before getting down to the main job of drawing a bill. Murray made it plain that CIO favors real pay-as-you-go, is strongly opposed to the phony Ruml plan that would hand out a 10 billion dollar gift to the rich.

Meantime, reactionaries and anti-victory forces in Congress rushed the un-American Dies committee through to a two-year renewal, though the nay vote of 94 was double that of last year. CIO appealed to all Congressmen voting nay for a similar vote on the appropriation for the committee, now coming before the House Accounts committee.

Anti-administration forces in the House also succeeded in rushing the Howard Smith resolution for a general smear of government war agencies by a vote of 294 to 50, and were getting ready to zip the Hobbs bill to hamstring unions and cut war production through to a vote within the next few days.

Relief Gift Check-off Is Old Stuff!

Washington, Feb. 13—The National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief has discovered an old statute in Pennsylvania's law, adopted in 1874, which makes it mandatory upon all companies to give payroll deductions for charitable contributions when requested in writing by any employe.

Robert Parker, the CIO Committee's Eastern Pennsylvania and Delaware director, dug up the old law, which reads:

"It shall be the duty of any corporation, manufacturing establishment or colliery, to retain from and out of the wages or earnings of any person by them employed, on his written order, any contribution or voluntary subscription by such person, made in monthly or other payments, for the support of any hospital or other charitable institution . . ."

Negro Group Swings to CIO

New York, Feb. 13—Employes of the United Mutual Benefit Assn., largest Negro institution in New York State, voted this week to join as a group the CIO United Office & Professional Workers of America.

They will become members of Local 30, the UOPWA's insurance local.

CIO union representatives who addressed a mass meeting of the association's employes reviewed the inability of independent unions to meet effectively the war problems.

Tory Bluenose Arouses Ire Of Workers

Philadelphia, Feb. 12 (FP)—Thousands of swing shift workers who have been getting their relaxation at 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. dances sponsored by the United Federal Workers (CIO) will have to sit at home because of a ban imposed by this city's Republican mayor.

"We are going to circulate a petition to the governor," Kline said, "asking him to allow the swing shift workers to dance for the duration of the war.

"This is a war issue and the defeatist influences that permeate the Pew Republican machine are opposed to bolstering of morale. We are going to fight it through along with all win-the-war people."

Offer Plan To Help Farmers

Newark, N. J., Feb. 13—(FP)—A unique proposal to recruit labor "to break the farm bottleneck" and "help the American farmer produce the food ammunition for America and the United Nations" has been made by Pres. Irving Abramson of the New Jersey CIO Council.

The 4-point program, submitted to the farm labor recruitment division of the War Manpower Commission, calls for the following:

1. A campaign to make the American people aware of the threatened farm shortage.

2. Establishment of a program to recruit professionals and workers from offices, retail establishments and nonessential industries for farm labor during the harvest weekends or for such other time as will be found available.

3. Recruiting of workers from war industries who are not employed on a 6- or 7-day week.

4. Establishment of volunteer farm corps areas so that workers may be recruited for work on farms nearest their homes.

St. Louis (FP)—The war program of District 8, United Electrical Radio & Machine Workers (CIO), which represents 22,400 workers in major war production plants in St. Louis, southern Illinois, Iowa and Evansville, Ind., includes a proposal for workers to help relieve labor shortages for spring plowing and planting and the formation of Food for Victory committees.

Call Parley On Women Workers

Chicago, Feb. 13—The CIO Council here is calling a special Victory Conference on Women in Industry this week. Problems of child care, equal pay for equal work, discrimination by employers, etc., will be discussed. Samuel Levin, Illinois State CIO president; Fuller Fullerton, CIO regional director and Grant Oakes, president of the Farm Equipment and Metal Workers, will lead discussion for the CIO.

San Francisco, Feb. 13—George Wilson of the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild has been re-elected head of the city's CIO Industrial Union Council.

BEFORE AND AFTER: Pretty Patricia Creighton looked mighty smart as a dancing instructor for Arthur Murray (picture at left). But she looks equally smart as the first woman welder to join the CIO Shipyard Workers at the George Lawley yards in Neponset, Mass. Miss Creighton, a native of Winthrop, Mass., became a welder because she wanted to do her bit for the war against the Axis.

Bridges To Appeal New Ruling

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 13—The long battle to prevent deportation of Australian-born Harry Bridges, head of the CIO longshoremen's union, will shortly move to the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Counsel for the union leader, who has long been the object of bitter attacks by West Coast and Congressional reactionaries, announced they would take the case to the higher court following an adverse decision by Judge Martin I. Welsh in the Federal District Court at Sacramento.

Judge Welsh denied Bridges' petition for a writ of habeas corpus and maintained that deportation hearings conducted by the Dept. of Justice had been in accordance with the law.

"The record of the second deportion proceedings," Judge Welsh asserted, "established that the deportation order was made after a fair hearing on substantial evidence."

MURRAY BACKS APPEAL

Pres. Philip Murray, in a wire to the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's official publication, commented:

"Judge Welsh's decision will cause CIO to press its campaign on behalf of Bridges with renewed vigor supporting the appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals and to the Supreme Court, if necessary."

In making his decision, however, Welsh eliminated one of the two remaining witnesses who Atty.-Gen. Biddle had claimed was credible. The judge found that Biddle had erred in relying upon the testimony of James O. O'Neil, a convicted perjurer, whose testimony had been a keystone in the government's effort to prove Bridges an alien Communist who should be deported to Australia.

The district court judge's action leaves the entire government case resting on only one of the 18 witnesses whom the prosecution brought to the stand during the long-drawn-out hearings. The remaining witness on whose testimony the government's case must stand or fall is Harry Lundeberg, head of the AFL seamen's union on the West Coast and a bitter foe of Bridges.

The Harry Bridges Victory Committee, with headquarters here, pointed out that Judge Welsh conceded Lundeberg to be a "prejudiced witness (who) had previously denied knowledge of any Communistic affiliations of Bridges, and that his uncorroborated testimony is in its nature essentially weak."

The Victory Committee added that "Judge Welsh failed to exercise the great powers invested in the federal courts. He refused to rule if any able, patriotic and honest labor leader should be deported on the unsubstantiated testimony of his most bitter enemy, and said such determination was for the Attorney General.

"Judge Welsh does make an important point, however," the committee statement continued. "He declares that without Lundeberg's testimony, the Attorney-General would have had no case against Bridges on alleged membership in the Communist Party."

The defense's appeal to the circuit court from Judge Welsh's decision will lengthen a case that has been dragging through the administrative and judicial agencies of government since 1938.

James Landis, then dean of Harvard Law School and now head of the U. S. Office of Civilian Defense, presided at the first hearing ordered by the Dept. of Labor. In what has come to be regarded as a monumental decision, Landis tore to shreds the testimony of a string of dope addicts, company spies and provocateurs who took the stand against the militant union leader.

Shortly afterward the Dept. of Justice—to which the Immigration Service had been transferred—ordered a second hearing and appointed Judge Sears of the New York courts to hear the case.

Chicago, Feb. 13—(FP)—The production time lost during 1942 through non-fatal injuries to workers was equal to a shutdown of the nation's entire shipbuilding industries for 54 days, the National Safety Council said in its annual survey Feb. 4.

If both fatal and non-fatal accidents to workers were counted, the survey added, the loss of time, material and damaged machinery would add up to the production of 22,000 heavy bombers.

The complete score card shows 93,000 killed and 9,300,000 injured at a cost of $3,700,000,000.

Industrial accidents increased 3 per cent over the previous year, but this can be accounted for by a 7 per cent rise in industrial employment, the council said.

A total of 47,500 workers were killed by accidents in 1942, 18,500 of these occurring on the job. Non-fatal injuries to workers numbered 4,100,000, of which some 1,750,000 were caused by ocupational accidents.

Ohio CIO Legislative Work Pushed

By TED COX

Cleveland, Feb. 13—CIO unions of this city speeded organization of local union legislative committees today as the Ohio State Legislature rushed to out-do Congress in seeking to destroy the labor movement.

Legislative committee chairmen from nearly 100 local unions, representing more than 85,000 CIO war production workers will meet in a city-wide legislative conference at CIO Hall Friday, February 26, it was announced by A. E. Stevenson, secretary of the Cleveland council.

TO SMASH UNIONS

One state bill, authored by Representative Earl M. French, would place all unions under control of a three-man commission to be appointed by Gov. John W. Bricker. It would place all union elections under supervision of the state; outlaw union shop agreements; outlaw all sympathetic union actions such as boycott, picketing, "coercion or intimidation" and limit strikes to those following a state-supervised strike vote.

Another bill to amend the National Guard act would pave the way for legalizing vigilantes and arming those viligantes in case of strikes. The bills are regarded here as trial balloons which, if they can be inflated in Ohio, will aid the nation-wide campaign of the National Association of Manufacturers to wage "civil war" against labor unions, the Roosevelt administration and all social reforms.

Youngstown CIO Acts On Politics

Youngstown, Ohio, Feb. 13—The Mahoning Valley Industrial Union Council is getting set to take an active part in politics, in line with suggestions from CIO Pres. Philip Murray and other national CIO leaders.

The "Bulletin," a new mimeographed publication of the council, helps keep union members informed about activities in the city. Backing this up, the council passed a resolution calling on affiliated locals to appoint members of a legislative committee, which will attend all meetings of the City Council, County Commissioners and the Board of Education. In this way, labor will be kept informed of actions taken and the legislators will have the workers' views on all major issues.

At the same time, the council voted to establish a Public Affairs Committee, which will coordinate the political activities of union locals and watch the voting records of all public officials in this area.

100-Year-Old Plant Goes CIO

North Andover, Mass., Feb. 13—The United Steelworkers of America has finally cracked a long-time stronghold of the open shop, the 100-year-old Davis & Furber Co.

The firm's 27-year effort to bar organization collapsed last week when the USA-CIO polled 392 out of 490 votes cast in an NLRB election.

The union is now making plans to organize the 125 white collar workers employed by the company, and negotiations for the production employes are scheduled soon.

Heading the USA's six-month organizing campaign was Intl. Rep. Jack Hurmich, who was assisted by CIO Representatives C. C. Smith, C. Lyons and R. Davis, as well as by a local organizing committee.

Fight Tory Bills:

'Control' Drive Hit By Golden

Washington, Feb. 13—Federal regulation of labor unions as proposed by certain anti-labor industrialists and their agents in Congress "is the first step toward the anti-democratic totalitarian state" and would seriously harm the war production drive, Clinton S. Golden, assistant to Pres. Murray as head of the USA-CIO, said in a radio broadcast this week.

Instead, we need "less regulatory and compulsory legislation and more facilities for education and promotion of understanding of our respective rights, duties and responsibilities," he said.

Golden took a vigorous swing at Congressional reactionaries such as "that eminent statesman, purveyor of hot biscuits and patron of hillbilly music, Senator Pappy O'Daniel of Texas" and "the distinguished prophet of doom, Congressman Clare Hoffman."

In place of outcries for gagging of unions, he proposed a representative group to study the real problems of war production—use and allocation of materials, the causes of absenteeism, the need for overall planning and the like.

Wool for the Cold

To help shivering workers, beset by shortages of coal, oil and stoves, WPB lifted its ban against using wool for men's, women's and children's bathrobes. The ban had been in effect since last summer. WPB also decided to permit an "additional sweep of 16 inches" for maternity-wear bathrobes.

Hobbs Bill Blow to U. S. Unity

Washington, Feb. 13—The Hobbs bill (HR 653), despite a sanctimonious mask of "anti-racketeering" is actually aimed "at weakening and undermining the labor unions," CIO Counsel Lee Pressman said in an American Forum of the Air broadcast this week.

He urged Rep. Hobbs and the Congress to take the war more seriously by laying aside their prejudices and plots against labor in the interests of national unity, needed for victory.

He also pointed out that the "racketeering" the Hobbs bill pretends to stop is amply cared for in existing laws, both state and Federal.

STATES' RIGHTS

He drew a sharp contrast between the way Hobbs and other polltaxers bleat about "states' rights" when polltax repeal comes up, and their dizzy speed in trying to put over Federal laws to hamstring labor and set aside state legislation dealing with unions.

"We most earnestly request Congress to cease its harassment of the millions of organized workers," he said. "Let there be an end to all forms of disunity. Organized labor has no objective other than to seek the complete unity of all Americans behind our Commander in Chief in our forward march to an early and decisive victory over fascist enemies."

CIO Auto Union Opens New Washington Office

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The United Automobile Workers this week announced the opening of a Washington bureau under the direction of the union's vice presidents, Richard T. Frankensteen and Walter P. Reuther. The bureau will seek to represent the organization's point of view before all war-time agencies.

By assignment of R. J. Thomas, UAW president, Reuther will have charge of union problems touching on the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission, the Office of Economic Stabilization and the Office of Price Administration.

Frankensteen will be in charge of matters relating to the National War Labor Board, the National Labor Relations Board, the Dept. of Labor and Federal legislation.

LARGE STAFF

The UAW Washington bureau will have several full-time representatives working under the direction of Frankensteen and Reuther. Donald Montgomery, formerly consumers' counsel at the Dept. of Agriculture, and Kenneth Cole, formerly executive head of the Toledo, O., CIO Council, will be assistants to Reuther.

Frankensteen's staff consists of Morris Field and William B. Taylor. Reuther and Frankensteen will spend as much time in Washington as their assignments require, at the same time retaining their organizational assignments at the Detroit headquarters of the UAW and in the field.

Montgomery, who will serve as consumers counsel for the UAW, said that the UAW consumer program "will seek national control of the prices and supplies of goods available for family living. For the winning of the war it will mobilize UAW-CIO membership behind the President's declaration of Congress on January 11 that 'we must assure each citizen that necessities of life at prices which he can pay.'

"For the winning of the peace it will urge positive steps, beginning now, to give concrete expression to the third of the Four Freedoms—Freedom from Want."

OFFERS CONSUMER PROGRAM

Asserting that a planned and efficient direction of the civilian economy by the Federal government is necessary immediately, Montgomery said that costs of living must be stabilized, scarce supplies distributed in accordance with needs, and needy families assisted in getting their share of necessities.

"Privileges and favoritism have no place in the issuance of weapons and ammunition to our fighting men at the front. They can have no place in sharing the scarce supplies available to civilians in wartime.

"Selfish interests long delayed conversion of manufacturing industries to war production. Similar interests stand in the way of programs for fair sharing of consumer goods, and are fighting against any form of price control that is strong enough to stop further rise in the cost of living."

The full weight of the UAW's 780,000 members, Montgomery declared, will be thrown behind support of necessary government action on the consumer front, and other labor and consumer organizations will be urged to join with the UAW on civilian protection programs.

WLB Nixes Packers' Pay Hike

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—While demands continued to mount throughout the nation for revision of the War Labor Board's 15 per cent Little Steel formula in order to meet rising living costs, the WLB this week turned thumbs down on a proposed wage increase for employes of four major packing companies.

In holding strictly to the formula, the WLB over-ruled demands of the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, CIO, and of a WLB panel, which had pared down the union's requested increase from an original 20 cents an hour to 5½ cents an hour.

Labor members of the Board dissented from the majority ruling, which affects 65,000 workers in plants of Armour, Wilson, Swift and Cudahy.

In its decision the WLB majority said it was "dutybound" to stabilize wages at the Sept. 15, 1942 level. It ruled out the union's pay boost request on grounds that the packinghouse workers have already received increases of 15% in hourly rates since Jan. 1, 1941.

The CIO Board last week pointed out that many factors in the stabilization program outlined by Pres. Roosevelt months ago have broken down. To correct the situation it urged strict price control, all-round rationing of scarce goods, and wage increases to wipe out substandard conditions and meet recent jumps in the cost of living.

Urge WLB Revise Wage Formula

Philadelphia, Feb. 13—Revision or elimination of the War Labor Board's 15 per cent "Little Steel" formula was advocated today by Sol Stettin, manager of the Textile Workers Union South Jersey Joint Board and organizational director for the TWUA in eastern Pennsylvania.

Stettin told a conference representing more than 3,000 textile workers that the cost of living is continuing to increase. Although many workers in the area have received a 15 per cent wage boost, under the formula, many are still averaging only 55 cents an hour.

The union, he added, has appealed a WLB refusal to okay a wage boost at the E. W. Twitchell Co., where employes receive less than the 55-cent average.

Hit New Tory Plan to Harass U. S. Agencies

Washington, Feb. 13—CIO opposition to the McKellar bill (S 575) requiring Senate confirmation at four-year periods of government workers earning $4,500 or more was expressed this week by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative.

Writing to Sen. Van Nuys, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Cowan pointed out that the bill would seriously hamper war agencies by making Federal jobs insecure, thus discouraging applicants, and by causing endless delays through Senate wrangles on confirmation.

"When Senate confirmation cannot be made quickly because of other more vital issues, war agencies of our government will be held up in their work," Cowan wrote. "Valuable time will thus be lost also to the government departments in their prime function of winning the war."

Fiske in Army

Cumberland, Md., Feb. 13—Mel Fiske, editor of the Western Maryland edition of the CIO NEWS and of Victory, official organ of the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, has left his jobs to enter the Army.

PRICES MOVING UP: This chart, prepared by Consumers Union, shows that the cost of living has increased almost 22 per cent since August, 1939; retail clothing is up 27 per cent; wholesale prices 33 per cent; retail food prices 40 per cent; and basic commodities 42 per cent.

Opposition to Dies Doubles In House

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The Dies Committee resolution, rushed through Congress in an obvious attempt to head off full mobilization against it, went through this week with a vote of 302 to 94.

The "nay" vote against the un-American smear group was more than twice the vote of last year, which reached 46 on renewal of the committee and 64 on the request for funds. This week's renewal vote is expected to be followed very soon by a new Dies demand for more of the taxpayers' money.

Debate for the resolution was marked by the usual tactics of Dies and his friends—Ham Fish, Gene Cox of Georgia and their crew—of smearing labor, the government war agencies, and totally ignoring fascists and Nazi agents.

94 HAILED BY CIO

The 94 Congressmen who voted to stop Dies' sabotage were congratulated by the CIO in a letter urging them to follow up with personal appearance before the Accounts Committee that hands out the money and to work and vote against an appropriation on the floor of the House.

Success of the Dies renewal prompted the defeatists to introduce the Smith resolution for a universal smear probe of government agencies. The resolution passed in a frenzy of talk on "bureaucracy" by a vote of 294 to 50.

Debate against it pointed sharply to the committee's four-year record of sheltering Hitler-helpers while concentrating on labor and progressives generally, with special attention to win-the-war agencies and individuals in the government.

PROMOTE DISUNITY

Several Congressmen emphasized Dies' role as promoter of disunity among the United Nations, citing his continuous attacks on the administration for the fighting alliance with the Soviet Union and his refusal to aid the war against fascism.

"The committee was originally appointed to investigate subversive and un-American activities and un-American organizations," said Rep. Sabath of Illinois, chairman of the House Rules Committee. "This they have not done. . . . They seem to forget that we are at war with Hitler and the Japs, and not with Russia."

Rep. Sadowski of Michigan also put a finger on this accusation when he said: "While our Army and Navy are driving the Japs out of Guadalcanal; while our boys and

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The CIO Executive Board, at its meeting last week, condemned in no uncertain terms the coming Congressional investigation of the Federal Communications Commission.

At the same it called upon Atty. Gen. Biddle "to investigate the charges of improper activities" of Rep. Eugene Cox (D) of Georgia, sponsor of the smear probe. FCC hearings have brought evidence that Cox received $2,500 from a Georgia radio company after he had used his Congressional office to seek speedy action from the Commission on the station's petition for a broadcasting license.

Federal law makes it a felony for a Congressman to accept payments for service before government agencies.

THREE CHARGES

In discussing the probe of the FCC which Cox wangled from the House of Representatives, the CIO Board charged that:

1. Sponsors of the investigation have launched an attack on Pres. Roosevelt and administrative agencies of government "under the guise of investigating bureauracy."

2. Conduct of the probe by its sponsors will have the effect of "hindering the development of a war program for the communications industry."

3. Cox, having "improperly rendered services for certain broadcasting stations . . . is not qualified to conduct such an investigation."

State CIO's Act on Bills

Washington, Feb. 13 — Reports coming into the CIO national office from state affiliates show increasing activity on legislative action in the assemblies.

The Tennessee Council has sent a detailed memo to all state legislators setting out CIO's win-the-war activity and pointing out that anti-union measures are detrimental to the war production drive.

The Michigan Council has also drawn up a detailed program with specific proposals covering taxation, workers' welfare, social security, women in industry, etc.

The Maryland Council recently held a legislative conference in Cumberland, Md., to work out a preliminary action program for its state legislature.

The Pennsylvania CIO in its program draws a contrast between CIO's victory program and efforts of anti-union forces in the General Assembly to cripple unions in line with similar drives by anti-victory groups in the U. S. Congress.

Workers Know Score on Taxes, Congress Told

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—American war workers are experts on taxation in the very real sense of knowing "the direct relationship between a tax program and war production," Pres. Philip Murray told the House Ways and Means Committee in testimony presented for him this week.

"They know that the still unchecked spiral of rising living costs has made it literally impossible for taxation to cut into certain income levels without cutting into necessary food and clothing budgets," Murray said in the statement presented for him by CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan.

"They know that rising living costs on the one hand and necessary production speedups and other health strains on the other, have produced a situation where increased taxation at certain income levels means not merely less food, not merely inadequate nutrition, but as a consequence, lowered productive efficiency in war work."

PRICES, RATIONING

A strong home front for victory demands economic planning and stabilization on an overall scale, Murray said, on the basis of sound taxation, strict price control and universal rationing.

"The workers know that mobilization for war will be sadly affected by any tax program which would interfere with an effective rationing program by making it impossible for some groups to purchase their share of the national food and other necessities to enable them to continue functioning effectively for the war effort."

Current tax bill hearings are chiefly concerned with "pay-as-you-go" systems, and a large part of Murray's testimony was devoted to this question—including a sharp criticism of the phony Ruml plan for forgiving taxes on the rich.

Workers favor pay-as-you-go by spreading tax payments on a pay check basis, Murray said. This must be based on the size of the pay check at the time payment is made, to avoid the difficulty of paying larger taxes carried over from a year when wages were higher to a period of decreased earnings.

The Ruml plan is not a real pay-as-you-go affair, he pointed out, since it is "still based on the previous year's earnings no matter how many installment payments are provided."

In addition, the Ruml plan provides for huge cash windfalls for the wealthy who are best able to pay a real win-the-war tax bill. This is seen in the fact that $100,000 a year incomes would clean up as much as $64,000 under the Ruml plan, while the low income groups who can least afford to pay would not benefit.

Puncture Ruml Plan Ballyhoo

Washington, Feb. 13—Here are a few cold figures on what the Ruml plan, widely ballyhooed as a way out for tax harassed Americans, would really do. They were presented to the House Ways and Means Committee this week by Russ Nixon for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

The Ruml plan would cancel some $10 billion in income tax debts. About 1.5 per cent of income tax payers would get 50 per cent of the benefits under the plan. Or, put this way: 560,000 income tax payers would get the same amount of benefit as the 38 million other taxpayers would get.

A man with a million dollar income in 1942 would get gravy to the tune of $854,000 under the plan. The $100,000 man would clean up close to $65,000.

The UE testimony also took a crack at the huge publicity build-up for the Ruml plan, Nixon declaring: "A campaign such as has surrounded the Ruml plan to put over on the American people by misrepresentation and confusion a coldly calculated scheme to enrich the few and burden the many, seriously harms the war effort."

Councils Aid Legislative Campaign

Washington, Feb. 13—CIO industrial union councils throughout the country are being mobilized behind labor's fight for a win-the-war legislative program, Councils Director John Brophy reported to the CIO Executive Board meeting.

Brophy pointed out that communications sent to international unions on congressional questions are also being mailed out to the councils, and the city and state groups have been urged to cooperate in setting up special legislative committees.

"It has been pointed out to councils that the establishment of such committees will facilitate our work and that in all important matters the councils themselves should act directly, and should also get their affiliated organizations to take parallel action," Brophy said.

The report strongly urged local unions to participate in the affairs of city and state councils.

"Some of our organizations seem to forget that the affiliation of their local unions is required by the CIO constitution, and that there can be no excuse whatsoever for non-affiliation," Brophy declared.

New York, Feb. 13—Three more election victories today helped speed the roganizing drive of the United Office & Professional Workers among white collar employes of the movie industry.

Release Materials

Critical materials to construct 1500 buses, 3515 bus bodies, 220 street cars, 75 trolley coaches and 1000 sedan conversions will be made available under a new WPB policy decision to alleviate the transportation problem of civilians, WPB declared last week.

United We Stand

One of the best and most significant pieces of American news in a long while is CIO Pres. Murray's announcement of a legislative alliance between the AFL, the CIO, the railroad Brotherhoods and the National Farmers Union.

The joint legislative strength of the 13 million members of these organizations can be a tremendous driving force for national welfare, for victory and for long-range social progress.

The enemies of labor and the working farmers have too long gotten away with murder by playing one section of labor against another, and by playing off the farmers against all labor. They can be stopped in their tracks by a real united front, based on the genuine common interests of all workers of factory and farm.

The proposed alliance is not only of vital importance for its effect upon the present Congress, it is also pregnant with possibilities for future fruitful cooperation and farmer-labor unity.

No sectional divisions or indifference must be allowed to interfere with the energetic promotion of this most natural and constructive alliance.

Second-Class Citizens?

"Why are three and a quarter millions of our citizens grossly discriminated against, by the fact of their not being allowed to mediate or arbitrate their disputes, or bargain collectively with their employers?"

That's the question that CIO President Murray asked the country in a recent nationwide broadcast on the Labor for Victory program, speaking on behalf of the State, County & Municipal Workers union of the CIO.

While labor in private industry has won the right to organize, to bargain collectively, and to mediate and arbitrate differences through the machinery of the War Labor Board, most of the employes of state and local governments are still denied these rights, though their needs and problems are no different from those of other workers, Murray pointed out.

"They are treated as second-class citizens," he said.

While this system was privately owned, these workers enjoyed through the CIO Transport Workers Union the same rights as other industrial workers. They had union-shop agreements and full opportunity to negotiate their grievances and demands with the companies through collective bargaining.

But since the city took over, these New York transit workers have been relegated to the status of second-class citizens. Their wages have dropped far behind rising living costs. But Mayor LaGuardia and the Board of Transportation arrogantly refuse to bargain collectively with their union or even to submit its wage demands to arbitration. And the workers have been denied recourse to the War Labor Board.

The whole CIO demands to know the answer to President Murray's question, both from Mayor LaGuardia and from every other state or local government that denies to its employes their basic rights as American citizens.

CIO Tax Program

The tax program adopted by the CIO executive board is designed to furnish the funds necessary to finance the war through taxation based on ability to pay, which will leave low-income groups with enough to maintain their health and productive efficiency.

The CIO therefore asks exemption from taxation for single persons earning $800 or less and married couples earning $1500 or less, with an additional allowance of $400 for each dependent.

It urges increased taxation on higher incomes and a limit of $25,000 on net income after taxes.

It calls for the elimination of present loopholes and special privileges for the wealthy.

It asks for an increase in corporate profits taxation from 40 to 55%, and for a 100% excess profits tax on profits of more than 5% on the first 10 million of invested capital and 4% on all amounts above that.

The CIO firmly opposes any sales tax. It calls for the repeal of the so-called "victory tax," which like the sales tax soaks the poor and spares the rich.

Finally, the CIO calls for an expanded social security program and for a real pay-as-you-go tax system, not the Ruml plan.

The CIO's program is a real win-the-war tax program. Let's get behind it, and let Congress know how we feel.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

ONCE upon a time a "national issue" was something you could take or leave.

Some people rather enjoyed them. They were something to snooze over in the papers on a rainy Sunday, or even to go to a meeting about—when the neighborhood movie was no good.

Others had no time for "national issues"—couldn't see what they had to do with their own pressing family affairs, and let the politicians worry about them.

But them days are gone—at any rate for the duration.

Nowadays national issues walk right into your home and turn off the heat. A national issue stands in your kitchen and tells the wife what to feed you for supper.

You can't walk to the store to do some shopping without tripping over several national issues.

As for pay-day—every penny you draw has been tossed about by a dozen national issues before it ever gets to your pocket.

Once upon a time, your wages might be fixed by local negotiations, and national issues could be left to the delegates to national conventions.

But nowadays nearly every wage demand heads right for Washington. What you get depends on national issues like Presidential executive orders, War Labor Board policies, the Little Steel formula, etc.

Before you can draw your pay or spend it, the national Congress sticks its fingers into your pay envelope. The taxes it votes tell you how much or how little of your wages you can keep.

But even after you've subtracted taxes from wages, you still don't know where you're at, without consulting several more national issues.

How much your wages will buy depends on the national issue of price control. And before you can go to the store and know what you'll get, you're slap up against the national issue of rationing.

So the national issues dealt with by the CIO national executive board are not two or three times removed from your local union or your own dinner table.

There's a direct hookup now between every one of us and Washington. And all of the immediate, practical, bread-and-butter problems of every member, every local and every international are merged into big national problems.

So let's look at some of the national issues handled by the last CIO executive board meeting as our own personal problems—for that's what they are these days.

Legislation. The federal Congress can be pretty darned personal nowadays. It can say how many hours you'll work and whether or not you draw overtime pay. It can fix your wages by the way it regulates agencies like the War Labor Board.

Then Congress decides what taxes you'll pay—and that ain't hay. It says how much you'll pay for social security and how much you'll get. And it has plenty to do with what you can buy at the store, through its powers over the executive agencies that apply price control and rationing.

Congress can also vote life or death for your labor union. It can uphold collective bargaining, or it can regulate and hamstring your union out of all useful existence. The CIO board heard reports on union-busting bills presented to this Congress that would curl your hair.

It voted for the setting up of legislative committees in every city and every local union, and to stir up the whole membership to realize everything depends on how much every one of us can influence Congress in the right direction.

Wage Policy. By now we all know wages don't mean much by themselves. What we get depends as much on price control, rationing and taxation as it does on wage rates.

So, to show its vocabulary, the board said, "the wage policy of the nation must be an integral part of the entire economic stabilization program," and then paused for breath.

In other words, the most important thing is to keep wages and prices on speaking terms, so they don't chase each other to crazy inflation—and to get universal rationing, effective price control and a fair tax program, so everyone can get enough to eat and so the war can be financed without making war workers anemic.

Because all this hasn't been done yet, living costs have run away from wages. So the CIO board called for wage adjustments to establish the proper relationship between the two, and for the immediate stabilization of all economic factors as well as wages.

Latin American Labor Asks Ties with CIO for Democratic Victory

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—Close unity between the CIO and the Confederation of Latin-American Workers (CTAL) will hasten victory for all democratic forces in the Western Hemisphere and will help to ensure a people's peace after the war, Lombardo Toledano, CTAL leader, said in a visit to the CIO Executive Board meeting here.

Toledano's speech to the board, in which he reported on his recent trip through the Latin-American republics, was followed by concrete action with President Murray's selection of an enlarged committee on relations between CIO and CTAL, headed by Jacob S. Potofsky, vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

His Latin-American trip, Toledano said, had for its purpose the welding of the people there in anti-Axis unity, and to bring them closer to the people of the U. S. An immediate result, he pointed out, was the unification of labor movements in several of the republics and their coordination in the CTAL, which now represents the workers of all nations below the Rio Grande.

COLONIAL QUESTION

In an interview with THE CIO NEWS, Toledano told of and emphasized the importance of working unity between the two Western Hemisphere labor movements as a long step toward full unity of workers throughout the United Nations.

This unity must be based on equality, he explained, since only in this way will the Latin-American masses become fully aware of the strength and common aspirations for freedom of the workers to the north.

This will wipe out the memory of what he called "the negative aspects" of U. S.-Latin-American relations in the past, since the workers in Latin-American are keenly sensitive on colonial policy and on questions of imperialism.

FASCIST ACTIVITY

"Our people have always been hostile to imperialism," he said, "since from their own experience the semi-colonial peoples know what imperialism means—better, in fact, than they understand the problems of workers in the big and powerful industrial nations."

Taking the Indian problem as an example, he declared that national independence to bring India into full mobilization against the Axis would provide a tremendous boost in mobilizing Latin-American workers as well.

The spread of the war against the Axis to Latin-America has forced both Axis agents and native fascist groups to change their tactics, Toledano said. No longer do they openly praise Hitler and Japan. Instead, the Falangists, controlled by the Axis through Franco Spain, attack Germany, Britain, the Soviet Union and the U. S. as anti-Latin-American and anti-religious, lumping all together.

Straight Axis agents, nationals of Germany, Japan and Italy, have been forced under cover but continue to maintain a large spy network in several of the republics.

Toledano brought greetings not only from the CTAL and its affiliates but also from national leaders, he told the CIO board. He revealed that a message given him by President Murray to Latin-American workers evoked great response at all the meetings and demonstrations he addressed.

Amplifying this in the interview, Toledano proposed close cultural relations between the CIO and the CTAL as an important aspect of working unity. He suggested interchange of material designed to inform both CIO and CTAL members on the aims and programs of the two labor movements.

In his welcome to Toledano at the meeting, President Murray expressed the CIO's appreciation for his visit and speech and the hope for close working ties with the CTAL.

Murray Urges:

'Good Labor' Policy For Latin America

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—"We should have a good labor policy to match our country's good neighbor policy," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said in a speech here advocating closer relations between United States labor and the labor movements of Latin-America and of all the United Nations.

Murray spoke at a banquet in honor of Vicente Lombardo Toledano, president of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor, under the auspices of the New York CIO, the Jewish Labor Committee and the Council for PanAmerican Democracy.

Jacob S. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers and chairman of the newly-formed CIO committee on Latin-American relations, presided over the meeting.

TOLEDANO SPEAKS

Toledano spoke on the efforts of labor in the Latin-American countries to combat the fifth columnists, who seek to create division between Anglo-Saxon America and Spanish America. He expressed the hope that the Latin-American Conferation of Labor, which unites the labor movements of all the Latin-American countries, would eventually lead to a confederation of workers of the whole American continent.

Murray's speech was marked by a fervent plea for international labor unity, which he said "is necessary to win the war by achieving President Roosevelt's goal of the unconditional surrender of our enemies, and is also necessary to win the peace.

CITES LABOR AIMS

"I hope," Murray said, "that the trade unions of the world will combine to prevent the outbreak of another war and another conspiracy to destroy democracy.

"I hope the influence of the labor unions will be used against all forms of racial discrimination and pograms and to achieve the aims of the Atlantic Charter."

Murray said the newly-formed CIO Latin-American committee will engage in discussions with Toledano and with the labor movements of all Latin-American countries and has full power to work out plans for closer relations for the approval of the CIO Executive Board.

"I hope the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods will join with the CIO in the creation of healthy relations and close bonds of brotherhood with the labor movements of Latin-America," he added.

TELLS OF STRUGGLES

Toledano traced the struggles of Latin-American countries for independence and democracy, pointing out that the whole history of these struggles made their peoples anti-fascist.

"We know this is our war," he said, "because the Axis menaces the ideals of our struggles for independence." The new tactics of the fifth column in Latin-America, Toledano said, is to promote "Hispanidad," Spanish colonialism, to divide Anglo-Saxon America from Spanish America.

"Latin-American organized labor will fight against the national chauvinism of Hispanidad that would separate the Americas," Toledano declared. "We have Spanish blood, yes. But we also have Indian blood, Negro blood and the strains of other European and Oriental peoples that have settled in our countries. We are Americans."

Calling for united labor effort to raise standards of living, Toledano said that Latin-American labor distinguishes between the American trusts "that have bled us" and the American people.

"I am sure the democratic forces in all our countries are powerful enough to build in America a real new world," he asserted.

FDR Orders 48-Hour Week; Byrnes OKs Overtime Pay

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—A 48-hour minimum work week was called for by President Roosevelt in an order issued this week and applied in 32 "critical labor shortage areas" by Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt.

"For the duration of the war, no plant, factory or other place of employment shall be deemed to be making the most effective utilization of its manpower if the minimum work week therein is less than 48 hours per week," the order said.

The order was amplified in a radio talk by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, who said that overtime pay rates would be continued "as an effective aid to increased production during the war."

At the same time, the War Labor Board announced its decision in the Packinghouse Workers case, overriding the panel decision by denying a wage increase to some 180,000 workers in the meat packing industry.

TALK ON INFLATION

Byrnes' radio talk was devoted to steps against inflation and other means of keeping the home front strong, to back up plans which "contemplate, within a measurable period of time, the invasion of Europe."

In a general review of the situation, Byrnes said that these steps include holding prices at present levels, incentive payments to farmers, taxes to take up the "$16 billion gap" in national income, plus the 48-hour week directive. He also said that the Little Steel formula would stand.

House Vote Against Dies Reaches 94

our English allies are giving the enemy hell over in Africa; while our Russian allies are annihilating the Nazi hordes at Kursk, Kharkov and Rostov, the Dies Committee comes here for another fat appropriation to fight organized labor, teachers, professors, and economists who have worked to create higher living standards for the common man in America."

HITS COMMITTEE

Rep. Gale of Minnesota put his description in an ironic nutshell when he said: "A fine precedent—this Dies Committee—poorly conceived and worse in execution. I hope we will have the courage to vote down this parody of the American way."

Rep. Gale's hope, and the hope of other speakers, did not come true. However, 94 Congressmen voted against the un-American sabotage committee. Previously, a majority voted to reinstate a Negro government employe, Wm. Pickens of Treasury, who had been fired in a wave of red-baiting touched off by Dies earlier in the week.

THEY'RE operating all over the world in the fighting forces of the United Nations—tens of thousands of these big, rugged, powerful, multiple-drive Studebaker military trucks.

And tens of thousands more are time-tabled to join up with them as fast as possible. The great Studebaker factories are turning out millions of dollars worth of these war trucks every week.

From builder of commercial trucks in peacetime, to one of the largest makers of military trucks in wartime, is a logical transition for Studebaker, America's oldest manufacturer of highway transportation.

For the sixth time in a national emergency, Studebaker has answered the government's call for the production of army transport on a large scale. And when decisive victory is achieved, finer, more economical Studebaker trucks than ever will be available for civilian use.

Today, the traditional Studebaker watchword—always give more than you promise—has new and greater significance.

Studebaker is proud of its assignments in the arming of our Nation and its Allies.

Ask Cities, States Grant 'New Deal' To Employes

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The case of the three and a quarter million workers who make the wheels of state and local government bodies go around but are refused the right to bargain collectively with their employers was presented by CIO Pres. Philip Murray on the Labor for Victory radio program last Sunday.

This discrimination against the CIO's State, County and Municipal Workers, Murray said, affects not only the members of this union, but all organized labor.

"To say that in the case of these three and a quarter million men and women, their employer is the government, and labor laws do not affect government employers" Murray, declared "is not merely sidestepping the issue—it is callously and cynically thwarting the sense and spirit of the legislation which has been built up in this country in order to make labor and management an efficient team.

Depriving these workers of their fundamental labor rights, Murray asserted, gives them the status of second-class citizens. Describing the valuable services performed by these employes of state, county and city governments in hospitals, libraries, and other public institutions, Murray said there "would be chaos and fury in our cities," if the services they performed suddenly stopped.

"But did you ever stop to think what sort of standard of living these people enjoy? Murray asked. "Enjoy is not the right work," he added, and gave a figures showing the low average earnings of these workers, two-fifths of whom earn $1,000 a year, or less.

Europe Told Of Labor's Peace Aims

New York, Feb. 13—American workers are striving for victory over the Axis and many are hoping for a peace which will establish a "democratic world-wide government, strong enough to enforce general disarmament and preserve the peace," John Brophy, CIO Councils Director, declared in a shortwave broadcast to the people of Europe.

Brophy's speech, sponsored by the CIO War Relief Committee and the OWI, told European workers that "the progressive labor forces in the United States will afford strong support to the kind of international program that Vice-Pres. Henry Wallace has been talking about."

Discussing the need for vast increases in the output of industrial and agricultural goods, the CIO official declared:

"It is our hope that American production, both in industry and on the farm, can be maintained at levels which will make it possible for us to lend immediate aid in terms of food, clothing, shelter and medical supplies to all the newly-freed people of every country in the world."

Smear Sheet Libels Workers

Cleveland, Feb. 13—Latest use of the fascist press to stir up dissension in the labor movement and break up national war unity is the circulation of a four-page sheet, POLICE, to a selected list throughout the country.

POLICE, a poorly written sheet, financed by anonymous contributors, used the typical Hitler tactics of "telling a big enough lie" and red-baiting most union leaders here. It libeled a former Furniture Workers business agent because he was deferred two extra weeks to settle union business and charged U. S. Army officers with being "communist dominated."

The sheet is published from time to time by John P. Moran who styles himself "director of the League for Justice." That League was virtually disbanded years ago and its supporters have almost unanimously denounced Moran, who was sent to the Ohio penitentiary for embezzling funds from a Machinists union and who was disbarred for stealing money from a client.

Jess Aquino, 45, Dies

Huntington, W. Va. Feb. 13—Jess Aquino, widely-known international representative of the CIO United Steelworkers of America, died this week following an operation. He was about 45 years old.

Aquino was born in McDowell County, W. Va., and had spent most of his life in this state. For many years an official of the United Mine Workers, he became an international representative of the USA-CIO in 1941.

WOMEN'S CORNER

OPA Sets Up Price Checking Squadrons

By ELEANOR FOWLER
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

OPA wants 60,000 volunteer price checkers. This is news that CIO auxiliaries, along with the rest of the labor movement have been waiting for for almost a year. It marks the beginning of a real effort to secure compliance with price control and rationing regulations throughout the country. And it's our responsibility to see that the system works.

Here is the plan. An order has already gone out that a price panel shall be set up in each of the 5600 war price and rationing boards. The price panel is to be composed of three people appointed in the same manner as other board members. The suggestion is that one labor representative and one lawyer be included on the panel.

Six to twelve volunteer price checkers are to be recruited to work under the direction of each price panel. They will register for this work with OCD. They will be trained, will pass examinations and will be issued credentials as official representatives of OPA. They will start work about April 1 when the new system of food prices is expected to go into effect.

Each volunteer will be assigned to ten or more retail food stores. The first job will be to visit each store and explain the new regulations. After an interval of more training the volunteers will go back to each store to check on whether there has been proper posting of prices. Finally, after still another training period, the volunteers will be prepared to check on complaints.

HOW THEY'LL WORK

The volunteers will report regularly to the price panel of their price and rationing boards. If any of the stores they are checking repeatedly violate regulations, the price panel will call in the storekeeper and discuss the matter with him. If he still does not comply, they will report the case to the district office of OPA for investigation and action by paid OPA inspectors.

Volunteers will not be expected to bring suit against retailers, or to testify against them in court cases. Their function and that of the price panel will be to be sure that the merchant understands OPA regulations and corrects any errors he may make.

Here's a chance for housewives to see that price control works. Here's a chance to help eliminate the black market. Let's get busy. Recruiting of volunteers starts now. If you can promise to give three or four hours, two or three days a week to price checking, register now with your local civilian defense volunteer office as a price checker.

STEEL SCRAP NEEDED

President Murray has called on all CIO unions and auxiliaries to help meet the critical scrap shortage which prevents all-out production of badly needed steel for all types of war supplies. He points out that 1,000,000 tons of steel and 10,000 tons of pure tin can be recovered from tin cans.

Here's a program every CIO housewife can participate in. Save every tin can, wash it and remove the label, remove the top and bottom, lay them inside the can and step on it. Find out from your local salvage committee when collections will be made.

Joint action by union and auxiliary salvage committees to enlist every CIO home in the tin can salvage drive is urged by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO in the February Washington newsletter.

OPA Decentralizes

Putting more teeth in OPA's price control machinery, the OPA last week gave state directors and district managers the power to issue license warning notices to dealers who violate price regulations. Previously, only the regional directors had the authority.

Planning Your Menus For Health

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Build your meals around a general pattern and you'll find it easier to fit in the foods in your pantry along with yesterdays leftovers.

Here is one pattern that finds a place for all the foods necessary for a balanced diet. Use it as a guide in planning your menus.

GUIDE TO PLANNING MENUS

Breakfast—Sliced fruit (fresh or stewed) or fruit juice, hot cereal, whole grain bread (toast or plain), butter and preserves, coffee, postum or milk.

Lunch—Hot soup, sandwich (open or grilled on whole wheat bread), cake or pie, coffee, tea or milk.

Dinner—Meat dish or meat substitute, potatoes and vegetable (one or two), salad (plain or with dressing), fruit (fresh or stewed), cookies, coffee, tea or milk.

Don't spend all your time planning your menus and then deprive your family of the nourishment they need by careless and improper handling of food.

Keep these hints in mind when preparing your meals to avoid loss of those precious vitamins.

AVOID LOSS OF VITAMINS

Use as litle water as possible and cook quickly in a covered pot. Avoid stirring.

Don't add soda; it destroys the vitamins.

Cut carrots just before using. Cut them lengthwise, the way the cells grow.

Don't peel carrots. Scrub them with a vegetable brush.

Fix all salads just before using. Don't expose the cut edges to the air too long.

Use the outer leaves of cabbage for soups, also chopped celery tops and chopped parsley.

Save your vitamins and you'll save on your food bill.

Next Week: More about vitamins and how to fit them in our menus.

Unions Mobilize In Michigan To Aid Farmers

Detroit, Feb. 13—A plan for mobilizing all possible industrial workers as a volunteer reserve force to help farmers produce a record crop is being actively pushed by the Michigan CIO Council.

President August Scholle wrote to all affiliated locals calling for action in line with suggestions issued by the national CIO for cooperation with the farmers on the food program.

Scholle said he was asking all locals and councils, outside the immediate Detroit area "to establish as soon as possible a headquarters, either at the local or council office or in cooperation with other civic organizations, for the purpose of registering all shop workers and particularly members of the CIO who will volunteer part of their spare time to work on farms in their respective areas."

He urged that women's auxiliaries or wives of union members volunteer to staff the registration offices.

The locals were told that "reasonable rates of pay should be established" for the agricultural work done by the worker-volunteers, with consideration for transportation costs included in the wage structure.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Reactionary speed showed results for the anti-victory forces in Congress this week, when the Dies Committee resolution and the Smith resolution to conduct a universal smear of all government war agencies went through within two days.

As THE CIO NEWS goes to press, the same danger threatens on the Hobbs bill (HR653) and on the appropriation for the Dies Committee. CIO and all labor will have to work as fast as the defeatists to mobilize to show results.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Hobbs Bill HR 653	Hamstrings unions and war production under mask of "anti-racketeering."	Out of Rules Com., headed for floor.	Wire Reps. Martin, McCormack and your own Rep. if still up. Prepare to write Senators on Senate version.
Dies Com.	Com. renewed for two years. New appropriation next step.		Wire your Rep. to appear at Ho. Accounts Co., speak and vote against more money.
1943 tax bill	Ho. Ways and Means finishing hearings on "pay-as-you go," getting ready for hearings on bills for 1943. Move to kill $25,000 limit as ordered by President.		Still tell your Rep. nix on Ruml plan. Keep up fire on real win-war taxes.
Poll tax repeal	Several bills offered, buried in committee. Discharge petition coming up soon.		Urge your Rep. to pledge to sign petition.
Pepper-Kilgore bill S 607	Creates central plan and agency for total war mobilization.	Buried in Sen. Military Com.	Wire Sens. to get bill out of committee, vote for it on floor.
H. Res. 36 Tolan Com.	Renews Tolan Com., aids total war mobilization.	Ho. Rules Com.	Wire your Rep. to get bill out, vote for it.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Noel R. Beddow, CIO regional director in Alabama, advises that the USA-CIO continues on the march to organize the unorganized. Out of 76 employes in the unit at the plant of the Southern Line Material Company in Birmingham, 74 voted for the CIO.

Representative Joe Applebaum of the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, reports an election victory at the American Agriculture, E. St. Louis, Ill., by a vote of 51 for CIO to 15 for District 50.

James J. Matles, director of organization, UERMWA, advises that during the past week, the CIO won the following elections: General Motors Corporation, Delco Appliance Division, Rochester, N. J., 1881 to 1364. CIO Regional Director Hugh Thompson and staff assisted in this fine victory; Tinius Olsen Company, Philadelphia, Pa., 101 to 13; General Electric, Genelco, Peterboro, Canada, 1138 to 265; Cleveland Commutator Company, Ohio, 44 to 17; Domestic Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles, Calif., 92 to 23. A grand accomplishment; keep it up, boys!

Hugh Thompson, CIO regional director in Buffalo, reports an election won by the UCAPAWA at the Sardik Food Company, Lockport, N. Y., by a vote of 42 for CIO to 14 for the AFL.

Win in Philadelphia

George Craft, CIO regional director in Philadelphia, advises of two election victories, as follows: Cramps Shipbuilding Company, IUMSWA-CIO, received 130 votes to 42 for no union; I. J. Horstmann & Sons, Fur and Leather Workers Union received 38 votes to 29 for no union.

Following up the splendid accomplishment in the industrial insurance field, the UOPWA won victories by a two-to-one vote among the white collar workers in the front offices of the New York exchanges of Loew's, Inc., 20th Century-Fox Film Corp. and the United Artists Corporation, where the CIO was designated as the collective bargaining agent. A breakdown of the vote shows as follows: Loew's, 31 to 19; 20th-Fox, 17 to 10, and UA seven to three. They further report that at a full membership meeting of the employes of the United Mutual Benefit Association, largest Negro institution in the State of New York, the workers voted unanimously to affiliate with the UOWPA-CIO.

Woodworkers Win Poll

Adolph Germer, director of organization, IWA-CIO, reports the results of the election at the Anderson-Tully Lumber Company in Memphis, Tenn., as follows: 526 for CIO to 101 for no union. Brother John Hawkins, IWA international representative, directed the campaign and was assisted by CIO Field Representative William Henderson. The IWA won another election at the Fairhurst Lumber Company, near Eugene, Ore., by a vote of 21 for CIO to none for no union.

Paul R. Christopher, CIO regional director in Tennessee, reports an election victory in behalf of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers at the Henry I. Siegel Company (pants factory) in Dickson, Tenn., by a vote of 409 for CIO to 141. Brother Carl F. Albrecht, southern director of the ACWA, together with CIO representatives, including Brother Ed Blair, Russell Butler, M. A. Waldner and Harold Marthenke, conducted the drive and brought about this significant victory.

In the absence of Regional Director Sandner, who is out of his office due to illness, Field Representative Goldsmith reports the following election victories in that area: LIU 1267 won the election at the Federal Iron & Metal Company by a vote of 32 for CIO to no votes for District 50 (who had previously a closed shop contract in this plant); National Gear Mesh Company, Weehawken, N. J., CIO 249 to 54 for no union.

Brother Samuel Macri, CIO field representative, was in charge of the election victory at the U. S. Tool Company, East Orange, N. J., where CIO won by a vote of 246 to 129 for no union. The UERMWA-CIO won the election at the General Electric Company, Trenton, N. J., by a vote of 310 for CIO to five for no union.

Representative Gerard Mullica was in charge of the election at the Paramount Pen Company, North Bergen, N. J., where CIO won by a vote of 31 to nine for District 50.

U. S. Seeking to Remove Finland From Nazi-Stooge Spot, Welles Tells Unionists

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—The United States government is currently attempting to bring about a separate peace between Finland and Soviet Union, and to allign Finland on the side of the United Nations, a delegation of Finnish-American Trade Unionists was told this week by Under-Sec. of State Sumner Welles.

"Two years ago we tried to work for peace between the Soviet Union and Finland, but we failed," Welles told the three-man labor delegation. "Today we are continuing to strive for a separate peace between Finland and the Soviet Union.

"No matter what the price of German reprisals, it would be cheaper than continuing their present policy."

HAILS STATEMENT

The delegation hailed the latter statement as "recognizing the need of the Finnish people to fight to drive out the pro-Nazi elements and the Hitler legions."

Sponsors of the delegation was a Natl. Conference of Finnish-American Trade Unionists, held at Duluth, Minnesota, late last month. The trio which came to Washington included Rudy Hanson of the Mine Mill & Smelter Workers; Karl Nykanon of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers; and Victor Lapakka of the AFL Building Trades.

After meeting with Welles, the group issued a statement indicating that if U. S. negotiations end in failure, "we must assure fulfillment of our policy to take Finland out of this war as an Axis ally by American declaration of war on Finland."

Union Urges Biddle Probe Chicago Trib

Chicago, Feb. 13 — Atty.-Gen. Francis Biddle today had received an appeal for a "full investigation" of the Chicago Tribune, the nation's most reactionary daily paper.

Local 1149 of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers charged that Col. Robert McCormick, the publisher has been sowing disunity by "attacking organized labor" and supporting Rep. Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Elizabeth Dilling, a defendant in the government's big anti-sedition case.

At the same time, the local voiced its "deepest respect and pride" for the CIO Natl. Maritime Union, which has been the object of vicious smear attacks by the Tribune.

BUY WAR BONDS

Union Played Big Role In Leningrad Siege

KUIBYSHEV, Feb. 13—(ALN)—As life in Leningrad returned to normal—or as near to normal as possible in a city only a few miles from the front lines—the labor press published articles reviewing the role of Leningrad trade unions in the long siege of the city. Volunteer trade union levies helped throw back the Germans in the suburbs; one section of the front has been held for 16 months by detachments from the Kirov Works.

More than half of the 500,000 people who worked on Leningrad's fortifications were from the trade unions. In an incredibly short time, under heavy enemy fire, the volunteer workers felled thousands of trees, dug hundreds of miles of trenches and anti-tank ditches, strung barbed wire entanglements and built thousands of pillboxes, blockhouses and barricades. Ever since then, builders have stayed on the job improving the defenses, incorporating the lessons of Sevastopol and Stalingrad.

FLEW SEEDS INTO CITY

Members of the Civil Aviation Workers' Union flew millions of vegetable seeds into the city, which were planted under union supervision in every unused foot of soil. In their spare time union members went into the forests for firewood.

The Construction Workers Union organized squads in every district to make emergency repairs and teach people to keep water mains and sewer pipes in order. Young children learned to repair their school houses.

RAILWAY WORKERS

Before the Moscow railroad was reopened, all Leningrad railways led to the front: suburban trains for factory workers, food trains for shipments coming in over Lake Ladoga; freight trains to bring in firewood and peat. Although all Leningrad lines were under constant fire, they maintained a 24-hour timetable.

In December only 2 per cent of the trains ran behind schedule. This was accomplished at the cost of heavy loss of life among the members of the Railwaymen's Union, who realized the importance to the war factories of rigid schedules.

HEAVY SHELLING

Railway stations were shelled most heavily during rush hours. One station near the front was shelled every day for 16 months, but traffic was never interrupted for more than an hour.

When workers in the railway shops and depots built their first armored train, 75 per cent of the Leningrad railwaymen volunteered to run it. Hundreds of boys, old men and young women joined the line of applicants outside the Red Army offices.

COOKS' UNION

The Leningrad cooks, according to Yefrosinya Mikhailova, president of the Food Workers Union, fed the city "in the face of harrowing difficulties."

A recent dispatch to the New York Herald Tribune estimated that over a million of Leningrad's refugee-swollen population of 9,000,000 failed to survive last winter's famine. Food rations at one point reached a low of four ounces of bread and nothing else a day. No electricity or fuel was available for homes or schools during five months of below-zero weather.

In addition to the food shortage there was a shortage of fuel and even of water. During last winter's record frost, cooks and waitresses harnessed themselves to home-made sleds to haul water.

Union schools run by the union's regional committee trained more than a thousand new cooks, in addition to 500 war orphans adopted by the union and taught the trade.

Intl. Marine Unions Offer Advice To Beat 'Sub' Menace

LONDON, Feb. 13 (ALN)—A practical plan for overcoming the Nazi submarine menace and insuring that enough supplies reach the Allied armies for their coming European offensive was adopted by a conference of maritime unions from 12 Allied nations, meeting here this week under the auspices of the International Transport Workers Federation.

The five-point program drawn up by the delegates calls for:

1. A vigorous air and land offensive against U-boat bases and shipyards on the European continent. Only by striking at the actual nests of the raiders can their destructive power be effectively reduced, delegates stressed.

2. Greater protection for Atlantic convoys, especially by naval aircraft.

"Our men are still not getting a fair deal," Charles Jarman, secretary of the British Union of Seamen, declared. Reporting that he had just received a letter from A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, assuring that "the safety of Britain's merchant ships and the gallant men serving in them is regarded by the Admiralty as a duty of supreme importance," Jarman stated: "I still insist that protection by escort vessels and aircraft is far from adequate."

3. Vigilant supervision of ships in port and strict limitation of persons allowed to enter docks.

4. Organization of special convoys for fast ships, which now sail either alone or in slow-moving convoys.

5. The immediate building of high-speed ships, designed exclusively for war purposes.

SLOWUP FOR PROFITS

This last point, strongly emphasized by delegates, is aimed at those shipbuilding corporations which have persisted in building slow vessels, economical in the use of fuel, because of their prospective advantage in post-war competition. Philip Runciman, shipping magnate, underscored this aspect of shipbuilding policy in his presidential address to the Chamber of Shipping last year.

"If we build ships for peace we must base our speeds upon the true economic needs of the trades in which we intend to participate," he said. "If we build for war, consideration of national security would probably demand more speed than the needs of industry require, or indeed than industry can afford."

Pointing out that ships now being built are not standardized, the Financial News said on June 15 last year: "This fact should restrict the expenditure which may be necessary to enable them to face post-war competition."

Sir James Lithgow, Controller of Merchant Shipping and Repairs at the Admiralty, is president of the British Iron and Steel Federation, largest of Britain's monopolies. Before the war, Lithgow was chairman of the National Shipbuilders' Security, $50,000,000 monopoly which cut down Britain's merchant fleet between 1930 and 1937 by 1,869,000 tons.

Ask Industry Respect Labor In Canada

Toronto, Feb. 3 (ALN) — A strong appeal to Canadian industry to recognize labor as an equal partner in the war effort was made this week by Gordon Conant, prime minister of Ontario, in an address before the Kingston, Ont., Chamber of Commerce.

"If there had been this recognition of labor in our war production program, most of our recent strike difficulties would have been avoided," Conant said.

"What we need is a new spirit between management and labor and government, a new labor code for Canada," he said.

"With all the emphasis at my command, I urge that Premier Mackenzie King call a series of regional labor-management-government conferences, first to find a solution to the industrial problem, and second to find a solution to the manpower shortage on the farms."

Warning that lack of a sound federal labor code was a principal cause of the recent strikes in Ontario's steel and automotive industries, Conant declared: "I do not think that the government of Ontario can sit idly by any longer when there is an industrial dispute in this province, particularly if war production is involved."

CIO Backs Transit Union Demands

Pres. Murray Talks at Big Mass Meeting

Praising the patriotism and devotion of the Transport Workers in refraining from strike action which would have been "perfectly justifiable" in other times, in view of the refusal of Mayor LaGuardia and the Board of Transportation to bargain collectively, Murray told his 20,000 listeners:

"The low wage scale maintained by the Board of Transportation, plus the Board's failure to take any real steps toward remedying it, is at the bottom of the ills that now beset the New York transit system.

"It is responsible for the threatened decline in efficiency of operation, for the deterioration of equipment, and for the dangerous decline in morale that are rendering the system unsafe and ineffective for the huge job it must do.

"To halt this dangerous decline in efficiency, a fair and general wage increase must be granted at once. The disruptive practice of handing out minute increases to some and none to others, without apparent rhyme or reason other than to break down morale, must be halted.

"The Mayor has appointed an investigating committee. Its duty is plain and urgent; to establish collective bargaining in the city transit system and to make possible an adequate wage increase for all workers."

ADOPT RESOLUTION

The meeting, which was presided over by Pres. Michael Quill of the TWU, just out of hospital after an appendicitis peration, unanimously adopted the following resolution:

"New York City's transit system can be saved only if there is an immediate solution of the wage problem by arbitration.

"Twenty thousand New York citizens in meeting assembled at Madison Square Garden this ninth day of February, 1943, therefore urge upon the Mayor and the Board of Transportation to submit the wage issue to arbitration at once."

Other speakers at the meeting included TWU Secretary Douglas MacMahon, Pres. Joseph Curran of the New York Industrial Union Council, H. J. Garno, secretary of the State Industrial Union Council, Austin Hogan, former president of the New York Local, now in the Army, and a message was read from Vincent Ferris, secretary of the Allied Printing Trades, who expressed AFL workers' support for the Transport Workers.

DESCRIBES LOW PAY

Describing the low wages on the publicly operated New York Transit System, and the moderation of their demand for wage increases in line with the "Little Steel" formula, MacMahon charged that the wage policies pursued by Chairman Delaney of the Board of Transportation "have brought the morale of the transit workers to its lowest level in the history of operation.

"Efficiency is impaired, absenteeism is becoming widespread, the health of the workers is undermined. They are leaving the industry in droves," he said.

At a press conference before the meeting, Murray declared that "the attitude of the Mayor in this situation, as well as the New York Board of Transportation, relegates this group of industrial workers employed in the New York Transit System to the status of 'Class B' citizens.

"The refusal of the New York Board of Transportation to accord this union the fundamental democratic right to traditional American collective bargaining is nothing short of scandalous."

Guild Wins 3-Year Fight On Firing

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 13—A three-year fight against union discrimination ended last week in full victory for Gladys Solomon and the Newspaper Guild when John Day Jackson, publisher of The New Haven Register and The New Haven Journal-Courier, sent Miss Solomon a check for $2,500 by order of the National Labor Relations Board.

Simultaneously, and also by order of the NLRB, bulletins went up in the offices of The Register and Journal-Courier promising that henceforth employes of the papers are free to become or remain members of the New Haven Guild, and will not be discriminated against because of membership or activity in that organization.

STARTED IN 1941

The long battle started in the Spring of 1941, when Miss Solomon, then book reviewer and assistant Sunday editor of The New Haven Register, was deprived without apparent reason of her book reviews, her byline and a recent raise in salary. The New Haven Newspaper Guild believed that her work in her Guild unit, then newly-organized, was the only reason for this action.

The Guild took its complaint to the NLRB, and in a hearing held in May, 1941, ruled that Miss Solomon's book reviews and her raise should be restored to her along with a check for the difference in pay through the period during which she had been working at the lowered salary.

Publisher Jackson's reply was to defy the NLRB's order by firing Miss Solomon on August 2, 1941.

The Guild went again to the NLRB, and in October, 1942, The New Haven Register was ordered to offer Miss Solomon full reinstatement and a check for $2,500 to cover any loss she might have suffered because of her discharge.

U. S. Drops Sen. Nowak Indictment

Detroit, Feb. 13—Apparently aware that he was heading into another major blunder, Atty.-Gen. Francis Biddle this week moved to squash an indictment charging Michigan State Sen. Stanley Nowak with obtaining American citizenship under false pretenses.

The action against Nowak, who was re-elected for a third term last November, had brought forth vigorous protests from unions in Michigan and throughout the nation. Sec.-Treas. George Addes of the United Automobile Workers headed the defense committee for the state official, who was once an organizer for the UAW-CIO.

In addition, the CIO Executive Board declared at its meeting Feb. 5-7 that the indictment represented appeasement of "reactionary and Fascist-minded groups" and it urged immediate cancellation of the proceedings.

HAILS VINDICATION

Nowak, in a statement issued after the Department of Justice moved to dismiss the indictment, declared that "the principles of the New Deal have been vindicated.

"It substantiates the position of those who defended me, and demanded that the indictment be quashed," Nowak added. "It will stimulate war production and lift the spirits of all who are enlisted in the war against Hitlerism."

The CIO Board, in its statement made shortly before Biddle acted, warned that "this indictment against a man three times elected to public office . . . would, if unchallenged, invite similar attacks on our elections system.

"Having thrice failed to defeat him at the polls, this is an attempt on the part of appeaser forces, who are determined to sabotage the war effort, to silence and annihilate him personally."

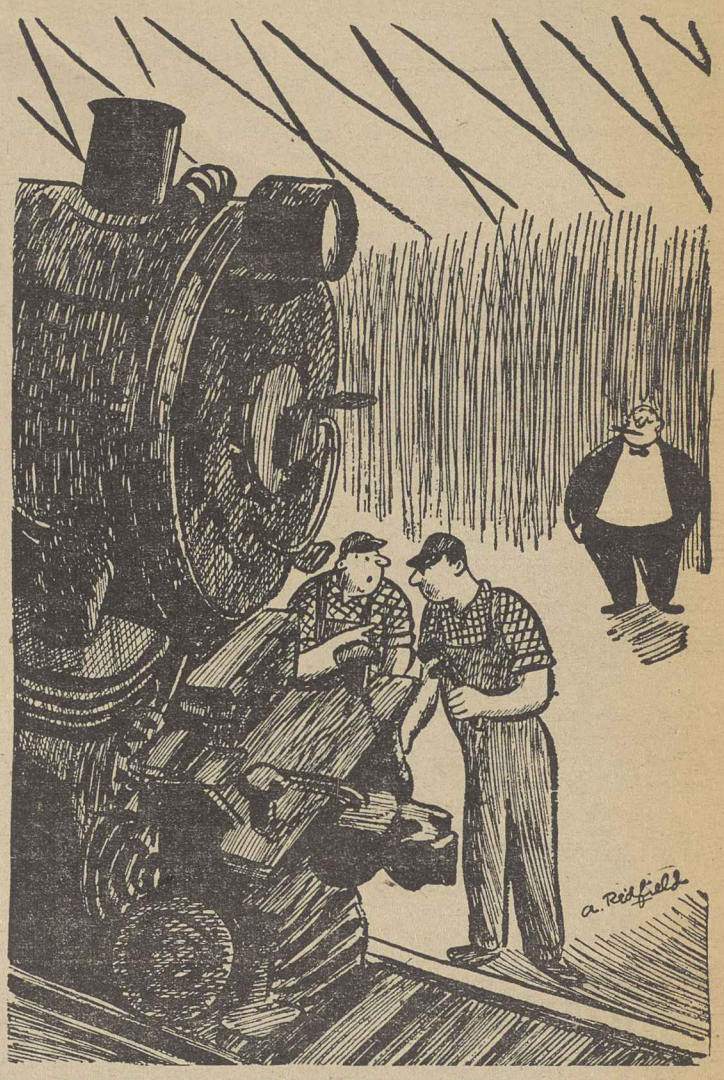
Ask Pay Boost For Highway Laborers

Chicago, Feb. 13—Demands covering wage rates and working conditions for five groups of highway laborers were presented this week to the Cook County Board of Commissioners by Local 1228, Construction & Maintenance Local Industrial Union.

The union asked for recognition as bargaining agency, wage rates of $1.10 an hour paid on a monthly basis, creation of a shop steward system and a two-week vacation with pay for men employed more than a year.

"We will continue to fight to secure all of the demands as set forth and are going ahead with further organization of all of the workers in the highway department," declared John Davidson, union organizer.

The Upper Crust



"So the boss says his Florida vacation is needed for health and morale purposes."

Murray Asks CIO Help Drive Against Absenteeism

WASHINGTON, Feb. 13—Absenteeism "is becoming a more and more serious problem" in war production and must be cut to a minimum, President Murray said this week in writing to all CIO affiliates urging them to work with management and their members on methods to cure it.

He urged CIO unions to study the problem with their membership and with joint labor-management committees, to conduct educational drives and to "insist upon this sort of cooperation from management" in cutting the present abnormally high rate of 4.5 percent back to normal.

He pointed out that individual absenteeism effects more than one worker's production, since it throws the working crew out of gear, requires floating crews to make up time lost, and is "sometimes demoralizing" to others.

MANAGEMENT'S DUTY

Urging workers to keep fit for the job as well as denying themselves the luxury of avoidable days off, Murray pointed out that management has a duty "to take every possible step to make conditions on the job conducive to regular attendance."

"This means the installation of all safety devices and the adoption of all plant practices which may be necessary and helpful in preventing industrial accidents," he wrote.

"It means the elimination of all unsanitary or otherwise unhealthful conditions on the job. It means the avoidance of hours of work which are excessive.

"It is the obligation of all our organizations to insist upon this sort of complete cooperation from management, to demand the establishment of appropriate joint production and joint plan protection committees, to utilize such committees fully, and to employ all the customary collective bargaining and grievance machinery to see to it that management cooperates and carries its full share of the burden."

To Regulate Hauling

A new series of transportation orders, the first designed to ban excessive hauling and transportation of less essential materials, was launched by WPB last week.

Union Pledges Dozen Ships On Time

Washington, Feb. 13—John Green, president of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and a vice-president of the CIO, promised this week that the quotas of 12 ships by March 20 would be fulfilled by the 24,000 workers at the South Portland Shipyard who are represented by his union.

The big Maine shipyard was formerly operated as two yards—the Todd-Bath, organized by the CIO, and the South Portland, organized by the AFL. When the two yards were combined, an election was held by the Labor Board and the CIO union won bargaining rights for the workers of the combined yards.

Pointing to the excellent record made in the Todd-Bath Yard, which delivered 30 freighters for the British government ahead of schedule, Green said the union would be able to fulfill the quotas set by the Maritime Commission through cooperation with management.

The South Portland Corp. has been under fire from the Maritime Commission and congressional committees for its poor production record during the past year. The situation was so bad that recently the Commission threatened to cancel its contracts if the yard failed to deliver 12 ships within 60 days.

"Our men will deliver these ships on time if it's humanly possible to do so," Green declared. "This will require complete cooperation and smooth teamwork of labor, management and the Maritime Commission."

Name Negro Unionists On Annual 'Honor Roll'

NEW YORK, Feb. 13—(FP)—The 12 outstanding Negroes of 1942 and the six white persons or groups who did the most to improve race relations in 1942 were named for the Honor Roll of Race Relations by a nationwide poll conducted by the Schomburg Collection of Negro Literature of the New York Public Library.

Cited in the Negro group were Hugh Mulzac, a unionist and master of the Liberty ship Booker T. Washington, "for becoming the first Negro captain of a U. S. merchant ship;" Pres. Willard S. Townsend of the United Transport Service Employes, "for becoming the first Negro member of the executive committee of the CIO; and the late George Washington Carver, "whose recent death brought to a close a career which has focused wide attention upon the contribution of the Negro to science."

Other Negroes honored were Paul Robeson, singer; Duke Ellington, jazz composer; Dr. J. Ernest Wilkins jr., who won his Ph. D. in mathematics at the age of 19.

The other category listed Wendell L. Willkie, who has "frankly spoken out for the rights of Negroes and the common man the world over;" the late Dr. Franz Boas, "distinguished anthropologist, whose scientific studies have done much to shatter the myth of race;" and the CIO Natl. Maritime Union "for supporting Capt. Hugh Mulzac in his fight for recognition and for its uncompromising stand against racial discrimination in the employment of its members."

Lying Yarn on Seamen Brings Libel Suit

New York, Feb. 20—A $2,000,000 libel suit was filed this week by the Nat'l Maritime Union against the Associated Press and the Hearst Consolidated Publications, Inc., as publishers of the N. Y. JOURNAL-AMERICAN, for the story falsely accusing NMU members of refusing to unload a ship at Guadalcanal.

It has been branded as untrue by Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, Admiral William F. Halsey, commander of U. S. Forces in the South Pacific; Major-General Arthur A. Vandergrift, commander of U. S. Forces on Guadalcanal; and by a Congressional sub-committee headed by Rep. Warren G. Magnuson (D. Wash.), which also found the story was based on "hearsay and rumor."

TRIBUNE TOO

Similar suits, each seeking $1,000,000 in damages, will be filed this week against the Akron (Ohio) BEACON JOURNAL, orginator of the false story, and the Chicago TRIBUNE, which ran a daily serial attacking NMU members for "refusing" to work at Guadalcanal.

The action against the AP accuses the wire service of "rewriting and maliciously amplifying" the Akron paper's story by adding to its copy the statement, "The crew refused to unload supplies because of CIO National Maritime Union rules against working on Sunday." This altered fable, the complaint said, was transmitted to all member AP papers for publication throughout the country.

The suit said that the true facts could have been verified with reasonable diligence but that no such effort was made; instead the story was written and published by the defendants "maliciously, wantonly and recklessly."

Torpedoed Men Blast Rickenbacker Slander

NEW YORK, Feb. 20—Five of America's "heroes without uniform" who have been torpedoed while serving the cause of their country this week sharply took to task Eddie Rickenbacker for his anti-labor speeches.

The five men are members of the American Communications Association, and most of them are now pounding keys on merchant ships on hazardous runs where death is an ever present risk. Each has been torpedoed at least once, and one of the men spent 32 days in an open lifeboat before being rescued.

The five—Carl S. Dalbey, Morton C. Grove, Peter Haracz, Anthony J. Vitacco and Herbert S. Weiner—declared in an open letter that "instead of pitching in and producing for the war effort" Rickenbacker "spends his time at a typewriter cooking up lies and slanders against American labor."

"We are just a few of the members of the merchant marine who have suffered the hell of torpedo attack and endless days in open lifeboats," the five radio operators wrote to Rickenbacker.

"We are good union men and so are our brothers in the other unions in the maritime industry who are delivering the goods to our boys through the submarine-infested seas.

SHIP OUT AGAIN

"When we returned to America's shores after being subjected to all the hell the Axis could dish out, what did we do? In accordance with our shipping pledge, made through our union to the people of America, we shipped out again, carrying the sinews of war to our Allies and our armies.

"What have you done, Mr. Rickenbacker? Upon returning from your experience of having been lost at sea you did not go to work on the job of licking Hitler. Instead you have started a fight with the working people of America. Instead of pitching in and producing for the war effort you spend your time at a typewriter cooking up lies and slanders against American labor.

"Our union brothers in the factories and fields are producing the goods which we are delivering to our boys and Allies on all fighting fronts. We, the people, are pledged to win the war by working, fighting and giving. How about you, Mr. Rickenbacker? Let's stop the propaganda and produce for victory."

Nix On Overtime—25G's—OK

Philadelphia, Feb. 20—Edward V. Rickenbacker, ex-captain of the U. S. Army, this week dished up a new and apparently not to be rationed diet for the American people—the rich should richer and the poor should get poorer. In a speech here this week, Rickenbacker said:

1. That he does not approve of overtime pay for workers in industry.

"There is little reason why those back home should not expend every effort and energy, if for no other reason than that our own skins are at stake," Rickenbacker declared.

2. That he opposes limiting salaries to $25,000 a year.

"I do not believe that they should limit salaries because to limit salary, you limit incentive, which is one of the great American cornerstones. Anybody is entitled to work and to be paid for it."

CIO Textile Ups Pay For 25,000

New York, Feb. 20—A contract covering 25,000 workers in 14 mills of the American Woolen Co. was announced here this week by President Emil Rieve of the CIO Textile Workers Union. The company has been under contract with the TWU since 1939.

The new agreement gives a seven cent hourly increase to all workers on the third shift, provides for one week's vacation with pay for workers in all the mills, and specifies that one week's pay will be given to drafted workers and that their jobs will be kept open for them when they return.

The 14 American Woolen mills under contract with the TWU are located in Maine, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Kentucky.

Murray Urges Planning; FDR Calls for 100% Tax on All Over $25,000

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—CIO Pres. Philip Murray renewed labor demands for adequate representation and for overall centralized planning of war production in a letter to WPB head Donald Nelson this week.

"Maximum production today demands a highly integrated and centralized planning and administrative control under civilian administration," he wrote. "It is therefore gratifying to note your recent efforts to accomplish this and through a more centralized administrative control to meet the basic problem of scheduling and greater utilization of all plant facilities, particularly of small business.

"As you know, the position of the CIO has consistently been one of calling for civilian control over this all-important problem in order that the military may be left free with its energy and skill for the fighting front."

FDR MOVE

President Roosevelt threw a mild fit into reactionary groups in Congress with a proposal for 100-percent taxation on all individual incomes, either salaries or other types, of $25,000 a year.

The proposal was made in a letter to the House Ways and Means Committee, now wrestling with the tax problem. It was seen as an answer to Congressional attempts to void the $25,000 salary limit set in the President's order on stabilization.

And in the House, the Dies Committee got another $75,000 for more work on the familiar disruptive lines.

Bridges, Nowak Cases Similar, CIO Counsel Says

Detroit, Feb. 20—The abandonment by the Federal government of a naturalization case against State Senator Stanley Nowak shows what pressure from the people will do when they understand what they are fighting for, declared CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman here this week at a rally called by the Nowak defense committee. He said, however, that the job has not been completed, citing the deportation case against Harry Bridges, California CIO director, as an example.

BRIDGES CASE

Nowak was charged with making a false statement in his naturalization application in 1937. He was indicted just five days before the five year statute of limitations would have outlawed the proceedings. Labor and liberal pressure became so hot against the proceedings that Attorney-General Biddle on February 8 asked that the case be dismissed.

Pressman told the rally; "That Harry Bridges case started by this same Attorney-General Biddle is still with us. Both Nowak and Bridges were selected for prosecution because they have spent many years fighting the battle of the people and incurring the enmity of labor's foes. Bridges has done more for the war than almost any other labor leader in this country yet in spite of this, Mr. Biddle initiated new proceedings against him."

Blood Donor Chief

Cleveland, Feb. 20—Wilbur Carr of Local 395, Oil Workers International Union, has been appointed Red Cross blood donor chairman of the CIO Council here.

Office Union Runs Seamen's Canteen

New York, Feb. 20—A Saturday night schedule from 7:30 to dawn and entertainment by various celebrities of stage, screen and radio will feature the operation of Canteen 19, for merchant seamen and all members of the armed forces, at 160 5th Avenue, under auspices of Local 19, Social Service Employes Union. The union, an affiliate of the UOPWA, opened the canteen this week.

In addition to regular entertainment, Canteen 19 will also provide recreational facilities, dancing and a reading and library room. All members of the armed forces and the merchant marine are welcome.

High Court Upholds Union

Washington, Feb. 20—The U. S. Supreme Court this week upheld the previously established stand that an issue based on a labor dispute cannot be considered to come under the anti-trust laws. The court held that the Norris-La Guardia Act prohibited the issuance of an injunction in the case involving the American Federation of Musicians and the organization's president, James C. Petrillo.

UNION RIGHTS

The court upheld the union's right to continue a national ban on recording of music for radio, juke box and other forms of public reproduction.

Labor Members Score WLB Denial of Raise To Packing Workers

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—Denial by the War Labor Board of a general wage increase for 65,000 employes of the "Big Four" meat packing companies was called "discriminatory and inequitable" in a dissenting opinion on the case signed by the four labor members of the Board.

In their dissent to the majority decision, the labor members assert that the majority's determination to abide by the Little Steel formula is "an unwarranted surrender of the prerogatives that Congress and the President granted it, a surrender which will inevitably result, as in this case, in discriminatory and inequitable denials of wage increases.

"The Stabilization Act and the President's Executive Order were not designed to freeze the Board's own wage policy, any more than they were intended to freeze wages."

The Board's decision in the "Big Four" case was issued Feb. 9 and was concurred in by public and employer members. The labor members reserved the privilege of issuing a dissent at a later date.

COVERED 'BIG 4'

The decision covered cases involving wage disputes between the CIO Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee and the Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson companies. The AFL and an independent union were also involved in the case.

Pointing to the Board's declaration that it was adhering to the Little Steel formula with "the assumption that such a stabilization of wages will be accompanied by a stabilization of prices," the labor members stated:

"Once before this Board acted on a similar assumption. When its formula was first enunciated in July, 1942, Chairman Davis declared that "the board acted upon the assumption that prices and living costs would be stabilized under the President's seven point program.

"Allowance were therefore to be made for increases in the cost of living up to the date, approximately, when the President states his program. But living costs have not been stabilized."

The minority opinion pointed out that in the seven months following May, 1942, cost of living has increased five per cent and that food prices have risen twice as high as the overall cost of living. The labor members therefore held that the Board panel's recommendation for a 5½-cent hour increase should have been granted to the packinghouse workers.

The labor members also called attention to the long delay in rendering a decision on the case and declared that the workers should not be penalized "by the slow motion of the Board's own machinery. There are no workers more essential to the war effort than the workers in the meat packing industry; there are few whose work is as disagreeable.

"The necessity of maintaining their morale and achieving the highest possible level of production considered along with the evident merit of their case, would have amply warranted the Board in adopting the panel's recommendation."

The two CIO representatives on the Board who signed the dissenting opinion are Van A. Bittner and John Brophy. The AFL representatives are George Meany and Louis A. Lopez.

NY Transit Wages Under Health Level, City Figures Show

NEW YORK, Feb. 20—More than half of the 32,000 workers employed by the New York City Transit System receive wages so low that it is impossible for them to "maintain themselves in health and efficiency," Douglas L. MacMahon, president of Local 100, Transport Workers Union, said here this week.

Citing figures made public by Chairman John H. Delaney of the New York City Board of Transportation, MacMahon said that these figures show that the average weekly earnings of 40 per cent of the employes is $30.72, while 20 per cent average $37.56.

With pension contributions and Victory tax deductions, MacMahon said, this means that the first group has only $1438 a year left to live on, and the second group, $1750. He pointed out that the 18,000 employes who receive these sub-standard wages are skilled men and women who perform important functions in the operation of the transit system.

They include 3,000 highly skilled mechanics and machinists; 1,700 bus and trolley operators and 9,500 trackmen, conductors and railroad clerks.

STARVATION LEVEL

"Of the remaining 10,750 employes," MacMahon said, "comparatively few receive wages that rise above subsistence level. According to Mr. Delaney's own statement about 6,000 of them take home about $38 a week or $1976 annually, and the remaining 4,750 who constitute about 15 per cent of the operating force, average $43.72, the only group in the entire system which receives more than $2,000.

"These figures show that the City of New York as an employer, fails to meet the standard of wages set in private industry and that the Board of Transportation as an operating authority for the city, has callously disregarded the fact that the overwhelming majority of the city's transit employes are denied the food, clothing and shelter they need to maintain themselves in health and efficiency."

UNION WAVES: The U. S. Navy has three new WAVES, Dorothy Mae Demaso, Alice Van Austin and Margaret Alfonsi, all members of Local 201 of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO.

Independent Goes CIO By 96 to One

Erie, Pa., Feb. 20—Members of an old independent union at the Erie Resistor Corp., here voted by a 96 per cent margin to affiliate with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers. Following the poll, the UE took over the existing contract between the compnay and the Resistor Employes' Union until its expiration in May 1943 and will be the bargaining unit for some 1200 employes at the plant.

The independent union was formed in 1936 to fight the CIO, but during recent months the leadership came to recognize the advantages of UE organization and joined forces with the CIO union's organizing committee at Resistor to obtain improved wages and working conditions.

Richard McClellan, former chairman of the UE organizing committee in the shop, who was elected president of the independent before its affiliation with the UE, now heads the newly chartered UE local.

Wire Union Ups Pay For 6,000

New York, Feb. 20—A contract granting more than a million dollars in pay increases for 6,000 Western Union employes in the Metropolitan New York area was announced this week by Pres. Joseph P. Selly of the CIO American Communications Association. It is the first agreement signed with WU in New York, Selly said.

The contract incorporates all the provisions of a recent War Labor Board decision granting $1,200,000 in wage increases retroactive to Aug. 20, 1942; a five per cent pay differential for night work; voluntary check off of union dues and maintenance of union membership.

A special feature of the agreement is a clause guaranteeing maintenance of the company's pension and benefit plan for the duration of the war emergency and giving the union the privilege of representing its members in any dispute on employe pensions or benefits.

WON ELECTION

The ACA won collective bargaining rights for the New York WU employes in a Labor Board election held some months ago.

In addition to more than 10,000 Western Union employes, the CIO Communications union now represents all the workers employed by Postal Telegraph throughout the country; 90 per cent of all radio officers on merchant vessels and several thousand employes in radio broadcast stations, radio and cable concerns and telephone companies.

Living Costs Still Rising

New York—(FP)—The cost of living for workers is 7.3 per cent higher than it was a year ago, according to the monthly statistical survey of the Natl. Industrial Conference Board, an employers' organization.

Food showed the greatest advance over January, 1942, with an increase of 14.6 per cent. Other advances during the 12 months listed by the board were: clothing, 7.5 per cent; sundries, 4 per cent; housing, 0.8 per cent, and fuel and light, 1.6 per cent.

Guild In Victory Groove

New York, Feb. 20—The CIO American Newspaper Guild capped a long series of organizational advances February 15 by winning a smashing, four-to-one victory in a National Labor Relations Board election at The Chicago Sun.

Editorial employes of the Marshall Field newspaper voted 131 to 34 for the Chicago Newspaper Guild as their collective bargaining agent.

FIVE TO ONE

At the same time it was announced here at ANG headquarters that commercial department employes of The Springfield (O.) News, Sun and Sun-News, James M. Cox newspapers, voted five to one for the Springfield Guild in another NLRB election February 16.

The commercial vote in Springfield, where editorial workers already were organized in the union, was 25 to 5 for the Guild.

These ANG election victories followed by a few days similar triumphs for the union in Cleveland and Seattle.

In Cleveland, editorial employes of The Plain Dealer voted 85 to 52 in favor of the Guild in an NLRB poll.

In Seattle, the NLRB counted 42 ballots for the Guild and only 18 against in the editorial department of The Times. City, suburban and country circulation district managers registered 14 votes for the Guild and 10 for the AFL Teamsters Union as their bargaining agent.

WLB Holds Union Shop War Need

Washington, Feb. 20—In a decision of far-reaching importance, the National War Labor Board this week adopted the position that for the duration of the war no employer can abandon a union shop already established by a prior contract, which was reached through bona fide collective bargaining.

The Board's policy was evolved in a decision which held that the Harvill Aircraft Die Casting Corp. of Inglewood, Calif., shall continue union shop and check-off relations with the Nat'l Assn. of Die Casting Workers.

Writing for the Board majority, Dr. Frank P. Graham, public member and president of the University of North Carolina, declared that the Board, "by the provision for the maintenance of membership, seeks to stabilize the unions in an area of struggle.

"For unions in open shop industries to fight out to the bitter end the battle for the union shop would be most unstabilizing and devastating for war production," Dr. Graham stated. "Likewise to push union shops back into open shops would unstabilize, for war production, the unions of the millions of American workers who have pledged themselves not to strike but to leave to peaceful arbitration the security of the unions which they have won after long and arduous struggles.

"By this decision, notice is now given to both workers and management, beyond future misunderstanding or appeal, that no company can take advantage of the Board's standard provision for union security to reduce the provision for the union shop to maintenance of membership.

CIO Local 100% 'Bonded'

Clearfield, Pa., Feb. 20—Every employe in the No. 1 plant of the Harbison Walker Refinery Co., represented by the CIO United Clay Product Workers Local Industrial Union 1196, is doing his part to aid the war effort by spending at least 10 per cent of his pay for U. S. Bonds, Anthony V. Ortasic, secretary of the local, stated here this week.

Ortasic said that the local was the first to break away from the dictatorship of A. D. Lewis' United Construction Workers, after the outfit run by John L. Lewis' brother split off from the CIO.

Food Output Needs Plan to Halt Crisis, CIO Union Declares

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 13—Serious food shortages already cutting war output must be met by overall planning on a national scale, according to a plan released here today by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, CIO.

The plan for mobilizing food production for the needs of total war was issued by Donald Henderson, president, and the executive board of the UCAPAWA.

"Food shortages are already with us," the union said. "Increasing shortages, running to 20 and 30 percent in many essential items in the coming year of 1943, can cripple our war effort. We may be forced disgracefully to shirk our obligations to provide food for our fighting allies who, so far, have carried the brunt of the war."

Rationing is the first immediate step, but basic planning for food production is an equally vital need, the UCAPAWA plan said. "You cannot ration what you haven't got. At rock bottom, the nation's main food problem is to increase food production. The War Production Board plans to double arms output during 1943. At the very least, we must increase food production by a quarter."

WAR FOOTING

Agriculture has not been placed on anything like a war footing, the union pointed out, due largely to the sabotage of the so-called "farm bloc" of rich farming corporations who only this week knocked out the government's plan for incentive payments to increase production.

"The bulk of the six million individual farmers of America are no more to blame for this situation than the city worker who cannot buy meat or butter," the union said. "Food production today is a war problem. Like all war problems, it cannot be solved except through over-all coordination and planning from top to bottom."

The UCAPAWA plan involved seven basic steps, first of which is a large-scale increase in the planted acreage. At least 100 million acres of usable land are lying idle at the present time, with a minimum of 2.5 million "small and middle farmers" who could put it to productive use.

To bring this land into production, government must put forward planned controls "embodying the best farm practices and producing only really essential crops," plus a system of carefully mapped out incentive payments for proper planting.

MEAT CRISIS

The current meat crisis is being deepened every day by the fact that high feed prices force farmers to slaughter their cattle before they grow to full weight. This, plus artificially high meat prices, is cutting deeply into future meat and dairy production, as calves, heifers and cows are killed for an inflated market.

Dairy shortages are also aggravated by the pricing system which puts an artificial premium on fluid milk of certain grades, forcing the waste of separated milk that could be processed for war consumption.

The answer to this, the union said, is to hold down the prices of feed by government action and to correct bad dairy marketing systems that lead to wastage.

NEEDLESS CROPS

Continued failure to end "luxury" crops—melons, iceberg lettuce, etc., and excessive acreage in tobacco, cotton, and the like, are also cutting into production of basic war food, the union pointed out. "Actually," the plan said, "unessential crops are a main item on no less than a third of all farms in America," while U. S. Agriculture Dept. authorities merely "urge" less of such production.

The union's food production plan took a vigorous swipe at the "farm bloc" for its constant warring on the Farm Security Administration, which could put more than two million small farmers to work on a war footing if given sufficient funds.

Stabilizing and raising of farm wages, mobilization of volunteer farm workers for harvest seasons, and other means could solve the problem of farm labor, the union pointed out, in answer to the "farm bloc" outcry that labor is paid too much or is hopelessly scarce. Similarly, pooling of farm machinery would solve the problem there.

Finally, the UCAPAWA plan pointed out that the basic lack of management-labor cooperation that holds up all-out food production for war needs, saying:

"It is no accident that in agriculture, where there has been least conversion to war production, there has also been least participation of working farmers and of labor in over-all production planning.

"Management-labor participation is required at every stage of this major war job; in food production, in food processing, and in food distribution."

Arms Co. Ordered To Reinstate 3

Washington, Feb. 20—The Winchester Repeating Arms Co. of New Haven, Conn., this week was ordered by the Nat'l. War Labor Board to reinstate three members of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers Union.

The board also directed that the cases of recently discharged union members be referred to negotiation between the company and the union, utilizing grievance machinery set up in the WLB order. All unsettled grievances are to be submitted, for final determination to an arbitrator, who will be designated by the WLB.

Centralized Control, Labor Voice In War Output Stressed by CIO

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—Top war output calls more than ever for central planning under civilian control, President Murray said this week in writing War Production Board chief Donald Nelson reaffirming CIO's plea for full labor participation in the victory production drive.

Murray also congratulated Nelson for "recent efforts to accomplish" central control to meet basic problems of using all plants, large and small, in the war drive.

Murray's letter coincided with Nelson's action in dismissing Ferdinand Eberstadt, vice-chairman of WPB and promoting Charles E. Wilson to be executive vice-chairman with control of all programs, including the critical one of production scheduling.

Eberstadt has been noted by observers here as opposed to central civilian control, while Wilson has made a record of insisting on breaking all production bottlenecks, including the tight one of lack of central planning.

HAILS OFFENSIVE

Declaring that the CIO is 100 percent behind all war production measures "to assure the fighting forces of the United Nations the necessary sinews of war to crash forward with the promised offensive in Europe against the Axis," Murray wrote Nelson:

"Maximum production today demands a highly integrated and centralized planning and administrative control under civilian administration. It is therefore gratifying to note your recent efforts to accomplish this and through a more centralized administrative control to meet the basic problems of scheduling and greater utilization of all plant facilities, particularly of small business.

"As you know, the position of the CIO has consistently been one of calling for civilian control over this all-important problem in order that the military may be left free with its energy and skill for the fighting front.

"I believe that today, more than ever, it is essential, in carrying forward toward the nation's total mobilization, that labor be afforded the fullest degree of participation in the activities of your organization."

FDR Calls for $25,000 Limit Through Taxes; Bill Nears Debate

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—President Roosevelt threw considerable fright into the more reactionary sections of Congress this week with his proposal to the House Ways and Means Committee for a flat 100 per cent tax on all incomes above $25,000.

This plan, coming at the end of long committee discussions on "pay-as-you-go," the Ruml plan and similar matters, would give single individuals $25,000 clear after taxes, and would allow a married couple $50,000.

It was seen as an answer to congressional attempts to void the President's directive limiting salaries to a gross of $67,200 a year, a move that got under way with a trick rider attached to a bill raising the national debt limit.

In making the proposal, the President called attention to the "gross inequity" of permitting huge salaries and incomes to a few individuals while paying men in the armed forces $600 a year and holding workers' wages down through stabilization.

"The correction of such inequities, I believe, would aid in the effective prosecution of the war," Roosevelt said.

BILL EXPECTED

Meanwhile, Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee announced that he expected a tax bill would come out of committee within a week or two. Doughton was vague on the pay-as-you-go question, but indications are that the Ruml plan for forgiving taxes on the rich has been taking a severe beating from labor and other progressive forces during the past few weeks. Opposed to it are the CIO, the Treasury and other advocates of real win-the-war taxation, with the newspaper publishers and a well organized upper-bracket lobby working hard for its acceptance.

The Congressional attempt to void the $25,000 limit was carried out through the trick rider device in an obvious indication that even the most reactionary Congressmen are afraid to face the issue of demanding an end to ceilings on inflated incomes squarely.

The newspapers have been cooperating by describing the move as new evidence of congressional "independence" and by raising the slogan of "incentive" around the fight for unrestricted salaries and profit incomes.

Dies Gets Dough For Disruption

Washington, Feb. 20—In a sneak move typical of all Dies Committee maneuvers, the Texas wrecker got his appropriation for two more years of disruption this week from the House, by a vote of 278 to 65.

Only one objection was made, when Representative Celler (NY) got up to point out that Dies had demanded (and got) $500 from the House to pay expenses of a lawsuit that he had got himself tangled up in.

That objection was answered by long, ranting speeches from Dies and his friend Rankin, the white supremacy crusader from Missouri, and the "debate" was over.

The low nay vote on the $75,000 appropriation was somewhat of a surprise, since 94 voted against renewal of the committee two weeks before. However, a large number of Congressmen, including many Democrats, took refuge in not voting—91, all told.

OTHER FRONTS

Meanwhile, Congressional anti-victory forces pressed their attack on other fronts, with a counter attack from the Administration in the form of a speech from Majority Leader McCormack strongly attacking Herbert Hoover's demands that the nation "go slow" in the war against Hitlerism.

The Kilday bill, which would take workers out of vital war jobs before drafting fathers, was reported out of the Military Affairs Committee over strenuous protests from Army leaders, who pointed out that it could disrupt war production.

The House Appropriations Committee turned down the Administration's plan for incentive payments to boost food production, thus endangering the nation's food supply.

Taking Off The Lid

At a time when the earning power of workers, farmers and fighting men is strictly limited by the government, there is something peculiarly indecent about the efforts now being made in Congress to remove the $67,200-a-year limit on the salaries of the highest paid.

This limit allows an individual to have $25,000 clear for his personal use, after meeting all taxes —which represents wealth beyond the wildest dreams of the ordinary worker, working farmer or fighting man.

The advocates of unlimited pay for the rich have a very different attitude toward the pay of the poor. The same people who would take off the lid on high salaries, as crippling incentive, want to clamp the lid still tighter on low wages.

They forget all about their "incentive" argument when they demand wage freezing and the abolition of overtime pay.

President Roosevelt stated the issue most clearly in his recent letter to Congress, when he said:

"It is a gross inequity in wartime to permit one man to receive a salary in excess of $67,200 a year, while the government is drafting another man and requiring him to serve with the armed forces for $600 a year.

"I believed it a gross inequity for the president of a corporation engaged in the production of materials for the government to receive a salary and bonus of $500,000 a year, while the workers in the corporation were denied an increase in wages under the provisions of the law and my Executive Order."

The President, of course, recognizes that a limit on high salaries is not enough by itself, unless a similar limitation is also placed on the unearned income of the coupon-clipper.

He therefore asked the last Congress to enact legislation which would limit the net income of individuals to $25,000 a year, and of married couples to $50,000 a year, after taxes. He is now repeating this request to the present Congress.

American labor will back the President to the limit on this most reasonable effort to reduce inequities which, as he says, "seriously affect the morale of soldiers and sailors, farmers and workers, imperiling efforts to stabilize wages and prices, and thereby impairing the effective prosecution of the war."

How about letting your representatives in Congress know how you feel about the present efforts to grant unlimited special privilege to the rich, while keeping the lid down on all other sections of the popuation?

If wages and prices are to be stabilized, as they should be, let's also have some stabilization of high salaries and high incomes.

Labor's Pledge Kept

American labor has faithfully kept the no-strike pledge it made at the beginning of the war.

There has not been a single authorized strike in a war industry since the pledge was made, and the unions have done more than any other agency to prevent or speedily end such minor unauthorized stoppages as have occurred.

As a result, you almost need a microscope now to examine strike figures.

The War Labor Board reports that in December, as in November, only three-hundredths of one percent of man-days work were lost through labor stoppages of any kind, including walkouts by unorganized workers and independent unions, lockouts and unauthorized strikes.

That's a record that's hard to match in any country, and American labor may well be proud of it.

Rent Control

A landlord's lobby is at present working in Washington to modify rent control and prevent its extension. But the record does not show the hardships claimed by this lobby.

An OPA study in 13 war centers reveals that landlords' net incomes were actually 14% higher under rent control than for either of the two preceding years—due largely to lack of vacancies.

Net incomes of owners of small residential buildings jumped as much as 27% for the same period.

OPA claims rent control saved tenants one billion dollars in 1942. Rent control is good for tenants and doesn't hurt landlords. So let's make it stick and have more of it.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

WORD recently reached Mars about some disturbances on a remote planet called the Earth. The Martian Gazette at once dispatched a reporter.

Having secured exclusive earthly rights to his dispatches, we print the first herewith:

WASHINGTON, The Earth—The earthlings are divided into three main groups—fighters, workers and a miscellaneous group somewhat older and plumper than the rest whom I shall classify as talkers.

Washington, my point of arrival, is chiefly inhabited by talkers. In fact, every district of the surrounding country sends representatives here to talk for it.

These elected talkers are surrounded by many other talkers, who talk to them in richly furnished buildings known as clubs and at parties where stimulating drinks called "cocktails" are imbibed.

Most of the talk in Washington at present is about the Earth-wide war—an occurrence exclusively reported in the Martian Gazette, which I can now confirm from the most authoritative sources.

But—curious as it may seem to Martian minds—many of the talkers here seem less concerned about the working and fighting necessary to win the war than about money rewards for their friends.

Immediately upon arrival I changed into clothes that would permit me to pass unnoticed among the inhabitants and entered a building, which proved to be a club.

I was cordially received by a man who had been drinking cocktails and introduced to a group of middle-aged men, whom he rather inexactly described as "the boys."

"Doesn't that 25,000-dollar limit on salaries make your blood boil?" he said. "And now the President wants to fix it so no one can get more than 25,000 dollars during the war!"

The other "boys" were nodding their heads, and one of them said: "I'm opposed to it. There should be no limit on what a man can earn. That just limits incentive. A man should get all he can make. That's the cornerstone of our American system."

"You believe then," I said, "that there should be no limit on wages, that the workers should get all the money they can—and that this struggle for higher and higher wages provides the incentive which makes the American system work?"

But "the boys" had stopped nodding their heads, and a curious silence followed, until one of them blurted out:

"I say this 48-hour week, with higher pay for overtime over 40 hours, is an outrage. A worker oughtn't to need any incentive to work longer hours and produce more. Wages ought to be frozen tight, so a man can't earn any more than he did before the war."

"But I thought you said . . . . ."

But "the boys" were now glaring at me, and one of them interrupted: "What are you anyhow? A damned CIO'er? Why don't you go back where you came from?"

So I thought it better to drop the subject.

The conversation then turned to social security, a procedure whereby the government seeks to prevent the aged, the sick and the unemployed from starving.

"This talk of more social security makes me sick," one of "the boys" remarked. "It's just coddling the workers and making them lazy. A fellow should know what it's like to be up against it, so he'll have an incentive to work and make something of himself."

"That's very interesting," I said. "You believe then that the prosperous classes in America are degenerating and becoming lazy, because they do not encounter hardship and starvation and therefore have no incentive to work and improve themselves?"

But again "the boys" all disagreed.

All of this is very puzzling to the Martian mind. To us it would seem obvious that, to win a war, first thought should be given to the welfare and security of the fighters and workers, so they may not weaken or falter for lack of the necessities of life.

For some few individuals, who do not actually work or fight, to receive large rewards out of all proportion to those given to the fighters and workers would seem to us harmful to the war effort.

But I have met only a few talkers as yet, and no workers or fighters, so it is possible other earthlings think and talk differently—and may exert pressures to prevent the Washington talkers from damaging their hopes of victory.

How to Figure Your 1943 Income Tax

March 15 means income tax day for millions of workers, most of whom will be filing a return for the first time this year. The Secretary of the Treasury and other Federal officials have warned that a return must be filed on March 15, no matter what kind of "pay-as-you-go" plan may be adopted.

CIO's latest publication; "Income Tax Manual for Wage and Salary Earners" tells in simple and concise form everything you need to know in filing your return three weeks from now.

CIO is only able to print a limited number of these books, so all orders should be sent in as quickly as possible. Shipment will be made next week.

Taking Their Cue

State Defeatists Push Union Busting Bills

The wave of anti-labor legislation in state legislatures is spreading rapidly, setting the reactionary pace in Texas. Not only have the worst of the bills been introduced there, but one of Texas' U. S. Senators, W. Lee (Pass the Biscuits, Pappy) O'Daniel, is on a speaking tour of other state assemblies urging them to adopt similar bills.

The Texas bill also is the first to get beyond the legislative hopper. The state affairs committee voted 17 to 2 to report favorably on the Manford bill, which would make unions register with the secretary of state, limit initiation fees, dues, special assessments, and forbid contributions to political campaigns.

Other bills pending in Texas would require that 75% of a union's income remain in the state and would outlaw closed shop. Texas newspapers leave no doubt that reactionaries there hope to be the spearhead of a national movement to destroy unions. Raymond Brooks, political writer in the Austin American Statesman, is quite candid about it:

"The Manford bill would place the power in a state agency to determine the reasonableness of the fees and charges levied against members of the unions. Thus it could have the effect of cutting off the flow of money to the AFL and CIO.

"If any one state enacted a valid law to that effect, no doubt others would follow, and then the other states would not be willing to bear the whole cost of the national set-up of the unions. The possible effect of this measure likely would be more destructive of the giant national unions than any other suggested type of legislation."

The wave of reaction is bringing united labor resistance in Texas, Ohio and California. Rocky L. Davis, legislative representative of the Texas CIO, and Harry W. Acreman, executive secretary of the Texas Federation of Labor, issued a joint statement that the Manford bill "would practically destroy organized labor in the state."

In California, a united committee of AFL, CIO and railroad unions was formed to fight reactionary legislation, and in Ohio, the CIO has invited the AFL and railroad brotherhoods to a joint legislative conference.

The bills in Ohio, California, Kansas and Pennsylvania follow much the same pattern as the Texas law. Here they are, in brief:

CALIFORNIA: Would require unions of 25 or more members to incorporate and deposit a $10 bond with the secretary of state for each member, would outlaw closed shop, forbid strikes and secondary pickets.

IOWA: Would outlaw picketing and forbid workers to seek redress of grievances except through court action.

KANSAS: Would forbid "intimidation of employers," use of union funds in political campaigns, picketing by so-called strangers and outlaw closed shop.

OHIO: Would establish commission to guarantee right of worker to "refrain from joining labor organizations," regulate union fees, dues and assessments, supervise all union elections, require registration of unions and their officers and constitutions. Closed shop would be prohibited except where voted by 4/5 of employes in plant.

PENNSYLVANIA: Would require monthly report by union to secretary of labor and industry, registration of all union members with state and annual statement of union financers.

Although no such bills have been introduced in the New York legislature as yet, AFL and CIO unions of the capital district formed a joint conference at Schenectady to prepare for a fight against any attempt to hit the Texas trail.

Little Dies Committee Dies

Denver, Feb. 20—(FP)—The so-called Little Dies committee has decided to commit suicide rather than to ask a hostile legislature for funds.

Rep. Vernon A. Cheever (R), chairman of the committee which has rapidly lost favor even among Republican circles, announced that he would not ask the legislature to extend the committee's existence.

"I think the report will show we have done an outstanding job," he said. "However, it is too much work for members of the legislature and should be turned over to a group that has the time and money to carry on all investigations of un-American activities."

Train Farm Workers In Midwest

Madison, Wis., Feb. 20 (FP)—An answer to the cry of Herbert Hoover and the vested farm interests that only an increase in prices can solve the farm labor shortage in being provided by the Farm Security Administration in the great midwestern food producing area.

Under a plan of farm labor upgrading, the FSA is conducting an intensive 5-week training program for farm youths, 16 to 18 years old, so that they can be transferred from unproductive to productive farms.

Scores of youths are being trained in Wisconsin so they will be ready for spring planting. Similar programs are starting in Michigan and Ohio.

FSA and U. S. Employment Service agents obtain consent of parents for the youth to take the training course. State agriculture colleges are paid $52 for training, food and lodging of each youth.

Typical of the response of farmers is this remark from a Bayfield county farmer made when his 17-year-old son left for the training school: "I don't know who's going to lift the other end of those logs this winter, but if the boy can do more good there than here, let him go. Our other two boys in the Army must eat."

CIO Leaders Laud USSR Army, People

New York, Feb. 20—High tribute to Soviet Russia's Red Army and people was paid this week by CIO Pres. Philip Murray; R. J. Thomas, president of the United Auto Workers; Jacob S. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Workers and Joseph Curran, president, National Maritime Union.

In a statement to be read at a celebration of the Red Army's 25th anniversary, Murray declared:

"As I write these words of homage to the Red Army and the Russian people, the air pulses with the news of their sustained victories over the despoilers of their homeland. The whole world can hear the early notes of certain victory for our common cause.

"Grave and terrible days may lie ahead for all peoples. Yet no one need longer doubt that the Nazis and Fascists will be destroyed and the way cleared that men may resume their long, hard, inspiring climb up the ladder of civilization.

"Our Russian friends in and behind the Red Army have made this promise a certainty. For that we thank them humbly. For that we do them honor. For that we feel ourselves bound to them in a bond of deep and abiding brotherhood."

TURNED THE TIDE

Thomas said that "when the history of the United Nations' victorious war against Naziism and Fascism comes to be written, it will be recorded that the Red Army turned the tide when the outlook for our victory was the bleakest."

"On behalf of the 900,000 members of the UAW, of whom 150,000 are now in the armed services of the United States, I want to pledge our solidarity with the Red Army. Our production workers will spare no energy to produce the equipment which the Red Army and the soldiers of freedom in the other United Nations must have."

Potofsky declared that "free men everywhere join in celebrating the achievements of the valiant Red Army on this 25th anniversary of its establishment."

"We pay tribute," he said, "to the foresight of its leaders who organized, equipped and trained this mighty weapon against Fascism; to the skill of Stalin, its supreme commander, and his associates, who have directed its superb strategy and mobilized the whole nation solidly behind its struggle.

"We pay tribute to the devotion, of the men in the ranks who for 20 months have withstood and are now driving back the full weight of Hiler's mechanized armies; to the tenacity and daring of the guerrilla fighters who continue the struggle behind the Fascist lines; and to the unity, determination and self-sacrifice of the whole Soviet people, whose magnificent defense of their liberty and their way of life has been a source of hope and inspiration to all men who cherish freedom."

Farmers Union Urges Action to Save Small Farm Output

WASHINGTON, Feb. 20—The Farm Security Administration must be expanded to meet war food needs, James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, said in the leading article in the National Union Farmer, out this week.

Taxes for Total War is CIO's newest leaflet on the 1943 tax bill, giving in full the tax program worked out at the CIO Executive Board meeting early this month. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. Price: 100 for $1.00; 500 for $4.25.

"The Farm Security Administration must not die; it must be expanded to meet the war food needs of the United Nations and of the countries we are pledged to restore to the ranks of free men," Patton wrote.

"A quiet assassination is being arranged for the Farm Security Administration by spokesmen for commercialized agriculture and the 'economy bloc' in both houses of Congress. For five million American working farm families the FSA program has, more than any other, offered some hope that our government would some day work out a land policy in which afrmers will come before property and dollars.

"Since Pearl Harbor, FSA has shown that it offers the best hope for expanding our food production to meet the daily rising food needs in this total global war. The figures on FSA production increases released by the Department of Agriculture prove this contention, which the NFU has been emphasizing ever since Pearl Harbor. Yet today this experience is being disregarded.

"At least one billion dollars must be made available for the complete task of conversion to war food production. This equals one week's cost of running the war. A dollar invested in this way will get at least a dollar's worth of food within a year. The public already knows that food is more precious than dollars and the Congress is going to know it before June 30, 1943, when the appropriation fight is over.

"Shoulder to shoulder in this fight for more abundant food production by working farm families will be organized millions of American consumers in the ranks of labor, in the great religious organizations and in community and welfare groups."

Congress continues to need—and will need until the anti-victory conspiracy is halted—week-by-week and even day-by-day watching by CIO members and all people who want to win the war.

As the CIO NEWS goes to press, the Hobbs union-busting bill (H. R. 653) is still a serious threat. Labor action must be doubled and redoubled to defeat the bill. Debate on the floor is very eminent, may come this week.

The Dies Committee appropriation of $75,000 went through the House with only 65 votes against it. More work should have been done there, since the 65 nays is a drop from the nay vote on renewal.

A series of anti-labor bills of various kinds are pouring into the Congressional hopper. In an early issue THE CIO NEWS will carry a full listing of these measures.

Meantime, here's this week's box score:

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Hobbs Bill. HR 653	Hamstrings unions and war production under mask of "anti-racketeering."	May be on Ho. floor this week.	Wire Reps. Martin, McCormack, your own Rep. Prepare to write Senators on Senate bill.
Marcantonio Bill. HR 1742	Stops discrimination on war contracts, provides penalties for violation.	Just offered in Ho.	Write your Rep. to speak and vote for passage.
1943 Tax Bill	Ho. Ways and Means Com. finishing hearings, with F. D. R. demand for $25,000 limit given to Congress.		Write your Rep. to work for limit, back CIO win-war tax program.
McKellar Bill. S. 575	Hamstrings U. S. war agencies personnel hiring by subjecting jobs to Senate review.	Sub Com. of Senate Judiciary Com.	Write your Sens., urge vote against.
Poll Tax Repeal	Several bills offered, still buried in committee.	Discharge petition coming up soon.	Write Rep. to sign petition, vote for repeal.
Pepper-Kilgore Bill. S. 607	Creates central plan and agency for total war mobilization.	Buried in Sen. Military Affairs Com.	Write Sens. to get it on floor, vote for passage.

CIO Tops In Votes, Board Report Shows

Washington, Feb. 20—Unions affiliated with the CIO won more than 75 per cent of all the 2,200 elections in which they took part during the past fiscal year, and were successful in 87 per cent of those where they were the only union on the ballot.

This is revealed by figures contained in the seventh annual report of the National Labor Relations Board recently released. The report covers the yearly period ending June 30, 1942.

Here are some of the other things the report shows about the CIO in elections and payroll checks conducted by the Board during this period:

CIO TOPS ALL

1. CIO unions won 75.4 per cent of all elections in which they took part, compared with 67 per cent for the AFL and 57.7 per cent for unaffiliated unions.

2. Although both the CIO and the AFL took part in approximately the same number of elections, 999,922 workers were eligible to vote in polls in which the CIO participated compared to 490,000 in those where the AFL was on the ballot.

3. Some 82 per cent of the one million eligible workers voted in 2,284 elections in which CIO unions took part.

4. In cases where only one union was on the ballot, CIO unions won 42 per cent of the total number of valid votes cast in all elections as compared to 16 per cent for the AFL and five per cent for unaffiliated groups.

Americans & Unionists Make Output Jump

Washington, Feb. 20—The Chrowbacks and Grants and Kings and Raisors and Hegenbarths and Roudebushs and Peccis and Baughs and Pepkas and Pokrefkys and Centalas and Vorgitchs are working like h . . . to help win the war.

Americans and union members—products of the melting pot—they were among 84 war workers representing 33 labor-management committees who submitted suggestions for saving man hours and boosting production to beat the Axis. This week their work won high praise from the War Production Board.

From 19 different states they come, and chief among them is Walter W. Brown, a 67-year-old engineer employed at the General Electric Co., Erie, Pa., under contract with the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America. Brown was the sole winner of a citation of individual production merit — highest award possible. There have been only six other such winners.

Brown suggested changes in design on an Army searchlight cable coupler which eliminated aluminum die casts and saves 8,900 pounds of brass rod, 21,530 pounds of phosphor bronze, and 120,881 pounds of aluminum on 90,000 couplers.

Organized labor played its part in channeling important suggestions by working closely with labor-management committees. Honors are about equally divided between CIO and AFL.

Medical School Off Blacklist

Chicago—(FP)—The jinx placed on graduates of the University of Georgia School of Medicine by the meddling of ex-Gov. Eugene Talmadge has been lifted.

The American Medical Assn. announced Feb. 14 that the Georgia school has been fully restored to its list of approved medical schools. AMA recognition was withdrawn last year after Talmadge went on a rampage of firing teachers who disagreed with his brand of politics.

KKK Rides And Workers Vote CIO

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 20—A charge that the Ku Klux Klan is openly acting as an anti-labor force in this community was made this week by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers of America.

The union charged that following a visit from the Klan's "imperial wizard," James A. Colescott, an advertisement appeared in the Orlando MORNING SENTINEL calling for 4,000 Klansmen with the appeal, "there is work to do." Shortly afterwards one of the Klansmen was seen passing out leaflets the day before a Labor Board election at the Fosgate Citrus plant.

Despite the awkward attempts at intimidation, the Fosgate workers voted 146 for CIO, 119 for AFL, and only nine for no union.

Demand Rights for Negroes

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 20—"We must face the fact that up to the present time the State of Missouri has not given adequate protection to the civil and legal rights of its 244,000 Negro citizens," declared the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers in a statement supporting House Bill No. 47 now before the Committee on Civil and Criminal Procedure in the Missouri State Assembly.

SPEAK FOR 23,000

"Our union speaks for over 23,000 Negro men and women who enjoy membership in our organization," asserted the statement submitted for the union by Louis C. Kimmel.

"They are part of the 17,400 St. Louis workingmen and women, members of our union, who are producing the sinews of war.

"Men and women whose mothers, fathers and families are toiling on the farms of our State to raise the food stocks necessary for war. Our union stands four-square for the legal and civil rights of Negroes."

Unite for Action On Meat Crisis

Los Angeles, Feb. 20—(FP)—CIO, Railroad Brotherhood and AFL representatives met with those of packers, markets and other community interests at a special conference here and in San Francisco Feb. 15 to work out redistribution of meat so that California war workers will get their fair share.

For weeks swank restaurants have had their usual profusion of choice steaks, while the men and women who are building the planes and ships are unable to get little, if any, meat.

WAR WORKERS CUT

CIO investigators have insisted that the meat eating population of the state increased by two million while black market diversion has reduced the former meat supply 50 per cent.

Know Your Vitamins for War Work

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

We have all heard about vitamins and the wonderful things they can do to make a body feel fit. Scientists claim the health of our nation depends on the proper use of them. It is our responsibility as housewives to learn as much as we can about them.

PROTECTIVE FOODS

Vitamins are called the protective foods. Vitamins are necessary for growth, health and vigor. The body needs certain amounts of vitamins every day. Most vitamins are found in small quantities in all foods. But there are some foods that are especially rich in one or more of these vitamins. These are the foods we want to know more about when preparing balanced meals.

VITAMIN B-1 OR THIAMIN

One of the most important vitamins and most difficult to obtain is Vitamin B-1, sometimes called Thiamin. It is present in most foods in very small quantities. It cannot be stored in the body. It must be replaced every day. It is seriously injured in cooking and very often destroyed when cooked too long. A good part of the vitamins are also lost in the cooking water. Such vitamins, we say, are soluble in water. It is important to save every drop of cooking liquid to use in soups and gravies. Even the foods rich in Vitamin B-1 must be handled with care, especially when preparing them for cooking.

VITAMIN B-1 IS IMPORTANT BECAUSE IT keeps the nerves healthy stimulates the appetite keeps the body alert necessary for the proper functioning of energy foods helps in functioning of the heart helps fight fatigue

RICH SOURCES OF VITAMIN B-1—whole grain and enriched bread compressed yeast

dried yeast whole grain cereals
wheat germ
rice polishings
seed food—peas, beans, nuts fruits—oranges and bananas milk
glandular meats
lean pork and liver egg yolk

DAILY SHARE OF VITAMIN B-1

There is one safe way to get your daily share of Vitamin B-1 and that is—have a good breakfast. So many of us have fallen into the habit of taking breakfast on the run that taking time out to have a substantial breakfast may seem like a waste of time. This is one habit we will have to break if we are going to keep our bodies geared to war tempo of living.

If you have for breakfast:

1 whole sliced orange
1 bowl of hot oatmeal with top milk
2 slices of whole wheat toast
1 pat of butter and jam
Coffee, Postum or milk

you will be sure of a good part of the daily requirement of B-1. The foods you eat the rest of the day will add up to your daily share. However, if you miss your B-1 vitamins in the morning, they will very likely stay missed.

Eggs—If eggs are plentiful, add them to the breakfast for added nourishment.

Otherwise, it would be a good idea to have them for lunch or dinner—as egg salad, deviled eggs, omelette or prepared with other food.

Lean pork—1 serving (3 oz.) will give you about one-third of a day's supply of B-1.

Whole wheat bread—8 to 10 slices will give you your supply of B-1 for the day.

Liver—1 slice (about 2 oz.) will give you a good share of a day's supply.

Wheat germ—2 tablespoons will give you your share of B-1 for the day.

Child Care Steps Made Easier

By ELEANOR FOWLER,

Secretary-Treasurer
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The immediate need for action to meet child care needs has been underlined by recent developments. A national drive to cut absenteeism in war industry is under way. One important reason for absenteeism is the lack of adequate facilities for care of children. Working mothers cannot give their full energies to war jobs when their children are not adequately looked after. Speeding establishment of child care services is therefore an important part of the drive to reduce workers' absences to a minimum.

General Hershey, head of Selective Service, has announced that men with children must be called in the near future in order to build the armed services to the strength we need for victory. Men without family responsibilities have been exhausted, except for skilled workers essential to war production. This means that hundreds of thousands of mothers not now employed will have to go to work. They can't support their children on the $62 dependency allowance which a woman with one child receives or the $72 or $82 which she gets if she has two or three children.

ACTION NOW

For both these reasons it becomes more important than ever for unions and auxiliaries to intensify their efforts for action in each community on this problem.

Lanham Act funds, which are disbursed by the Federal Workers Agency, are available for operation of child care services. And they're not hard to get—as used to be the case. Here's the last word on what communities are eligible and what services can be provided.

A community must show war need for the children's services requested. This means, according to the latest Federal Workers policy statement:

"Wherever the war emergency requires for its maximum prosecution the employment of women, the Federal Workers Agency will meet the need for nursery schools, day nurseries and child care centers made necessary by such employment, through contributions to eligible applicants from the Lanham Act."

Who's an "eligible applicant?" A public agency like the Board of Education or Board of Public Welfare—or a non-profit private agency.

Some communities have been afraid to make applications for Lanham Act funds because of the very complicated financial arrangements formerly involved.

Now all that has been changed. All the local community has to do is to show how much the needed services will cost. The federal government will furnish the entire cost of rent and equipment and one-half the cost of operating the project. The other half of the operating expenses can be met by fees of the parents or by fees plus local contributions.

Estimates on the cost of operating these projects are about $1 per child per day. In most cases a fee of 50 cents per child would therefore carry half the cost.

Federal Works doesn't require any specific fee. All they say is that the fee shall be uniform for all children for the same service in any given center. They would have no objection, however, to a reduction to parents with two or three children in a project.

Federal Works is making a real effort to speed projects through. It's up to us to see to it that they are prepared and submitted as quickly as possible.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Albert E. Glenn, CIO field representative in Chicago, reports that the USA was victorious in the election at the Continental Can Co., with a vote of 740 for CIO to 37. The USA continues the march by chalking up a victory in Columbus, as reported by CIO Sub-Regional Director DeNucci at the Robinson-Houchins Co., by a vote of 66 for CIO to four for AFL. Brother DeNucci advises that the situation was handled by USA Representatives Mayfield and Walcott under the direction of District Director Howard N. Porter. Another USA victory is reported by Regional Director Noel R. Beddow at the Tennessee Coal, Iron and R. R. Company, as follows: Boilermaking Department: USA 20 to 17 for AFL; Car Repair and Maintenance of Way Department, USA: 330 to five for AFL.

Adolph Germer, director of organization, IWA-CIO reports a victory at the Morgan Lumber Company, Eugene, Oregon, by a vote of 21 for CIO to 13 for neither and zero for AFL.

MINE, MILL WINS

John M. Brost, CIO field representative in Oregon, reports winning an election in behalf of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers at the Bonanza Mines, Inc., by a vote of 51 for CIO to 12 for the AFL. Morris Wright, news editor of the MMSW, reports the following additional victories: Pyne Shaft of Woodward Iron Co., Bessemer, Ala., CIO—110 to one; Century Metalcraft Co., Los Angeles, Cal., CIO—300 to 64 for independent and 32 for no union; American Brake Shoe Co., Los Angeles, Calif., CIO—43 to 11; Del Monte Properties, Del Monte, Calif., CIO—30 to three; Mirabel Mining Co., Middletown, Calif., CIO—16 to 12; American Lead Company Workers, Indianapolis, Ind., CIO—24 to zero. Two card checks have also been won by MMSW local unions recently: Vanadium Corporation of America, Nederland, Colorado, and W. R. Weaver Rifle Telescope Sight Company, El Paso, Texas.

The Oil Workers International Union reports the following victories: Quaker State Refining Co., Emlenton, Pa., CIO—92 to 35; News Distributors, Boston, Mass., CIO 22 to nine for AFL; Empire Pipeline, Oklahoma, CIO—52 to 13 for no union.

The UOPWA reports that the Screen Office & Professional Employees Guild recently won elections in three film exchanges by a vote of 55 for CIO to 32. In all three votes they defeated the IATSE.

Albert E. Glenn, CIO field representative in Chicago, reports that the ILWU was victorious in an election at the New Deal Paper Box Co., with a vote of 77 for CIO to 34 for no union.

DISTRICT 50 LOSES

Walter H. Harris, Director of Organization of the UGCCWA drive, reports a CIO victory at the Great Lakes Carbon Corporation, Niagara Falls, with the following vote: UGCCWA—124 to 48 for District 50. The UGCCWA won another victory at the Odora, New York City, where CIO polled 90 votes to two for District 50.

N. A. Zonarich, president, Aluminum Workers, advises that the CIO was victorious over the AFL at the election held at the government owned plant operated by the Aluminum Company of America, Lake Catherine, Arkansas, with a vote of 428 for AWA-CIO to 215 for AFL. They further advise that during this past year they have won five NLRB elections and established five locals in Arkansas.

The UCAPAWA won the election held in Florida's biggest citrus packing shed, Chester Fosgate's, by a vote of 146 to 119 for AFL and nine for no union. This victory establishes a strong cornerstone in the UCAPAWA drive to bring the 30,000 citrus workers under the CIO banner. Previously bargaining rights had been won in a citrus packing supply company through a card check showing a six-to-one UCAPAWA majority, and at Wilson & Toomer in Jacksonville, the workers turned in a 136 to 22 vote for the CIO.

Hugh Thompson, CIO Regional Director in Buffalo, reports that the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers were victorious in the election held at the Robert Gair Co., Tonawanda Box Board Division, Tonawanda, N. Y., by a vote of 150 for CIO to eight for AFL.

The American Newspaper Guild, according to Organization Director Wilbur E. Bade, has won the following elections: Seattle Times, editorial department, CIO 42 to 18; Seattle Times city, suburban and country district managers, CIO 14 to 10 for AFL: Cleveland Plain Dealer, editorial department, CIO 77 to 52; Plain Dealer, separate election was held among telephone operators and CIO won with a vote of eight to nothing.

The United Rubber Workers were victorious in the election held at the Pequonac Rubber Company, Butler, N. J., where CIO polled 191 votes to 151. The MESA pulled out of the ballot at the last minute.

Joseph P. Selly, president, American Communications Association, reports that they have just won an agreement with Western Union Company covering 6,000 employes in the metropolitan area of New York. Wage increases total $1,200,000 plus five per cent night differential and other benefits. Congratulations!

UNION HERO: For heroism while in the merchant marine, Corp. Maximo Murphy, former Natl. Maritime Union member now in the Army, receives the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal from Capt. Edw. Macauley of the U. S. Maritime Commission.

SWEATER GIRL:

Madeline Purtell, member of the UAW-CIO, was chosen to represent the 53 girls at the Sikorsky Aircraft Corp. in Bridgeport, Conn., who were ordered home for wearing sweaters. The girls immediately went back to their jobs minus sweaters, and clad in jackets. The union is taking up the case.

Chileans Protest Union Busting

Santiago de Chile, Feb. 19 (ALN) New anti-labor activities of North American companies are reported this week from the RCA-Victor plant and the manganese mines in Coquimbo owned by W. R. Grace Co. Luis Canales Osorio and Luis Lazo Reinoso, president and secretary of the RCA-Victor Industrial Union, have been fired for union activities, and some 200 others have been ordered by the company to withdraw from the union.

Meanwhile, the union reports, a Nazi organization headed by Carlos Vine and E. Hartman functions openly in the plant, threatening union workers and carrying on propaganda against the United Nations. A union mass meeting last week demanded reinstatement of its officers and action against the Nazis, some of whom hold key positions in the factory.

After the rejection by local Grace representatives of wage demands based on a daily minimum of 28 Chilean pesos ($1.04), leaders of the Union of Manganese Miners of El Romero reached Santiago this week to negotiate with top Grace Officials. The miners declare that company stores in the mining camps charge prices well above those prescribed by the Food Commissariat, that living quarters are so unhealthy that they are forced to sleep in the open air, and that other manganese-mining companies pay twice the wages prevailing in the Grace mines.

STRIKES AVERTED

Strikes in the nitrate fields of north Chile, threatened since the Compania Salitrera Tarpaca y Antofagasta, using as a pretext a brief strike provoked by the company itself last fall, denied its workers their annual bonus, have apparently been averted by the Chilean Chamber of Deputies. Acting on a proposal of miners' Deputy Angel Veas of Antofagasta, the chamber instructed the government to "undertake necessary measures to prevent unemployment in the nitrate fields" arising from a recent decision by the company to close several of its plants, and ordered the company to pay "its usual annual bonus."

By closing down the nitrate fields of Santa Rosa and San Enrique, the Union of Nitrate Miners contends, the company is attempting to get control of the Pisis and Nebraska fields, only important nitrate deposits still owned by the government. The National Federation of Miners is demanding that the government nationalize the abandoned fields, which they say still contain rich reserves of nitrate.

British Rail Unions Hit Exclusion of CIO

London, Feb. 19 (ALN)—A strong hope that the British Trades Union Congress delegation now in the United States to discuss allied labor unity "will meet with the CIO on an equal footing with the AFL" is expressed in the current issue of "Railway Review," official organ of the National Union of Railwaymen.

The NUR, with nearly 400,000 members, is one of the most powerful unions affiliated with the TUC. John Marchbank, who retired as NUR general secretary last month, is one of five British representatives on the Anglo-American trade union committee.

"The president of the U. S. treats the AFL and CIO on equal terms," the railway journal states. "On all war committees and boards concerned with production, the AFL and CIO are accorded equal representation. We urge that in the field of international labor relations they be accorded the same equality." Discussing the need for unity between the trade union movements of all the United Nations, the editorial says:

"It will be recalled that last May Sir Walter Citrine (TUC general secretary) visited Washington to discuss with the AFL the formation of an Anglo-American-Russian joint committee—or, in other words, to extend the Anglo-Soviet committee to include U. S. labor participation. Unfortunately, this project failed owing to the refusal of leaders of the AFL to be directly associated with the Russian trade unions. The executive council of the AFL decided to remain in alliance with the British TUC through an Anglo-American committee, with the TUC acting as a means of liaison between the Russian and American organizations.

AFL A MINORITY

"This unsatisfactory outcome of the TUC efforts was rendered still more unsatisfactory by the fact that the AFL does not represent the whole of the organized workers of America. Outside of it there are three very powerful organizations: the CIO, Railway Brotherhoods and United Mine Workers. Not only did the AFL refuse to enter into an alliance with the Russian trade unions, but it also declined to concede the right of independent representation on the Anglo-American committee to these three independent U. S. trade union organizations.

"It insisted on being given the privilege of 'including in the representation of American labor the representatives of any other bona fide trade union body.' The glaringly anomalous character of the claim for such a privilege is made evident by the fact that the AFL represents only a minority of the organized workers of America. The CIO alone has a membership equal to the AFL—about five million members.

CIO RESENTMENT

"When Sir Walter Citrine was negotiating with the AFL he also contacted Philip Murray, president of the CIO. But he did so purely unofficially. The TUC's acceptance of the AFL decision and its one-sided character aroused great indignation in the CIO, where it was stigmatized as 'a miserable and insulting agreement.' Unfortunately, most of the resentment and criticism was directed against the TUC."

Pointing out that the recent decision of the AFL and CIO to set up joint legislative and jurisdictional committees indicates an improvement of relations between the two organizations, the "Railway Review" concludes: "The ground for the further development by the TUC of closer and more comprehensive relations between the trade union movements of the United Nations appears now to be more favorable. The CIO has already expressed its readiness to join the Anglo-Soviet committee."

Urge Output Groups Despite Tory Attack

London, Feb. 19 (ALN)—Ignoring the sharp attacks made upon him by Tory employers for his recent series of pro-labor speeches, Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Aircraft Production, this week again called upon workers to play an increasing part in the war effort through the medium of joint production committees. Addressing shop stewards in a big Midlands bomber plant, he declared:

"The joint production committees must be made a success. In them the production sense of the entire personnel must find its expression. This new weapon of industrial democracy is still in its experimental stage, and it is of the greatest importance that we should develop these joint committees on the right lines as a permanent part of our industrial structure. If everyone, workers and management alike, contribute to the suggestions and discussions, we shall have created a really useful democratic implement."

Urging the workers to develop a concept of joint production not only with fellow Britons but also with the workers of the Soviet Union, Cripps said: "In this battle we have a wider comradeship; we are a part of a greater team. We are associated with the designers, technicians and workers in the vast aircraft factories of Russia. Our Soviet allies are working together with us in the same great cause; and when you think of your work, think of this association with the Soviet workers, which adds to the responsibility and honor of our task."

AGREEMENT SIGNED

Although Britain's engineering trade unions signed an agreement with the National Federation of Engineering and Allied Employers as long ago as March, 1942, for the establishment of joint production committees in all engineering and shipbuilding plants, many employers have failed to carry out the agreement.

Only last week Col. W. C. Devereux, managing director of High Duty Alloys Ltd.—where to date no joint committee has been set up—told a meeting of workers in the factory canteen: "No one who has read the minutes of joint production committees can say they are playing a useful part in production to the country's ultimate benefit."

Workers in the plant recollect that Colonel Devereux, upon his return from Germany in September, 1937, stated in an interview with the "Slough Observer" that Hitler and Rosenberg were "charming and simple gentlemen," and that "Herr Hitler and his government have nothing but the friendliest feelings toward us as a nation."

Votes Pay Off, Uruguay Finds

Montevideo, Uruguay, Feb. 20 (ALN)—Labor's victories in December's presidential elections continue to pay dividends. Workers in leading meat packing plants received wage increases with the help of the government, and the State Council approved two decrees whose authors are President Juan Almezaga, Minister of Labor Sanessa and Minister of Education Giambruno. The first decree extends paid vacations to several new categories of industrial workers and the second sets up a pension system for half a million farm hand an migratory farm workers.

THANKS WORKERS

In an interview with the labor daily, Diario Popular, Dr. Giam bruno expressed gratitude to Senor Peluffo, secretary of the Agricultural Division of the Union of Uruguayan Workers, for his help in drafting the labor legislation. Vice President Albert Guani, on his return from the United States, has announced that he hopes to negotiate a U. S. loan for the construction of airports, schools and housing projects to increase Uruguay's contribution to the United Nations' war effort and give employment to 100,000 workers.

Report Lists Huge Steel Membership, Finances

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 20—A bit of "must" reading for all the Westbrook Peglers of America is a 56-page report issued this week by the United Steelworkers of America. The pamphlet is conservative in makeup and simple in text and contains a complete financial report on the union from May 1 to November 30, 1942.

The report, signed by President Philip Murray, Secretary-Treasurer David J. McDonald, and assistants to the President Van A. Bittner and Clinton S. Golden, is a concrete answer to those labor-baiters who contend that officers of unions conceal the state of finances from the rank and file members.

BREAKDOWN

The report includes a breakdown of the financial transactions of each of 1,800 local unions in 39 districts, with a total membership of 725,625.

The report shows that the union's net worth as of November 30 was $1,774,905.19 — and the members can check on every penny of it.

In an introductory statement preceding the report, the Steelworkers' officers stated:

"Realizing from the very beginning in 1936 the importance of maintaining proper and accurate accounting of the incoming and outgoing of funds, your officers employed Main & Co., certified public accountants, to advise, recommend and otherwise assist in prescribing the form of account controls and statements for use by the International office as well as for use by the local unions chartered by our organization. These accounting and bookkeeping methods have been maintained with regularity and dispatch.

"As an added safeguard towards accurate accounting, the international office maintains a staff of auditors, who periodically check and audit the accounts of the local unions in their accounting of dues and initiation collections. The accounts of the international office have, since the beginning of operations, been audited and examined by Main & Co.

"While this report is of necessity voluminous, it is nevertheless a clear, concise and readily understandable presentation of a substantial volume of financial transactions."

Unions OK, Sullivans' Father Says

Washington, Feb. 20 — Thomas Sullivan, whose five sons were lost in a blazing naval battle off the Solomon Islands, this week said he was confident that the workers at home are pitching their best to help avenge them. A member of the Brotherhood of Railroad Conductors at Waterloo, Iowa, Sullivan told Naval officials that he believes that labor is "doing a wonderful job" for the war effort.

"The record proves that," Sullivan declared, "and with fair treatment, they'll do all that anyone could ask of them."

Mrs. Sullivan, who accompanied her husband to Washington after their sons' ship, the cruiser Juneau, was sunk, declared:

"We are sure our boys would want us to carry on the work they were unable to finish. In their letters to us, they told us to keep our chins up, and that's what we are courage and indomitable will to all we can to help the Navy. We want to tell the workers to build more ships and planes for the Navy, so all the boys can come home to their mothers sooner."

Warns of Food Scarcity Effect On War Output

Los Angeles, Feb. 20—Management must assume the responsibility of providing war workers with sufficient and proper food to insure maximum production, Dr. Henry C. Borsook, professor of biochemistry at California Institute of Technology, says.

Speaking at a meeting of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, Borsook said that a 1-year survey of the eating habits and caloric intake of a selected group of war workers had convinced him that "the best way for a factory to see that workers get their meals is for management to provide the meals."

Borsook with a staff of government aides checked the diets of some 1,200 workers at the Lockheed-Vega aircraft plants in Burbank after the lapse of a year. They found that whereas the workers' diets had been originally described as "not good," the end of the year showed an even more critical lack of sufficient meat, vegetables and milk.

FOOD SCARCITIES

The worsened situation was attributed to the closing of an estimated 2,500 restaurants here, scarcity of important foods and the inability of former housewives now employed in industry to find time to shop or cook food propertly.

Hot meals for workers can be provided through the setting up of plant commissaries or through contracts with outside catering concerns, with management retaining some control over the quality of food and price, Borsook recommended.

Unions Ok, New Poll Shows

Denver, Feb. 20 (FP)—Despite the recently intensified propaganda drive against labor, public confidence in U. S. workers is increasing according to a series of nation-wide surveys made by the Natl. Opinion Research Center, University of Denver.

Sixty-nine out of every 100 persons interviewed in the latest survey feel that factory workers are doing their utmost to help win the war. When opinion was first polled on this question by the research center last March, 57 out of every 100 held a similar opinion.

The public's mind, the center says, is more crystallized regarding the war effort of the workers than regarding that of their leaders in the unions. Only 5 per cent are without definite opinions on the workers, but more than three times as many (17 per cent) are unable or unwilling to express an opinion about their leaders.

CONFIDENCE RISING

The poll also shows that confidence in labor leaders is increasing although the propaganda against them has been even more intense than that against organized labor as a whole.

The exact wording of the questions and figures on the 10-month trend follows: "Do you feel that as a whole the workers in the factories are doing all they could do right now to help win the war? How about the labor leaders?"

Sell Blood So They Can Give

Chicago, Feb. 20 (FP)—When members of Local 121, State, County & Municipal Workers (CIO), volunteered their blood for the armed services, they found the Chicago Red Cross had no means of taking it.

This, however, did not stop them. They organized the Employes Civilian Defense Committee of Chicago and each blood donor went to a private hospital and gave his blood for civilian use. In return the hospital paid each $5.

Urge U. S. Seize Anti-Union Firm

Truman, Ark., Feb. 20—A request that the government take over the Truman plant of the Poinsett Lumber and Manufacturing Co., subsidiary of the Singer Sewing Co., has been made by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers here.

The union charges that in its fight against the union, the company fired or laid off more than 250 skilled union workers, and has consistently followed a course harmful to the war production program, in its effort to destroy the union, by failing to use its equipment at full capacity.

The firm manufactures airplane wing skins, fuselage assemblies, and machine power tables for sewing machines used in making Army and Navy textile supplies.

'Get Message Through' Despite Merger, Is Plea

New York, Feb. 20—Faced with the possibility of a wholesale exodus from the industry by employes of the Postal Telegraph Co. as a result of the recent passage of legislation permitting merger of the company with Western Union, Pres. Joseph P. Selly of the CIO American Communications Association this week issued a special bulletin urging the workers to "stick to their posts to get the message through."

Pres. Selly also transmitted a special message from James L. Fly, chairman of the Board of War Communications, reassuring the employes of their importance in the war effort. "Whether a merger is consummated or not," Fly said, "it is clear that not only are present employes needed within the industry, but additional ones must be trained."

SUB-STANDARD WAGES

Pointing out that "Postal workers have been making tremendous sacrifices to service the wartime communications of our country by working at fantastically sub-standard wages," Selly said that they were waiting patiently for the War Labor Board's decision on their wage case which has been pending for many months.

The ACA president declared that the union will continue to oppose the merger of Postal and Western Union as "a scheme to bail out speculators in the telegraph stocks at the expense of the war effort."

The union, Selly said, will ask President Roosevelt to veto the merger bill.

Endorse 48-Hr. Week, Hit Wage Formula

New York, Feb. 20 — The 48-hour week was endorsed in principle, the Little Steel formula was severely criticized on the basis that it would impose hardship on the workers, and a $25,000 a year ceiling on incomes was approved at the quarterly meeting of the Executive Council of the Textile Workers Union held here this week.

The Council also denounced the Ruml tax plan as "a selfish and unpatriotic proposal deliberately calculated to relieve those who have become enriched, of their sacred duty to pay taxes according to the principle of ability to pay," and called for a bona fide pay-as-you-go income tax.

JOINT COMMITTEES

In approving the principle of the 48-hour week as proposed by President Roosevelt, the Council demanded that the War Manpower Commission set up industry-labor committees in the textile industry to assist in the application of the order and asked that seniority be guaranteed all workers who are made jobless or transferred because of the 48-hour week.

Declaring that the Little Steel formula devised by the War Labor Board to relate wages to rises in the cost of living, was no longer useful because it had "failed to keep wages in step with higher prices," the Council criticized vigorously "the expressed intention of the government to maintain this formula at all costs."

The Council announced that the biennial convention of the TWU will open May 10 at Carnegie Hall, New York City.

British-U. S. Labor Men Meet

New York, Feb. 20—Problems of labor-management cooperation in boosting war production were discussed at a meeting here this week of British, Canadian, and U. S. officials and labor representatives called by the Intl. Labor Office.

The meeting is the seventh in a series of joint U. S.-British-Canadian conferences sponsored by the ILO, all dealing with manpower and production problems.

CIO delegates are Sceretary-Treasurer James B. Carey, Walter Reuther, vice-president of the UAW-CIO, and John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers. A. R. Mosher of the Canadian Congress of Labor was among the delegates.

Atlanta, Ga. (FP)—The state senate voted 39 to 8 in favor of a constitutional amendment reducing the voting age from 21 to 18. The measure now goes to the house for approval.

Committee Hits Fake War Story

Washington, Feb. 27—A House naval affairs subcommittee, investigating the fake Guadalcanal story about Nat'l. Maritime Union seamen, this week "deplored" the Akron, O., BEACON-JOURNAL's policy in printing "a story of this grave nature during a time of war when the cooperation of the merchant marine and the Navy is most essential to our war effort." The paper was criticized for failure to investigate its "facts" before publishing them.

The sub-committee, in a report to the House Naval Affairs Committee, declared that the story was based on "broad general statements" with "very little factual evidence."

The story "made a grave charge and was blown up by reprints by other daily newspapers throughout the U.S.," said the report. "The NMU, which has sharply denied the alleged incident, has filed suit libel suits against the BEACON-JOURNAL, the Associated Press and the N. Y. JOURNAL-AMERICAN for printing the story.

Workers Aren't To Blame For Most Absenteeism

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—The greatest causes of absenteeism are beyond the workers' control and must be removed by government and industry cooperating with the unions, the CIO said this week in releasing a detailed study of the problem in the current Economic Outlook.

"The CIO is doing its part in urging its members to refrain from voluntarily absenting themselves, but that alone will not solve the problem," the Outlook said.

"It must be made clear that the greatest number of absences occur for reasons beyond the control of the worker. Industry and/or the government must take steps to correct these causes. Workers' welfare must be protected if involuntary absence is to be reduced."

Chief of these causes are poor transportation, bad housing, overlong working hours, material shortages, lack of food, lack of health services, with resulting illness, lack of safety, and the like. Absenteeism among women is also caused by lack of child care, lack of shopping facilities, and similar evidences of bad planning and failure to approach the problem realistically.

These causes, the Outlook pointed out, are far more of a factor than deliberate laying off by workers who want to go fishing, take in a movie, etc.—though the commercial press has concentrated on these to the point of ignoring the basic reasons why workers stay away from their war jobs.

Other causes of involuntary absenteeism listed by the CIO include employment of older workers who often can't take the long hours of intense work, as well as an overlong work week.

"As working hours are increased, absenteeism is bound to grow," the Outlook said. "The fatigue factor becomes quite important as hours are increased beyond 48 to 54 and 60 hours.

"The most successful work week has been found to be between 40 and 48 hours, depending on the operation. Work beyond this limit means increased absence."

LABOR HOARDING

The continued habit of many employers of keeping labor despite lack of work is also a main cause of absenteeism, as well as a major cause of manpower shortages, the Outlook added.

"Involuntary absenteeism can be reduced by providing better housing, improved transportation facilities, day care for children, health and safety programs, properly planned production schedules, and available shopping facilities for women workers," it said.

To Help Win the War

Electrical Workers Frame Wage Plan To Stabilize Nation

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—CIO's third largest union, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, this week presented a wage plan to aid in stabilizing the war economy by making President Roosevelt's seven point program a reality. The plan was presented to Economic Director James Byrnes by UE President Albert J. Fitzgerald, Intl. Representative Neil Brant and Washington Representative Russ Nixon.

Main point in the program was a proposal to defer cash wage increase demands due for negotiation next month in favor of a "special fund" to cover living cost increases between May 15, 1942 and March 15, 1943, while government agencies undertake a real offensive on price control, rationing and a win-the-war tax program.

The special fund will run from March 15 to August 15, during which government agencies will carry through these measures "to stabilize our war economy as they were directed to do nearly one year ago by the President of the U. S. in his seven-point economic program."

If this real stabilization has been achieved by Aug. 15, the special fund "shall be paid to the Treasury of the U. S. in exchange for War Bonds" to be distributed to the workers. Following that, the special fund will be discontinued and the 1,000 firms with which the union deals shall pay the workers a flat cents per hour increase to cover the Mar. 15, 1942—Aug. 15, 1943, living cost increases, also in War Bonds.

"If, on the contrary, Aug. 15 finds our national economy in the same state of disorganization as now, and finds our government agencies still unable to control the situation . . . the increase will be paid in money, to enable the working men and women to maintain their production efficiency."

Pointing to the failure to control prices, to ration adequately, to formulate a victory tax program, and to the plot to freeze wages, the union's officers, Pres. Fitzgerald, Sec. Treas. Julius Emspak and Director James J. Matles said:

"We have proposed this practical action to the agencies of government charged with these responsibilities and to the employers in our industry."

Wolchok Plan Calls For Total Rationing, Rigid Price Control

NEW YORK, Feb. 27—A program calling for total rationing, rigid price control, an end to the "Little Steel" wage formula to meet living costs increases, an adequate tax program, increased health services and manpower utilization feature the "social, economic and legislative program" adopted by the Executive Board of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes here.

In a special resolution, the Board called for a fourth term for President Roosevelt, calling on "all workers, farmers, labor organizations, liberals and progressives, consumers and all freedom loving Americans to rally and unite in this moment of world crisis — Roosevelt for President in 1944."

The Board also adopted "the Wolchok Plan" of President Samuel Wolchok for "mobilizing the storage and distributive facilities of the nation to utilize effectively the plant, management and labor of the wholesale and warehouse industry in America's all-out effort to win the war."

DETAILED PLAN

The Wolchok plan, after pointing out that the government "is not equipped to handle this tremendous problem of distribution and

Steelworkers Plan To Cut Absences

PITTSBURGH, Feb. 27.—The first of a series of labor-management conferences called by the United Steelworkers of America this week developed a four-point program to cut unnecessary absenteeism to the minimum. The conference was the first of many to be held throughout the nation, with the expectation that they will lead to a national meeting to spur production of steel for the war, according to President Philip Murray.

The four-point program suggested:

1. A determination of the extent of absenteeism in individual plants.

2. A canvass of workers to discover their reasons for absenteeism and to learn their suggestions for its elimination.

3. Formation and enforcement of a program to cut absenteeism to a minimum.

4. Plan with union membership and management so that the effect of absenteeism on war production will be held to a minimum.

Murray made public a letter from War Production Chairman Donald Nelson, praising USA Local 2265 at the Republic "98" mill in Cleveland for breaking a production record. Nelson declared that "unquestionably the spirit of cooperation between management and the union is a prime factor in this admirable record."

Labor-management committees were highly praised by Gordon Lefebvre, vice-president and general manager of Cooper-Bessemer Corp.; Wendell Lund, director, and Philip Clowes, assistant director of the Labor Production Division of the War Production Board, and by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to Murray.

"It is difficult to evaluate exactly the contribution made by labor-management committees," Lefebvre declared, "but during the period since such committees were set up in March, 1942, we have increased the volume of our business 240 per cent."

LAS VEGAS, Nevada, Feb. 27—This former outpost of the progressive American western frontier blossomed into a front for reaction this week as a "herd of goons" attacked two organizers for the CIO Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union while they were peacefully distributing leaflets to employes of the Basic Magnesium Co. Aroused over the attack, and faced with a disinterested District Attorney, CIO members at the plant furnished their own protection for the CIO organizers—the workers' personal shotguns.

BADLY BEATEN

The two men who were badly beaten were International Representative Bob Hollowwa and Dave Llewelyn, a member of MM&SW Local 629. Attacked by the goons, Llewelyn managed to break away to safety. Hollowwa, however, was knocked to the ground and was severely kicked in the chest, groin and face until he was a bruised and bloody mess.

The goons took the keys to Hollowwa's car so that he couldn't follow them; they robbed him of his wallet, and seized parts of a public address system the union was using in its organizing drive.

When the goons started to depart, Hollowwa managed to get their auto license number, but one returned, carrying a broken quart bottle and threatened to "cut Hollowwa to ribbons" if he didn't give them the slip of paper on which he had written the number.

THREATENED DEATH

They took a large number of signed CIO membership cards and other personal property and left with the remark, "If you're here tomorrow signing up these men, we'll kill you."

Despite the fact that the MM&SW discovered the hotel the goons were staying at, and asked the sheriff and the district attorney to arrest them, nothing was done.

Hollowwa had his wounds treated at a local hospital and the next day was back on the line distributing leaflets — guarded by the workers who furnished their own form of protection in the absence of that requested from the law officers.

How to Figure Your 1943 Income Tax

March 15 means income tax day for millions of workers, most of whom will be filling a return for the first time this year. The Secretary of the Treasury and other Federal officials have warned that a return must be filed on March 15, no matter what kind of "pay-as-you-go" plan may be adopted.

CIO's latest publication, "Income Tax Manual for Wage and Salary Earners" tells in simple and concise form everything you need to know in filing your return three weeks from now.

CIO is only able to print a limited number of these books, so all orders should be sent in as quickly as possible. Shipment will be made next week.

National Leaders Hail Labor Press

NEW YORK, Feb. 27—America's labor press was praised by prominent national leaders for its war efforts at a two-day conference in New York called by the newly formed American Labor Press Association. Attending the conference were more than 300 editors and other officials of CIO and AFL unions.

Speakers who joined in tributes to the labor press included Under Secretary of War Robert Patterson, Assistant Secretary of Navy Ralph Bard, and Mayor LaGuardia of New York City. Messages were also received from Vice President Wallace, Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and other government leaders.

Complimenting the labor editors on their efforts to spur production, Patterson declared that "the fine, loyal, patriotic workers of America form the backbone of the nation," adding, "there is no line of demarcation between the bench and the trench."

SECOND FRONT

Patterson predicted the United Nations would win the war in 1944 or 1945, provided the Nazis were hit now and hit hard in the West while reeling from the Red Army's victories.

Bard called for a revival and reinvigoration of the labor-management committee idea, which he said could bring about war production increases of from 10 to 25 per cent. He advocated the calling of an annual American Management Conference, with labor, employers, agriculture and other groups represented.

The Navy Assistant Secretary warned particularly against absenteeism, which he said in one recent month had caused the loss of enough man-hours to build 14 destroyers. "Voluntary absenteeism is chiefly labor's own responsibility," he said, though granting that much absenteeism results from sickness, accidents, authorized leave and other involuntary absences.

Julius Hochman, vice president of the Ladies Garment Workers, made a vigorous plea for more labor public relations work. He proposed the establishment of a $1,000,000 fund by all sections of labor for this purpose.

The conference sessions were devoted to discussions on civilian war effort, psychological and economic warfare, popular education, political and economic aspects of world unity, and labor's part in winning the war and winning the peace.

LABOR PRESS ORGANIZES

The American Labor Press Association was formally organized at a business session as a national association open to all periodicals whether directly owned, published or endorsed by legitimate labor unions.

J. B. S. Hardman, Amalgamated Clothing Workers editor, was elected president; Harry S. Heustis, AFL Electrical Workers, treasurer; and Tom Wright, CIO Electrical Workers, secretary. Vice-presidents elected included AFL, CIO and railroad brotherhood editors.

CIO editors elected to vice presidencies included Wilbur Baldinger, American Newspaper Guild; Robert L. Cruden, Rubber Workers; Len Le Caux, CIO publicity director; Maurice Forge, Transport Workers; Helen Kay, State, County and Municipal Workers; Edward Levinson, Auto Workers, and Vin Sweeney, Steelworkers.

Workers Buy Bonds, And They Don't Go 'By By' Either!

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—American workers are constantly increasing the amount of War Bonds they buy and are hanging on to them, according to Treasury figures analyzed in the current CIO Economic Outlook, while the rich are cutting down on their purchases. Here are the figures:

In December, 1941, 700,000 workers bought $5 million in low figure bonds. In December, 1942, 25 million workers bought $370 million worth in the $25, $50 and $100 denominations.

In January, 1942, some $400,000 worth of high figure bonds — the $500 class — were bought. In December, 1942, the amount dropped to $250,000. The same downward trend took place in the $1,000 categories.

TURN-IN FIGURES

Treasury figures show that only 2.2 per cent of the lower priced bonds have been turned in for cash, leaving almost 98 per cent in the hands of the low income groups who bought them.

These figures completely knock down nasty rumor campaigns to the effect that workers and other low income people buy bonds only to turn them in almost as soon as they are bought.

Labor-Management Committees Hailed

Buffalo, N. Y. (FP)—A community tribute to labor-management committees was staged here Feb. 21 when a United We Attack rally was conducted through cooperation of the AFL, CIO, civic groups, governmental and state agencies.

More than 100 floats were included in a 3-mile parade in which the armed forces, plane, tank and mechanical units, as well as thousands of workers and their families, participated.

USA Wins Election

Cincinnati, Feb. 27—The United Steelworkers of America won an NLRB election held among workers of the Vulcan Corp. here by a vote of 215 for to 31 against.

Regional Director George Martin said that negotiations for a contract will begin immediately.

N. Y. Council To Mobilize For War

New York, Feb. 27—An intensive drive to mobilize this city's half million CIO members for full war duty on the home front was announced by the Greater N. Y. CIO Council this week.

Purpose of the drive is to "integrate New York's 500,000 CIO members into the social and political life of every residential neighborhood and community in the five boroughs," the Council said.

The drive will be marked by a series of 20 commodity conferences during the next three months to work out close relations not only among union members but also with civic, fraternal, religious, and similar groups to mobilize for total war work.

The conferences will prepare for united work on legislative questions, both in the Federal Congress and in the state legislatures as well.

Don't 'Bail Out' Real Estate Men—CIO

Washington, Feb. 27—CIO opposition to Congressional attempts to bail out real estate operators at U. S. expense was expressed by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, in a letter to the Senate Appropriations Committee this week.

The bailing out would be done through an amendment to the appropriation bill liquidating the Home Owners Loan Corp., which Cowan described as "simply another concession thrown to selfish private interests."

Keep Lip Well Buttoned, Censorship Office Reminds

On battle fronts every day men risk lives to discover the location and strength of the military units of the enemy. Yet at home, too many of us are presenting the enemy with information of the same military value, the Office of Censorship says in a statement.

This is the information which newspapers and individuals are asked not to tell the enemy:

DO NOT TELL the names of ships upon which sailors serve.

DO NOT TELL the troop units in which soldiers serve overseas.

There is no objection to revealing that Pvt. John Jones is in Australia or that Seaman Tom Brown saw action in the Atlantic, but there is military information which endangers the lives of American fighting men in stating that Pvt. John Jones, "Company C, 600th Infantry," is in Australia, or Seaman Tom Brown, "aboard the U.S.S. Wisconsin," is in the Atlantic.

CIO Backs Bills For Compensation

Washington, Feb. 27—CIO is in favor of two bills providing compensation for death or injury to civilian defense workers. The two bills (HR 669 and HR 899) were supported in a letter of Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, to the House Judiciary Committee.

SOLDIERS ALL: Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War (right) greets Editor Len De Caux, of the CIO NEWS, after telling 300 CIO and AFL editors at a N. Hosiery Union To Meet May 3

Philadelphia, Feb. 27—Problems facing the hosiery workers of America under the war production problem will feature the 32nd annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers scheduled to open May 3 at the Park Central Hotel in New York City.

Among the major questions to be acted upon will be the change to be made in contracts which will succeed the 1941-43 National Labor agreement and other pacts.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The Hobbs bill (HR 653) is still on the top of the must list, and from all indications at the time THE CIO NEWS went to press, only a few days remain before it comes to a vote on the floor. Meanwhile, the bill is still in the Rules Com., where it was delayed for a week ending Mar. 2.

The McKellar bill (S 575) to subject all Federal workers earning above $3,800 to Senate review is forging ahead and is a first-class menace to government war work. It must be stopped to prevent utter chaos in securing Federal personnel—a situation bad enough already with the sniping against Federal employes that goes on constantly in Congress.

During the week, the House anti-victory gang had a field day on appropriations for war agencies, knocking out money for vitally needed child care, manpower, public health, maternity care, education services, farm incentives to increased food production, and other war measures.

Reactionary Forces on Rampage

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—Moving with little or no organized opposition, the anti-administration forces in Congress this week marked up several advances in the drive against labor and against the conduct of the war.

The House Rules Committee, still refusing to hear labor testimony, set the Hobbs anti-union bill over for a week, with a vote on the House floor expected March 2.

Four Congressmen, Reps. Weiss, Scanlon, Furlong and Kelly, all of Pennsylvania, appeared before the committee to oppose the bill. Earlier, Rep. Celler of N. Y. had made a similar appearance.

They pointed out, as has been pointed out many times before, that the Hobbs bill was aimed directly at labor and at war production, that the "racketeering" it was supposed to take care of is amply covered by existing laws, and that labor was doing its full part in the war. They were backed up in this by the chairman of the committee, Rep. Sabath of Ill., but were blanked out by the Cox-Smith-Dies-Ham Fish axis that controls the committee.

In another committee, House Appropriations, the same gang had a field day of denying funds to vital U. S. war agencies. Knocked out were funds for such essential war services as child care for war working mothers, maternity care for wives of men in the armed forces, public health services, the War Manpower Commission, education and the like. Earlier, they refused funds for the Administration's plan of incentive payments to increase food production and stave off a very real threat of famine.

WORKING FOR FAMINE

In the Senate, the so-called "farm bloc," which presents profiteers and not working farmers, took another step toward inflation and acute food shortages by deducting benefits paid to farmers from the basis used in figuring ceiling prices.

This in effect adds the entire cost of the benefit payment system—already born by the taxpayers—to the prices paid by consumers for food. A tip-off on what can be expected was seen in the fact that wheat prices started to jump on the Chicago wheat exchange even before the bill passed—speculators reaping advantage of inside knowledge.

And back in the House, the bill to repeal the $25,000 limit on net salaries ($67,000 on gross) was put into the hopper by Rep. Disney.

Priest Hits Hobbs Bill As Aid to Axis

New Orleans, Feb. 27—The Hobbs "anti-racketeering" Bill is basically anti-labor, and its passage would probably stimulate a flood of similar repressive legislation, the Rev. J. A. Drolet, of St. Matthias Church declared this week at a Church and Industry Conference sponsored by the Lousiana Mfg. Assn. and the Manufacturers' Committee of the New Orleans Chamber of Commerce.

"Business men of the Nation should remove a serious threat to national unity and industrial peace by opposing proposed Federal anti-labor measures such as the Hobbs Bill," Father Drolet told the Conference. "Enactment of such bills, while reprehensible and dangerous enough in ordinary times, would be playing with dynamite in the midst of our life and death struggle with the Godless Axis."

Father Drolet said that there is no need for the Hobbs Bill, since present Federal and state laws adequately cover the subject of racketeering. The Hobbs Bill, Father Drolet said, adds nothing to such legislation, but does contain a method of destroying trade unions.

He pointed out that the Hobbs Bill outlaws "extortion" which the Bill defines as "a means of obtaining property from another with his consent, inducted by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence of fear." Father Drolet said that the definition can be widely interpreted, and might even be applied by anti-labor courts to peaceful methods of persuasion such as lawful picketing.

Farm Prices Up 15%

Washington (FP)—Prices received by farmers at the beginning of 1943 were roughly 15 per cent higher than the average for the full year of 1942, said the Dept. of Agriculture. Crop production may be lower this year, but output of livestock products will continue to increase past their record figures of early this year. Yet Sec. Charles Holman, of the Natl. Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, says the highways will be lined with cattle on their way to slaughter houses because OPA froze farmers' milk prices.

Pro-Fascist Assn., Cloaked In 'Cloth,' Backs Bills To Hamstring Labor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—Early fruits of the "Christian American Assn.," pro-fascist outfit reputedly sponsored by big southern corporations, are analyzed in a circular to all CIO Councils sent out from here this week.

Chief item on the association's program (incidentally, the association has been denounced as neither Christian nor American by the southern churchmen) is a union-busting bill simultaneously offered in five state legislatures and in the U. S. Senate (S. 189), by Pass-the-Biscuits O'Daniel.

According to the analysis prepared by CIO counsel, the bill is supposedly aimed at "violence" in preventing people from working. Actually it is aimed at unions, both by the definitions used in the bill and by the fact that violence is already amply covered by state laws. It's use by hostile courts could outlaw the right to strike and picket and even to assemble peacefully in a union meeting.

In sending out the analysis, John Brophy, CIO Council Director said that he had urged Attorney-General Biddle to investigate the Christian American Assn. and urged Councils to take similar action. The five states where the bill is in the hopper are: Arkansas, Iowa, Kansas, North Carolina and Tennessee. It has been passed in Texas and Mississippi.

Bridges Must Surrender on March 3

San Francisco, Feb. 27—Harry Bridges must surrender here March 3, following the verdict of Federal Judge Martin L. Welsh denying a habeas corpus writ to the west coast CIO leader.

The order comes at a time when Bridges has been doing intensive work on plans for even greater speed in loading and unloading war supply ships, forcing him to take time out from vital war work to arrange new bail and new court procedure.

Earlier, CIO Pres. Murray wired that CIO will "press its campaign in behalf of Bridges with renewed vigor, supporting the appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals and to the Supreme Court if necessary."

This is Bridges' third trial of a series in which he has been acquitted twice on the same charges. Despite the two acquittals and despite Bridges' work for the war as leader of the Longshoremen and Warehousemen, Attorney General Biddle has stubbornly continued efforts to deport him.

Say 'Nix', on Movie Of Rickenbacker

New York (FP)—Production of a movie on the life of Eddie Rickenbacker, scheduled by 20th Century-Fox, "threatens to block the achievement of maximum production and morale," the Screen Publicists Guild, United Office & Professional Workers (CIO), warned Wendell Willkie, chairman of the company's board of directors, in a letter Feb. 18.

An Ample Cushion

Ever notice the nice quiet way the business-controlled press just slithers over the question of war profits?

If you boil down a few hundred daily paper editorials, you have something like this: "Labor is selfish and shortsighted in expecting wages to keep pace with living costs. Overtime pay for longer hours is inflationary. All must sacrifice. Labor must do its share by submitting to lower wages, higher prices and taxes, sales taxation, etc. The farmer cannot expect as much for his products. Of course, profits are already looked after by taxation, so we needn't go into that. As we were saying, all must sacrifice—the soldier, the worker, the farmer—yes, even the poorest of the poor; and Pres. Roosevelt must sacrifice his crazy dictatorial idea of limiting salaries and incomes to $25,000 a year after taxes."

But have profits been "looked after" by taxation? Is it really irrelevant to talk of profit-takers when we say all must sacrifice? Have the coupon-clippers been bled white by taxation, so the only people left to squeeze are fat workers and farmers?

The Office of Price Administration reports that in 1942 corporate profits, even after taxes, were approximately twice what they were in 1939.

It remarks that "the extremely favorable profit position, far above normal peace-time levels, provides an ample cushion to absorb" various pressures tending to increase costs, and adds:

"So great was the increase of profits before taxes that despite the increase of tax rates, profits after income and excess profits taxation totaled 7.9 billion in 1941, 97½ percent above the 4.03 billion total of 1939. For 1942, profits after taxes will remain at approximately the 1941 level."

Now the CIO is not particularly interested, in the midst of this war, in soaking the rich or arguing about the social morality of the coupon-clipper's "take" as compared to that of the useful worker. It is questionable, too, whether cutting even the richest married couple to spending money of $50,000 a year represents an "equal sacrifice" to that of the worker's family deprived of some of its bare living necessities, and still less to that of the soldier who sacrifices his life.

What the CIO is interested in is maximum national efficiency for winning the war. That calls for wages sufficient to keep war workers healthy and strong; for taxes sufficient to finance the war without hampering production; and for a stable economy in which living costs as well as wages are stabilized, through price control, universal rationing, and a fair tax program.

To do all this, we just have to bring up the question of high war profits.

In the first place, the present ample cushion of profits makes possible wage adjustments, without price increases, to effect a proper relationship between wages and increased living costs.

Secondly, huge war profits make possible actual price decreases, by compelling profiteers to absorb increased costs and lower prices on living necessities.

Thirdly, the ample cushion of doubled war profits is the first place to look for increased tax income, without cutting into the bare livelihood of the poor.

That's why the CIO tax program calls for sharp increases in taxation in upper income brackets, with a $25,000-a-year limit on net incomes after taxes; for elimination of the loopholes through which the rich escape paying their fair share; for an increase in corporate profit taxes from 40 percent to 55 percent; for a 100-percent excess profits tax on corporation earnings of more than 5 percent on the first 10 million dollars of invested capital and 4 percent on all amounts above that.

War Plant Committees

Asst. Navy Secretary Bard and CIO Pres. Murray have both recently made pleas for the revival and reinvigoration of the labor-management committee idea.

On the same day that Bard was saying such committees could increase war production from 10 to 25 percent and was proposing an annual American Labor-Management Conference, the CIO United Steelworkers was holding the first of a series of regional labor-management conferences leading up to a national conference.

Pulling together to win the war is an idea worth plugging.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

HERE'S a quiz you can try on yourself. Cover up the bottom half of this column—and don't peek. Then check with a pencil the correct answer to each of the following questions.

(1) CIO wage policy calls for (a) getting the highest wages possible.....; (b) opposition to wage stabilization.....; (c) support of Little Steel formula.....; (d) stabilizing prices, wages and other economic factors.....

(2) Strikes are alleged to be seriously holding up war production; what are the facts? (a) CIO and AFL made no-strike pledge with fingers crossed and are still calling strikes..... (b) Millions of man-days are lost each month through labor disputes..... (c) Three out of every 10,000 man-days worked in December were lost through labor disputes of every kind..... (d) Unions are responsible for all labor disputes.....

(3) Absenteeism is admittedly a serious drag on production. It is caused chiefly (a) by conditions which government and employers could remedy.....; (b) by hangovers, poor labor morale and union selfishness.....; (c) by un-American propaganda and sabotage.....; (d) by war circumstances beyond our control.....

(4) The Hobbs bill now before Congress is (a) the first measure directed against labor racketeering.....; (b) designed to remove legal protections for legitimate union activity.....; (c) a bill to put gremlins in concentration camps.....; (d) for removal of dummy guns from roof of Congress.....

(5) Rickenbacker is a war hero who has been making a lot of speeches. He is also (a) an army officer sent around to build up workers' war morale.....; (b) a champion of decent working conditions for returned soldiers.....; (c) an anti-union employer, former America Firster, and political opponent of Roosevelt and the New Deal.....; (d) an advocate of equality of war sacrifice by rich and poor civilians alike.....

(6) A widely published story accused union seamen of refusing to unload supplies on a Sunday for Marines at Guadalcanal. This showed (a) that union rules governing week-end work should be changed.....; (b) that you can't believe anti-labor smears in the millionaire press.....; (c) that union workers, safe themselves, are careless of dangers and sufferings of the armed forces.....; (d) that Guadalcanal had no business being in the Pacific in the first place.....

Now check your answers with the answers below. Six correct answers is a perfect score. If your score is low, beware of anti-labor propaganda and read the labor press for the facts. If you're wrong in all answers, Westbrook Pegler will love yau—if that's any consolation—as one of the suckers who keep him in the dough.

(1) Answer (d) is correct. CIO wage policy favors wage stabilization, opposes Little Steel formula, calls for wage adjustments to meet higher living costs due to failure to enforce President's 7-point anti-inflation program, but places chief emphasis on price control, universal rationing, fair tax program, so whole war economy may be stabilized as well as wages.

(2) Answer (c) is correct. CIO and AFL unions have neither called nor authorized any strikes in war production since no-strike pledge; on contrary, have done everything to prevent stoppages. As a result, last figures (for December) show only three-one-hundredths of one per cent of man-days worked lost through labor disputes, including walkouts by unorganized workers and independent unions, employer lockouts and unauthorized stoppages—no authorized strikes.

(3) Answer (a) is correct. There is too much inexcusable absenteeism by workers, which unions are seeking to stop. But government studies show thousand times more absenteeism is caused by illness and injury due to unsafe working conditions, poor housing, etc.; by inadequate transportation; by fatigue from over-long hours; by lack of planning in allocation of contracts and materials; by employer mismanagement in supervision, scheduling, etc.

(4) Answer (b) is correct. There are already federal and state statutes to cope with racketeering of all kinds. All the Hobbs bill does is to remove from the present law language inserted to protect legitimate union activity.

(5) Answer (c) is correct. Rickenbacker is a civilian, formerly an army captain, and War Dept. disclaims responsibility for his utterances. He is general manager of Eastern Airlines and has been officer or director of at least six other corporations, one of them on union unfair list for years. Rickenbacker calls for open-shop conditions for returned soldiers, for wage-cutting through abolition of overtime pay (though he favors repeal of $67,200 limit on high salaries); denounces New Deal and opposes fourth term for Pres. Roosevelt.

(6) Answer (b) is correct. Natl. Maritime Union, Navy Dept. and Congressional investigation have shown complete falsity of Guadalcanal story. NMU has nothing in its rules or contracts against Sunday work. Marines rather than merchant seamen unload vessels in war areas under war regulations. Every competent authority testifies to 100 per cent cooperation of union seamen, whose casualty lists are nearly four times greater proportionately than those of the American armed forces.

Victory Begins At Home

BY SUNNY PRESSMAN

In last week's column, we learned what an important part Vitamin B-1 plays in the daily diet. We pointed out how difficult it is to obtain the required daily quota of B-1 because it is present in such very small quantities in most foods, it is injured in cooking, it dissolves in water and it cannot be stored in the body. B-1 must be replaced every day.

One important thing to remember about Vitamin B-1 is that it releases the energy in foods for use in the body. A person doing active physical labor will require more B-1 than an office worker. It is not enough to eat the energy foods—the carbohydrates and the fats—like bread, macaroni, etc. Vitamin B-1 must be present in the body to release the energy in these foods.

WHEAT GERM

Last week we also talked about the several foods rich in Vitamin B-1. One of these foods, wheat germ, needs special mention. Wheat germ is a new name to many of us but it is so important as a source of several essential vitamins, especially B-1, that we ought to know more about it. It is the kernel of the wheat grain. It contains all the ingredients necessary to growth. It looks like ground cereal and can be used as such; but it has such a distinct flavor that it might be a good idea to mix it at first with more familiar cereals. You can sprinkle one or two tablespoonsful on hot or cold cereal. You can mix some of it with flour in baking or even use it with bread crumbs for stuffings. If your grocer doesn't have it ask him to carry it. (One pound sells for 25 cents.)

Since dried beans, peas, lentils (our good old standbys) are now on the ration list, getting the required daily quota of nourishment takes more careful planning than before. We really must drain every ounce of energy out of all the foods we can use. Here is a recipe that will give you a reliable share of several very important minerals and vitamins—especially Vitamin B-1. Here again the flavor may be a little different from what you are accustomed to, but the returns in nourishment will be well worth a try.

WHEAT GERM BREAD

1½ cups oatmeal
1½ cups wheat germ
3 cups water
3 tsp. salt
6 tblsp. bacon fat (or drippings)
1 cup black molasses
2 cakes yeast
5 or 6 cups white enriched flour

Heat water, add fat and molasses. Melt yeast in small amount of lukewarm water. Mix all ingredients together into a fairly stiff dough. Put in pan, let rise double in bulk in warm place. When doubled in bulk, divide in two loaves and let rise double again. Bake at 250 degrees about 50 to 60 minutes.

Next week—More about vitamins.

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Tribute to the women of the United Nations as well as observances in honor of mothers and wives of American servicemen will feature Blue Star Mother's Week called by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO for March 8-15.

President Faye Stephenson, in announcing the week said:

"The delegates to our Boston conference felt strongly that one of our national undertakings early this year should be to honor the strong and courageous women whose sons and husbands are today fighting for Victory and freedom.

"We include in that number not only our sisters whose loved ones are in uniform, but also our heroic sisters of the National Maritime Union Auxiliary who see their men face death month after month to deliver the goods.

Others Honored Too

"Our national week must be more, too, than just a tribute to our own Blue Star mothers. We cannot honor them without also honoring the million of women of the United Nations who are Gold as well as Blue Star mothers; the women of the Soviet Union whose devotion has contributed so effectively to the great winter offensive of the Red Army; the women of England, undaunted by blitz, working all of them for Victory; the women of China, who have encouraged their men through 12 bitter years of brutal assault by Japan; the women behind Hitler's lines who face death with their men to sabotage the Nazi war machine."

The importance of aiding the March war-fund drive of the Red Cross will be played up as part of the auxiliary program for Blue Star Mothers Week. Group blood donations are urged as part of the observances wherever possible. The auxiliary Congress, urging its members to assist in the Red Cross drive, points out how many important services Red Cross performs for servicemen and their families.

Signing up mothers and wives of union servicemen as auxiliary members is the organizational goal of the national week. The Newspaper Guild Auxiliary has a most attractive red, white and blue membership card for close relatives of servicemen. The card entitles them to minimum dues for the duration. The United Automobile Workers' Auxiliary is planning to issue a similar service card.

Home visits to families of union servicemen, urging them to participate in Blue Star Mothers' Week observances, and trying to interest them in the auxiliary activities will be an important part of the week's program for most auxiliaries.

CHILD CARE BULLETIN

"Child Care Bulletin No. 2" is just off the press at the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, 1019 15th St., NW., Washington, D. C. It emphasizes the urgency of large-scale action to meet the need for care of children of working mothers. Absenteeism, the need for drafting fathers for military service, and the approaching end of the school year are emphasized as increasing the urgency of the problem. School vacations will mean that large numbers of women will leave work and that juvenile delinquency will rise to new highs unless plans are made for converting the schools to meet war needs this summer.

The bulletin also stresses the need for education of women in the importance of child care facilities, especially nursery schools, and recommends wide distribution of "Nursery Schools Vital to America's War Effort," U. S. Office of Education Leaflet No. III in the Children of the War Series.

supply" called for a system of contracting out "the complete handling of all goods which the government purchases from factories, exclusive of munitions" to wholesalers and warehousemen so that "management and labor, skilled and trained in the technicalities of mass distribution, can successfully grapple with the problems presented by the war emergency.

"The entire life of our nation is now being geared to a speedy effective and victorious prosecution of the war," the Board said in presenting the plan.

Ask Collective Bargaining Act In Canada

Toronto, Canada, Feb. 27—Acting Premier Mitchell Hepburn, who won an election in 1937 on "keeping the CIO out of Ontario," introduced a motion before the Ontario Legislature this week to establish a select committee to consider a bargaining bill.

Opposition spokesmen charged that the Government had retained J. L. Cohen, "CIO Lawyer," to draft the bill, and then hurriedly withdrew it before the onslaught of the Pressure Boys of Big Business. Cohen has represented both CIO and AFL in the past and has just been named labor representative on the National War Labor Board which will publicly review wage disputes for the first time.

New National Malady

Absenteeism Simple; Causes and Effects Are Headaches

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27.—There's a new national malady named "absenteeism" that bristles with as many complications as the mechanism of a submarine and that is just as dangerous to the United Nations' cause as the Axis' cigar-shaped pig boats.

To those seeking a cure for the malady, absenteeism itself is very simple. It consists basically of staying away from a job. Unfortunately for those who would wipe out the malady, its causes and effects are highly complicated.

The psychological and physiological difficulties in effecting a cure are discussed in the March issue of FORTUNE magazine (of, by and for business). And the magazine comes to the conclusion that business, labor and government all share the blame for not doing enough to wipe out this drag on America's war production.

Thousands Affected

The problem, FORTUNE maintains, is both local and national, personal like sickness as well as a mass disease attacking thousands of workers who feel that their individual daily effort will not either win or lose the war.

How important is the problem? Darned important, say statistics. Figures by FORTUNE—which may be taken with a pinch of salt—say that:

"In 1942, in new construction shipyards turning out both naval and cargo vessels, the man-hours lost through absenteeism alone would have built better than four ships a week, or 208 annually, or two million tons, equal to about 25 per cent of last year's total merchant ship construction."

This is only one industry—about the worst sample obtainable, for its jobs are strenuous, its hours are long, its mushroom growth has been tremendous, and its management has won no medals for understanding the problems of its workers.

FORTUNE seems to recognize this in discussing the nation-wide implications of absenteeism. Sickness, the magazine notes, is responsible for fully half of all absences. Bad housing, lack of child care facilities, trips home to see the family are other contributing causes.

"Excessive drinking," FORTUNE says, "is not a primary source of absenteeism among the overwhelming majority of workers; rather it is an attempt to escape from the discontents that foster absenteeism."

Listed as basic causes are material shortages, lack of tools, and other management difficulties that cause delays and make workers feel they are not needed every day in the week. The practice of hoarding employes is equally conducive to absenteeism, FORTUNE points out, for when 15 people are given a job that five could do, a few of them are bound to feel that they will be doing no harm to war production if they take a day off to tend to personal business.

Other Causes Listed

Wage rate differences that tend to lead workers to "shop around" for a different job also help to build up the record of days off. Greasy spoon cafeterias, foremen who play favorites, and plain fatigue from too long hours and lack of vacations also are widespread sources of absenteeism.

The suggested cures for absenteeism range all the way from pep talks by Army flyers to basic attacks on the underlying causes.

One study of absenteeism, by two Yale professors, led them to believe that it could be substantially reduced by between-meal feeding. In experiments with groups of workers, they found that twice-a-day meals of bananas and milk cut absenteeism by about 50 per cent.

Other devices, according to FORTUNE, include payment of absentee "wages" in German marks, of attendance contests, of man-to-man talks with personnel managers, and other similar techniques. These can be of some value, FORTUNE pointed out, but they generally fall far short of their goal.

1st Step for Cure

First step in effecting a real cure should be to define "legitimate" absenteeism, FORTUNE stated, and then go on from there to attack the causes of the illegitimate. Clear, detailed records, nationally uniform, should be kept on the problem, the magazine urged, and a central reporting system should be set up.

In conclusion, FORTUNE pointed out that the psychological reaction of workers to the war program is something that should not be overlooked.

"We still lack an articulation of concrete war aims and peace purposes, and a program for their fulfillment, that would stir us and sustain us and prepare us to rise to our responsibilities," FORTUNE stated.

Shoe Rationing OK, But Planning, Price Control Lacks Cause 'Pinches'

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27—Rationing of shoes, while a move in the right direction, is only one step toward rationing of all goods needed for total war mobilization, according to leaders of the United Shoe Workers, CIO, in a statement issued here this week.

The statement, signed by USWA President Frank McGrath, Secretary-Treasurer James J. Mitchell and Legislative Representative Jack Zucker, said:

"The rationing of shoes can be regarded only as a step in the rationing of all goods that must take place if the available supply of civilian goods is to be adequately distributed among all sections of our people. There is no reason why shoes alone should be singled out. All essential goods must be rationed immediately."

PLANNING LACK

Pointing to the "chaotic lack of planning in the shoe industry" and the failure to put it on a war basis, they said the three-pair-a-year allowance is not at all certain of fulfillment. As a result, they said, low-priced shoes are likely to be eliminated in favor of the higher priced brands.

"To insure that the consumer is not cheated and that the full number of shoes proposed by the WPB is produced, our government must take the following two steps," the statement said, (1) "institute a fair price control and grading system; (2) allocate leather for the production of shoes to those firms that have sufficient manpower to fulfill their quota."

JOINT ACTION

Correct grading of shoes and adequate supply can only be assured if the union, management and government work out these problems together, they explained, saying:

"Assurance of this type of planned production and rationing lies in labor and industry, jointly with WPB and OPA working out an overall plan for the industry."

U. S. ARMY AND NAVY HONORS WAR WORKERS OF WILLYS-OVERLAND

THE Army and Navy "E" Banner that now waves with Old Glory and the Minute Man flag over our busy plants, was awarded to the war workers of Willys-Overland for, in the words of Robert Patterson, Under Secretary of War, "accomplishing more than seemed reasonable or possible a year ago."

It tells the world of unselfish devotion to a tough job . . . of distinguished service in the production of vital materials of war.

I take this opportunity to thank all of my fellow workers for the cooperation you have given me through this period. Each and everyone of you has played an important part in converting Willys-Overland, in so brief a time, into one of the greatest arsenals of the United Nations.

In this effort we have so welded ourselves together that we now constitute a powerful force . . . serving a single just cause.

We want our government to know, and the officers and men of our Army and Navy, that our talents and our every resource are theirs to command. We will continue to serve them well, to the end that our enemies may be destroyed and that our Nation may achieve a complete and final victory.

Indian Unions Lead In Fight on Axis

BOMBAY (ALN)—Amid the present political confusion in India, the All-India Trades Union Congress has taken the lead in mobilizing the nation for defense against its deadliest enemy—Japanese and German Fascism. More than a year ago, the AITUC declared: "The defeat of Axis Fascism has become the pre-condition for the achievement of independence and complete democracy for India."

The confusion, in the opinion of labor officials, has been caused by the continued imprisonment of National Congress leaders, the refusal of British authorities to grant national government to the people, and the disruptive activities of fifth columnists.

UNION PROGRAM

Pointing out that the policy of the "struggle wallas" (those who advocate strikes and sabotage against the British as a means of achieving national freedom) must inevitably lead to surrender of the nation to Japanese fascism, trade union leaders call for:

1. All-out production of war materials.

2. Unity on a national scale between Hindus and Muslims (the trade union movement sets a good example in this, since it cuts across religious and racial lines).

3. Training in arms for the common people, as a means of enlarging the regular Indian Army and building up Volunteer Defense Corps.

4. Improvement in the standard of living of the workers and peasants through strict rationing and price control, imprisonment of profiteers and hoarders, and wage increases.

5. An end to imperialist policies which prevent industrialization and full use of the nation's vast economic resources.

6. Rapid organization of workers into trade unions.

RAILWAY WORKERS

Foremost among those striving to carry out this policy are the railway workers of India, numbering more than 700,000. Members of the Parel Railwaymen's Union, an affiliate of the All-India Railwaymen's Federation, reflected the views of all Indian railwaymen when they recently declared:

"The railway workers of our country have a great and proud role to play, next in importance only to their brother railwaymen in the Soviet Union and China. They occupy a strategic position in the defense of the country. They hold the nerve center of our country's defense system."

Because the trade unions are fighting for the interests of the whole nation, their leadership is growing fast. The All-India Trades Union Congress is expected shortly to have more than one million members (the total number of industrial workers in India is less than six millions).

Reports from all over India show that the trade unions are more and more becoming the protectors of the living standards, not only of their own members, but of all the common people.

In Giridih, coal mining center in Bihar province, the Mineworkers' Union succeeded in setting up a People's Food Council to deal with the terrible famine caused by hoarding and profiteering.

Manpower Parley

Des Moines, Iowa, Feb. 27—CIO representatives and executive board members of the Iowa-Nebraska States Industrial Union Council recently concluded a manpower conference which was attended by government officials who explained the functions of their services.

Unions Buy Planes, Tanks For Red Army

Kuibyshev, Feb. 27—(ALN)—Heads of the Soviet trade union movement, in a telegram to Joseph Stalin this week, announced that 100,000,000 rubles ($20,000,000) will be contributed from union funds to the Red Army on its 25th anniversary, February 23. The money will be used to purchase several squadrons of combat planes and a number of tank columns to participate in the continuing Red Army offensive.

The telegram, signed by the three secretaries of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions—Nikolai Shvernik, Claudia Nikolayeva and Solomon Bregman—and by presidents of 38 important Soviet unions, said: "The splendid successes of the Red Army inspire Soviet workers, technicians and office employees to fresh feats of labor to supply the front with more and more arms and munitions. The men at the front and the workers in the rear are fired with one determination—to carry out your

U. S. Firms Head Battle Against Mexican Miners

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 27 (ALN)—Of the 68 mining companies in Mexico, 42 have agreed to grant a 10 per cent wage rise, decreasing the possibility of a general strike in the industry, previously set for March 1st. However, Juan Manuel Elizondo, general secretary of the Industrial Union of Miners and Metallurgists, told Allied Labor News this week, a clause in the agreements reserves the right of local unions to join a nationwide strike if the 26 hold-outs, mostly subsidiaries of U.S. firms, persist in rejecting compromise proposals put forward last month by President Avila Camacho.

"Mexican miners," Elizondo said, "recognize the importance of Mexico's strategic minerals—copper, zinc, lead, manganese, iron, mercury and antimony—to the United Nations. But the companies, far from showing concern for the war effort, appear to be determined to take advantage of labor's no-strike agreement to destroy all Mexican trade unions. If they continue to refuse the 10 per cent increase proposed by President Camacho, they will be responsible for any interference with Mexico's contribution to the war.

U.S. CONTROL

The bulk of Mexico's mining industry is controlled by Americans. Some 90 per cent of all mineral reserves are held by foreign interests, 90 per cent American. The most important, the Guggenheim Co., American Smelting and Refining Co. (ASARCO), owns 17 Mexican companies. To stimulate industrialization, the government has imposed a higher export tax on raw minerals than on minerals processed in Mexico. Since ASARCO owns the only Mexican foundries and refineries, most of the minerals produced in the country flow through its ovens.

When the miner's contracts came up for renewal in 1938, the union refrained from making any wake demands because of the need for national unity during the oil crises. In 1940, when there was serious danger of a Fascist revolt during the presidential campaign, the union again postponed its economic demands. Consequently, the miners' pay has remained the same since 1938, while living costs have risen 200 per cent. Present wages, Elizondo said, are 4.60 pesos a day (92c in U.S. currency). The value of products mined, using 1929 as 100, rose from 175 in 1940 to 210 in 1942.

"The Miners Union, which now has 75,000 members," Elizondo said, "has done much to change conditions in Mexico's mines. Exploitation of Mexican miners by foreign firms has been one of Mexico's historic problems. In some regions, however, especially in remote district in the south, conditions are almost as bad as they are in Bolivia." Mining areas, he pointed out, are behind the rest of the country in social services because of transportation difficulties. The Miners Union is demanding provisions for hospitals and schools as well as increased wages.

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Charles H. Kerrigan, UAW-CIO Regional Director, reports an election victory at the Atson Flagg, Paterson, N. J., by a vote of 383 for CIO as against 150 for no union.

Frank A. Hardesty, CIO regional director in Texas, reports the following election victories in his area: Mosher Steel Co., USA, 229 to 21 for the AFL; Rheem Manufacturing Co., USA, 107 to 3; American Chain and Cable Co., USA, 18 to none. The cross-check of cards against the payroll of the Sheffield Steel Plant at Sand Springs, showed about a 98 per cent majority for the CIO, with only nine men not being signed up. Brother Hardesty further advises that they have just completed contract negotiations with the American Chain and Cable Co. securing many gains for the workers; including wage increases, vacation plan, union security. Representative Lawrence Bench, Perry Morton and Joe Picard assisted in these fine victories.

The American Newspaper Guild reports two more election victories, as follows: Chicago Sun editorial department, where the CIO won by a vote of 131 to 34; in the commercial departments of the Springfield, Ohio, News-Sun, the CIO won by a vote of 25 to five. The editorial department of this paper is under contract.

CIO Regional Director August Scholle reports that the workers at Friedland Iron & Metal Co., Lansing, Mich., voted unanimously to affiliate with LIU No. 1217. They were formerly attached to Local 461 of the United Construction Workers.

District 50 Beaten

CIO Regional Director Ewald Sander of New Jersey reports that the United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers won the election at Paramount Pen Co., North Bergen, N. J., by a vote of 50 for CIO and no votes against. In Lehman Brothers Paint Co., Jersey City, N. J., the CIO received 25 votes with none against. In both of these situations, District 50 withdrew, knowing they had no chance.

USA Director George Martin reports Labor Board victory at the Vulcan Corp. in Portsmouth, Ohio, where CIO received 215 votes to 31.

Noel R. Beddow, CIO regional director in Alabama, sends in a splendid NLRB victory among thhe Office & Technical Workers of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and R. R. Co. with the CIO receiving 351 votes to 95 for no union.

Regional Director George Craig of Philadelphia, comes through with a victory for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers at Joseph P. Cattie Bros., Inc., with a vote of 116 for CIO to five for the AFL and two for no union. This makes the third consecutive victory in the smelting and galvanizing industries in Philadelphia.

Regional Director C. H. Gillman of Georgia reports a fine victory for the PWOC at the White Provision Co., subsidiary of Swift & Co., with CIO receiving 249 votes, company union, 188, and four for the AFL. He also reports that they have organized the employes at the Lichtenstein Wholesale Grocery Co. and the company has agreed to recognize and negotiate with the union.

PWOC Conference

The Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee completed a national conference in Chicago this last week. The decision of the WLB denying these workers wage increases under the Little Steel Formula was thoroughly discussed. The unfairness of this formula was made quite obvious in its application to the workers in this industry and must be changed if the Board intends to mete out fair treatment to all and maintain the morale of our production front.

Some of the packing companies are taking advantage of this decision, using the 15-day escape clause to call upon workers to notify them of their resignation from the union in this industry. It is up to the WLB now to put a stop to these vicious and unfair practices. Delegates to the conference recognize that some of the packers would take advantage of any situation to destroy the union and the delgates left for their homes determined to fight for and strengthen their organization everywhere. Secretary Carey and I addressed the conference.

Answer To Rickenbacker

Mr. Rickenbacker wants to tie the hands of the unions in this crisis. That's what they did in Germany and Italy. If he doesn't already know it, I want to advise him there are many thousands of our members in the armed forces who want to preserve their organizations for their return and who know that organized labor is contrubuting to the war effort unsurpassed by any group of citizens in the nation.

CIO will not flinch from the fuming of Rickenbacker. It is evident he knows little of what he is talking about. He states he is not working for the Manufacturers' Association, Automotive Industry, America First Committee, etc., but he can rest assured that those who have fought for the right of labor to organize, over a period of many years, to insist upon collective bargaining will not acclaim his statements.

It is unfortunate that a man for whom American labor and citizens prayed that he and his gallant crew might be rescued and who rejoiced when news came of the rescue, should permit himself to be used in this manner. He professes sympathy for labor but will not fool the workers who are producing the materials of war, who have fathers, sons, brothers, husbands and sweethearts fighting this battle for freedom.

If there are racketeers in the CIO, Mr. Rickenbacker should name them and we'll take care of the rest. We haven't read yet of any conduct of employers, which has been exposed by government tribunals, being condemned by Mr. Rickenbacker.

CIO is dedicated to all-out production, full co-operation with our government and armed forces to crush the enemies of our nation and to unite the people of our country in this effort.

Price Watchers Guard Pocketbooks

Detroit, Feb. 27—An army of volunteer price watchers to cooperate with OPA in enforcing price ceilings and holding down profiteering will be enlisted by the UAW-CIO, it was announced here.

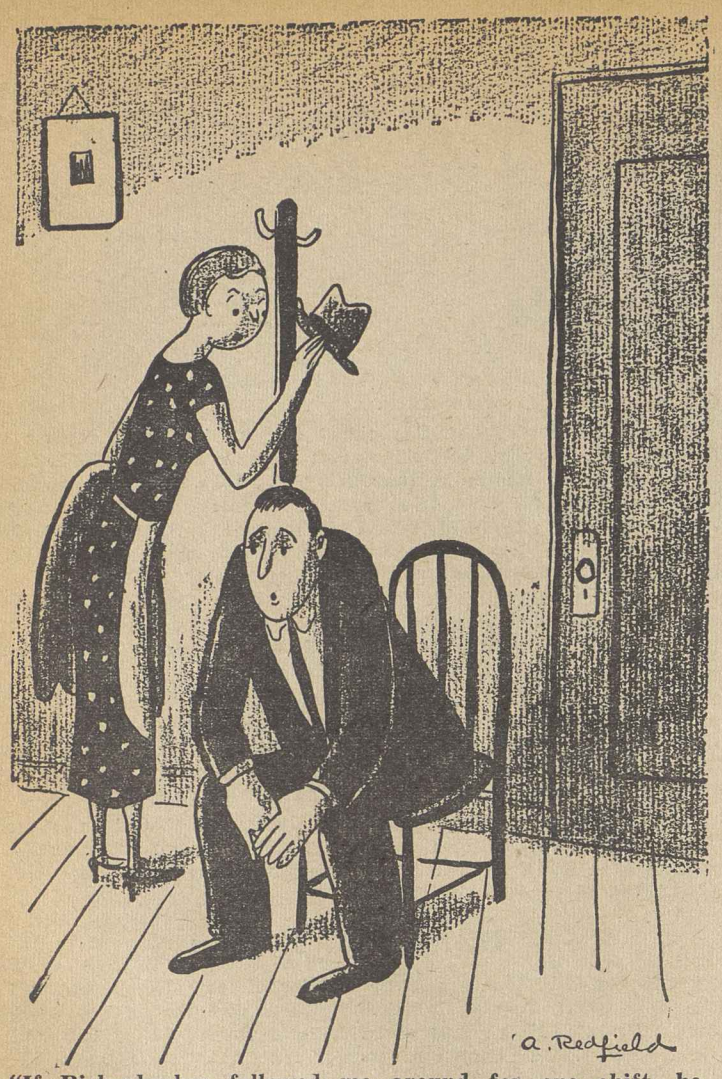
"It will be the largest group of organized price watchers in the country," UAW Vice-President Walter P. Reuther said in announcing the drive for volunteers. Committees will be set up throughout the country, and their activities directed from the UAW Washington office.

$50,000 Pay Hike

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 27—A $50,000 wage increase and the union shop were concessions won in a contract negotiated this week by the CIO with Hillman's after one of the most bitter fights in the Mid-West retail industry.

Poll Tax Drive

Suffolk, Va., Feb. 27—Lounching of a pay-your-poll tax drive and organization of political action committees highlighted a recently concluded meeting here of the Tidewater Industrial Union Council.



"If Rickenbacker followed me around for one shift, he wouldn't have any breath left for all those anti-union speeches."

'Shocking' Child Labor Increase Threatens Nation's Health'

NEW YORK, Feb. 27—(FP)—Although Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt has asserted that the war effort does not require employment of children under 18 years, there has been a shocking increase in the number of working children between 13 and 17 in the last year.

The Natl. Child Labor Committee and the Federal Council of Churches of Christ have published researches which make clear that the health, morale and education of U. S. children are being sacrificed to the demands of a dislocated war machine, left unguarded by firm federal and state laws.

HIRING MORE KIDS

Overshadowing this skeleton policy is the grim reality. Full or part-time employment of boys and girls of 14 and 15 years rose from 213,104 in 1940 to more than 500,000 in 1942.

The number of employed 16-and 17-year-old boys and girls is increasing at an even greater rate. On the basis of census figures and increase in work permits, probably nearly 3,000,000 are now employed, full or part time, and their number is expected to multiply.

A survey by the Child Labor Committee of juvenile delinquency in Hartford, Conn., typical war production area, singles out the rapid increase in child employment as the second most important factor in rising delinquency.

BELOW LEGAL AGE

"Boys and girls are leaving school at 16 for full time work," the committee says. "Many, some below the legal age, are working after school hours, often in undesirable jobs and at night. A number of boys are known to be working under bad conditions in pool rooms, bowling alleys, gas stations and other places where they meet a rough class of men. Hours are frequently difficult and work heavy. One boy in senior highschool sleeps three hours after school, goes on a night shift, and sleeps a short time before going to school."

In another report, COTTON OR SCHOOL, the committee warns: "Ignorance and illiteracy, if not checked in any group of our American children, may become one of our greatest liabilities for the post-war world."

FARM REGIONS HIT

Basis for this statement is the high percentage of children absent from school in sharecroppers' and laborers' families during harvest seasons. "At least two-fifths of these young people engaged regularly in agricultural employment outside of their home and approximately another 30% engaged in it for at least part of the time," the report says.

A new threat is presented by a spreading tendency to break down existing state laws, feeble as they are. Only 13 states have laws forbidding children under 16 to leave school for work and health safety measures remain unenforced. In six states bills suspending or modifying child labor or school attendance provisions have been introduced.

California CIO Charges Kaiser Plant Is 'Flop'

SAN FRANCISCO (FP), Feb. 27—A Federal investigation of Henry J. Kaiser's Permanente magnesium plant at Los Altos was demanded this week by the California CIO Council, which furnished to high U. S. authorities evidence that the $25,000,000 government-financed plant is a "spectacular flop."

"Output is only 8 per cent of planned capacity," the council said. "Cost of the metal produced is five times as much as originally estimated and almost four times that of Kaiser's largest competitor. Loss of magnesium in the foundry runs as high as 25 per cent of total production, yet inexpensive suggestions by staff chemists for salvaging almost all of this metal have been rebuffed sharply."

The CIO charges were documented by five research chemists—members of the Federation of Architects Engineers Chemists & Technicians—who said: "Almost without exception the men in charge of Permanente seem deficient in the type of training and experience which would qualify them to operate such technical production.

"Top engineering and research positions are held by men whose previous work has been in construction and who are not familiar with the complex chemical processes used at the plant. The management has refused to try out, consider or even discuss suggestions for improving processes and methods, and avoiding waste, which were repeatedly submitted by staff chemists and engineers.

"Although the Permanente plant, built with government funds at an announced cost of $25,000,000, is now a year and a half old, it is turning out only about 10 tons of magnesium a day—about 8 per cent of the original estimate.

"Useless landscape gardening, requiring the use of rubber-tired vehicles, is still going on, and shortly before Christmas considerable effort was expended producing magnesium Christmas trees for the Kaiser family, using steel frames and time."

Stone Workers Win Contract

Barre, Vt., Feb. 27—An agreement with the Strontium Products Co., Chauncey, Ohio, was announced here this week at headquarters of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers. Terms call for seniority rights, settlement of grievance by mediation and arbitration, vacation pay, and other standard union benefits.

The contract, which was negotiated by H. C. Ledyard, international president of the union, runs for one year.

Ledyard also announced that a charter had been granted to the employes of the Pomona Terra Cotta Co., Pomona, N. C., which employs 275 workers. Intl. Representative Sam H. Scott organized the plant, Ledyard said.

Retail Union Wins Loft

Long Island City, N. Y., Feb. 27—The United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes of America was chosen today as the exclusive bargaining representative of the 1,300 employes of the Loft Candy Corp., it was announced today by Samuel Wolchok, internation president of the CIO union.

Over 900 Loft workers participated in an NLRB election. The CIO group received 672 ballots, while the AFL, whose 3-year pact with the firm expired on December 31, received 142.

CIO Radio Aids Red Cross Drive

Washington, Feb. 27—Red Cross month, endorsed by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and by all CIO affiliates, will be featured on next week's Labor for Victory, CIO fortnightly radio show. The program will be heard on Sunday, March 7, at 1:15 p.m., EWT over the NBC Red Network.

The previous program, heard Feb. 21, was a salute to the Transport Workers Union, now seeking collective bargaining and wage increases from New York City to keep up transit workers' health and stop the outflow of labor from a vital war service.

It brought together a war worker who uses public transit, several of the workers who supply it, and the President of the N. Y. Transport Workers Union, Douglas L. MacMahon. MacMahon summed up for the union and for the war workers who need safe, adequately manned transit when he said:

"This problem is something which affects all of us, members of the general public just as much as the transit workers themselves. We look to the general public for increased support in our efforts to obtain some solution.

Ration Clothing Now, Warns Consumers Union

New York (FP), Feb. 27—Confirming an exclusive Federated Press story (Jan. 13, 1942) revealing an imminent clothing shortage, a Consumers Union survey this week warns that rationing must go into effect now to stem critical shortages and unjust distribution of clothing.

"Offhand, present supplies in retail stores may appear adequate to consumers," CU reports. "But shortages of material for civilian garments are already being felt in many items, and the retailer is going to have lots of trouble replacing his stocks this spring and summer."

Large stocks of wool, cotton, rayon and work clothing fabrics are being snapped up by the government for military purposes, the survey continues. One example: "Only one-third of the normal supply of rayon is expected to be available for civilians in 1943."

Pointing out that shoe rationing has got off to a good start. CU advises that rationing of general clothing articles could be just as successful.

A leap in department store sales was reported by the Federal Reserve Board in what was termed a rush of "scare buying." Sales were 45 per cent higher last week than during the corresponding week a year ago.

Although War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson and Price Administrator Prentiss Brown officially declared Feb. 9 that the WPB has given no authorization and OPA "has set up no machinery for rationing clothing," the Wall Street Journal reports that machinery for rationing has been ready for weeks and could be set in motion overnight.

Tells Bankers To Fight Anti-Labor Bills

Pittsburgh (FP), Feb. 27—Members of the Pittsburgh chapter of the American Institute of Banking got some good—but to them probably surprising—advice from the principal speaker at their 42nd annual banquet here when WHN Radio Analyst William S. Gailmor told them to take the lead in combatting anti-union legislation.

Asserting that if "free enterprise is to be preserved as a keystone of the American democratic arch, then labor and capital must fight as allies," Gailmor said:

"To emphasize the things that divide, rather than those which unite the American people in these critical times is to bring immeasurable aid and balming comfort to the enemy. The vast army of labor is our nation's first and most devoted ally.

"Labor, like industry and the armed forces, is at war against the forces of evil that threaten all of us. The current emergence of anti-labor agitation in certain legislative circles can, if permitted to develop further, cause the nation's army of working men to be so disheartened as to impair, materially, their vitally needed efficiency."

Labor Draft Flop As Manpower Aid

Mayor Rants to Save Pants But ACW Wins Election 3 to 1

DICKSON, Tenn., March 6—The mayor of this city figuratively lost his pants this week as the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union rolled up a three-to-one election victory at the Henry L. Siegel Co. The uninhibited public official personally helped to distribute leaflets to Siegel workers, saying:

"Remember the empty store fronts in Dickson and the open plants before the pants factory started operating? The CIO can't raise your wages. The CIO can't give you jobs. Siegel has spent $600,000 in Dickson in 1942. What did the CIO spend in Dickson? They are here only to get your money.

"Don't be a sucker any longer. Keep your jobs and vote them out. Let's keep our plants running and our payrolls. Vote against the CIO."

The leaflet was signed by "citizens of Dickson" because the mayor didn't have nerve enough to sign his own name, according to Carl F. Albrecht, southern director for the ACW.

Siegel workers apparently were unconcerned about the mayor's figurative "strip tease" for they rejected his anti-union pleas to vote 409 for the ACW to only 141 against.

Transit Workers Pledge 'No Strike,' Seek Peaceful Solution of Pay Demands

NEW YORK, March 6—With labor pledged not to strike for the duration of the war, some 600 delegates of the CIO's Transport Workers Union held a full day's conference here last Sunday to plan a successful and strikeless fight for a living wage and decent working conditions for the city's 30,000 transit workers.

TWU President Michael J. Quill opened the conference with a short address and Douglas L. MacMahon, president of Local 100, gave the keynote speech in which he reiterated the TWU's pledge not to strike for the duration.

A report brought in by the panel on wages stated that 85 per cent of the employes on the city's transit lines are at present receiving less than $2,000 a year. The report recommended a blanket increase to meet the increase in the cost of living; equal pay for equal work, and provisions to enable employes to reach the top rate in their classification in not more than two years.

A panel on union recognition submitted a plan calling for genuine collective bargaining, union security, machinery for the peaceful settlement of disputes and the prompt settlement of grievances.

It urged specifically that the Board of Transportation grievance board be granted authority to make final determination of all grievances, pointing out that the board now has authority to hear grievances but not to settle them.

CIO Effort Booms War Chest Drive

Youngstown, O., Mar. 6—Oversubscription of the Youngstown Community Chest War Fund was credited largely to efforts of CIO Unions by the War Chest officials this week, according to officials of the Mahoning County Industrial Union Council. CIO unions and their members donated about one-sixth of the total amount contributed.

Send 61-Foot Greeting to Red Army

New York, March 6—A 61-foot cable of greetings to the Red army on its 25th anniversary—the biggest mass greetings of individual trade unionists in this country—was filed with the Mackay Cable Co. by 1,510 New York fur workers and leaders of the Int'l. Fur & Leather Workers Union this week.

The cable pledged to "redouble our efforts in support of our Commander-in-Chief, President Roosevelt, for the immediate opening of the western front through which our combined efforts will completely crush our common enemy and secure the liberation and freedom of all mankind."

Hailing the "heroism, unexcelled courage, skill and endurance" of the Red army, the cable paid tribute to the "brilliant leadership of your supreme commander-in-chief, Joseph Stalin."

The 3,510 fur workers and leaders of the union whose individual names went in the message of greeting paid $796 in nickels and dimes to cover its cost. The greeting was filed as a delayed message to prevent interference with vital war communication.

Hey, You Rickenbackers, Dies's and Peglers—Take a Look at This!

BALTIMORE, March 6—Hey, you Rickenbackers and Coxes and Dies's and Smiths and Peglers—take a look at this! Grab yourselves an eyeful of the production record set by Baltimore CIO shipyard workers and then file your anti-labor, Nat'l. Manufacturers Assn. propaganda in the pigeon hole where it belongs.

Take a look at the one-hundredth Liberty Ship launched this week at the Bethlehem Fairfield yard by members of Local 43, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, who MORE THAN DOUBLED THE PRODUCTION GOAL SET FOR THE YARD BY THE U. S. MARITIME COMMISSION.

Take a look at Sparrows Point, where members of Local 33 this week were awarded the Maritime "M" for excellence of production. Take a look at every major shipyard in Baltimore—every one of them CIO—and please note that every one of them has won either the Army-Navy "E" or the Maritime Commission's "M." Take a look, boys, and then tell the world about it. We're waiting to hear what you've got to say!

HIT AIRCRAFT PAY DECISION

W. Coast Raises Denied

Washington, Mar. 6—Sharp criticism of government "bungling" and charges that the War Labor Board has broken faith with 250,000 West Coast airframe plant workers this week featured minority reports on a WLB wage decision which granted 30,000 Boeing Aircraft employes in Seattle only a 4½ cents an hour increase and which denied entirely any general raise for 230,000 other workers in Southern California plants.

The Board vote on the case was 7 to 5, with one public member, Dean Wayne L. Morse, and four labor representatives dissenting—John Brophy, Delmond Garst, George Meany and Fred Hewitt. The labor members urged a general increase of 10 cents an hour.

The minority sharply attacked what it described as interference in WLB decisions by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, the labor members declaring that "it is our opinion that the independence of the Board cannot be preserved so long as such a practice continues."

The Board majority recommended raises for about half the Southern California workers, averaging 7½ cents an hour, because they "have been working for less than the evaluated rate for their jobs."

The minimum hiring rates for beginners in these plants is only 60 cents an hour, and at Boeing only 67 cents.

Dean Morse and the labor members of the Board attacked the majority policy of failing to make the wage increases retroactive, and pointed to the inconsistency of the majority granting cash or war bond bonuses ranging from $64 to $78 to those who have been on the payroll of the companies from July 6, 1942, until the date of the Board order.

ASKS FAIR TREATMENT

"If an application of the policies of the War Labor Board as they existed nine or ten months ago, when the dispute first arose, would have resulted in a general wage increase for these workers, if the case had been settled then, it follows that it is only fair to give them that increase now," Dean Morse declared.

"On the basis of the time equity, the case is just as simple as that, and no amount of language or rationalization can erase from the record the fact that these workers have not been fairly dealt with by their government," Dean Morse stated.

Labor members declared that the 15 per cent cost of living formula which the Board has agreed to follow is not applicable to this case because there are four times as many employes in the industry as there were in January, 1941.

PIECE OF LEDGERMAIN

"The Board's conclusion that these airframe workers received an increase of 18 per cent over their January 1, 1941, rates is a piece of ledgermain which has no relation to any demonstrable facts," the labor members stated.

The July, 1941, increase of 10 cents an hour was not an increase in job rates, they said, but went only to the individuals then holding the jobs."

The labor members pointed out that the great bulk of the workers now employed were not in the industry then, approximately three times as many working now as were employed as of July, 1941.

They pointed out that airplane plants pay ridiculously low wages compared to the shipbuilding industry, and cited recent government figures which show an average differential of 32 cents an hour—91 cents in aircraft and $1.23 in shipbuilding for straight hourly rates.

Dean Morse called for application of wage recommendations made earlier by Paul R. Porter, WLB referee in the case, who proposed a general increase of 7 cents an hour in minimum rates at Boeings and a general increase of 5 cents an hour in the other plants' minimums.

"The wage increases proposed by the Porter report are not excessive and would not create inflationary purchasing power," Dean Morse declared. "Wage increases which go to workers' stomachs and to the necessities of life are not, in fact, inflationary."

Pointing out that "war workers are not getting rich out of this war," Dean Morse said that "there are many people in the country who seem to think that the problems of wage stabilization can be solved very simply by just freezing wages or by drafting labor at soldiers' pay."

"Apparently few of them," he stated, "have stopped to realize what would happen to our domestic economy if such a program were adopted. We can lose this war if we fail to maintain a sound domestic economy, and we cannot maintain it if we do not preserve to a reasonable degree the tax-paying and bond-purchasing power of the great majority of American citizens.

"The maintenance of a sound domestic economy is one of the best supports that we can give to our armed forces."

Poll Tax Repeal Meet March 9-10

Washington, Mar. 6—Plans for quick and continuous action in Congress to repeal the poll tax will be worked out at a "National Working Cnoference to Abolish the Polltax" scheduled to meet here Tuesday and Wednesday, March 9 and 10.

Labor speakers include Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative; Russ Nixon, Electrical and Radio Workers; A. F. Whitney, president, Railroad Trainmen; J. C. Luhrsen, Railway Labor Executives, and Viena Johnson, secretary of the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Association.

Walter White, head of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, will also be a featured speaker, as will Russell Saville, legislative representative of the Townsend plan. Two Congressmen will speak; Reps. Vito Marcantonio and Joseph Clark Baldwin, both of New York.

Freedom of Negroes Must Come Through Unions—Murray

WASHINGTON, March 6—Full emancipation of the Negro people "must come through powerful, intelligently led labor unions," CIO Pres. Philip Murray declared this week in making the main address at a Charter Day celebration of 76-year-old Howard University here.

Murray, who was welcomed by Howard Pres. Mordecai Johnson, stressed the fact that CIO offers full equality to all workers in its ranks, "regardless of creed, color or nationality," and declared flatly that "no labor organization, especially in the mass production industries, can hope to survive if it practices discrimination."

Full appreciation of this basic CIO policy was expressed by Pres. Johnson, who said in introducing Pres. Murray to more than 1,000 Howard students, graduates and faculty members: "In recent years there has risen a great movement of labor solidarity—the CIO. From the beginning it has shown interest in Negro workers, has gained their confidence and solidarity because of that interest, and has taken them into its leadership."

INTEREST OF ALL

"It is in the interest of the white workers to stop all discrimination," Murray said, "because the white worker cannot hope to improve his conditions while the Negro worker has sub-standard wages.

"No institution is better equipped to help win the war and win the peace than the labor movement, and no group can derive greater benefits than those portions of our Negro people who are driven down into the very dust."

Making a strong plea for national unity to win the war, Murray declared: "Out of blood and death comes a cry from every soldier, a cry for national unity—unity for the sake of that soldier's future when he returns. All of us have a contribution to make in this cause. We must work together, Negro and white, to win the war and perfect the kind of peace our people are trying to attain."

Murray coupled this with an equally strong plea for Negro workers to "come closer to the labor movement in America," saying: "Here is your meeting place, where Negro and white alike can find the shelter that God ordained all working people should have."

6 More Elections for CIO!

WASHINGTON, March 6—Victory in six important elections—one in the largest plant in Texas—and signature of two contracts in the face of Ku Klux Klan opposition were chalked up this week by CIO unions.

At Dallas, Texas, workers at the North American Aviation plant voted 55.4 per cent for the CIO United Auto Workers Union and 44.4 per cent against, bringing all three divisions of the company under the UAW banner. The vote was announced in percentages, because the number of workers employed in the plant—largest in the state—is a military secret.

MINE, MILL WINS

The Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers reported an overwhelming majority in a Labor Board vote at the Chase Brass & Copper Co., in Cleveland, Ohio. The vote was MM&SW 687, AFL 224. At a phelps Dodge brass fabricating plant near Los Angeles, Calif., the MM&SW garnered 343 votes to 36 for "no union."

The American Newspaper Guild reported a 4-to-1 victory among editorial employes of The Chicago SUN, Marshall Field paper, and a vote of 5-to-1 for the Guild at Springfield Newspapers Inc., in Springfield, Ohio, among commercial employes.

Employes of American Machine and Foundry, subsidiary of the American Tobacco Company, voted 1,005 to 557 for the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America at Brooklyn, N. Y. Opposing the UERMWA was an independent union known as the American Machine and Foundry Employees' Assn.

FIGHT KKK

Meanwhile, in spite of a Ku Klux Klan campaign to terrorize the workers, the first contracts were signed in the drive of the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers of America, CIO, to organize the 30,000 citrus workers of Florida. The drive opened last December.

One KKK activity has been to distribute widely throughout the citrus districts a leaflet carrying the would-be terrifying warning that "The Ku Klux Klan is Watching You." Unmoved by the circulation of this leaflet which also carried a threatening quotation from Edward Rickenbacker, the workers at Consumers Co. in Apopka stuck solidly together.

WIN 10 CENT BOOST

They came through negotiations with a maintenance of membership, check-off contract which calls for a 10-cents per hour increase, besides many other good union provisions, including vacations with pay.

Close on the heels of this history-making contract, came a signed agreement with Wilson and Toomer in Jacksonville, with similar provisions, including the union security and the 10-cent increase. This is a direct Food-for-Victory achievement since the workers were on strike when UCAPAWA came into the picture.

With the prospect of union organization to help them straighten out their grievances, the workers went back, built their union, won an election by a vote of 136 to 22 and negotiated their contract.

Just Like an Army:

White Collar Workers Fight With Stomachs, Too!

NEW YORK, March 6 — Declaring that the legitimate grievances of under-paid white collar workers make them easy targets for native Fascist propaganda, a win-the-war conference of this city's United Office & Professional Workers representatives this week embarked on a program designed to win wage increases for the half-million low-income, non-manual workers in this area.

"The salary increases needed to enable the white-collar and service workers to participate fully in our nation's victory effort can be granted out of increased profits, reserves and plant expansion funds of industry and commerce without being a factor for inflation," a Wage Policy Resolution stated.

"Where small business enterprises cannot meet the added salary," the resolution continued, "they should be directly subsidized by the government."

The 400 delegates, representing 20,000 organized white collar workers, heard UOPWA Pres. Lewis Merrill characterize the recent speeches of Edward V. Rickenbacker, and other anti-labor and anti-Administration attacks in the press and in Congress, as "a desperate drive fostered by those who put class interests above national interests to turn the middle classes and the white collar workers against the win-the-war policies of the Roosevelt Administration."

Telling the delegates that their No. 1 job is to stabilize the white-collar workers within the boundaries of national unity and mobilize them fully behind the President and the war effort, Merrill said:

"The white collar workers have suffered a drop in real wages for several decades. Today, they are using up small accumulated savings to meet rising living costs. Their grievances make them particularly vulnerable to the propaganda of the pro-Fascist forces in this country."

Dr. Carver Honored

New York, March 6—The annual award of the Teachers Union for "significant activity in behalf of democracy" is being made posthumously this year to Dr. George Washington Carver, famed Negro teacher and scientist. Previous recipients include Eleanor Roosevelt, Harry F. Ward, Franz Boas, and the anti-fascist teachers of Norway. Presentation of the award takes place each year at the union's annual educational conference, the seventh of which is being held this year at the Hotel Commodore on April 17.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Five major issues are before Congress this week, with bills pending on the House floor, in Committee, or simply threatened for some time in the immediate future.

This week, THE CIO NEWS is trying a new method of presenting the Congress box score—by subjects rather than by listing the individual bills. The bills will be briefly summarized under the main subject heading.

Bills listed in last week's box score continue to be important; such as the McKellar bill (S 575) to subject Federal employes to Senate confirmation; the Hobbs bill (HR 653) which may have hit the floor by the time you read this; the Pepper-Kilgore bill (S 607) for total war mobilization, and others previously listed.

MANPOWER AND WAR MOBILIZATION

The Austin-Wadsworth bill (S. 666, HR 1742) for a labor draft is being vigorously pushed. The bill would solve none of our manpower problems, since it ignores the basic solution in favor of compulsion. A real approach must be based on central planning of war output, creation of a central civilian war mobilization office as provided in the Pepper-Kilgore bill (S 607) now locked up in Sen. Military Comm. Passage of Tolan Com. renewal resolution (H. Res. 36) would also aid real solution. This is now buried in Ho. Rules Com.

Absenteeism is also before the House, with the Lyndon Johnson bill (HR 1876) now in Ho. Naval Com. This requires reporting of Navy Yard absentees to draft boards, adds nothing to solution of problem. CIO officials (see story on page 8) have pointed out that bill does not touch real causes of absenteeism, such as health conditions, bad housing, transit, overlong hours, etc.

FOOD PRICES

The farm bloc (representing profiteers, not farmers) has passed the Bankhead bill (S 660) in Sen., would raise food prices five per cent by subtracting benefit payments from base for figuring parity; benefits big corporation farms, gouges workers and all consumers. Pace bill in Ho. (HR 1408) and Brown bill (HR 2002) also increase prices by figuring increased labor costs in parity. Benefit to rich farm corporations, expense to consumers.

TAXES, WAR FINANCE

The phony Ruml plan is still alive, with strong efforts to put the tax forgiveness part through, to allow wealthy to escape 1942 taxation. Ho. Ways and Means Com. still nursing "pay-as-you-go" plans, no approach yet made to problem of raising $16 billions for war, taxing war profits, etc. Disney rider on debt limit bill out of Ho. Rules Com., would knock out $25,000 net limit ($67,000 total) on incomes.

LABOR BAITING

Hobbs bill (HR 653) still a major danger, may have hit the Ho. floor by this week. Dozens of anti-union, anti-war output bills in various stages in Ho. and Senate; would destroy union security, right to organize, strike, etc., subject unions to various kinds of compulsion.

ACTION

All these bills are of the greatest importance to the conduct of the war. Action required is more and more letters, wires, visits to Congressmen both in Washington and on their home grounds. Write to appropriate committees for bills in committee.

Address all Representatives, House Office Bldg.; all Senators, Senate Office Bldg., Washington, D. C.

LABOR DRAFT FLOP AS AID TO MANPOWER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 6—The Austin-Wadsworth labor draft bill utterly fails to make a real approach to the manpower problem, according to a statement issued this week by CIO and AFL members of the Management-Labor Policy Committee of the War Manpower Commission.

The statement, issued by CIO members Clinton S. Golden, Walter Reuther and John Green, and AFL members Frank Fenton, Joseph McDonagh and George Masterson, declared:

"The basic approach to our manpower difficulties must obviously seek the most effective utilization of the manpower available in the nation. This must mean, of course, the kind of overall planning and programming which can make needs known and plan appropriate steps for filling them."

The CIO-AFL statement was issued in response to support of the bill from Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, and took sharp exception to his support "at a time when there is before Congress the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper war mobilization bill which actually does strike at the heart of the war production problem and which offers a fundamentally sound solution to our manpower needs."

"The Austin-Wadsworth bill is in effect a measure of desperation," it said. "The issue is not at all compulsion as against a voluntary program. The issue is whether we are to approach our interrelated production and manpower problems on a basis of planned organization or whether we are simply to exercise power without planning and understanding. Under these conditions, labor will vigorously oppose the Austin-Wadsworth bill as a blow against rather than an aid to the war program.

"Meeting our manpower difficulties means the kind of planning which allocates contracts to the areas where the labor supply problem can be met, the kind of planning which makes sure that meeting the labor supply problem will not raise housing and transportation difficulties, the kind of planning which makes sure that workers on the jobs in which they are now employed are employed under conditions which utilize their highest possible skills, the kind of planning which arranges for training programs to produce the kinds of skills needed at the places where they are needed."

Bridges Petition Drive Starts

San Francisco, March 6 — Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader and president of the Intl. Longshoremen and Warehousemen, surrendered to a U. S. Commissioner here this week following denial of a writ of habeas corpus on the deportation order against him by Atty.-Gen. Biddle.

New bail was set at $3,000 and an appeal will be taken to a higher Federal court, with CIO determined to take the case up through the Supreme Court if necessary.

A petition campaign urging Pres. Roosevelt to dismiss the twice-exploded charges against Bridges and make it possible for him to acquire citizenship has been started. Full CIO support for the fight against deportation has been repeatedly pledged by CIO Pres. Philip Murray, by the CIO Executive Board and by CIO conventions.

'Equal Rights' Bill Would Harm Women

Washington, March 6 — The so-called women's "equal rights" amendment actually would harm women by destroying many of their hard-won legislative gains, the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries told the Senate Judiciary Committee this week. A statement by Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Fowler said:

"On behalf of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO I want to register the strongest possible opposition to the so-called equal rights amendment which is pending before your committee. The amendment would serve as a dangerous instrument to destroy many hard-won rights of women. It is generally agreed that the effect of the 'equal rights' provision would be to abolish those laws which protect the economic, physical and social conditions of women, but do not apply equally to men.

"The amendment would destroy protective industrial legislation and would impose extreme hardships on working women. It would create similar hardships for women in other walks of life. It would undermine laws which relate to widows' pensions, the right of dependent wives and children to support of the husband and father, guardianship and many other rights affecting family relationships.

"The CIO Auxiliaries, together with other labor organizations, have always opposed discrimination against women and have always worked to secure real equality for them. The 'equal rights' amendment is not a shortcut to equality but would create a hundred injustices for every one it abolishes."

Murray Urges Full Aid For Red Cross War Fund

Washington, March 6 — Terming the 1943 American Red Cross War Fund Campaign a vital part of the CIO War Effort, President Philip Murray this week called on over 5,000,000 CIO members to "take up the job planned by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief and drive it through to a smashing victory."

In a letter addressed to all Internationals and Industrial Union Councils affiliated with the CIO, Murray said, "With CIO members today carrying democracy's crusading banner all over the world, we have a special duty and responsibility to aid in the successful promotion of the Red Cross campaign. Only the Red Cross can bring word from far off prison camps to anxious parents, only the Red Cross can furnish food and medical supplies to these captured American boys, and only the Red Cross can have life-saving blood plasma ready when they fall on the battlefield."

Under the direction of the National CIO War Relief Committee, hundreds of Industrial Union Councils and locals throughout the country will carry the story of the Red Cross to their members during the months of March and April and will appeal for contributions representing labor's fair share of the local Red Cross goals.

A Shocking Record

The record of the 78th Congress has been a shocking one to date.

There is so much this Congress should be doing.

It should be promoting the total mobilization of our material and manpower resources for victory.

It should be working to stabilize our economy through real price control, universal rationing and a fair tax program based on ability to pay.

It should be mobilizing the united support of the whole country behind our Commander-in-Chief in every step necessary to win the war.

But what has this Congress actually been doing?

It has set up at least three committees to snipe at, embarrass and play politics against the administration—the Dies Committee, the Cox committee to smear the FCC, and the Smith committee to probe all administrative agencies.

The House appropriations committee has refused money for incentive payments to farmers, for maternity aid, for child care and to remedy causes of absenteeism.

The Senate has passed the Bankhead bill of the big business "farm bloc" to raise living costs; and the Pace bill, which would have similar results, is making rapid progress in the House.

Meanwhile, Congress is reported to be "in revolt" against Pres. Roosevelt because he limited high salaries to $67,200 ($25,000 after taxes) and suggests that rich married couples ought to be able to get by on $50,000 a year after taxes.

Then this Congress has spawned the longest and worst list yet of anti-labor bills.

It has sidetracked the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill to solve manpower and production problems by total war mobilization, while it concentrates on the Austin-Wadsworth forced labor bill.

It is trying to rush through the Hobbs bill to remove legal protections for legitimate union activity.

And every day brings new bills to cut wages by abolishing overtime pay, to promote the open shop and to hamstring the unions.

On the credit side, it is hard to find a single action to justify the claim that this is a "Victory Congress."

There are many progressive win-the-war members of Congress who are making a splendid fight.

But despite their efforts, a minority of reactionary poll-taxers, isolationists and anti-administration politicians-as-usual seem to be having things all their way.

The record of this Congress to date is such that it should shock the whole country, including Congress, into effecting a sharp change.

This change can be made. There are enough public-spirited and sincere win-the-war Congressmen in both parties to take control away from the poll-taxers, isolationists and politicians-as-usual.

But they need the prompting and support of the folks back home, and particularly of the millions of voters represented by labor.

That is why the CIO so urgently calls for legislative committees in every local union, and for intense activity to impress on Congress the necessity of setting aside petty, disruptive and obstructionist politics and going all-out for victory.

CIO and Red Cross

The launching of the Red Cross war fund drive this month finds the CIO unions and members already involved in supporting the widest range of Red Cross activities and eager to throw their full weight behind the raising of the 125 million dollar fund asked by President Roosevelt.

In a special letter to the membership, President Murray, who is a member of the Board of Incorporators of the Red Cross, urges every local union to set up its own war relief committee to work with the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief in promoting the CIO's Red Cross program.

"Only the Red Cross can bring word from far-off prison camps to anxious parents," Murray says. "Only the Red Cross can furnish food and medical supplies to these captured American boys, and only the Red Cross can have life-saving blood plasma ready when they fall on the battlefield."

Every member of the CIO should respond to President Murray's appeal to aid the Red Cross in carrying out its vitally important mission of mercy for our fighting men.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE XYZ plant was having "labor trouble," or so it claimed.

In one of its departments the men were getting restive, because they were not given enough to do and had too many lay-offs. In another department there was a "labor shortage," because the employment manager favored men with blue eyes and flaxen hair and couldn't get enough of them.

The nut-makers were worked like mad for long hours till some of them dropped from fatigue. Then they were all laid off, because there were too many nuts and no bolts.

It then developed there was a shortage of metal for making bolts. And when this arrived, there was a shortage of bolt-makers, because they had been idle so long they had gone off to other jobs.

There was also "labor trouble" in the plant's assembly division in a remote suburb. It always had too many of some parts and not enough of others. And the workers frequently reported late to work, because they all lived in the city and lacked proper transportation to take them to the suburb.

Meanwhile, the main plant was having the same trouble, because most of its employes lived in the suburb.

All in all, it was a messy situation. So the company turned for expert advice to its favorite Congressman, Mr. Poll-Tax Stickinthemud.

Rep. Stickinthemud replied by return mail: "You are obviously facing a serious manpower problem, caused by governmental bureaucracy, labor absenteeism and slow-downs, union selfishness and time-and-a-half pay for overtime.

"My solution is a bill to draft labor, anti-strike legislation, abolition of overtime pay and removal of the $25,000 limit on salaries."

Correct. The right answer to the company's question is a little more planning of production, coordination between departments and intelligent centralized management.

This brings us to the Austin-Wadsworth bill to draft labor.

The national manpower situation is admittedly serious. Some plants where labor is short are overloaded with contracts. The available workers are overworked, resulting in much absenteeism. New workers have to come from great distances, without proper transportation, and no decent housing is available near the plants. What's more, some of the companies are unwilling to hire Negro and women workers who are available nearby.

In other industrial areas, the companies can't get enough contracts or materials. But they don't want to let go of the workers they have, so they work them short time, give them "made work," or inflict temporary layoffs.

There is unemployment in one area, labor shortage in another; under-employment here, over-employment there.

What's the answer to this national situation?

The answer now being pushed in Congress is as stupid as Stickinthemud's reply to the XYZ company. It is to press for passage of the Austin-Wadsworth National Service Bill—a bill which completely disregards the real issues and simply gives the government power to draft workers and compel them to work as and where directed.

The CIO and AFL members of the Management-Labor Policy Committee of the War Manpower Commission have pointed out the futility of such a course and its complete failure to grapple with the real problem.

What's the real answer? It's as simple and obvious as the solution to the XYZ mess—namely, to plan and organize nationally the assignment of contracts, the allocation of materials, the distribution of manpower, the provision of housing, transportation, etc., under centralized direction.

This is the inescapable conclusion reached by the Tolan Committee. It began by studying the migration of labor and soon found there was no solution to manpower problems without also taking into account the planning of production, economic stabilization and countless other economic factors.

It therefore recommended the total war mobilization called for by the CIO, through the establishment of an Office of War Mobilization to plan and coordinate manpower supply, production and economic stabilization, with the full participation of labor, management and government in the centralized national direction.

These proposals have been embodied in the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bills before Congress. They represent the only sensible approach to mobilizing our economy for victory.

MAKE THE CONGRESS WORK FOR VICTORY

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, March 6—When the 78th Congress came to Washington two months ago, Senators and Representatives from both parties competed with each other in calling themselves the "Victory Congress," in predicting the great things they would do to win the war and serve the nation, in bragging about the way they would show the people how well they deserved their trust.

What is the record of this "Victory Congress" now that two months have gone by? Has Congress earned the self-awarded title? What has Congress done—and not done—to help our country and the United Nations win the war against the Axis?

Here is the record, both on what Congress has done on war issues and what it has failed to do—and what can be done by the people to change that record where it needs to be changed.

The Record

The record of Congress to date can be divided into two parts—the attitude and actions of Congress toward the conduct of the war by the Administration and the war agencies of government, and its attitude toward labor and labor's part in war production.

Three Poll Taxers

Dies, Smith and Cox are all polltaxers, representing a fraction of the citizens in their home states. They're anti-labor, anti-administration, anti-democratic. With their allies (Ham Fish and the like) they run the Rules Committee, clearing agency that can rush bad bills through, choke off good ones.

They run the Rules Committee through seniority. Poll tax Congressmen are self-perpetuating, until the poll tax is repealed. There's a poll tax repeal bill now in Congress. It passed the House last year, was killed in the Senate. It can be passed this year, if labor puts enough heat on its Congressmen.

Three resolutions passed in the first days gave a valuable clue to the way one dominant section of Congress—the poll tax gang and their reactionary allies from the north—were going to interpret the phrase "Victory Congress." These were:

1.) The Dies Committee renewal; 2) the Smith resolution for a universal "probe" of all government war agencies; 3) the Cox resolution for a "probe" of the Federal Communications Commission.

The record of the Dies Committee in promoting disruption and disunity was clear—has been clear for four years now. The renewal was opposed by labor and other win-the-war forces as a dangerous act of sabotage. Only 92 Congressmen voted against it; less than that on the new appropriation.

The Smith resolution was equally clearly an attempt to hinder and impede the conduct of the war. Smith's record as an anti-labor, anti-progress leader was well known from the smear job he did on the Natl. Labor Relations Board four years ago. The resolution went through on an overwhelming vote.

The Cox resolution was partly motivated by personal spleen on Cox's part—done to cover up a transaction he had with a radio station involving a $2,500 fee. Actually it too was aimed at an important war agency—and it too went through the House on an overwhelming vote.

Other Ways, Too

These are three examples of Congressional sabotage of the conduct of the war. They all went through the Rules Committee, got to the floor and to a vote in record time. But there are other ways of doing the same kind of job as well—also in committee.

Only a few weeks ago, the House Appropriations Committee took time out from considering an appropriations bill of billions of dollars to kill a handful of items amounting to less than $10 million all told.

They were small items, but they were very important to the conduct of the war. They would have provided funds for maternity care for wives of men in the armed forces; child care for children of war production workers; decent pay standards for the U. S. Employment Service to help in getting personnel for war production; more personnel and facilities for the U. S. Public Health Service to deal with health conditions in war plants; U. S. aid to education in war industry areas.

Food Crisis

The same Congress—billed so enthusiastically as the "Victory Congress"—did the same kind of job on an even more critical front, when the Appropriations Committee denied the administration's request for $100,000,000 in "incentive payments" to increase food production.

The $100,000,00 would have gone to increase the food output of small farmers, some 2.5 million of whom are now left out of the war job because they lack funds for equipment, for fertilizer, for rehabilitation of their land.

The request was denied despite strong pleas from administration leaders concerned over the coming food shortages—shortages that are already cutting down the efficiency and the output of war production workers. The previous Congress started the process when it denied funds to the Farm Security Administration last year—funds also earmarked for increases in food production.

The Senate side did its bit to add to the food crisis when the Senators voted (78 to two) to deduct benefit payments from the basis used in figuring parity prices on food. This move, again designed to aid the Wall St. growers over the working farmer, will add another five percent to the already inflated cost of food, if it passes both Houses.

And the House is threatening right now to pass two more measures that will still further increase food prices, by allowing growers to add so-called increased labor costs to the base used in figuring prices. Again, the big growers benefit, the workers and all consumers pay.

Last year, the 77th Congress undertook a flank attack on food prices and living standards by refusing funds to OPA, thus helping to delay and prevent much needed food rationing, price control. The hullabaloo in the current Congress on gas rationing, marked by long harangues and demogogic appeals, plus violent attacks on OPA, is an indication of what can be expected when new funds are needed—unless the temper of this "Victory Congress" is changed.

Manpower

The problem of manpower ranks with the problem of materials and planning in the war production picture. The contribution of Congress to date has been confined to two bills now pending—both of which would hurt the effort to get needed manpower into war production rather than help it.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill, now up for hearings, blandly ignores the basic need for a planned approach to manpower as part of the entire war production problem in favor of coercion. It simply conscripts labor for war jobs without giving any thought to where that labor is to go, what it is to do when it gets there, or what it is to work with.

Another bill, the Kilday bill, would work the same damage by making a blanket exemption of fathers from the draft until all single men are taken out of industry—no matter what key job they are in, or what skill they may possess.

Union Baiting

From its opening, the "Victory Congress" was marked as a field day by the labor-baiters and the union busters. The Hobbs bill, unsuccessfully promoted last session by its author, a leading poll taxer from Alabama, was rushed into the hopper in the first few weeks. It went through the House Rules Committee with the blessing of fellow poll taxers Dies, Cox and Smith, and the friendly aid of their Republican allies. The bill seeks to gag and cripple unions under the mask of stopping "racketeering"—a crime already amply covered by existing laws.

Dozens of similar bills have been offered by such men as Pass-the-Biscuits O'Daniel, Sen. Tom Connally (both poll taxers from Texas) and like-minded men from both sides of the Capitol. All these bills would hurt war production by hitting the unions, have the same effect even before passage by forcing unions to turn their attention from war production to the defense of the elementary rights of their members, the war workers.

Taxes, War Economy

Our total war economy needs some $16 billions in new taxes this year, to aid in paying the cost of war and in stabilizing the economic set-up, guarding against inflation.

So far, the House Ways and Means Committee of Congress has spent several weeks of time in monkeying with the Ruml plan, that would forgive taxes to the rich on swollen 1942 incomes, rob the country of much needed war money.

The President's demand for a $25,000 ceiling on net individual incomes (amounting

More Dough For Dies

Congress killed appropriations for increasing food production, for child care, maternity care, education, health, and other vitally important war services. The previous Congress had already hamstrung the Farm Security Administration.

Yet they had money to give the Dies commitee ($75,000), to give the Cox committee ($60,000), the Smith committee ($60,000).

And every time Congress listens to the "farm bloc" (representing the corporation farmers, not the working farmers), they present a handful of big concerns with hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money in the higher prices we all have to pay for food.

to a $67,000 ceiling on total income before taxes) has been ignored. Instead, one Rep. Disney of Oklahoma has put in a measure that calls for abolition of the President's order holding salaries only (not other income) down to $25,000.

Nothing has been done toward raising the $16 billion from higher taxes on inflated profits, big incomes, and nothing has been done to stop the tax loopholes that let the rich and the big corporations evade their fair share of taxation. Instead, Congressmen are talking of the sales tax, are dreaming of new ways to hit the low income groups—ways that will cut into already dangerously low food budgets, and thus lower war production efficiency.

War Mobilization

This is a brief record on the "Victory Congress" to date, touching only the highlights of what has been done to damage the nation's war effort. There's another side also—the side of Congressional failure to make a realistic approach to the problem of total mobilization for total war.

The House resolution to renew the Tolan Committee has been buried in the Rules Committee since January. The Tolan Committee did the pioneer work on showing the nation the need for total planning and central direction of the war production drive. Resolutions by Dies, Cox, Smith & Co. speed through the Rules group—while the Tolan resolution lies buried.

A similar embalming job was done on the Pepper-Kilgore bill calling for a central civilian agency to carry out total war mobilization, when it was sidetracked into the Senate Military Affairs Committee.

The Office of War Mobilization that this bill would create would do such simple—and essential—jobs as coordinating the production of parts for bombers with the production of the main body of the bomber itself, would brush away the inefficiency and delays that now come from the presence of a dozen or more agencies competing for materials, for manpower and for the finished product.

The poll tax repeal bill, an essential war measure to mobilize all our citizens in the victory drive, was filibustered to death in the last Congress, will require a discharge petition again this year to get it out of the Rules Committee.

An anti-discrimination bill is also before Congress, offered by Rep. Marcantonio, and also buried in Committee. Discrimination against Negro workers and other minorities robs war production of hundreds of thousands of needed workers, makes a hollow slogan of democracy. Yet the "Victory Congress" has taken no action on this bill, will not unless forced by the pressure of the people.

Labor's Answer

These acts of sabotage and these failures by the 78th Congress in the two months of its life to date are traceable to the alliance of the anti-labor, anti-democratic, anti-victory forces of the poll taxers and their reactionary Republican friends from the north.

Labor's answer to this conspiracy against the nation's security can be made, and must be made, in a coalition of all labor and all real win-the-war forces to make the nation's will for victory count in Congress.

CIO President Philip Murray made a clear call for this kind of action in announcing the CIO's 1943 Victory Program, when he said: "It is the task of organized labor, so keenly aware of the issues involved in this life and death struggle, to present a program of action to the American people which will accomplish what they so earnestly desire—immediate and decisive victory."

The answer cannot be made from Washington. It can be made only by united, day-to-day action from the workers in alliance with the farmers and all the progressives throughout the nation.

Congress listens to the people—but only when it hears from them. When it doesn't hear, the wrecking crew feels confident that they can get away with sabotage and disruption at will.

Congress will listen this year, if the people will speak up. The record of the first two months is a bad one. It can be changed. Real win-the-war forces exist in Congress, if they can be mobilized. The anti-labor, anti-administration conspiracy can be halted and broken up.

And this Congress can be made to work the way its spokesmen boasted it would work on the opening day last January—as a "Victory Congress" in the real sense of the word.

Lift Up Your Voice!

Your letters, your wires, your visits count with Congress. When it is made perfectly clear to them what the people want, Congress reacts like any other agency—it seeks to please the people who put it in office.

Sometimes the reaction is a little slow, which simply means that the letters, wires and visits have to be increased. The poll taxers are almost impossible to reach, pending repeal of the poll tax, but they are by no means the majority.

Tell your Congressman and your Senators what you want. Let them know that the workers' victory program must go through—and you'll see results, the kind of results that will speed the day of victory for the cause of our country and of the United Nations.

'Monkey'-Ward Still Making Faces at WLB'

UNION TRIBUTE: Sec.-Treas. Jacob Potofsky, right, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, presents checks for $350,000 to Brooklyn Borough Pres. John Cashmore to purchase a bomber to be known as the Kelly-Levin in tribute to Capt. Colin Kelly and to Sgt. Meyer Levin, hero son of Sam Levin, center, veteran ACW member.

Defies Win-the-War Program

Washington, March 6—Flaunting its defiance of the War Labor Board again in full page ads, Montgomery-Ward & Co. this week announced publicly that it would continue to protest against recognizing the right of the CIO United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes to union security.

The company's latest anti-union blast came as a panel of the WLB unanimously recommended that a provision for maintenance of union membership be extended to four Montgomery-Ward stores in New York, Detroit, Chicago and Denver.

The recommendation follows an earlier ruling of the Board which the company also flaunted until ordered by President Roosevelt to put it into effect.

The CIO retail union pointed to the firm's anti-union advertising drive and to anti-union posters displayed in its plants as showing the need for safeguarding the union's rights.

"It is the opinion of the panel that whatever the company's attitude might be toward the union and its members that nevertheless the posters in the shop and the advertisements in the newspapers might very well have a demoralizing effect on the members of the union and on those who might have intended to join the union," the panel report stated.

"In view of the fact that this union, among others, has pledged itself not to strike for the duration of the war and has abided by that pledge, the panel feels that the company should not take advantage of the circumstances and that the union is entitled to the maintenance-of-membership clause."

'Little Steel' Wage Formula Interpretation Hit by Thomas

Washington, March 6—R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO and a labor member of the National War Labor Board, declared today that George W. Taylor, public member and acting chairman of the board "is fostering a distorted version of the Little Steel formula which cannot fail but create widespread labor dissatisfaction in the war industry." Thomas said:

"The interpretation of the Little Steel formula now being made by Dr. Taylor is not based on the logical implications or original intentions of that formula.

"It is not true, as Dr. Taylor has been maintaining, that wage increases in keeping with the increased cost of living are barred by the Little Steel formula. Dr. Taylor has taken a position which in effect means that the little Steel formula is an absolute wage freeze.

"The War Labor Board in writing the formula did not intend that to be the case. In no subsequent decision of the board nor in any Act of Congress is there any justification for freezing wages. The Little Steel formula leaves the way open for wage increases to meet rising living costs, to eliminate unfair inequalities in wage rates, and to bring up sub-standard wages.

"Continuous and efficient war production as well as simple justice to millions of war workers demand that the position taken by Dr. Taylor shall not prevail. Labor asks only for recognition of its rights to have its purchasing power keep pace with living costs. That right is inherent in the Little Steel formula and should not be denied."

Joint Committee

St. Louis, March 6—The United Labor Committee of Greater St. Louis, which has acted informally on behalf of the local labor movement in two elections, has been set up on a permanent organized basis by action of the AFL and CIO here, for representation of all labor in political, legislative and civic matters.

In Chicago last year, 8,105 families shared the products of 547 community war gardens.

Labor and The Law:

Supreme Court Bans 3rd Degree Confessions

By LEE PRESSMAN

CIO General Counsel.

The United States Supreme Court in a recent case reaffirmed the protection to which Americans are entitled under the U. S. Constitution. The Intl. Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in 1939 was attempting to organize the employes of the Tennessee Copper Co. mines at Copperhill, Tennessee. The company engaged in vicious anti-union practices which compelled the calling of a strike to protect the men and the Unions. During the course of the strike, certain power lines of the company were destroyed. The Sheriff on mere suspicion took into custody a number of the strikers, including the defendants who were involved in the case. The arrests were made without warrant, which was illegal under Tennessee law.

The defendants were not taken before any magistrate or other committing officer, which also was a violation of the Tennessee law. Instead they were held in custody by the state officers, and questioned by special agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation over a period of six days, during which they saw neither friends, relatives, nor counsel. During this period so-called "confessions" were obtained from the defendants.

The Supreme Court reversed the convictions that had been obtained on the basis of the so-called "confessions" on the ground that they should not have been and could not be admitted as evidence in the trial.

Henceforth, as the result of this case, any person who is arrested must be taken immediately before the appropriate judicial officer in order that a charge may be filed against him and an order of commitment filed. A person so charged is entitled to have the benefit of consultation with his counsel.

No longer can enforcement officers arrest persons merely on suspicion and keep them under lock and key until they obtain so-called "voluntary confessions" through reprehensible third degree practices.

It is extremely important that a decision such as this has been rendered at the present time. The protection of civil liberties and the basic constitutional rights is the essense of our Democracy, for the preservation of which we are engaged in our present struggle against the Axis-Fascist forces. The U. S. Supreme Court, in guaranteeing the enjoyment of our cherished liberties by all Americans has struck a smashing blow against any of our native born Fascists.

Servicemen's Wives Need Assistance

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer
CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The widespread and urgent need for assistance to wives of servicemen in meeting the financial burdens of child birth was brought out vividly in Congress this week during the debate on the Deficiency Appropriation Bill.

The House Appropriations Committee refused to approve an item of $1,200,000 asked by the Children's Bureau to continue a program of assistance to wives and infants of servicemen begun with special allotments from maternal and child health funds available under the Social Security Act.

The Red Cross estimates, from a sample check of 10% of their chapters made last August, that 25,000 wives of servicemen each month are in need of some such assistance. Private relief agencies, Army and Navy Relief and the Red Cross itself are not able to meet this tremendous need.

Twenty-eight states had already started programs under plans approved by the Children's Bureau, but all funds for carrying them on have now been exhausted.

KILLED BY TECHNICALITY

It seems incredible that Congress should have refused to approve the tiny fraction of the 6 billion dollar appropriation needed to give this aid to the wives of the men who are giving their lives to our country. The Committee based its refusal on a technicality which could easily have been ignored. The result is to delay relief to these women while a new bill is drafted and intrduced to meet their needs.

Even the most rabid exponents of economy in the House, however, promised to support such a bill. The Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO will do all it can to speed action.

We realize, however, that the need for maternity care is only a minor part of the problem facing most wives of servicemen. The vital problem is "How am I going to support my baby on $62 a month?" Already the CIO auxiliary councils in San Francisco and Los Angeles have started pressure campaigns on Congress to demand increased allowances for service wives with young children.

Discussions have begun in Washington on what provisions should be included in the bill which must be introduced. Every auxiliary is asked to give this some consideration and to write to Congress and to the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, 1019 15th St. N.W., Washington, to let us know what you think.

GREET UNITED NATIONS

A national delegation of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO will visit the embassies of the United Nations in Washington to present the greetings of CIO auxiliary women to the women of our allies as part of the observance of Blue Star Mothers Week, March 8-15. Faye Stephenson, President of the Auxiliary Congress, and herself a blue star mother with a son in the air corps, will lead the delegation.

MOVING CEREMONY

One of the most moving ceremonies of the week, during which auxiliaries from coast to coast will hold affairs in honor of wives and mothers of unions servicemen, will be a reception planned by the New York auxiliary of the National Maritime Union. The reception will honor the women who have lost their men at sea delivering supplies to our armies and our allies, and those whose husbands and sons are still keeping them sailing.

Know Food Values to Shop Wisely

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Now that Point Rationing is under way, we, who do the shopping and want to shop wisely, realize more than ever how important it is to know the values of the different foods necessary to good health. It means knowing how to understand the labels on all canned and packaged goods. Many of the terms used in labeling are new to us and may seem difficult to grasp at first but we might as well learn them at the very start.

VITAMIN B COMPLEX

One of these new terms that we hear about is the Vitamin B Complex. It is the Vitamin B Family and is made up of several very important vitamins. Three of these vitamins we know play a definite part in the balanced diet: These are Vitamin B-1, Riboflavin and Nicotinic Acid.

We have already discussed in the last columns the important part Vitamin B-1 plays in the daily diet.

Riboflavin—(sometimes called Vitamin B-2 or G) is important because it: promotes growth; helps keep eyes, skin, hair healthy; helps build strong nervous system; and helps increase the span of life.

Rich sources of Riboflavin are: lean meats, liver, kidney; green leafy vegetables; fresh and dried peas, lima beans; dried soybeans, yeast, wheat germ; and milk, eggs, American cheese.

LIVER BEST SOURCE

Like Vitamin B-1, Riboflavin is present in a variety of foods in small quantities. Several of these foods must be eaten daily to supply the required quota of Riboflavin. The best of the green leafy vegetables are—beet greens, kale, mustard greens and spinach.

Of all the foods, liver is the richest source of Riboflavin. One 3 oz. serving of beef liver will supply the full daily quota for children up to 9 years of age and from ½ to ⅓ the daily quota for 10 year olds and over. And you don't have to buy the most expensive liver to get the most nourishment. Pork liver, the cheapest on the market, rates highest in Riboflavin, beef liver second and calves liver third. Include liver in your diet at least once a week.

COOKING HINTS

To grind liver, drop first in boiling water. Simmer a few minutes. Remove outer skin and grind. Mix ground liver with meat in meat loaf or hamburgers. Here is a favorite of many, try it.

Chopped liver: Use mayonnaise or rendered chicken fat to make a paste of fried or left-over liver, chopped with browned onions and hard boiled eggs. Serve a scoop or two on a lettuce leaf. For that specially nice flavor, pour a little chicken fat over the ball of liver just before serving. Salt and pepper to taste. Use some of the liver paste as a sandwich spread in lunch box sandwiches. It's nourishing and tastes good, too. Send in for some liver recipes if you need some ideas.

Nicotinic Acid (or Niacin) is the pellegra preventive vitamin. Nicotinic Acid is especially important in the diet. In preventing the dread disease, pollagra, a disease that goes hand in hand with poverty and malnutrition.

A daily diet that includes milk, eggs, wholegrained cereals and breads, green leafy vegetables and lean meats, especially liver, will give you your daily required quota of the vitamins that make up the Vitamin B Complex B-1 (or thiamin), Riboflavin (B2 or G), and Nicotinic Acid (or Niacin).

CHEERY is the word for the recreation room at Camp Butner, near Raleigh, N. C., after the N. Y. Newspaper Guild, in cooperation with the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, furnished the place for Negro troops. Chief former feature of the room was its bleakness.

ACW Shop Wins 1st 'E' In Clothing

New York, March 6—A 100 per cent CIO union shop has received the first Army-Navy "E" award given to a clothing firm in the Greater New York area, for its part in helping outfit the best clothed army and navy in the world.

Some 300 employes of Solomon, Goldstein & Portnoy, all members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, were honored last week at ceremonies attended by representatives of the armed forces, the city, labor and management.

"This award is the highest honor your country can bestow for distinguished service on the production front," said Lt. Col. William R. Stanert in presenting the award for the Army.

Two Madison, Wis., daily newspapers have abolished their Sunday comic sections in order to save paper.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

CIO Representative A. R. Hardesty of Texas reports that the UAW-CIO came through with a splendid victory at North American Aviation in Dallas. This was a run-off election between the CIO and no union. Government war requirements prohibit publication of actual figures but our representative assured us it was a big election. Congratulations to Richard T. Frankensteen, director of aircraft, UAW-CIO; Regional Director Livingston and staff; and all who cooperated in this splendid victory. This union is rapidly headed towards attainment of the million-membership mark.

Sidney R. Katz, secretary-treasurer, Maryland and D. C. Council, reports a victory of 22 to 1 in a brickyard election in which CIO and District 50 were on the ballot.

The United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers came through at the Wilson Laboratories in Chicago, Ill., by a victory of 108 for CIO to 4. In Dunkirk, N. Y., at the Public Light, Heat & Power Co., the CIO was victorious in an election by a vote of 28 to 19. Regional Director Hugh Thompson and Field Representative Lovas were instrumental in this fine achievement.

Organizer Nicholas Vrataric of the United Paper, Novelty & Toy Workers Union, reports a victory at the Eddy Paper Corp-Kieckhefer Container Co., White Pigeon, Mich., where CIO received 163 votes to 25.

Glass Workers Win

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO sub-regional director in Columbus, Ohio, reports that the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers were victorious in the election at the S. A. Weller Co. in Zanesville, Ohio, where CIO received 66 votes to 10. International Representative Everett Kanatzar handled the situation.

A significant election victory was won by the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes at the Loft Candy Corp. in Long Island where 95 per cen of these workers are women. The AFL had a contract there for three years but much dissatisfaction prevailed. The CIO polled 672 votes while AFL received 142. This climaxes a three-year struglle. Congratulations to all.

This organization came through with a victory after a dramatic two-year struggle at the Hillman chain in Chicago, Ill. In the election, CIO received 294 votes to 189 for the AFL. The union followed this up by signing an agreement with this firm providing for union shop; premium pay of time and one-half; decrease of watchman's hours or increase of $2.50 per week with present hours. Employes leaving for the armed forces receive two weeks pay plus a pro-rata part of vacation pay. Merit increases to be granted a number of employes range from $1 to $4. Grievance machinery was set up. The workers are preparing a gala party and dance to celebrate.

Book Workers Get Pact

The UOPWA Book & Magazine Local 18 announces completion of a wage agreement with Harper & Bros., Dodd-Mead & Co. and Farrar & Rinehart, providing for a minimum wage, increases of $3 per week retroactive to October 6, last, plus a clause where women taking men's jobs who leave for the armed service or another war industry shall receive the same pay as men doing similar work.

The United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers have signed contracts in their Florida drive among the citrus workers. UCAPWA Vice-President Otis G. Nation assisted in these negotiations and reports a maintenance of membership, check-off contract which calls for a 10 cents per hour incerase, besides many other good union provisions, including vacations with pay. This organization also reports signing an agreement with Wilson & Toomer in Jacksonville, with similar provisions including the 10 cents increase. A third major UCAPAW Florida victory recently was the winning of an election at Fosgate's, biggest Florida packer of citrus fruits.

Home Front No Picnic For British Unions Either

LONDON, Mar. 6 (ALN)—Britain's trade unions are mobilizing their full strength to stop the Tory bloc in Parliament from preventing passage of the Catering Trades Bill now before the House of Commons. The Tories already have sabotaged the government's fuel rationing scheme and have forced postponement of action on the Beveridge Report.

Outcome of this struggle is of vital consequence to the whole war effort, in the view of labor leaders, since the bill seeks to improve the wages and working conditions of hundreds of thousands of workers in industrial canteens, hotels, boarding houses and restaurants. These conditions are such (a male cook in an industrial canteen averages $15 a week) that they endanger the efficiency not only of the catering workers but of the millions of workers in war industries.

STUDY URGED

Purpose of the bill, which is sponsored by Labor Minister Ernest Bevin, is to set up a commission to study conditions in the catering trades industry (before the war the largest in Britain) and establish Trade Boards where necessary to govern wage rates and working conditions.

In British industries where both employers and workers are strongly organized, wages are fixed by collective bargaining between the unions and trade associations concerned. In many unorganized industries, Trade Boards established by the government regulate wage rates.

Catering remains a basically unorganized industry. At the present time, two unions, the General and Municipal Workers and the Distributive and Allied Workers, are engaged in an organizing campaign among food workers.

REAL AIMS

Main arguments of the opponents of the bill are (1) that it is a "controversial issue" calculated to upset national unity, and (2) that it would establish Bevin as dictator of the industry. The real aims of the trade associations, however, were laid bare in the following statement of the Joint Committee:

"It is possibly not a bad thing to have some portion of the industrial field remaining in which employers and employes may be free to make their own bargains, so that those who do not care for trade union or bureaucratic regulation may be able to live their own lives as they want to in this supposedly free country."

"Wages and conditions in the catering industry, always notoriously bad, are now a threat to the war effort," Tom Williamson, national industrial officer of the NUGMW, recently declared. "Organization of the workers is now an absolute essential."

The war has brought bigger profits than ever to the catering employers. According to the London Economist, in the nine months preceding September, 1942, profits for a group of 16 hotels and restaurants were $8,355,000, compared to $7,270,000 for the corresponding period in 1941.

Ontario Shelves Labor Bill

Toronto, Mar. 6—(ALN)—Shelving by the Ontario government of its long-promised bill to guarantee trade unions the right to bargain collectively has caused profound concern in all sections of the Canadian labor movement. It had been expected that passage of the bill would not only lead to similar legislation in other provinces but would also force the federal government, consistently hostile to labor, to adopt a "Wagner Act" of its own. The bill has now been referred to a committee of the provincial legislature.

"Failure to enact the bill will gravely endanger the war effort," the Hamilton Labor Council, CCL, declared in a resolution forwarded to the provincial government. "The workers and employers, with government assistance, should now be devoting all their efforts to supplying weapons and war materials to our gallant troops and allies, for the grand offensive in 1943 which can bring about the defeat of Htler."

POLITICIANS RETREAT

The Fort William Trades and Labor Council, AFL, declared: "We are aware that habitualy anti-labor minority interests are working overtime to prevent passage of legislation such as that proposed by the Ontario government. It will be nothing short of a calamity if these selfish interests succeed in their efforts."

Gordon Conant, premier of Ontario, and Peter Heenan, Labor Minister in the provincial government, backed down on their promise to labor following a vehement press campaign against their bill. Advertisements in the nation's newspapers exploited anti-union statements by the "Canadian Federated Council of Employees," a company union formed in Hamilton, Ont., last November expressly for the purpose of fighting the proposed labor legislation.

Probe 15c a Day Pay In Bolivian Mines

LA PAZ, Mar. 6 (ALN)—The North American commission investigating the chaotic conditions in Bolivia's mining industry, which resulted in a serious strike in December in the tin mines, left this week for Oruro, first stop on a tour of the mining districts which is expected to last four weeks.

At present, the commission consists of twelve North Americans and seven Bolivian technicians, headed by Dr. Juan Manual Balcazar, Minister of Labor. It includes Martin Kyne, vice-president of the United Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes, as representative of the CIO.

PRESS REACTION

The Bolivian press, which can generally be counted on to reflect the view of the mining companies, was not enthusiastic. La Calle, most conspicuously pro-Axis La Paz daily, wrote that since the commission would undoubtedly recommend increased wages and improved living conditions, the companies should refuse to comply unless the government lowered taxes.

"The only honest solution," La Calle said, "is for the U. S. Metals Reserves to pay a higher price for Bolivian minerals. Metals Reserve knows that if it continues to buy our minerals at present prices, no improvement in wages or living conditions can be lasting."

It is not known whether members of the Commission will be allowed to interview the heads of Bolivian labor, most of whom have been arrested and banished to remote parts of the country. While Axis propagandists and their associates are accusing North Americans of interfering in Bolivia's internal affairs, Bolivian labor deputies here believe that the commission has a splendid opportunity to aid the United Nations' war effort. Improvement in working conditions in the mines, they feel, would result in an immediate increase in the output of tin and a tremendous increase in sympathy for the United Nations.

In many parts of Latin America, the United States is identified with anti-labor and even occasionally pro-Axis enterprises owned by North Americans, and the policies of President Roosevelt and Vice President Wallace appear unreal to Latin American workers earning 15 cents a day in U. S. owned mines. The Commission, in the opinion of Bolivian labor, can demonstrate the reality of the Good Neighbor policy and show what can be accomplished by collaboration of democratic groups in North and South America to counteract the efforts of Axis propaganda.

APPOINTED: Roi Ottley, a member of the American Newspaper Guild, has been appointed publicity director for the CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, Chairman Irving Abramson announced this week. Ottley is the author of "Inside Black America," which will be published in May. He formerly was an editor and columnist with the N. Y. Amsterdam-Star News.

Back Invasion

Chicago, March 6—A pledge of "all-out support of the production lines to back up the invasion of Europe for which we impatiently wait" was made this week by Local 65, United Steelworkers of America, representing 15,000 employes of the Carnegie-Illinois South Works plant.

Save Europe's Jews Is Joint Labor Plea

New York, March 6—Hitler's threatened murder of the 5,000,000 Jews still alive in Europe must be met with immediate action by the United Nations, religious, labor and civic spokesmen asserted at a Madison Square Garden rally here March 1.

The demonstration, sponsored by the American Jewish Congress, the Federal Council of Churches, the CIO, AFL, and scores of other organizations, brougth out an overflow attendance of 22,000 people. The crowd heard Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey, of CIO, say:

"The people of the civilized world, no matter what their belief, are aghast at the horrible record of the Nazis in the deliberate slaughter of the Jewish populaion of the lands they have conquered or invaded—including the Jews of the Axis nations themselves.

"Organized labor in America and in all lands has long recognized this outstanding fact of Fascism—that it is the sworn enemy of all mankind, that its persecutions of one group or one minority do not end with that group," Carey said. "The slaughter of the Jews in occupied Europe is an atrocity that moves us all; it is also a warning of what the Nazi murderers have in store for every people that resists them, or that stands in their way in any manner.

"The Fascist rage against mankind cannot be cured by our tears and regrets alone. It can only be cured by the complete military annihilation of the armed forces of Nazism and Fascism."

"Fifi, darling, it breaks my heart—but with meat being rationed . . ."

Chilean Workers Support Allied Labor Unity Says Latin Leader

WASHINGTON, March 6—Chilean workers welcome all steps toward close unity of United Nations labor to win the war and win a people's peace, Bernardo Ibanez, head of the Chilean Confederation of Labor and vice-president of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor (CTAL), said in a press meeting on the first day of his visit to this country.

"The solidarity of world labor is the best guarantee we have that we will win the war and win the peace," Ibanez declared. "The Chilean workers welcome the aid of United States workers in extending this unity to all the United Nations."

Ibanez, in this country on the joint invitation of the CIO and the AFL, said that he would promote the idea of permanent relations between the workers of his country and of the U. S. in his talks with CIO and AFL leaders, and in a trip around eastern U. S. industry centers.

He has already met with Pres. Murray and has arranged meetings with the CIO Committe on Latin American Labor Relations and with the Foreign Relations Committee of the AFL. During his trip he will also talk with government officials, he said, and will return to Chile in time to meet with Vice-Pres. Wallace, who plans a trip to that country.

ANTI-FASCIST WORK

The Chilean Confederation was the most active organized group in bringing about the recent break in relations between Chile and the Axis, Ibanez said, describing the campaign of meetings that culminated in 100 simultaneous mass demonstrations a few days before the diplomatic break.

This was done despite the fact that the closing down of Axis businesses in Chile has meant great unemployment and considerable suffering, he pointed out, adding that the Confederation is urging the government to expropriate all Axis properties and operate them for the public benefit. Both the Chilean constitution and the Labor Code have provisions for this, he explained.

Close unity of U. S. and Latin-American workers will be of immediate help not only in the war but in the closely related question of Latin-American working and living standards, which are extremely low in many countries. Chilean workers in the mines, who get from $1 to $1.50 a day, are among the best paid, he said, citing the Bolivian miners who get from 12 to 15 cents for a day's work.

"The interest of the workers of the U. S. would help greatly," he said, "and they would be complying with the elementary principles of workers' solidarity. Such instancs as the recent massacre of Bolivian miners are an insult to democracy that must not be tolerated."

Ibanez emphasized the immediate importance of international labor unity to fight such Axis moves and to exchange ideas and experiences, praising the work of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee that does this job for British and Soviet trade unions.

Chile has a sizable problem with the Spanish fascist Falange, though it is less active there than in other countries, he pointed out. "Most brutal and regressive of all reactionary forces" stemming from Franco Spain are the Spanish business interests, he declared.

Throughout the interview Ibanez repeatedly stressed the anti-fascist unity of the Chilean workers, and their strong desire to take their full place with workers of all the United Nations in the war against Axis slavery.

Hit Absences At Source, CIO Says

Washington, March 6—Absenteeism must be attacked at the source rather than by punitive measures directed against workers, the CIO said in testimony scheduled before the House Naval Affairs Committee this week.

"If we were to improve housing conditions, transportation facilities, child care programs, and if we were to provide shopping facilities, safety and health programs, the amount of absenteeism left in American industry would be almost negligible," the CIO statement, prepared for delivery by Economic Director Raymond J. Walsh, said.

Walsh's testimony, prepared for hearings on the Johnson bill (H.R. 1876) also cited other factors as main causes of absenteeism, including extra duties imposed on women workers in the absence of child care, shopping facilities, health services, and the like. Walsh also stressed the fatigue factor in over long working hours, material shortages and labor hoarding.

PLANNING NEED

The Johnson bill, which is merely a punitive measure calling for reports on absentees in Navy Yards to local draft boards, will not solve the problem, he said. "A far more fundamental approach is necessary. The Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill creating an Office of War Mobilization should be passed, thus permitting our whole war production program to be centrally coordinated. All the causes affecting and delaying production, of which absenteeism is just one, could then be handled by a broad and coordinated approach."

Steel Signs Pact For 20,000

Washington, Mar. 6—A contract covering some 20,000 employes of 13 iron ore companies owning more than 90 mines in the Lake Superior region, largest ore producing area in the United States, has been negotiated between representatives of the companies and the United Steelworkers of America, CIO, the War Labor Board has announced.

The agreement, which disposes of virtually all the issues referred to the WLB panel, names the USA-CIO as sole bargaining agent for the production and maintenance employes. It provides time and a half for overtime, seniority rights, grievance machinery and other standard union terms.

This is the first time the union has ever held contracts with each company as a whole, although it has had contracts with some individual mines operated by the companies, the board stated.

The CIO steel union has been certified previously as bargaining agent in virtually every mine in the area, following elections conducted by the National Labor Relations Board.

The Truth About Guadalcanal

New York, March 6—The National Maritime Union today began distribution of a 16-page illustrated pamphlet citing the facts behind the widely-publicized untrue story accusing merchant seamen of refusing to unload a ship at Guadalcanal on a Sunday "because of union rules".

The first printing, 50,000 copies, came off the press a few days before the union filed million dollar libel suits against the Associated Press, the Akron (Ohio) Beacon-Journal, and the New York Journal-American.

In a forward to the pamphlet, Joseph Curran, NMU President, said:

"This pamphlet is the answer to the latest and most vicious attack on the members of the National Maritime Union. But our desire to have the whole truth told in connection with the alleged story of the seamen's 'refusal to unload ships at Guadalcanal' was not our only purpose in printing the pamphlet.

"We had another thought in mind. It occurred to us that in the press treatment of this fake story, Labor could show concretely what it means by its frequently repeated charges that the newspapers are anti-union."

Murray Backs NMU Pamphlet

Washington, March 6—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week described "The Enemy at Home," a Natl. Maritime Union pamphlet stating the NMU's side of the Guadalcanal incident, as "an important pamphlet because it answers not only the attack against the NMU, whose magnificent war contribution earned a plaque at our recent convention, but because it also answers the attack on the entire CIO movement."

"This pamphlet," Murray said, "will also serve to enlighten our members, especially those recently recruited into CIO ranks, by showing what we mean by our frequent warnings against anti-union propaganda in the press.

"These pamphlets are being distributed by the NMU without charge, and I strongly urge you to request from them as many copies as your office can effectively distribute. Please address the NMU at 346 West 17th street, New York City."

F. O. Rapp Missing

Anyone knowing the whereabouts of Floyd O'Neil Rapp should communicate with his brother, George Rapp, 5767 Cabot Ave., Detroit, Mich., who has not seen him for a number of years and is anxious to hear from him.

UAW Largest Union in Nation

DETROIT, March 6—One of the CIO's lusty young internationals, the United Automobile Workers, has grown to such giant stature in the last few years that it now tops all the unions of the nation in membership.

In the semi-annual report of the UAW'S secretary-treasurer, George Addes, the union's dues paying membership is given as 778,659 in November 1942. This shows an increase of about 166,000 during the seven-months' period from May 1942, when the membership totaled 612,702.

Coming close upon the financial report issued and released to the press by the United Steelworkers of America, the CIO's next largest affiliate with a membership of more than 750,500, this means that a public accounting has been made of the union funds of a million and a half CIO members.

98 NEW CHARTERS

During the seven months covered by the report, 98 new local charters were issued, Addes stated, and initiations and re-instatements averaged better than 30,000 a month. Total income for the period amounted to slightly over $2,078,500, and expenditures to about $2,131,600, leaving a deficit of $53,000.

Membership dues are $1 a month with initiation and re-admission fees limited to not less than $2 or more than $15.

"Although the report shows a net deficit over the seven-months' period of $53,034.05," the report stated, "we believe that with a continued steady increase in membership, the deficit will be eliminated before this year is over."

WARNS OF DANGERS

Warning the membership of the dangers ahead in the post-war period, the Secretary-Treasurer said: "The UAW-CIO is not wealthy." He recommended that the membership give serious consideration to the advisability of levying a monthly security assessment of 50 cents per member for the duration of the war.

This, he said, would "bulwark the union in its fight to obtain satisfactory and improved peace-time collective bargaining agreements after the war." It would also help preserve present labor legislation and aid in working for effective legislative action to guarantee freedom from want to all.

"The people of America and throughout the world will never again tolerate a situation where millions of men are unemployed while factories and machines lie idle," Addes declared.

"Winning the war and determining how best we can utilize our strength to bring about a speedy victory is the most important task facing the union and America."

NMU Escort Will Tag Rickenbacker

New York, March 6—The Nat'l Maritime Union announced this week that an escort of torpedoed seamen will be provided for Edward V. Rickenbacker every time he makes a speech.

The NMU, which voted the action at a meeting attended by 3,000 members, said that the escorts would provide antidotes for the anti-union, Nat'l Manufacturers Assn. line that Rickenbacker has been following, and will prove to the nation that his utterances are "designed and calculated to create the widest possible disruption and disunity."

Meanwhile, in two other quarters, Rickenbacker received setbacks and criticism in his campaign to prejudice members of the armed forces against war workers.

The House Naval Affairs Committee, which had planned to hear him testify, withdrew the invitation. And Mrs. Dorothy Bellanca, for 30 years a factory worker and now a vice-president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, criticized Rickenbacker's opposition to a $25,000 annual salary ceiling while he condemned time and a half for workers in the face of rising living costs. She asked, in a personal letter to him, why he was blind to "the enormous profits now being accumulated by large corporations holding war contracts."

Credit Labor for Output

NEW YORK, (FP)—Mar. 13 — American workers hurdled thousands of obstacles in 1942 to increase production per man-hour in U. S. manufacturing industry by more than 2.5 per cent, the Economic Notes of Labor Research Association reveal.

The increase, LRA says, is remarkable in view of the fact that output per manhour increased more than 160 per cent from the end of the last war to 1941.

Adverse factors in 1942 which, LRA asserts, might well have caused a decline in per capita productivity instead of an increase were: the conversion from peace to war production, employment of less efficient and skilled workers, reopening of less efficient plants, and migration of labor.

"Offsetting these factors," the LRA said, "was the higher morale of the working force in the present war due to the strength of the unions and the wholeheatred participation of labor in every phase of the war effort."

Even greater productivity may be expected in 1943, according to the Federal Reserve Bank and other government agencies. The LRA manhour productivity index (using 1929 as 100) follows:

Year	Manufacturing
1919	58.0
1924	80.6
1929	100.0
1934	114.3
1938	121.8
1939	132.4
1940	138.8
1941	142.7

Hails Pres. Murray

Brooklyn, N. Y., March 13—Paying tribute to Philip Murray for "his courage, his modesty and his vision," John Tartamella, national director of the Barber and Beauty Culturists Organizing Committee, hailed the CIO president this week as a son of labor who holds up "the beacon light for all the toilers of America to follow."

Here's a Real United Nations Family!

Cumberland, Md., March 13—Benny Marx, member of Local 1874, Textile Workers Union, employed in the engineering dept. of the big Celanese plant here, has a family that is a United Nations all by itself, according to Textile Labor, Official TWU paper.

Marx has a son, also a member of Local 1874, fighting with the U. S. Army in the Solomon Islands. He has a daughter working at the Edgewood Arsenal in Maryland, passing the ammunition.

One of his nephews is serving with Gen. Douglas MacArthur in Australia, after escaping from the Philippines. A niece is an Army nurse and will soon go overseas.

Two nephews are serving in the Russian army and two other nephews are with the English army, one as a doctor with the Royal Air Force and the other as a member of the intelligence corps.

Fish Smells Just As Bad in Boston As in New York

Boston, March 13—Ten Boston CIO leaders this week urged Mayor Tobin to oppose the participation of Hamilton Fish in Evacuation Day ceremonies. In a message to the Mayor, they declared:

"Labor in Boston would be shocked to find Hamilton Fish as speaker or chairman at Evacuation Day ceremonies. It would be a disgrace to Boston and a reflection on her citizens for this defeatist, labor-baiter and sniper at our Commander-in-Chief to be at the meeting.

"On behalf of thousands of workers of this city who are producing for victory, we urge you to protect the good name of Boston by making it known that Ham Fish is unwelcome as a participant in the Evacuation Day ceremonies."

Attention, Labor Editors!

The U. S. Treasury Department has just issued a special ten page War Bond—War Production labor press book with pictures, cartoons, features and news stories for the exclusive use of the labor press. MURRAY HAILS FDR's JOBS-FOR-ALL PROGRAM

Praises Emphasis On Full Employment After War

Truman Group Hits Lack of War Plan

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—Reiterating the need for overall central planning in the war production drive, the Truman Committee this week released its second annual report calling for correction of three basic weaknesses in the drive.

These weak spots, the report said, were; 1) lack of central planning and central responsibility in determining basic policies; 2) conflicting authority in various government agencies, which results in "buck-passing" and confusion; 3) failure to adopt "unpopular" war mobilization policies in the earlier stages of the program, creating greater difficulty later.

The report praised organized labor for its "excellent job in eliminating work stoppages," and other contributions to the war production drive. It condemned labor shortage, pyramiding of costs by large corporations holding war contracts and their refusal to parcel the work out to sub-contractors.

PRICE CONTROL

"Prices of all commodities, including both labor and farm commodities, must be controlled if inflationary spirals with consequent disaster are to be avoided," the report said. (Labor has accepted wage stabilization as one of the points in the seven point stabilization program. The other points —price control, fair taxes, etc. have not been put in effect.)

The U. S. war production record on the whole is good, the report said, but "it is not as much as we could have done by recognizing and correcting the mistakes which have slowed our war effort in the last year."

CIO Women Greet United Nations Sisters

Washington, Mar. 13—Greetings to the women of the United Nations and of Latin-America were expressed this week by leaders of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, as part of their observance of "Blue Star Mothers Week," honoring mothers of men in the armed forces.

Greetings were delivered to Lady Halifax, wife of the British Ambassador; Mrs. Litvinov, wife of the Soviet Ambassador; and to the Chinese and Mexican embassies.

VISIT CONGRESS TOO

The Auxiliary leaders also visited majority and minority leaders in Congress to express their opinions on current legislation, and met with government officials on problems of living costs, food supply, child care, maternity aid and similar matters.

"The degradation which Hitlerism means for women gives this war a special significance to women in all nations and all walks of life. To all the women of the United Nations we pledge every ounce of our strength to the great cause which unites our countries—the defeat of the Hitler Axis and the establishment of the four freedoms for all the people of the earth," the Auxiliaries stated .

NEW YORK, Mar. 13—United organized workers will make up a third of the audience in Madison Square Garden Monday night, March 15, when the New York Red Cross presents a stirring and dramatic spectacle, "Red Cross at War," and an array of guest speakers including CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green. Red Cross volunteer campaign workers will comprise the balance of the audience at the city-wide rally.

Barney Ross, twice lightweight champion, will return to his old stamping grounds in the Garden to tell the story of the fighting Marines at Guadacanal.

A three-level show will be produced by Leon Leonidoff of Radio City Music Hall and will include a series of tableaux dramatic scenes of Red Cross services on the battlefields, in prison camps, taking and administernig blood, with a finale of Army, Navy and Marine Corps. The Rockettes will take a prominent part in the program.

General Jacob L. Devers, just returned from active service in Egypt, will be one of the principal speakers scheduled with Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Governor Thomas Dewey, Walter Gifford, national Red Cross War Fund chairman, and Colby M. Chester, chairman of the 1943 Red Cross War Fund of New York City.

Local unions have reserved blocks of seats and will attend as groups.

Speeches by Mr. Murray and Mr. Green will be carried over a local radio hook-up at the time of the meeting and will be re-broadcast at 11:15 over Station WOR.

UNITED SUPPORT: The launching of N. Y. labor's united war relief drive was hailed this week as a forerunner of a re-united labor movement throughout the country by officials of the N. Y. Labor War Chest, left to right: Matthew Woll, AFL vice-president; Frank S. Columbus, N. Y. representative of the Railroad Brotherhoods; and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union.

Introducing:

A New Column On Living Problems

Beginning with this issue THE CIO NEWS will carry a column of news, editorial comment and some practical advice on workers' food and "cost of living" problems.

The column will be prepared under the supervision of the CIO Committee on Cost of Living, recently created by President Murray following action by the CIO Executive Board.

J. Raymond Walsh, CIO director of Research and Education, is chairman. Members are: Donald E. Montgomery, representing the UAW-CIO; Russ Nixon, UERMW; and a representative of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes. Th committee will also serve as CIO representatives on the OPA Labor Policy Committee.

Swinging into action almost before it was formally organized, the CIO Committee on Cost of Living tackled the problem of meat shortages in war production centers throughout the country. The problem was discussed with experts both in the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee, and in government agencies. It was brought to the attention of the OPA Labor Policy Committee with remedies jointly proposed to Prentiss Brown, OPA Administrator.

Within 24 hours Meat Allocation Committees were appointed in a number of crisis areas. Each committee included CIO representatives as well as representatives of the Railroad Brotherhoods and the AFL.

The committees were empowered to allocate meat within the areas so that war workers will receive their fair share of available meat supplies. Additional committees will be appointed in other areas to assure CIO war workers fair meat distribution until rationing is established. The CIO Committee has insisted upon rationing of meat to assure a fair share for all as soon as possible, although it believes proposals to make the same coupons cover fats and oils as well as meat are unsound and will create much dissatisfaction.

MILK PRICES

The committee has also conferred with government officials concerning the threats to increase milk prices. The committee is following this very closely and will bring every pressure to bear to prevent increases in milk and other essential food prices. Joint action to achieve the goal of stabilization of the cost of living has been initiated with the CIO Committee on Legislation. All local legislative committees will soon be advised of the legislative action needed to prevent a run-away inflation.

LABOR ON PRICE BOARDS

As members of the OPA Labor Policy Committee, the Cost of Living Committee has been active in securing the adoption of the policy announced by Administrator Prentiss Brown requiring every district and regional price panel to appoint CIO members whose functions would include:

1. Getting labor members on all local and price rationing boards.

2. Recruiting and training price volunteers.

3. Organizing local consumer committees.

4. Handling complaints on price control, rent control and rationing.

5. Organizing labor - management plant transportation committees.

6. Enforcing price, rent and rationing controls.

Further information regarding this matter can be secured from the CIO regional directors, state and county Industrial Union Councils, or by writing directly to J. Raymond Walsh, chairman, CIO Committee on Cost of Living, 718 Jackson Place, Washington, D. C.

The committee will follow activities of all government agencies involved in problems relating to prices, rationing, and supply of goods and services to civilians in war-time. The committee will serve in OPA both as CIO members of the Labor Policy Committee and independently for CIO on all cost of living matters not handled by the Joint Labor Policy Committee. It will establish relations with William Jeffers, rubber director; Food Administrator Wickard; Joseph Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, and Interior Secretary Ickes, oil director.

In view of the overlapping and conflicting problems of these various agencies, it will deal with Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes on all problems not exclusively handled by one or more agencies.

Information from CIO consumer committees of various international unions and state and county consumer committees and price and rationing committees should be sent to the CIO National Office, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, D. C.

It Ain't the Same Old Memphis!

Memphis, Tenn., March 13—Times have changed in Memphis. Four years ago when union representatives entered the town some were threatened, others beaten, and a few were badly hurt. But the CIO went right on organizing.

As proof this week that the job is fairly on the road to being finished—there are 20,000 workers in CIO plants—Lucy Randolph Mason, CIO public relations representative in the region, was invited to speak and did talk at three public meetings in a single day.

Organizations which she addressed included: The Memphis Ministers' Assn., Memphis Council of Church and Professional Social Workers, and the Memphis Forum.

Ruml 'Forgive-Rich' Tax Plan Dumped in House

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—The Ruml plan for forgiving taxes on the rich got a setback this week when the House Ways and Means Committee, in a reported vote of 16 to nine, recommended a 20 per cent withholding tax to begin in July, 1943 and failed to mention forgiving 1942 taxes.

Essence of the Ruml plan was its forgiveness feature, which would let wealthy individuals escape taxes on swollen 1942 incomes, ignoring the real "pay-as-you-go" problem. The fight in Congress does not stop with the Committee, however, since several have openly threatened to take the Ruml plan to the floor for debate.

Under the Committee's reported vote, the withholding tax will amount to 20 per cent on current income, to begin July 1—provided the taxpayer has paid the tax on his 1942 income in full by that time.

The report of the Committee's vote gave no hint of what it has in mind by way of actual taxes for the 1943 bill. CIO's program for taxes to raise the $16 billion needed for war revenue by increasing levies on war profits and big incomes, while leaving workers' incomes at health and efficiency levels, has so far not been acted upon.

In Congress, however, Rep. Disney is actively pushing his trick rider to destroy the limit of $25,000 on net salaries ($67,200 before taxes) that the President imposed by executive order. Both President Roosevelt and the CIO have consistently urged this measure, and would apply it to unearned income as well as salaries.

UE Chalks Up Another Win

New York, March 13—Workers at the American Machine and Foundry Co., subsidiary of the American Tobacco Co., this week voted 1,005 to 557 for the United Electrical Radio and Machine Workers in an election conducted here by the National Labor Relations Board.

The CIO union defeated a company union called the American Machine and Foundry Employes Association, which won an NLRB election in 1940 when it appeared unopposed on the ballot.

More than 3,000 skilled and semi-skilled machinists are employed at the company's major plant which covers an entire block. About 250 of the employes are women.

In peace-time, the firm manufactured cigar and cigarette-making machines, doughmixing and bread-wrapping machinery. It is now doing some work as a subcontractor, for Sperry Gyroscope, New York City's largest war plant. An election also was recently won by the UE among the Sperry employes.

PREDICTS CHILE WILL FIGHT: Pres. Bernardo Ibanez, center, of the Chilean Federation of Labor, this week predicted that Chile, which has broken diplomatic relations with the Axis, will soon formally enter the war, to be followed shortly by Argentina after a new president of the country is elected 10 months hence. Ibanez, who is touring the U. S. at the invitation of the CIO and AFL, is shown with CIO Pres. Philip Murray, left, and AFL Sec.-Treas. George Meany.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Two positive steps were taken in Congress this week, one of great potential importance for future action as well as for the bill it affects immediately.

The first was the endorsement by a group of six Congressmen of a single polltax repeal bill (see story on page 3), HR 7, and the introduction of a Discharge Petition DP 3) to blast it out of the polltax controlled Rules Committee.

Labor, church, Negro and civic groups have backed this bill, which, together with the coalition action of the six Congressmen, will give it a much better chance of passage.

The second step was the reported vote of 16 to nine by the Ways and Means Committee on the 1943 tax bill, which called for real "pay-as-you-go" on the withholding system and ignored the phony Ruml plan, which would forgive 1942 taxes for the rich. (see story on page 2).

MANPOWER, ABSENTEEISM, FOOD PRICES, WAR MOBILIZATION, LABOR BAITING (Hobbs bill) still continue active. The Austin-Wadsworth bill (S 666, HR 1742) for a labor draft is being vigorously fought by CIO, with more testimony set for next week. The Johnson bill (HR 1876) to report absentees to local draft boards regardless of the real cause of absenteeism is still before the House Naval Affairs Committee. (see stories, page 5).

The Bankhead bill (S 660) raising food prices to aid profiteers passed the Senate, House action is cooking. Bankhead has added a new one to freeze farm labor regardless of wages or whether or not the farm worker is working on essential crops. The Peace and Brown bills (HR 1408 and HR 2002) also increase food prices to workers.

In the Senate Appropriations Committee, steps have begun to restore vital war items thrown out by the House Committee two weeks ago—child care, maternity aid, public health, etc.

The Hobbs bill (HR 653) will likely be voted on by the time you read this. Prepare to campaign with your Senators against it, if it passes the House.

This week, The CIO NEWS prints a full list of anti-union bills offered in both Houses to date. Not all these bills are active at present, but the list should be kept handy for reference as they are brought up.

Murray Praises Jobs-for-All Program

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—The goals of the Natl. Resources Planning Board reports "are in line with the best democratic tradition of America," CIO Pres. Philip Murray said today, in urging action by Congress to enact a broad Social Security program. Full text of Pres. Murray's statement follows:

"The reports transmitted by the President to Congress on postwar plans and social security are of tremendous significance because they focus attention on questions of basic importance for the future of our nation and of the world. The goals set forth are in line with the best democratic tradition of America, and in accordance with that tradition of America, the methods of accomplishing these goals should be fully discussed and acted upon by the people's representatives.

"As the National Resourses Planning Board says, the reports are not presented as a complete and finished program but as material for consideration. While on many aspects the CIO would wish to go further than the board now proposes, I am confident that the great majority of our members will wholeheartedly support the general aims.

"The emphasis on the achievement of full employment is of particular importance since only through the fullest possible use of our vast resources can we raise our levels of living, guarantee an adequate minimum of security, and thus promote "the fullest possible development of the human personality." If in peacetime we can continue to utilize fully our manpower, our industrial capacity and our fertile fields, we shall be able to guarantee everyone enough to live on both when employed and when ordinary sources of income are removed.

"It is to be hoped that immediate action will be taken by Congress to enact a broad social security program and to give legal authority for the exercise of powers adequate to guide the transition to full peace-time production. We cannot afford to wait until war ends to plan for peace. If we do, millions of returning soldiers and war workers will be idle when war production ceases, and great quantities of material and food will be wasted. We dare not let this happen while nations abroad are clamoring for aid and while the world needs rebuilding.

"The CIO stands ready to cooperate in the democratic solution of the critical and difficult problems involved. We believe that the reports of the National Resources Planning Board are an important step to this end."

Drive Renewed to Force Repeal of Polltax

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—A determined drive to get the poll tax repeal bill (HR 7) through both Houses this session was started here this week with a working conference of delegates from labor, church, Negro, civic and other progressive groups meeting here.

United backing for the bill, HR 7, was assured when a group of Congressmen, including Reps. Baldwin, N. Y.; Bender, Ohio; Gavagan, N.Y.; Marcan tonio, N.Y.; Magnuson, Wash., and Dawson, Ill., agreed to back it and to organize the drive both for a discharge petition (Dis. Pet. 3) to get the bill out of the Rules Committee and to win passage on the floor.

As THE CIO NEWS went to press, 42 signatures had already been secured on the petition.

The place of poll tax repeal as a war measure was described to the conference, called by the National Committee to Abolish the Poll tax, by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, who said:

"The CIO will continue to support and fight with all our influence and power for the abolition of the polltax, firm in the belief that America, to win in a total war, must provide total freedom, for all its citizens regardless of race, religion or financial position."

Control of Congress by poll taxers such as Dies acts to "disrupt and divide our nation in the midst of our crucial war effort," A. F. Whitney, president of the Railway Trainmen, told the conference. Whitney also denounced "legalistic pettifogging" on the question of whether or not repeal was constitutional.

The conference also heard the Rev. George Higgins of Catholic University who declared that both Christian teaching and American ideas of freedom are "clearly and distinctly" against the polltax. Walter White, head of the NAACP was another featured speaker.

Congressional speakers at the conference included Reps. Marcantonio, Bender, Baldwin and Dawson. Delegates left the meeting to work on their Congressmen on the hill, lining up signatures for the petition and votes for HR 7 when it hits the House floor.

Textile Convention

New York, March 13—The biennial convention of the Textile Workers Union of America is scheduled to be held here in Carnegie Hall beginning May 10, TWUA headquarters announced this week.

Some 800 delegates from more than 600 locals and joint boards including the hosiery and dyers' federation affiliates will be eligible to attend the convention, which will last about five days.

Murray Hails Child Care As War Aid

Baltimore, March 13—In a letter to a local weekly publication active in demanding extension of child care facilities, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week said that, "Anything you can do to promote more child care projects for the children of war workers will be a great service to our war effort."

"Such a large proportion of workers at the Glenn L. Martin plant and other war plants are women," Murray said, "that it has become urgently necessary that there should be enough nursery schools and child care projects to avert absenteeism due to family necessities, and to enable women workers to produce well, knowing their children are properly cared for."

ABSENTEEISM!

What causes it—bad hangovers or bad housing; loafing or lack of transit; selfishness or sickness?

New Drive on Polltax

Due to the scandalous polltaxers' filibuster which defeated majority rule last year, the fight for anti-polltax legislation has had to be begun all over again in the new Congress.

Flushed with their victory, the polltax minority have come back to Congress determined to take full advantage of their strongly entrenched position in committees.

In numerous instances they have seized leadership in the House and, in combination with reactionary Republicans, have forced anti-administration and anti-labor actions to the serious detriment of the war effort.

The polltaxers also hope to use their control of the House judiciary and rules committees to prevent the House from again passing a polltax repeal bill at this session.

In the last Congress, it will be remembered, this committee blockade was broken by a discharge petition signed by a majority of the members of the House, and the bill was passed by a two-to-one vote.

This can be done again, and if anti-polltax legislation is pushed through early enough in this Congress, it will be impossible to block it again by a last-minute filibuster.

It is therefore encouraging to note the agreement reached between the various Congressmen who have introduced anti-polltax bills to concentrate on one measure (HR. 7), and to secure the necessary signatures to discharge it from committee without delay.

This announcement was made at the recent conference in Washington of the National Committee to Abolish the Polltax, which found CIO, AFL, railroad Brotherhoods and numerous church, fraternal and progressive organizations pledging themselves to renewed efforts to remove the polltax blot from our democracy.

The longer the polltax remains, the more dangerous does this stumbling block to total war effort become. Its removal must be a first order of business in this Congress.

Write to your Congressman at once. Urge him to sign the discharge petition for the polltax repeal bill without delay, and to speak and vote for its passage.

Welcome, Ibanez!

The visit to the United States of Bernardo Ibanez, head of the Chilean Confederation of Workers, following on the visit of Vicente Lombardo Toledano, head of the Confederation of Workers of Latin America, brings intimately to the attention of United States labor the vital importance of close relations between the organized workers of North and South America.

Ibanez is here as the guest of both the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor. Both organizations are cooperating to make his tour of the country a success in promoting international labor understanding and solidarity.

Such cooperation is invaluable at any time for the general raising of living standards and the promotion of labor's common interests in all countries. But during this world war against fascism, it assumes a special urgency.

Organized labor in all the Latin American countries is definitely and aggressively anti-fascist. The Chilean labor movement, in fact, was a prime mover in bringing about the recent rupture of relations between Chile and the Axis. It culminated a six-month campaign for this with 100 simultaneous mass meetings a few days before the diplomatic break occurred.

Not only in Chile, but in other Latin American countries as well, organized labor is working to line up the whole continent in unbreakable unity with the United Nations for the defeat of the fascist Axis.

United States labor therefore has every reason, both in its own interests and for the sake of speedy victory in this people's war, to establish the closest relations with Latin American labor.

It is the hope of the CIO that Ibanez' visit will contribute to international labor unity, not only with Chilean labor but with the whole Confederation of Latin American Workers, of which the Chilean labor movement is a part.

More than this, the CIO hopes that unity of labor in the Americas will in its turn contribute to the unity of all labor in all the United Nations, which the last CIO convention set as its goal.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

EVER since the days of witch-burning, the American press and politicians have favored picking on some "witch" as the cause of all current ills—and then turning on the heat.

In 1937, the CIO was the "witch" of the year. It was blamed in press and Congress for everything from unemployment to the Mississippi flood and an epidemic of goose pimples in Wall Street.

In 1941, a rather imaginary "strike wave" was elected witch of the year by the same authorities. Politicians went purple in the face demanding anti-strike legislation every time a dozen workers walked out, and even when they didn't.

Then came Pearl Harbor, and strikes virtually disappeared under labor's no-strike pledge. So a new witch had to be chosen to start 1942 right.

It was the "40-hour week." That was blamed in full-page ads and frenzied speeches for everything from dollar-a-year bungling to the fall of France.

As the work-week grew longer and longer in war industries, it became slightly obvious that there was no 40-hour limit; and this became still more obvious when the President decreed a minimum 48-hour week.

So a new witch of the year was chosen for 1943. It's name is Absenteeism.

You can hardly pick up a paper, or turn on the radio, without being told in every gory detail about the evils of Absenteeism.

Now there is no doubt that Absenteeism is an ugly old, evil old witch. It was ugly and evil back in Hoover's days, and again in the last depression, when millions of workers were made absentees against their will by wholesale layoffs.

Absenteeism is also particularly ugly and evil and dangerous in this people's war, when all plants and workers should be working without interruption for maximum war production.

But even so, Absenteeism is not the cause of all our current ills. It is a result rather than a cause, a symptom of more general economic ill-health; and it can only be cured by remedying its causes.

Furthermore, this witch of the year 1943, like its predecessors, is being used to cover up disruptive legislative attacks on labor, and to divert attention from the really basic evils.

Every serious study of absenteeism shows it is caused chiefly by ill-health, accidents, bad housing, poor transportation, lack of shopping facilities and child-care projects, fatigue from long hours, material shortages, labor hoarding, employer mismanagement and inadequate governmental production and manpower planning.

A small percentage of absenteeism is also due to the irresponsibility of individual workers, it is true.

But it is the labor unions that are making the most serious and effective efforts to combat this type of absenteeism. They are doing so by morale-building campaigns of every kind; and by investigation of individual cases, coupled with disciplinary action, where justified.

The CIO unions are also taking the lead, directly and through labor-management committees, to root out the chief causes of absenteeism.

They are demanding accident-prevention measures, proper health and medical facilities, better housing, adequate transportation, child-care projects; and they are working with management, wherever permitted, to promote greater productive efficiency and better utilization of available manpower.

In sharp contrast with such labor efforts is the current campaign in press and Congress to pass anti-labor legislation under cover of the hullaballoo about absenteeism.

The Johnson bill, now before the House naval affairs committee, for reporting absentees to draft boards, could be used for anti-union discrimination. It completely ignores the main causes of absenteeism. And it would have little effect even on the small number of wilful absentees, since most of these are women or men beyond draft age.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill to draft workers is similarly dangerous as an anti-labor measure. It also completely fails to touch the causes of absenteeism and the general manpower problem.

If Congress is sincerely anxious to cope with absenteeism, it will promptly squelch these and other anti-labor measures. It will seek to strengthen rather than weaken the unions. It will appropriate more money for housing, public health, child-care projects, etc.

And it will pass the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill to get at the roots of absenteeism and other manpower problems by coordinated national planning, under centralized direction, of production, manpower distribution and economic stabilization.

Abuse Won't Cure Absenteeism—First Find the Causes!

WASHINGTON, Mar 13—What is absenteeism? What causes it? Is it sheer wilful refusal to work on the war job—because the war worker has a hangover, because he's suddenly taken lazy, because he'd rather go fishing?

Or is it due to the fact that workers sometimes simply can't come to work, because they're sick, or their kids are sick, or they have to take time off for marketing, or going to the ration board, or simply because they've worked overlong hours and have to rest to go on working at all?

If you read the newspapers and listen to the radio, you're sure that 90 per cent of absenteeism is the worker's own fault, that he doesn't give a hoot about the war job and would rather loaf than work.

If you look into the real causes and sources of absenteeism, you find an altogether different answer. You find that most absenteeism is caused by factors beyond the worker's control.

And you will find that the cure is in remedying those causes—not in abusing war workers or threatening them with drastic punishments.

Here is a brief survey of the real answers that labor and informed officials have been giving to this critical problem in recent days—or rather have been trying to give as best they can above the tumult and shouting in the papers, on the radio, on Capitol Hill here in Washington.

Pass a Law, Club Labor?

Already certain sections of Congress are whooping up the Johnson bill (H.R. 1876), which would require the employer to turn over the names of all absentees to the local draft board.

As written, the bill applies only to Navy Yard workers. This is an old anti-labor trick. It puts the bill into the House Naval Affairs Committee, headed by Rep. Vinson (Ga. polltaxer) where it can be very easily amended to include all workers.

In addition to being a complete evasion of the absenteeism problem, the bill is intended as a punitive measure, which would operate regardless of the worker's reason for absence, and even more important, regardless of his skill.

Incidentally, the bill is actually a reflection on the U. S. Army, which it seeks to use as a threat and a punishment. No man should go into our Army as a punishment.

Shipyard Pact Has Maternity Clause!

Greenport, N. Y., March 13—Protection of seniority rights and leaves of absence without pay for maternity cases are provided in a contract between the Greenport Basin & Construction Co. here and the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers.

John Green Says:

Unions and Bosses Must Unite to Check Absences

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—Once the real causes of absenteeism are approached on a realistic basis, and once the legislators get away from the idea that it can be cured by coercion, labor and management and government jointly can get down to the job of reducing absenteeism to a point where it will scarcely count, John Green, president of the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union, told Congressmen here this week.

Green was testifying on the Johnson bill (HR 1876) which would report Navy Yard absentees to local draft boards. The bill is before the House Naval Affairs Committee, where CIO Economic Director J. Raymond Walsh testified last week. Said Green:

"When a worker stays away from the shipyard because he is fed up with hanging around doing nothing waiting for materials, the cure does not lie in abuse of the worker or of his union.

"When the workers know that their employer is hoarding labor, they cannot be persuaded that their occasional day's absence adversely affects the war effort. When the workers stay away to get a good meal because of unsanitary and insufficient food in the yard, we claim that the remedy does not lie in pep talks on morale.

"Many of the causes could be adequately handled by joint labor-management committees, if they met with a sufficiently sympathetic response from the local and federal government authorities which have power to remedy the evil."

"Because of the complexity of the problem, our union is against any hasty, ill-considered approach to legislation. We are particularly against any action which would make the employer the sole determinant of the question of whether any absence was justifiable or not.

"It should be recognized here, as it has been recognized in Britain, that any such punitive approach to the problem will do more harm than good, unless it is based on cooperation with the labor organizations concerned."

Basic Cure for Absenteeism Is Central Planning of War Drive

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—The real causes of absenteeism, the basic cure—overall central planning of the war production drive, as provided in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill—were stressed by CIO Economic Director J. Raymond Walsh in testimony last week before the House Naval Affairs Committee on the Johnson bill.

Last week's CIO NEWS carried a brief account of the testimony, which was delivered as the NEWS went to press. This week, we present excerpts from Walsh's testimony, which presented the national CIO point of view:

HOUSING

"Employment has increased in industrial plants without much regard to available housing facilities for the workers," Walsh said. "Inadequate housing in these new communities means that families must be left at home. Employes must live in cheap hotels, if there are any, or rooming houses.

"A man living in a rooming house far from home has a natural desire to see his family from time to time. Unless provisions are made for frequent visits home, it can be expected that absences from work will occur. If decent housing facilities were provided for these workers, this cause of absenteeism would certainly decline.

"Some workers bring their families with them regardless of the available facilities. Trailers are usually purchased and families live in them in order to be together. The desirability of living under these conditions is clearly seen. Illness due to the overcrowded conditions, no plumbing and lack of heat play a great part in the increasing rate of absenteeism."

TRANSIT

"Reliance upon car pools, difficulties in securing gas, tires and replacement and repair parts for an automobile add to the difficulty in a worker's being on the job day after day. Inability to repair a car or secure a tire means that that car carrying four or five workers will not make the trip; therefore, those workers are absent through no fault of their own.

"A close examination of public transportation facilities in most of our industrial communities shows that they are so overcrowded and overtaxed that a great many people are discouraged from traveling in this way.

"The illness rate of women is greater than that of men. In the year 1940, the U. S. Public Health Service reported that sickness and non-industrial injuries lasting eight or more days were more frequent among women. One hundred fifty-three out of every thousand women were ill or injured against ninety-six out of every one thousand men. This builds up the absentee rate considerably.

"When children become ill at home, someone must stay with them. Satisfactory day care must be provided even for healthy children, if women are expected to do their best work.

"Shortages of various types of food are becoming more extensive. In order for a housewife to prepare a balanced meal, she must spend a considerable amount of time shopping around looking for the proper foods.

"If her hours are such that she works at the same time the stores are open, she is unable to do her shopping. This means that the worker must take time off from her work to do the normal family purchasing.

FATIGUE

"The hours of work in war industries are now high, far above the 40 hour week which so many people are now discussing. Durable goods industries which include the basic war production plants, worked during the month of November, 1942, 46 hours on the average.

"As the length of the work week continues, it can be anticipated that the fatigue factor will become more important.

ILLNESS

"It has been estimated that over half billion mandays per year are lost in American industry due to sickness. Experts have said that illness causes almost 50 per cent of the total amount of absenteeism in American industry.

"The Monthly Labor Review in its January, 1943, issue said: 'There is no question but that the major cause of involuntary absences is sickness.'

ical facilities have been depleted through doctors entering the armed services. There are many important industrial communities in this country where the number of doctors in proportion to the population is phenomenally low.

"Plant health programs, extension of community health services and the elimination of health hazards would help considerably in reducing illness. Looking after the health and safety of the worker on the job and in the plant would go a long way toward reducing illness and consequently reducing absenteeism in American industry."

SAFETY

"In the year 1941, the Department of Labor reported that 450 million mandays of work were lost due to accidents and deaths in industry Reports from some 20 states indicate that accidents in the year 1942 were 10 to 15 per cent greater than in 1941. Extensive safety campaigns must be carried on in industry if accidents and deaths are to be reduced and if absenteeism is to be held in check."

"If workers are to work at full efficiency and remain up to par, it is necessary that they secure the proper kind of food in sufficient amounts at the right times. Insufficient diets and improper foods in the long run contribute to illness, accidents and therefore absenteeism.

"It is important that eating facilities be provided not only in the new communities that are springing up but also in the plants. This factor plays a surprisingly important part in contributing its share of absenteeism."

SHORTAGES, HOARDING

"The shortage of materials results in absenteeism. The work schedule is reduced by faulty allocation of materials to war plants.

"Many plants throughout the country are hoarding labor. Employers justify the maintenance of an excess number of workers on the payroll on the ground that there are sufficient orders to keep the plant working at full speed as soon as the materials become available."

"Most of these reasons cited as causes of involuntary absenteeism are part of the overall problem of labor turnover, inefficient production, failure to meet production schedules and the like.

"Coordination of all the vital factors affecting war production is sadly lacking. There is before Congress a bill offering a fundamentally sound solution to this problem, the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper War Mobilization Bill. This bill provides for the kind of over-all planning and programming which can meet the known factors which affect total utilization and mobilization of our manpower needed for all-out production.

"Absenteeism will not be solved by the passage of the bill before the committee. The causes of absenteeism must be determined and eliminated. Reporting absenteeism to draft boards won't cure the causes. A far more fundamental approach is necessary.

"The Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bill creating an Office of War Mobilization should be passed, thus permitting our whole war production program and its many ramifications to be centrally coordinated. All the causes affecting and delaying production of which absenteeism is just one, could then be handled by a broad and coordinated approach."

Manpower Official Urges Joint Action

NEW YORK, Mar. 13.—Absenteeism is on everybody's mind these days. In New York, the Natl. Conference of Social Work dealt extensively with the problem in a two day session.

Mrs. Lillian Poses, regional official of the War Manpower Commission, told the delegates that absenteeism must be attacked by attacking its causes, which she listed in the same manner that CIO officials have done.

She also urged joint work by the unions, government, management and social agencies in tackling the problem.

The CIO Women's Auxiliary also had a word on the question. Speaking at the same conference, Eleanor Fowler, secretary of the CIO Auxiliary Congress, urged close attention to child care for working mothers as a method of removing one major cause.

She urged setting up of child care centers where workers could bring their children. These agencies should be staffed by competent social workers, red tape should be eliminated, and full information on child care facilities spread among the unions.

What to Do

You can persuade Congress to drop the coercion line by dumping the Johnson bill, take a positive line by passing the Tolan - Kilgore - Pepper war mobilization bill.

You can persuade the Senate Appropriations Committee to pass funds for projects for child care, public health, etc., to promote workers' welfare and cut absenteeism. These funds were killed in the lower House.

You can counteract the clouds of propaganda put out in the newspapers, the radio, in Congress—and by ex-captains who use their war record to smear the unions.

These are the facts on absenteeism. Use them.

A New Bill of Rights:

FDR Offers Jobs-for-All Plan To American People

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13—President Franklin D. Roosevelt this week offered the nation a new "bill of rights," in a comprehensive plan that, if adopted, would guarantee jobs in private industry or with the government for all able to work, would extend the protection of government welfare programs, would call for larger government participation in private industry, and would give labor a greater share in the operation of industry.

The plan was offered through the Natl Resources Planning Board, and was sent by the President to Congress for consideration during this session.

The Board listed as its plan for a new "Bill of Rights" the following proposals:

1. The right to work, usefully and creatively through the productive years.

2. The right to fair pay, adequate to command the necessities and amenities of life in exchange for work, ideas, thrift and other socially valuable service.

3. The right to adequate food, clothing, shelter and medical care.

4. The right to security, with freedom from fear of old age, want, dependency, sickness, unemployment and accident.

5. The right to live in a system of free enterprise, free from compulsory labor, irresponsible private power, arbitrary public authority and unregulated monopolies.

6. The right to come and go, to speak or to be silent, free from the spyings of secret political police.

7. The right to equality before the law, with equal access to justice in fact.

8. The right to education, for work, for citizenship and for personal growth and happiness.

9. The right to rest, recreation and adventure, the opportunity to enjoy and take part in an advancing civilization.

Important among the recommendations were:

Federal Responsibility

Acceptance by the Federal government of the responsibility for insuring adequately paid jobs for all those able to work, regardless of whether or not they could pass a means test. The plan called for establishment of a Federal Works Administration to provide socially desirable work for those unemployed by private industry.

The report called for "extension and new forms of joint private and governmental partnership" in the direction of industries important to both war and peace time economies, including:

Aluminum, magnesium, other basic metals, synthetic rubber, some chemicals and shipbuilding, and suggested that other fields in which joint operation would be desirable included urban redevelopment, housing, transport, terminal reorganization, air transport, communications and electric power.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Aimed at preventing a collapse of American economy after the war, the plan called for broad objectives for public aid, declaring that "the overall objective should be the assurance of access to minimum security for all our people, wherever they may reside, and the maintenance of the social stability and values threatened when people lack jobs or income."

Public Works

The report called for long-range public works programs, flexible and highly diversified, to take up the slack in private employment.

"The standards of performance of project workers," the report stated, "should be those normally required in private industry and should be strictly enforced.

"Rates of remuneration, conditions of employment and hours of work should parallel as closely as possible those prevailing in private employment.

"Eligibility for employment on work programs should be restricted to persons normally dependent upon full-time employment and those who are not entitled to receive unemployment compensation benefits, or whose unemployment is likely to persist for an extended period of time. Persons undergoing short spells of unemployment and partially unemployed workers should not normally be assigned to work-project employment. Special work projects, limited in duration, should be devised for farmers and agricultural workers during slack seasons.

The report urged "federal financial aid to assure educational opportunity for all young people above the age of compulsory school attendance who desire and can benefit by continued schooling."

Expand Protection

The report called for expansion of social security protection by the development of a system of social insurance to provide at least partial compensation for loss of income attributable to permanent or temporary disability.

The unemployment compensation system, the report stated, should be strengthened, and coverage should be extended to embrace seamen and employes of non-profit corporations as well as firms employing one worker or more.

"The inclusion of workers in domestic, agricultural and other low-paid employments should be considered in relation to the patterns of employment, the character and amount of their earnings, and the feasibility of devising a benefit formula which will yield them significant payments," the report said, urging also the extension of the duration of benefits to a uniform 26 weeks over the nation.

The report called for: Federal aid to dependent mothers and children, extension of public health services and medical care, provision of free school lunches for all school children and distribution of surplus commodities to low income groups.

Act on 4 Fronts to Halt State Anti-Labor Laws

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—Action on four widely separated sectors of the state front was reported this week, in labor moves to stop the flood of anti-union, anti-war production legislation and to push win-the-war programs through.

In Connecticut, delegates from the CIO locals of Bridgeport and Stamford, both key war production cities, met to plan counter steps against anti-administration sniping by Rep. Clare "Globaloney" Luce, against the Hobbs bill and similar anti-victory measures.

In Arizona, CIO and AFL and Railroad Brotherhood delegates united in a Labor Victory Committee to work with Governor Osborn on a win-the-war program involving legislation, increased war production, labor work in civilian defense, on state government boards and similar matters.

In St. Louis, Mo., locals of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers met to work out plans for local action on matters such as housing, transit, etc., and to mobilize labor and other campaigns on measures before the Federal Congress.

In that city, too, the CIO and AFL have formed the United Labor Committee of Greater St. Louis to fight reactionaries and defeatists. The committee will actively participate in elections, concerning itself primarily with problems for winning the war. It will act for labor in relations with government agencies to insure their best functioning for victory as well as the protection of the welfare of workers to the end that war production will be speeded.

In Texas, labor was actively opposing bills in the legislative hopper so designed that "if one doesn't get you, the other will." Included among the proposals are demands for registration of unions, limitation of union income by the State, and a restriction on per capita payments which can be sent beyond State boundaries.

Pork Ceiling Prices Real Milestone In OPA Program

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The new pork ceiling prices announced for April 1 and the rayon hose order which goes into effect April 15 are real milestones in OPA's price fixing program.

Under the pork order definite retail price ceilings are set for each of the eleven zones into which the country is divided. Independent stores doing less than $250,000 a year business in each zone must not charge more than a fixed price per pound for each pork cut. Chain stores and stores doing over $250,000 a year business have a lower ceiling.

The prices should be published in each community and it's our responsibility to see that they are and that everyone knows about them.

It's also up to us to let OPA know that we approve of this pork price order and want more like it. If retail prices on all food were set on the pattern of pork, we wouldn't have much trouble enforcing price control in our grocery stores. We'd have to know the volume of business, of course, and one thing we can urge OPA to do is to require each retail food store to post a sign saying what class it is so that we'll know which ceiling price it should be charging.

ORDER CUTS PRICES

OPA estimates that the order on rayon hosiery will result in a general lowering of prices and save consumers about 15 per cent of the nation's annual women's hosiery bill. The order covers "continuous filament, rayon hosiery the leg of which is knitted in plain stitch." About 80 per cent of rayon hose is this kind. It requires that on and after April 15 each pair shall have a label printed on it which will identify the maker, tell the government grade—A or B—and give the retail ceiling price.

The standards which have been established for Grade A hose are quite detailed and intended to make them as serviceable as possible. All hose not meeting those standards must be Labeled B and sell at a lower price. On July 15 there will be a further reduction in Grade B prices in order to discourage their manufacture, and prevent waste of rayon badly needed for war purposes.

There is a bill pending in Congress now for an investigation of OPA's moves in the direction of setting standards. We know ceiling prices won't mean much if quality doesn't have to be maintained. Our Congressmen, as well as OPA, should therefore hear from us that we approve this rayon hosiery order which ties price to quality, and want to see the same thing done in every OPA price order.

DEMAND CHILD CARE

A mass meeting of working mothers to protest delays in approval of Federal funds to meet Detroit's child care problem was held Friday, March 5, under the auspices of the UAW-CIO auxiliary.

"We feel that action on the part of the working mothers themselves will convince the responsible government agencies that federal funds are necessary in order to permit these women to give their continued attention to vital war jobs, and to eliminate absenteeism caused by lack of child care centers," Mrs. Catherine Gelles, secretary-treasurer of the UAW-CIO auxiliary, said in announcing the meeting.

Final approval of an application for Lanham Act funds to continue WPA nursery schools which are now meeting part of the city's child care needs and are scheduled to close April 14.

Read Food Labels To Stretch Ration Points

BY SUNNY PRESSMAN

If you have already used some of your ration coupons for canned goods, you probably found yourself reading the labels pretty carefully to discover which cans would give you the most weight for your points. Labels often tell you something about minerals and vitamins, too. Some labels even tell you what part of the daily share of vitamins the food offers. Watch the labels carefully and be sure to get the best nutrition as well as the largest quantity for the points you spend.

VITAMIN C

Last week we talked about the Vitamin B family. Now we come to Vitamin C. Vitamin C is important because it helps build teeth and bones; helps keep gums healthy; strengthens the walls of blood vessels; and prevents and cures the disease called scurvy.

Rich sources of vitamin C are: Citrus fruits, lemons, grapefruit, oranges; tomatoes, potatoes, raw cabbage, lettuce, carrots, prunes, milk, onion, raw or cooked, and especially those vegetables eaten raw.

A daily share of vitamin C can be obtained from one-half grapefruit or one cup orange juice or one whole green pepper or two medium tomatoes (eight oz.)

COOKING HINTS

Like the B vitamins, vitamin C dissolves in water. Follow the same rules in carefully handling and preparing fruits and vegetables as you do for B-1.

Tomatoes and citrus fruits contain acid which tends to protect vitamin C during cooking and canning and storage.

Put salt or sugar in the boiling water before you add the vegetables. Salt and sugar both preserve vitamin C while cooking.

Don't use soda. It destroys vitamin C.

FROZEN FOODS

Start cooking frozen foods while they are still frozen. Serve raw frozen foods immediately after thawing.

Properly canned fruits and vegetables retain most of their ascorbic acid.

Foods lose vitamin C when allowed to stand too long after cooking or when soaked in water too long.

Baked potatoes have twice as much vitamin C as the same size potatoes boiled. If you have to boil potatoes, boil them in their jackets.

Use sliced oranges, cutting across the skin sections, instead of orange juice. If you have to have orange juice, don't strain it. The pulp is just as valuable as the juice.

RECIPE

In answer to several requests for good cookies to have on hand I can recommend these oatmeal cookies very highly. They are easy to make, nourishing and stay fresh for a week or more if kept in a covered crock. The children will love them.

Oatmeal Drop Cookies—¾ cup shortening, 1 cup sugar, 2 eggs, 1 heaping cup flour, 1 tsp. baking powder, ¼ tsp. salt, ⅓ cup milk, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 1 tsp. vanilla, 1 cup seedless raisins, 3 cups Quaker Oats.

Cream shortening and sugar well. Beat in eggs, one at a time. Sift together flour, baking powder, cinnamon, salt. Add to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Stir in vanilla. Add raisins and Quaker Oats. Drop from teaspoon on greased cookie sheet. Bake in medium oven, 375 degrees for 15 minutes. Makes four dozen cookies.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The United Steelworkers again tackles and wins one of the big ones. In Gadsden, Ala., the CIO was victorious in the election held at Republic Steel, with a vote of 2234 to 447. Congratulations on a mighty fine accomplishment! The USA continues its march by winning an election at Trojan Steel, South Charlestown, W. Va., by a vote of 52 for CIO to zero. Brother Noel R. Beddow reports the Gadsden victory and Brother John Easton reports the West Virginia victory. Congratulations to all.

The UAW-CIO won the election among the employes of the Fannir Bearing Corporation in New Britain, Conn., by 934 to 36, so reports Regional Director Charles H. Kerrgan.

Walter Smethurst, director of the shoe workers' drive, reports a victory in the election held in Kirksville, Mo., at the International Shoe Co., by a vote of 286 to 195.

The United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers report two victories: Victor Chemical Co., Nashville, Tenn., CIO 148 to 83. Brother Tom Jones, CIO representative; C. W. Danenburg, southern director, UG; Mortin Davis, Shoe Workers, and Grant Williams of the Textile Workers, assisted. The UGCCWA also won the election at the Calco Chemical in Newark, N. J., by a vote of 167 to one. District 50 took a powder in this show-down.

Frank A. Hardesty, regional director in Texas reports a victory by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in the election at the Conroe Manufacturing Company in Dallas, where CIO received 77 per cent of the votes to 3 per cent for the AFL. Brother Hardesty also reports a victory at Gulf, Port Arthur, Tex., where CIO polled 60 per cent to 40 per cent for the independent. Three thousand workers were involved.

Loggers Win

Adolph Germer, director of organization, IWA-CIO, reports a victory at the Swamp Mt. Logging Company near Sweet Home, Ore., by 79 to 41. He reports another at the Connor Lumber Company mill, Ironwood, Mich., with 75 for CIO to 22 for the AFL.

G. Geo. DeNucci, CIO sub-regional director in Columbus, O., reports a victory among the Plant Protection employes of the Curtiss-Wright Corp., where UAW-CIO polled 143 votes to 38. UAW Sub-Regional Director Spike Innis and International Representative Lewis Strickland were in charge of this election.

Regional Director Carmichael of Boston sends in a State Labor Board election victory at the R. H. White Store where the Retail, Wholesale & Department Store Employes received 543 to 89 for the AFL. He also reports that on a card-check at the Kinney Manufacturing Company, Jamaica Plain, the UAW-CIO won by 115 to nine.

Regional Director Paul R. Christopher of Knoxville, Tenn., reports that the CIO has been certified bargaining agency at the Wolfe River Sand & Gravel Company in Memphis, following a cross-check of membership cards which revealed that 47 out of 55 workers voted for the CIO.

Attacks on Labor

The attacks being made on labor in Congress are the most unfair that members of that august body have ever resorted to The cowardly attack upon American seamen is just one example; this vicious onslaught, first appearing in Akron, has been exposed. The gallant soldier, Barney Ross, told with what heroism these sailors of democracy are performing, facing dangers of torpedoes and bombs, adrift on the high seas in many cases for weeks. Yet, those who survive eagerly go back to sea to transport men and equipment for our own country and our Allies.

'Risk' Policy Bars Benefits To Torpedoed Seamen

New York, March 13—A new seamen's "war risk" policy prepared by the Maritime War Emergency Board to take effect March 15 was strongly criticized this week by the National Maritime Union as "having enough technicalities to bar from its benefits seamen who are driven insane by frequent bombing attacks; seamen who perish as a result of exposure in lifeboats and seamen who become maimed as a result of enemy action."

Declaring that the new policy was "garbled and confused in its wording, inadequate in its coverage, unsound in its principles and too broad and discretionary in its administration," Frederick N. Myers, NMU vice-president, asked the War Shipping Administration to postpone the proposed effective date of the agreement pending a full discussion of its terms by representatives of the maritime unions.

"Too little consideration has been given to protecting the rights of the seamen and their dependents and too much consideration has been given to protecting the rights of cargoes and hulls," Myers said.

Give Citizenship To Bridges Is UE Heads' Plea

New York, March 13—Intervention of President Roosevelt to dismiss charges against Harry Bridges and to grant the West Coast CIO leader citizenship was asked this week by the three national officers of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America—Albert J. Fitzgerald, president; Julius Emspak, general secretary-treasurer, and James J. Matles, director of organization.

In a telegram to the President, they said:

"We draw your attention to the great harm being done by reason the Attorney General's continued persecution of Harry Bridges. Were you to intervene to secure dismissal of all charges and to grant Mr. Bridges citizenship, it would materially assist us in maintaining solid, unified ranks in support of your policies of warfare against the enemies of our country. We respectfully urge that this grave matter be given your personal and immediate attention."

"CIO" MARINE: Sgt. J. "Bud" Goodman Jr. has been assigned to the Marine Corps public relations office at Philadelphia. Goodman is a charter member of the Philadelphia Newspaper Guild, and before his enlistment December 7, 1942, was Southern publicity director for the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding workers.

Ask Mexican Brigade to Fight Axis

Mexico City, March 13 (ALN)—The Confederation of Latin American Workers has offered to form a brigade of volunteers to fight alongside the armies of the United Nations, Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, announced last week. Toledano made the offer to the U. S. government, on behalf of the CTAL, while he was recently in Washington.

"As members of the United Nations we must acquire a real consciousness of our responsibilities," he said. "Our first duty is to win the war, without wasting time debating our domestic differences. To do this, we need to form a Latin American Brigade, to carry all our flags and seal with our blood our alliance with the peoples of the United Nations. Thus we will fulfill the duty which history has committed to us, and acquire a right to sit at the peace table."

HITS APATHY

Toledano was sharply critical of the apathy still present among some Mexican workers. "On returning to my country after a brief absence, I notice a current of scepticism and indifference even in certain sections of the labor movement," he said. "The war which we are fighting is not a symbolic war, but a real one, with serious consequences for our country, as President Avila Camacho has pointed out. Despite the magnificent victories of the Red Army, the war has not yet been won. The British and American armies have not yet fulfilled their missions.

"Many sacrifices are still necessary. Mexico is giving economic collaboration through the export of materials to the United States, the arsenal of the allies. But this is not sufficient. It is necessary to create a strong force inspired with the ideals of Hidalgo, Morelos and Juarez; a true political army which will aid in the destruction of the Nazi-fascist Axis."

Warning against the activities of the Sinarquistas in Mexico and the Fifth Columnists elsewhere, Toledano said: "Let us not forget that as the balance of military strength inclines toward the United Nations, the enemy increases his propaganda on 'the menace of communism.'"

Anti-Nazi French Unionists Rotting In African Camps

LONDON, March 13 (ALN)—Among the 15,000-odd Frenchmen still in North African concentration camps are thousands of trade unionists deported from metropolitan France for anti-Vichy activity, recent reports to the Fighting French National Committee revealed. Just before the Allied landing in November the number was increased by shop stewards and rank-and-file workers deported by Petain for opposing the draft of French workers for German factories.

The most striking fact about the trade unionists in concentration camps (presided over indirectly by U. S. and British authorities) is that they represent unions which are leading the struggle within France against the Nazis. More organized sabotage is carried out by the railway workers than any other group. The incessant wrecks and explosions reported by German news agencies are proof that the French railway workers have not abandoned their long fighting traditions. For two weeks in 1937, it is recalled, railwaymen on lines in the south of France refused to move any freight or passengers to the border of Franco Spain.

Opposition to the German labor draft has been centered in the metal factories, particularly in the Paris area. The Metal Workers Federation, with 800,000 members, was France's strongest union. The Renault Auto Works outside Paris, the scene of the first strike last September against the labor draft, also originated the great stay-in strikes in 1936.

Workers of all political beliefs now work closely under the leadership of General De Gaulle. Strikes and sabotage in the metal works—the Citroen factory in Paris was recently closed down for three weeks after a series of explosions—are organized mainly by the Communists, while demonstrations last month in the Pas-de-Calais coal mines were organized by the Socialists.

The general strike in Lyons against a levy of 400 workers for Germany was begun by syndicates in the Doulin railway shops and spread to the Berlier and Schneider aircraft and engine factories by a committee representing the three main pre-war union groups: the General Confederation of Labor (CGT), the left-wing Unitary Confederation of Labor (CGTU) and the Catholic Confederation of Labor (CGTC).

British Swing to Industrial Unionism May Help Build Stronger U. S. Relations

LONDON, March 13 (ALN)—The growing trend in Britain toward industrial unionism—which will have a profound effect not only upon domestic labor policy but also on the attitude of British labor toward the international trade union movement—is further illustrated by an editorial appearing in the current issue of the AEU Journal, official organ of the Amalgamated Engineering Union. The AEU, which started the war as a craft union with 350,000 members (mostly skilled machinists), today has 760,000 members and expects by the end of this year to have more than a million. The AEU is rapidly taking on an industrial form.

The present swing toward industrial unionism is likely to shift the emphasis of power within the TUC away from the big federations of craft unions—the Transport and General Workers and the General and Municipal Workers. In the field of international labor relations, this may well cause the TUC to readjust its approach toward American labor.

In the past that approach has been determined by the desire of craft unions in one country to be associated with craft unions in the other. For 47 years the TUC has maintained exclusive relations with the AFL, and in recent years has made no direct approach to the CIO or Railroad Brotherhoods. The changing balance of forces in Britain may bring about a more universal approach to U. S. Labor.

Pointing out that in the engineering (automotive and machine-building) industries there are no less than 38 different unions with a total membership of one and a quarter million, and that in the iron and steel industry there are another 20 unions with a membership of 250,000, the journal states:

CONSIDER UNITY

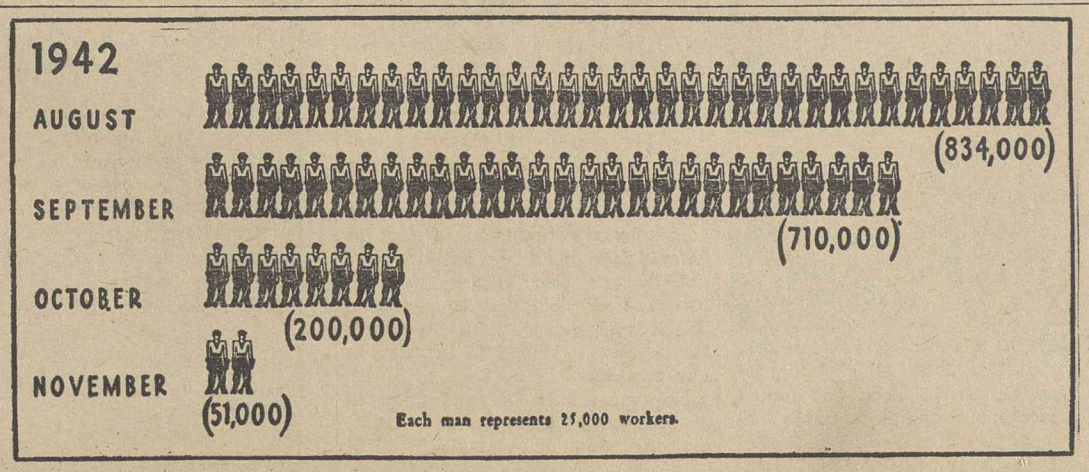
"It would be completely consistent with the policy of our union if in the course of this year a strong effort could be made to bring together the unions in our group of trades to consider the possibility of amalgamation. It does not seem to us to be beyond the capacity of trades union statesmanship to reduce these large groups of unions very considerably by amalgamation. Nor do we see any reason why the effort to achieve a greater degree of unity need be deferred until after the war."

The 6,000,000 members of the Trades Union Congress are today spread out among 223 different unions only one of which, the Miners Federation, takes in all the workers in an industry. (Negotiations are now taking place within the Miners Federation for ending the autonomy of its district units and the formation of a single union with centralized control.)

In British plants employing fewer than 1,000 workers it is common to find as many as 12 different unions. At last year's TUC convention a motion introduced by the railwaymen to consider reorganization of trade union structure was defeated by only 3,085,000 votes to 2,153,000.

Moves in the direction of industrial unionism have also been made recently in the railway, founding and building industries. In January Britain's three railway unions—the National Union of Railwaymen, Associated Society of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen, and Railway Clerks Association—set up a joint commitee to "examine the whole position with regard to the establishment of one union for railway workers."

The National Union of Foundry Workers, after a referendum vote of its membership, has started unity negotiations with the Ironfounding Workers' Association, the General Ironfitters' Association, the Scottish Brassmoulders' Union and the Associated Iron, Steel and Brassdressers of Scotland. The Amalgamated Union of Building Trades Workers—largest of the many unions in Britain's building industry—has proposed that the existing National Federation of Building Trades Operatives be developed into a single union for the industry.



WORKERS DON'T GET RICH: The chart above refutes anti-labor propaganda that workers are getting rich in the war period, for it shows that only 1,795,000 workers received wage increases between August and November, 1942.

Wage-Hour Head Hits Rickenbacker's Anti-Labor Lies

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Mar. 13—In a speech crackling with indirect but sharp criticisms of Edward V. Rickenbacker, Wage-Hour Administrator L. Metcalfe Walling this week took the garrulous flyer to task for disrupting the war effort by using "absenteeism" as a stick with which to beat labor.

Pointing out that labor-management committees can prove highly effective in curing the few cases of voluntary absenteeism from war jobs, Walling said:

"Unfortunately, the work of such committees, the whole job of building morale, of helping the man at the machine feel the importance of the bullets, the planes, the rifles he is making has been jeopardized in the last few weeks by the few people who don't care whether what they say increases absences or not, and who use what they call 'absenteeism' as a club to beat labor with."

"I am always amazed," Walling said, "at the people who in one breath bemoan the wartime limit on gross incomes above $67,200 before payment of Federal taxes, because they say this will end incentive, while in the next breath they demand that the overtime incentive to greater production for the worker be abolished."

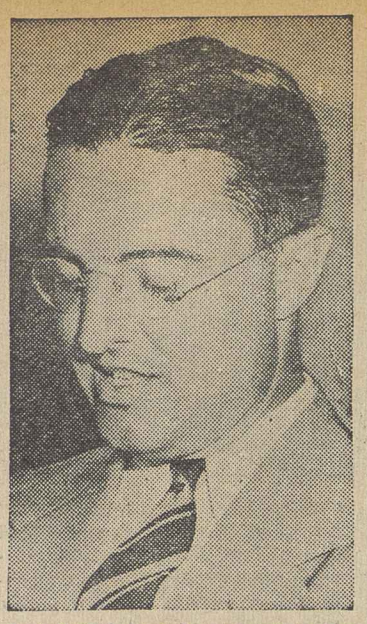
REFUTES RICKENBACKER

Walling quoted from a statement made by Rickenbacker before the New York State Legislature, in which the ex-captain of the U. S. Army said that:

"Experience has proved that manufacturers in many industries who are operating on the 'incentive' plan are showing an increase in production per manpower hour of at least 33 1/3 per cent over those operating under the Wage and Hour Law."

"There then followed," Walling said, "calculation with some astronomical figures intended to indicate how this would free so and so many workers. Now this is pure hokum. The fact is that thousands upon thousands of employers use incentive plans under the Fair Labor Standards Act and there is nothing whatsoever in the Act that stops the use of incentive plans.

"All the incentive plans that are in operation in this country in the manufacture of goods for interstate commerce are of necessity under the Fair Labor Standards Act and I tell you this simple fact that anyone who states or implies in a public forum that incentive plans are not working under the Fair Labor Standards Act is either recklessly ignorant or deliberately hoping to confuse."



REFUTES RICKENBACKER: In two recent speeches Wage-Hour Administrator L. Metcalfe Walling stated that payment of time and a half for overtime is "a most effective force in keeping down absences in industry.

It 'Happened' on Guadalcanal

2nd Smear-Labor Plot Exposed As Pure Fakery

LONG ISLAND CITY, N. Y., Mar. 13.—Another piece of anti-labor propaganda, rivalling the original phoney Guadalcanal smear story, was exposed this week as pure fakery. The propaganda involved a letter, purporting to come from a marine on the same island, and was read into the Congressional Record last January by Sen. Millard Tydings of Maryland.

The exposure was made by Local 365, United Auto Workers (CIO), at the Brewster Aircraft Co. whose publicity man, Ray Hill, was first responsible for publicizing the letter, which was spread over the nation by the daily press, and was featured by the Scripps-Howard chain.

The letter, which condemned Brewster workers for alleged loafing, was supposed to have been written by a former Brewster worker named "Bill Smith." It actually was written here by John F. Desmond, a worker, who has given an affidavit to the union taking full responsibility.

Although the letter was an obvious fake, Hill printed it in the Brewster Bulletin. And then Tydings read it to the senate January 27, claiming it had been given to him by an official of the Navy Dept. Scripps-Howard immediately broadcast the story.

ATTACKED WORKERS

The letter was a vitriolic attack on Brewster workers for loafing on the job. It also described a very bloody battle on Guadalcanal. Desmond said he had faked it to impress two or three men who occasionally loafed but he never intended it to become public property.

Contents of the letter which marked it as a fake but which Hill, Tydings and Scripps-Howard ignored were: Military censorship would not permit a man to write "I am here on Guadalcanal"; although he said he was on Guadalcanal "Bill Smith" talks about a battle at Gona which is in New Guinea, 800 miles from Guadalcanal; no such battle as described in the letter ever took place.

And in reading the letter to the senate, Tydings said it was addressed to a worker in the "Brewster aircraft plant in California." There is no Brewster plant in California!

Tydings later this week attempted to wriggle out of his foolish position by placing the responsibility on Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal. Tydings said he got the letter from Forrestal and declared he was ready to move to strike it from the Congressional Record if the Undersecretary acknowledged that it was not authentic.

Grass Roots Reaction Whipped Up by NAM

NEW YORK, Mar. 13.—The Natl. Assn. of Manufacturers propaganda drive to whip up grass roots support for reactionary legislation in Congress is being handled through the Committee for Constitutional Government, FACTS FOR FARMERS, monthly newsletter, reveals.

Describing the committee as the discredited Liberty League, the newsletter continues: "It was founded by Frank E. Gannett, who owns a string of 16 rural papers and who recently did the behind-the-scenes job of unifying the so-called 'big four' farm organizations behind the 'farm' bloc.

"It has taken out full page ads in papers all over the country asking, 'Do you own a farm?' or 'Do you own securities?' If so, send in your dollar or contribute '$25 or more' and thereby help to 'preserve Constitutional Government in post-war America.'

"In return for your money, you get a free copy of a book on the Constitution, as interpreted by the NAM, and each copy is autographed by Herbert Hoover. You will also get a 'poison kit' containing, among other things, anti-labor leaflets.

"The Committee for Constitutional Government is obviously backed by big money, and it boasts that $150,000 to $250,000 have been required to put over 'successfully' some of the nationwide propaganda drives that have been undertaken. Using guttersniping articles by Westbrook Pegler and bloodcurdling pictures, it attempts to destroy national unity by picturing organized labor as bent on violence and revolution."

Prominent among the committee's officers are:

Louis J. Taber, "formerly master of the Natl. Grange until his connections with America First became embarrassing;" Charles R. Hook, former NAM president and head of America Rolling Mills; S. S. McClure, "the publisher who used to boast that he was for Mussolini;" and Samuel B. Pettengill, "notorious reactionary who was until recently on the GOP Natl. Committee."

Hit Rickenbacker

Indianapolis, Ind., March 13—"The activities of former Capt. Edward Rickenbacker make him in effect a sixth columnist," the Indiana CIO charged this week, through its secretary, Walter Frisbie.

UAW Membership Hits 845,099 Record

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Mar. 13—Paid membership of the United Automobile Workers, CIO, rose to the record height of 845,099 in February, Pres. R. J. Thomas reported to the UAW Executive Board in session here, speeding the union still further ahead as the biggest in the country.

The Executive Board authorized Pres. Thomas and Sec.-Treas. George Addes to make a trip to England and the Soviet Union to observe labor conditions and build up cooperative relations between American, British and Russian workers.

The Board voted to hold the 1943 convention in Toronto, Canada, if hotel and assembly hall arrangements permit, with Columbus as second choice. This decision was based on the aim of making as little demands as possible on the nation's wartime transportation facilities.

A resolution adopted unanimously, blasted as a "vicious lie" a report said to be circulated by John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, that the board at a recent meeting had considered or voted on a motion to disaffiliate from the CIO.

Pres. Thomas, in his report to the board, said that a committee on post-war problems had been set up under his chairmanship. Later the board adopted a statement dealing with international affairs which supported the "unconditional surrender" decisions agreed upon by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill at the Casablanca conference.

The board also voted to send a committee to the War Department in Washington to protest the dictatorial firings of workers by the Department on flimsy charges of "subversive" activities and denounced the Hobbs Bill now before Congress as a blow at labor morale in war industries which would hobble if not cripple labor activities if anti-labor prosecutors so desired.

On the motion of Regional Director William McCaulay, the board voted unanimously to grant autonomy to Local 50, Willow Run Ford bomber local at Ypsilanti, Mich.

CIO Child Care

Los Angeles, March 13—Information centers on child care for working mothers will be set up in Los Angeles with CIO representation, according to the Women's Auxiliary of the UAW-CIO here. Centers will be set up in department stores and other points near war plants.

Washington CIO Convention Meets

Seattle, Wash, March 13—The fifth annual convention of the Washington State CIO Council, scheduled earlier to meet here, will open March 13 in Aberdeen, Wash., at Eagles Hall, Secretary-Treasurer T. Ralph Neilson announced this week.

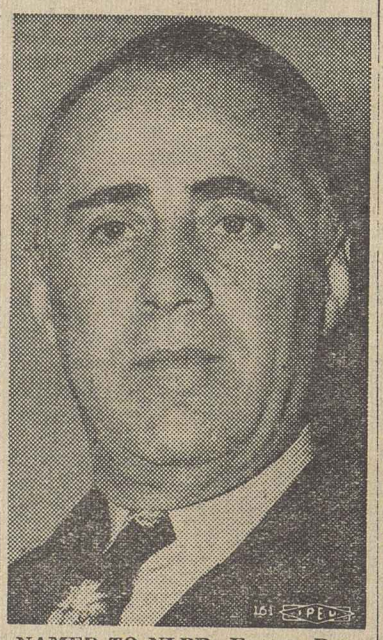
The critical hotel situation in Seattle forced the State Council to make the change, Neilson said.

Farmers Union Urges Plan To Boost Food Output

WASHINGTON, Mar. 13.—An investment of one billion dollars and a little planning would increase food production of close to 1.5 million farmers, James G. Patton, president of the Natl. Farmers Union, said in releasing a new NFU plan here this week.

Under the Farmers Union plan, which could be put into im-mediate operation, 1,390,000 farmers who are now producing under capacity would be brought into full productive operation on the food-for-victory front, Patton pointed out.

These farmers would then be able to show sharp increases in food production, just as the 463,000 farmers helped by the Farm Security Administration last year showed big increases when given government aid.



NAMED TO NLRB: Former Representative John M. Houston, of Wichita, Kans., has been named a member of the Natl. Labor Relations Board by President Roosevelt to succeed William M. Leiserson. The Kansas Democrat was defeated for re-election last November after serving four terms in the House.

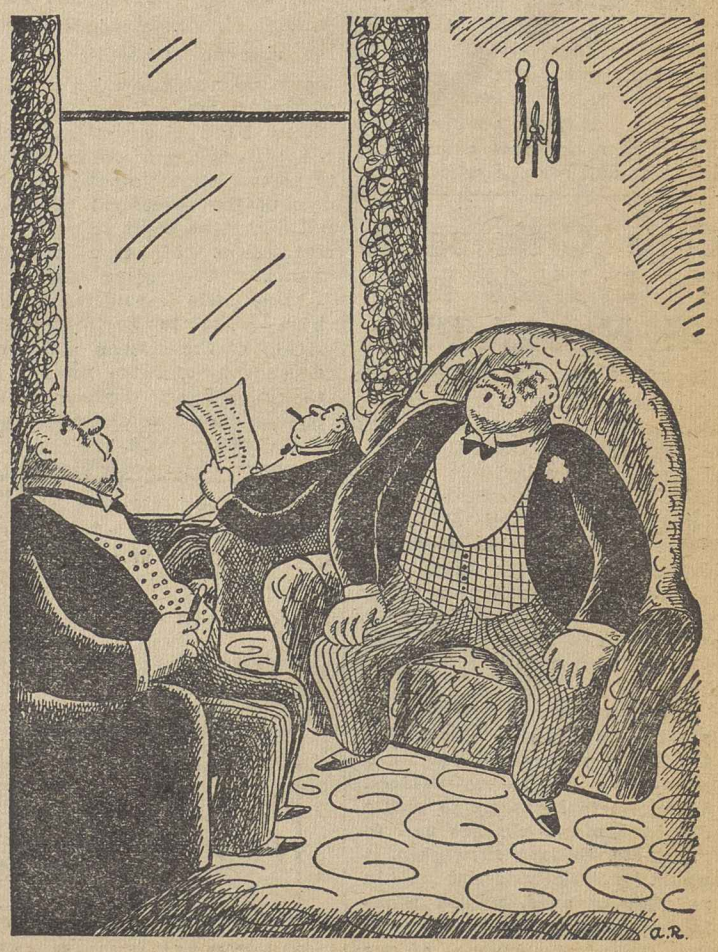
These FSA-helped farmers, though only 7.6 per cent of the farm population, produced 36 per cent of the total 1942 increase in milk, 27 per cent of the increase in beans, 10 per cent of the increase in eggs, chickens and peanuts, and nine per cent of the increase in pork, he said.

PRICES NOT WHOLE ANSWER

Prices are not the answer to the need for stepping up food output to meet the needs of our armed forces, our allies and the home front, Patton explained.

"In, of and by themselves, prices cannot be relied upon to produce vital foods in the kinds and quantities needed. Reliance upon parity prices will not get increased food production. Increase of parity prices by the inclusion of cost of farm labor, paid or unpaid, will not do the job. Parity was not invented or designed to get production; its purpose was to assure the relative position of farmers in our economy."

He urged cuts in production of surplus and non-essential crops, concentration on war foods; full utilization of all farms and farm families, including re-equipment where needed, and generally greater concentration on the family-type farm.



"I really thought of going to the House one day last week. There was something I wanted to say about this dreadful absenteeism."

NMU Man Gives Money, Blood, Life To Crush Fascism

The seaman was Jose Martinez, 50 years old, and a long-time member of the union. He shipped as a fireman.

Last July he was urged by Baltimore Port Agent James Drury to give blood to the Red Cross. After donating a pint, he returned to the NMU hall enthusiastically praising the blood donor project.

This week Martinez was reported lost on a run across the Atlantic. His ship had been torpedoed.

This week also the Red Cross Baltimore Chapter was informed that Martinez, who had no relatives, had made the Red Cross his beneficiary. The organization will receive $5,000 from an insurance policy which Martinez had taken out on his life.

Anti-Labor Forces Ride Herd in Kansas, Texas, Arkansas

WASHINGTON, March 20—The pressing need for labor to fight anti-union, anti-victory forces on the state legislative fronts as well as in the federal Congress is made plain in a brief survey of recent union-busting bills passed in a number of states.

In Kansas, anti-labor forces pushed through a bill to register all unions, license union officials, abolish the right to picket and file detailed financial reports.

Texas, determined to stay in the lead in the anti-union parade, moved ahead with state Senate approval of a House passed bill restricting unions in their right to collect dues and pay per capita, restricting election rights and destroying the right to strike and picket.

Arkansas, scene of much "Christian American" propaganda (these people have been denounced by church leaders as neither Christian or American, actually are a mask for a labor smashing drive) the two houses approved a bill based on the Texas measure. Idaho has passed a similar bill.

Labor opposition from CIO, AFL and Brotherhoods has slowed the drive in some places. In Missouri, an anti-union bill was dropped in the Senate. Similar bills are having a tough time in Minnesota and Wisconsin.

Steel Wins 5½c Raise At Oliver Co

Washington, Mar. 20—Some 1,700 employes of the Oliver Iron Mining Co., U. S. Steel subsidary which mines about one-third of the iron ore coming from the Lake Superior region, this week were granted a 5½ cents hourly pay increase by the War Labor Board. The employes are represented by the United Steelworkers of America.

The wage boost was made retroactive to July 13, 1942. The Board also ordered that voluntary maintenance of membership and dues check-off be incorporated in a contract between the union and the company.

The Board majority accepted the recommendations of the majority report of the panel which heard the Oliver case along with the cases of six other U. S. Steel subsidiaries already acted upon by the Board.

Van A. Bittner, CIO representative on the Board, together with Fred Hewitt, the other labor representative, concurred with the majority decision with the exception of the retroactive date. Industry members dissented on all but the retroactive date.

CIO, AFL Hold Unity Banquet

Akron, O., Mar. 20.—Akron CIO and AFL unionists held this city's first annual Labor Recognition banquet last week, reviewing gains of the past year and hearing speakers warn of anti-labor attacks that can only be headed off by the greatest possible unity of action. The gathering was sponsored by the Akron Industrial Union Council.

Another Victory for UE!

FAIRMONT, W. Va., March 20—A 15-1 vote in an NLRB election this week brought another Westinghouse plant into the fold of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America.

By a score of 397 "yes" to 27 "no," workers in the new WEMCO radio tube plant voted for the UE after a brief election campaign.

Adding a kick to the victory among the production workers was a vote of 10 to 1 for the union among the company police.

UAW 'Rookies' Get 1st Hand View of Army

Detroit, Mar. 20—Armed with plenty of "foot-ease" powder and the air of inquiring reporters, 300 shop committeemen of the United Auto Workers Union this week were to sally forth from war plants on a four-day visit to Camp Atterbury, Indiana, to learn at first hand all that they can about the operation of Uncle Sam's citizen Army.

The invitation to the workers, from key plants in this area, was extended by Under Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, and was promptly accepted by R. J. Thomas, UAW president.

In accepting, Thomas said:

"The key war workers from plants under contract with the UAW-CIO will, I am sure, reap great benefits from this trip. It is our determination to have their experiences with the U. S. Army translated, upon their return home, into concrete and increased application to the industrial war effort. I am sure this trip will inspire our hundreds of thousands of war workers to greater efforts than ever."

Unfair to Negroes

Detroit, Mar. 20.—Refusal of the Federal Public Housing Authority to permit Negro workers in the Willow Run housing project was condemned by George F. Addes, secretary-treasurer of the United Automobile Workers, as "retarding the war effort and violating the Constitution by discriminating against race, color and creed."

Urge Unity for Victory

ERIE, Pa., Mar. 20—Victory through unity was the keynote of a labor win-the-war rally attended by 250 delegates representing 25,000 organized workers in this area. Unions affiliated with the CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and Typographical Union were represented.

Russ Nixon, legislative representative of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers was one of the main speakers. He told the delegates that organized labor was gathering in similar meetings throughout the nation to fight for the total defeat of Fascism.

Confusion and disruption on the home front are the greatest existing threats to victory, he said.

John Philips, president of the Pennsylvania CIO Council reported on the legislative situation in the state, and pointed out that AFL-CIO cooperation on the legislative front was an accomplished fact.

A Labor program calling for full production through a stabilized economy based on centralized planning of production and manpower, rationing and price control, fair taxes and wage policies was adopted by the conference.

The program denounced those who are hurting national unity by attacks on patriotic American labor and on President Roosevelt's war policies.

The resolution called for unity of 12,000,000 organized workers behind our nation's war effort on a local, state and national scale, and urged Pres. Philip Murray of the CIO and AFL President William Green to take immediate steps to get a national unified legislative body into action, State-wide and national conferences should be held, the resolution stated, to forge a Unity Victory Program for the American people.

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker's attacks on labor and his misuse of the issue of absenteeism to smear the patriotism of workers were condemned in a resolution which called for the elimination of the real causes of absenteeism.

Jersey Food Prices Soar 35 Per Cent in Year!

NEWARK, N. J., March 20—Food prices in Jersey went up more than 35 per cent between January, 1942, and January, 1943, Irving Abramson, president of the State CIO Council, showed in releasing a detailed study covering 61 food items. The study was sent to OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown with a covering letter demanding rigid price fixing to stop further runaway price increases.

Abramson also pointed out that the Little Steel formula is no longer adequate, saying that workers who have received the 15 per cent above the September, 1941 scale "cannot possibly maintain the same standard of living as they did formerly," thus cutting down health levels.

The study covers only one year, and the 35 per cent rise, added to the rise between September, 1939, and January, 1942, equals a total rise of 54 per cent since war broke out in Europe. Further increases, not possible to record, are due to black market operations, chiefly in meat.

HIDDEN INCREASES

"Hidden increases" due to lowering of quality were also found, including switching of labels in canning plants to show higher quality on the label while the contents remain unchanged. An almost complete lack of enforcement of price ceilings was also found, and the report emphasizes the need for labor representation to check on prices at the local level.

These increases, plus severe shortages and other difficulties in getting food are a basic cause of absenteeism, Abramson told the OPA in his letter to Brown. He asked Brown for an early meeting in Washington to take up the critical situation.

Among solutions to the problem, the CIO Council urged rationing of all foods, strict enforcement of price controls, with extra funds from Congress to do the job, standardization and honest labelling for quantity and quality, and adequate wage increases.

Honor Mothers, Wives of Seamen

New York, Mar. 20.—Women whose husbands and sons were among the 3,617 merchant seamen lost at sea because of enemy action were honored at an impressive memorial ceremony last week at the National Maritime Union Headquarters here.

Gold star merchant marine flags were awarded to the women whose men made the supreme sacrifice delivering the weapons of war to our troops and to our Allies.

Murray Hails Red Cross 'Work of Mercy'

NEW YORK, March 20—High tribute to the work of the Red Cross and the pledge that "the CIO will help the Red Cross—because we understand what a great work of mercy is being done," were expressed by CIO President Philip Murray before a capacity audience in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

"We welcome the opportunity to participate in its work," he said. "We want the wounded and all the men in the armed service and on merchant ships to get the individual personal service, the fun and recreation of the Red Cross buildings and rooms, the libraries, the contacts with home and family.

"We want the Red Cross to keep the world's switchboard open for messages to and from far-off prison camps, for the sending of foods and medicines and the exchange of prisoners to the fullest extent possible," Murray told the city-wide Red Cross rally, which was attended by thousands of New York trade unionists.

"We look forward with confidence," Murray said, "and with some anxiety to the period of reconstruction—to the making of a peace which will last because it is based on justice and fairness, not on vengeance. Aid must be given fairly and equally to all peoples, without political fear or favor to nation, party or faction, so that the will of the peoples freely expressed through governments of their own choosing, may prevail."

Keep Your Eye On Congress

The week in Congress was an extremely active one, with the anti-labor, anti-FDR, anti-war measures crowd out in front and preparing for more disruption next week.

In the House, the Disney rider abolishing the $25,000 salary limit was passed. It now goes to the Senators, who should hear from you. The Johnson bill (HR 1876) was reported out of the Naval Affairs Committee, is headed for the floor. It would report workers absent from work for any reason to local draft boards. Write your Representative.

On the FOOD FRONT the House slashed funds for recruitment of farm workers by more than half, took the job out of Farm Security Administration. The Pace and Bankhead bills (HR 1408 and HS 660) to inflate food prices are still active—can hit the floor any time.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill (S 666, HR 1742) for a labor draft is still in committee. Extended CIO testimony against it is planned for next week. AFL Pres. Green testified in opposition this week.

The tax bill is set for early debate. Backers of the Ruml plan to forgive 1942 taxes for the rich are preparing a vigorous floor fight. This phoney scheme dies hard, and labor pressure should be kept up until it is finally buried. Pressure for a real victory tax and real pay-as-you-go plan based on CIO program should also be kept up.

The Polltax Repeal bill (HR 7) and the Discharge Petition (DP 3), backed by a Congressional coalition, are both in the work. Close to 80 Congressmen have signed DP 3. All union members and everybody else interested in democracy should keep urging their Congressmen to sign the petition, work and vote for the bill. CIO, AFL, Brotherhoods and all progressive groups are backing it.

Of the anti-labor, anti-war measure bills listed in last week's CIO News, the so-called "Equal Rights" amendment (HJ Res 1, HJ Res 18 and SJ Res 25), which deprives women workers of all protective legislation, is being most actively pushed. Even some liberal Congressmen can be fooled by this venerable phoney. Make sure they know where you stand. The campaign against passage should be started by now, if not already under way.

FULL TEXT OF MURRAY WLB STATEMENT

The following statement was presented by CIO Pres. Philip Murray at a meeting of CIO members of the Regional War Labor Board in Pittsburgh, Pa., March 13, 1943:

This is a very crucial moment in the history of the National War Labor Board.

The Board was established as an instrument to assure the disposition of all industrial disputes that may arise and which could not be settled through mediation or collective bargaining in order to assure continuity of production in the interest of the war effort. It should be recalled that labor urged the adoption of such machinery because of its determination not to permit any interruption of production.

The CIO is still firmly of the opinion that the National War Labor Board as an instrument for furthering the war program must be preserved. The problems which are now arising and which confront labor and the nation are the result of two basic difficulties.

1. Recent decisions of the National War Labor Board are not consistent with the basic policies set forth in the National Stabilization Act, the Price and Wage Stabilization Executive Order of the President, and with the publicly announced policies of the War Labor Board itself.

The CIO has approved of the policy of wage stabilization as an integral part of the national economic policy to prevent inflation. But such stabilization of wages was not intended and has never been publicly announced as a freezing of wages. An equitable wage stabilization policy must be directed toward strengthening the morale and health of workers to guarantee maximum production. To accomplish this, it must be obvious that:

Must Adjust Wages

A. Allowance must be made for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living which has resulted since May, 1942. The increase of 15 per cent over Jan. 1, 1941, does not compensate the workers for the loss in real wages. It is acknowledged by all that the cost of living has risen over 22 per cent since Jan. 1, 1941. Food costs for the same period have risen 45 percent. This increased burden, in full, must be compensated for by way of appropriate wage adjustments. Failure to do so will mean that the wages of the workers instead of being stabilized will be cut into with the resulting inability of wage earners to maintain the productive efficiency which we need for the war effort.

B. The publicly announced wage stabilization policy of the Government includes provision for wage adjustments to eliminate wage inequalities and inequities and to aid in the prosecution of the war. Such recent decisions of the Board in the meat packing industry and the West Coast aircraft industry are a direct violation of the national wage stabilization policy of the Government. The workers in those industries are suffering under very severe inequalities and inequities. The failure of the Board to recognize this clear and stubborn fact is a direct blow against the war production program. Such decisions cannot be tolerated by the American nation. This grossly unfair treatment of the employes in two vital war industries must be rectified. Wage adjustments to meet these living problems could not possibly have any inflationary effect—while a failure to justly meet the situation will have a devastating impact upon morale, health and productive efficiency of the workers.

C. Encouragement should be given to all wage policies which will result in increased production with corresponding increased earnings for the workers. Such policy requires, however, the most careful protection of the workers so that their efforts for increased production to further the war effort will not result in merely inflated profits to industry or in lack of employment because of poor scheduling or shortages of materials.

CIO's Policies

Since the establishment of the War Labor Board, the CIO has insisted upon a wage stabilization policy which would incorporate the foregoing principles. This has been publicly expressed by decisions of the Executive Board of the CIO and by the CIO members on the War Labor Board. The specific provisions and expressed policy of the National Stabilization Act of October, 1942, and of the Price and Wage Stabilization Executive Order of the President of October, 1942, incorporate the same policy.

Until recently the decisions of the War Labor Board generally followed the pattern of equitable wage stabilization. However, the War Labor Board's present policy as expressed in its recent decisions can be accepted with delight only by those who seek to destroy the Board, to hamper the war effort and to provoke and discourage the people who must and shall continue to bleed, die and sweat to win the war.

Living Costs Zoom

2. The wage stabilization policy was promulgated as an integral part of the entire stabilization program. This national policy was projected in April, 1942, by President Roosevelt as our domestic offensive against inflation. While wage stabilization has been effective—there has been a dismal failure on the part of Congress and Government officials to effectuate the remaining portions of the economic stabilization policy. This failure must be rectified if our domestic front is not to disintegrate with resulting severe consequences to those upon whom we rely for producing the materials of war.

A. The American people are still awaiting effective price control and the application of an over-all democratic system of rationing of all foods and other necessities. Why in the face of adequate authority granted by Congress to the Executive Branch are the people subjected to the ravages of black markets? Simultaneous with the announced increase in the price of milk for New York City, the Borden Company, one of the largest milk distributors, reported for 1942 its highest record of profits—larger after taxes than its profits for 1941.

The OPA and Economic Director Byrnes must exercise their authority to impose effective price control, with many necessary price reductions, and over-all rationing.

B. President Roosevelt called for a 1942 tax program which would meet in part the increased financial burden of the nation through increased taxes on those who can best afford to pay. Instead the 1942 tax legislation became a device to "soak the poor and spare the rich." We must see to it that the tax legislation for this year will be based upon the principle that low income groups must be left with sufficient funds to buy their share of available goods and meet their basic obligations. Whatever revenue the Government needs must be obtained from other income groups and through increased corporation taxes and the elimination of special privileges.

This broad program is designed to assure all people, and particularly the workers, that they will have sufficient money to purchase food and to meet their other basic needs to maintain their health and efficiency levels for maximum production. For this reason it must appeal to all Americans regardless of their walk of life who sincerely desire to contribute whatever may be necessary toward the complete mobilization of our nation for the single purpose of winning the war.

The CIO together with the other labor groups and all other Americans must rally behind this program and thereby impress both Congress and the Executive officials of our Government of both the urgency and the need for its immediate and effective application.

That Old CIO Magic Still Has Its Charm!

WASHINGTON, March 20—That old CIO magic still has its charm! From border to border and coast to coast American workers are still voting for, winning with, and sticking by CIO affiliates. For this week's victories, see stories below!

Steel—Five to One!

GADSDEN, Ala., March 20—A rush of applicants for membership in Local 2176, United Steelworkers of America is reported at USA headquarters following a better than five to one victory in a Labor Board election held among workers at the Republic Steel Company's plant here. The election was won by 2,234 to 447.

R. E. Farr, dirctor of USA District 36, said that the union would seek to obtain a contract covering the workers at the Gadsden plant, as a supplement to the master contract with Republic Steel. Gadsden is the last and only Republic Steel plant not already covered.

Farr also said he expected a decision from the joint wage commission of the company and the union on wage inequalities in all Republic plants and that the decision would be the basis on which the wage inequalities between the Gadsden plant and those in the Birmingham district would be wiped out.

State, County Pay Hike

DETROIT, March 20—Eighteen thousand Detroit City Workers won pay increases this month amounting to $9,000,000 a year. The increase in percentages totals 34.5 per cent; while each city worker will average $500 a year more.

This smashing victory came after a whirlwind campaign of the State, County and Municipal Workers of America led by Mort Furay, Regional Director, and Henry W. Wenning, during which the radio, mass meetings, leaflets, public hearings and advertisements in the press were all used as pressure upon Detroit's Common Council.

The result was a precedent-setting rebuff to Mayor Jeffries by the Common Council when they unanimously voted 9-0 to pay time and a half to city employes for the last eight hours of the new 48-hour work week. This rule alone increases the annual earnings by $2,000,000.

The winning of the SCMWA 48-hour week program releases an estimated 20 per cent of Detroit's personnel for work in war factories.

Other points adopted in the $7,000,000 Wage Program presented by the SCMWA-CIO of Detroit were:

Wage increases of 4.5 per cent for those below $3,000 to go into effect March 8. Those earning more than $3,000 will get a maximum of $150.

Pay for six legal holidays with double time if you work.

Premium pay 5 cents per hour for afternoon and night shifts.

Equal pay for women.

Big Independent Goes CIO

RAVENNA, Ohio, March 20—One of the nation's largest independent unions, the National Arsenal Workers of America, has voted to join the CIO, Chas. S. Culver, president of the union, said today.

Culver, who is now regional representative of the CIO United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, said that the union's 4,000 members, employed at the Ravenna Arsenal operated by the Atlas Powder Co., had voted unanimously to give up "independent" status and join hands with the CIO union in the arsenal field.

"It became more and more obvious to us every month that we were getting nowhere as an independent union," Culver declared. "Although we were the legally certified bargaining agency through winning an NLRB election we could not obtain the conditions to which we were entitled."

"We came to the conclusion finally that the only way in which we could get the recognition due to us was to join the CIO," he added.

"We have nothing in common with John L. Lewis' organization," Culver stated. "Ours is a bona fide CIO organization, pledged to full cooperation with our government in its policies of all-out production to help win the war."

Oil Tops in Port Arthur

PORT ARTHUR, Tex., March 20—This important oil port and refinery center is almost 100 per cent CIO today following an important National Labor Relations Board election victory in the big Gulf Oil refinery by the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign.

Situated right in the heart of Martin Dies' congressional district, Port Arthur has seen the CIO take the community's workers by land as well as by sea, with the National Maritime Union joining hands with the oil refinery workers to shove over the CIO program.

The NLRB election victory came despite a bitter campaign conducted by the company and its stooges in the newspapers and over the radio. With the strictly craft units such as boilermakers, electricians and machinists eliminated by a ruling of the Labor Board, the CIO Oil Workers Organizing Campaign obtained the exclusive bargaining rights of 84 per cent of Gulf's 3,700 employes in the unit allowed by the Board.

Because of the Gulf refinery operating on war contracts, the vote in the NLRB election was not announced other than to say the CIO won by 60 per cent.

AWA Wins 5c Hour Raise

WASHINGTON, March 20—A long delayed general 5c per hour increase for the 1,100 workers at the Republic Mining & Manufacturing Co. plant of the Aluminum Co. of America in Bauxite, Ark., at last has been ordered by the War Labor Board. The employes are represented by the Aluminum Workers of America, CIO.

Shortly before the Board issued its decision, AWA Pres. Zonarich appealed to the WLB members to act on this and another case, both of which had been awaiting decision since March, 1942.

The union had asked that the pay boost be made retroactive to March, 1942, but the Board's decision was that Sept. 20, 1942, should be the effective date.

All other ALCOA plants received general increases in 1942, the Board pointed out. The Bauxite plant received total increases of about 9 cents above the Jan. 1941 wage level of 52.3 cents, but received no general plant-wide increase.

The other two Alcoa plants in the South—at Alcoa, Tenn., and Badin, N. C.—received 8½ cent increases in Feb. 1942 by order of the WLB, but the Bauxite plant was not included in the order at that time.

The Board stated that it had approved the 5 cent increase for the Bauxite workers in order to remove the inequality which resulted from the grant to the other plants prior to wage stabilization.

Break Wage Deadlock But Save WLB-Murray

PHILIP MURRAY

PITTSBURGH, March 20 — CIO Pres. Philip Murray charged this week that "recent decisions of the Nat'l. War Labor Board in the meat packing industry and the West Coast aircraft industry are a direct violation of the national wage stabilization policy of the government." Calling for a reversal of the Board's policy of practically freezing wages, Murray tempered sharp criticism with the statement that "the CIO is still firmly of the opinion that the Nat'l. War Labor Board as an instrument for furthering the war program must be preserved."

"The CIO," Murray said, "has approved of the policy of wage stabilization as an integral part of the national economic policy to prevent inflation. But such stabilization of wages was not intended and has never been publicly announced as a freezing of wages.

"An equitable wage stabilization policy must be directed toward strengthening the morale and health of workers to guarantee maximum production."

Murray declared that:

1. Allowance must be made for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living which has resulted since May, 1942. He said that the WLB alowance of a 15 per cent wage increase over January 1, 1941 figures does not compensate for the loss in real wages, occasioned by a 22 per cent rise in the cost of living since that date.

2. Encouragement should be given to wage policies which result in increased production with corresponding increased earnings for workers, with careful protection to assure that increased production does not result merely in inflated profits for industry or lack of employment.

3. Wage stabilization must be backed up—as an integral part of a national economic stabilization policy—by effective price control and a fair tax program that does not "soak the poor and spare the rich." Murray called also for an over-all, democratic system of rationing all foods and other necessities.

Pointing out that the wage stabilization policy of the government includes provision for wage adjustments to eliminate inequalities and inequities and to aid in the prosecution of the war, Murray declared:

"The War Labor Board's present policy as expressed in its recent decisions can be accepted with delight only by those who seek to destroy the Board, to hamper the war effort, and to provoke and discourage the very people who must and shall continue to bleed, die and sweat to win the war."

The CIO's position on the Board was supported this week by AFL members of it, who urged that it scrap its 15 per cent wage increase formula "to give more than lip service in recognition of wage inequalities and substandard wages, and to utilize the possibilities for wage adjustment which now exist in the nebulous phrase 'aid in the effective prosecution of the war'."

Good News!

Tax Bill Hits House Floor Minus Ruml Plan

WASHINGTON, March 20—Action on the 1943 tax bill came nearer this week when the Ways and Means Committee reported it was ready to begin debate on the House floor. The bill comes to the floor minus the Ruml plan that would forgive taxes on swollen 1942 incomes, but with every indication of a stiff floor fight.

The Ruml plan has been repeatedly denounced by CIO, by U. S. tax experts, by the Treasury, and was opposed by President Roosevelt last week. Backers of the plan are wealthy newspaper publishers who would profit by being able to forget about 1942 taxes, bankers (the author of the plan is himself a banker), and their friends in Congress.

Here are two instances of what the Ruml plan means to the big income and to the little income. Under the plan, a worker getting $2,000 a year would save $140 on 1942 taxes, about one month's pay. A big shot getting $100,000 a year would clean up $64,000, or the equivalent of two years' income after taxes. On a $1,000,000 income, the big shot would save $850,000—the equivalent of six years' income after taxes.

The CIO rejects the Ruml plan because it is weighted heavily for the rich, and deprives the nation of needed money that the rich can pay. The CIO favors forgiveness on small incomes to ease the excessive burden on the war workers and other low income groups, and urges a real pay-as-you-go system.

HOBBS BILL

The Hobbs bill (HR 653) to gag unions under the pretext of "anti-racketeering," while not yet on the floor, was expected to come up early next week. Rep. Emmanuel Celler, N. Y., has prepared an amendment specifically exempting union activities now legal under the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, the Clayton anti-trust act and the Wagner act. In a radio address opposing the bill as written by polltaxer Hobbs, Celler said, referring to his amendment, that the bill's sponsors, in refusing to accept such an amendment would be saying, in effect that they "want the Hobbs bill to interfere with labor activities that have been held lawful in the courts of the land, including the U. S. Supreme Court.

"If the amendment is rejected, I hope and trust that, with the true effect of the Hobbs bill thus exposed, a majority of the members of Congress will rally in opposition to the bill and in support of the unity of management and labor and all groups which has resulted in the production records which this country is now achieving."

ABSENTEEISM, LABOR DRAFT

Continuing the drive against labor and the war effort, the House Naval Affairs Committee reported out the Johnson bill (HR 1876) that would turn over war workers who were absent from their jobs to local draft boards. As reported out, the bill has an amendment providing that any request for deferment of an essential worker must be accompanied by his attendance record.

The bill has been vigorously opposed by labor, especially by the CIO, which has pointed out that it does not make any approach to the real problem of absenteeism, which is caused by sickness, bad housing, lack of child care, shopping facilities, etc. —not by sheer laziness on the part of the war worker.

The Austin-Wadsworth bill (S 666, HR 1742) for a labor draft along Nazi "labor-front" lines was denounced this week by AFL Pres. Wm. Green, who said it posed the clear issue of "free labor versus slave labor."

CIO testimony on this bill is scheduled for next week, with representatives from the UAW, the UERMW and USA-CIO set to appear before the committee.

Rieve Praises Jobs Plan

NEW YORK, Mar. 20—President Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers Union of America this week hailed the reports of the Nat'l. Resources Planning Board as "a dramatic demonstration of the far-visioned thinking that the Board has been doing since its inception."

The Textile Workers Union has registered a protest with House and Senate leaders in Congress against elimination of an appropriation for the NRPB, Rieve pointed out.

CIO Urges OCD Workers Be Protected

Washington, Mar. 20 — Strong support for passage of the Pepper bill (S450) to compensate OCD workers and other civilians killed or injured as a result of the war, has been registered with the Senate Finance Committee by the CIO.

Robert Oliver, representing the CIO Legislative Committee, informed the subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee which has the bill under consideration, that at its national convention the CIO asked passage of such legislation and that State and local industrial union councils have urged that it be adopted.

Farm Fumbling Causing Food Shortage, Murray Says

Washington, Mar. 20.—Sharp warning that we are running short of food, while U. S. and United Nations needs grow larger as the war progresses, was voiced by Pres. Murray in a statement and summary of the food production and food price situation issued this week.

Murray put the finger on failure to plan, failure to convert agriculture to a war footing, and the greed of the so-called "farm-bloc" as main factors to blame for the present critical food shortage and the very real threat of greater shortages in the future—unless something is done to correct them.

He pointed out that the working farmer is not to blame for the crisis, drawing a sharp distinction between the real farmer and the Congressional gang that claims to represent him.

"The individual farmers of America are no more to blame for this developing food crisis than the city worker who cannot buy meat or butter," Murray said. "The farmer is himself the victim and Adolph Hitler is the chief beneficiary."

BACKS OUTPUT PLAN

Murray's statement, which was accompanied by an outline of the situation and proposals to remedy it, backed the proposal of the Natl. Farmers Union for a one billion odllars outlay to enable more than a million small and middle farmers to get into full food production.

War Labor Board Crisis

CIO Pres. Philip Murray called national attention to the present crisis confronting the National War Labor Board, in his recent statement to CIO members of Regional War Labor Boards at Pittsburgh.

This crisis has arisen because wages alone have been stabilized, while prices and cost of living continue to rise; and because recent decisions of the War Labor Board have been inconsistent with the basic policies of national economic stabilization and even with the Board's own announced policies.

Murray denounced particularly the Board's refusal to grant justified wage increases in the meat packing and West Coast aircraft industries—to eliminate wage inequalities and inequities and to aid in the prosecution of the war, as required by the government's own wage stabilization policy.

The CIO president also declared that allowance must be made for wage adjustments due to the increased cost of living resulting since May, 1942. He pointed out that the Little Steel formula increase of 15 per cent over January 1, 1941, does not compensate the workers for their present loss in real wages, since living costs have risen over 22 per cent since that date, and food costs by as much as 45 per cent.

The CIO, however, has nothing in common with those who would seek to use the present crisis to destroy the WLB, to unleash inflation and to hamper the war effort.

Murray pointed out that the CIO still favors preservation of the WLB as an instrument for furthering the war program; and that it approves wage stabilization as an integral part of the national economic policy to prevent inflation.

The demands of the CIO are therefore constructively intended to make the WLB truly effective and to achieve real stabilization of our war economy.

These demands include adjustment of wages to increased living costs, as mentioned; rectification of the injustices visited upon the packinghouse and aircraft workers; encouragement for wage policies resulting in increased production with corresponding increased earnings for the workers; and above all, stabilization of prices and other economic factors as well as wages.

Murray reiterated the most persistent demand of the CIO—that really effective price control, over-all rationing of all food and other necessities, and a fair tax program, must accompany wage stabilization, if we are to have the economic stability, without inflation, which victory demands.

Jobs For All

The folks who have been trying to drive a wedge between civilian labor and the armed forces, by urging the open shop after the war, etc., usually claim it's all due to their concern for the welfare of the soldiers when they return.

But now that Pres. Roosevelt has put forward serious plans for full employment after the war, and for expanded social security so none of the boys may come back to trudging the streets or selling apples, these same anti-labor propagandists suddenly forget all about their alleged concern for our fighting men.

The reports of the Natl. Resources Planning Board are designed to provide jobs and security for all, and a planned transition to full peacetime production. But Congress has cut off the NRPB appropriation, and nearly all of the big business press greets these plans with silence, ridicule or outright abuse.

Not so the CIO. True to the interests of the workers in uniform as well as overalls, it has long been fighting for jobs for all and real social security. And Pres. Murray has hastened to express the movement's wholehearted support for the general aims of the NPRB reports.

Murray warns that unless such planning for social security is done now, "millions of returning soldiers and war workers will be idle when war production ceases, and great quantities of material and food will be wasted."

The CIO therefore calls for immediate action by Congress "to enact a broad social security program and to give legal authority for the exercise of powers adequate to guide the transition to fill peacetime production."

The men in the armed forces have a fair test to distinguish false from true friends, by finding out what their proclaimed friends are actually doing to realize the objectives of these reports presented by Pres. Roosevelt to Congress.

Looking Ahead

By Len De Caux

THE National Association of Manufacturers is getting sensitive. It doesn't seem to like its union-busting propaganda to be called union-busting propaganda.

At any rate, the NAM director of public relations has taken exception to a previous column that refers to the "union-busting propaganda" of the NAM. He sends us some excerpts from a recent speech of NAM Pres. F. C. Crawford, and writes:

"I wonder if you have the courage to print them in your column."

It's hard to resist a dare, so here goes: (The NAM president's remarks will be in italics.)

"I know the NAM is the whipping-boy that labor czars trot out every time an unanswerable public charge is made against faulty labor responsibility.

"Let anyone rise to suggest that labor leaders should face their responsibilities and curb malpractices, and the speaker is labeled a tool of the NAM—a Charlie MacCarthy of big business."

If the NAM persists in putting out open-shop propaganda to shackle the unions and lower labor conditions—and if a speaker repeats such propaganda almost word for word—he's bound to be called a stooge for the NAM.

"No American is too hallowed, no hero too sacred to avoid the labor smear that seeks to whitewash their misdeeds.

"No amount of mud hurled at Rickenbacker will hide the fact that these leaders are afraid to face and answer the issues he raises. They profess to see sinister influences behind the Captain and, of course, NAM is the ogre.

"But again, let's trust the American public. They know that Rickenbacker, afloat on the Pacific, alone with himself and his God, shorn of all but the stern realities of life and death, must have come mighty close to the truth. Such a man—such an American—doesn't need an NAM—he doesn't need more than a native urge for self-preservation—to strike at the slackers in labor, management and government who imperil our national existence . . ."

This column has hurled no mud at Rickenbacker. It has given him full credit for his exploits. But at the same time, it has pointed out that his anti-labor speeches are "little distinguishable from the union-busting propaganda of the NAM;" and that he is himself a big business employer, as officer or director of six corporations.

The NAM officially demands the open shop, opposing even maintenance-of-membership clauses. Rickenbacker calls for open-shop conditions.

NAM leaders oppose New Deal social legislation, make propaganda against Roosevelt, want to cut wages by abolishing overtime pay, oppose any $25,000 limit for the rich, and blame the unions for nearly everything. So does Rickenbacker—and we haven't noticed him, or the NAM, getting after "slacker" employers.

Incidentally Rickenbacker was not alone on the Pacific. With him were three union men. Did not they, too, come "close to the truth"? Why is the NAM so singularly uninterested in their opinions? And how about the many CIO seamen who have had similar experiences and have come back praising labor? One of them was even 83 days on a raft. Maybe he came still closer to the truth.

"Rickenbacker has attacked absenteeism as sabotage. Most union leaders, instead of denouncing the practice too and seeking to stop it, simply try to smear a national hero's reputation.

"The issue which the unioneers refuse to face is whether the charge of absenteeism is true.

"Secretary of Labor Perkins says it's true. She tried before Congress to justify appropriations for her department by pointing out that absenteeism was increasing. The Rules Committee in the House has given right of way to 'work or fight' legislation. Even Mr. Roosevelt is publicly offering advice on how to curb absenteeism. So, Captain Rickenbacker is not the only one that's talking through his hat."

The above is simply untrue anti-union propaganda. Pres. Murray and all other CIO leaders have denounced absenteeism even more strongly than Rickenbacker and have taken the most vigorous measures to combat it.

But they, and Secretary Perkins, and the government, have pointed out that the workers themselves are responsible for only a small proportion of absenteeism.

Most of it is due to sickness, accidents, poor housing, inadequate transportation, fatigue from long hours, employer mismanagement and lack of production and manpower planning. The CIO is doing more than any other agency to remedy these basic causes of absenteeism.

Farm for Victory—Or Starve!

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Mar. 20—An acute food shortage faces American war workers—and our fighting allies—in 1943. Already it is being felt in many war industry cities. Unless corrected, it will be felt even more sharply as the 1943 harvest season comes around. Hunger faces America and the United Nations—and even starvation—unless something is done and done now to increase food production.

In earlier times, food shortages and hunger were taken as acts of God, to be expected every so often and accepted as part of the hazards of life. This food shortage, in the midst of America's greatest war of survival, is no accident. It is the act of men, men who have put their profits above their country, men who have failed or refused to see the need for all-out war production in agriculture—above all, men who have failed to plan.

These men are not the working farmers, who only want a chance to get into the production battle just as their fellow Americans among the industrial workers are in it. As CIO President Murray has pointed out, the fault lies in the basic approach to the food production job.

"Our food production goals are too low," Murray says. "Agriculture remains the last great industry unconverted to a war-time basis. The individual farmers of America are no more to blame for this developing food crisis than the city worker who cannot buy meat or butter. The farmer is himself the victim and Adolph Hitler is the chief beneficiary."

The production of food, a war material as important as tanks or planes, has not been put on a war basis. When manufacturers failed or refused to convert from civilian products to war materials, tremendous pressure was put on them, generated by the CIO, and in time, conversion was achieved. The auto plants started putting out war weapons; refrigerator plants, radio plants, electrical plants, steel mills were brought into line.

Peace as Usual

Not so with food. The same pressure that brought American manufacturers into victory production has not been generated on agriculture. American agriculture today is carrying on with much the same line of products that it turned out in peace time, despite the fact that many of these products and much of the total U. S. acreage, manpower and other productive equipment is either being wasted or not used at all.

This is not the farmer's fault. The American farmer, like the American worker, wants to win the war against Hitler slavery, wants to put every bit of strength and skill he has into the job.

The fault is in lack of overall planning, plus a minority of profit-mad corporation interests masquerading as the "farm bloc," and controlling the actions of Congress on the food production front.

Take an example of failure to convert agriculture to war needs. The U. S. has a two year supply of short staple cotton—the common or garden type. We also have a two year supply of tobacco.

Yet today, due to lack of planning and to the stranglehold the "farm bloc" has among Southern Congressmen, we are increasing the acreage sown to short staple cotton by 10 per cent over last year, of tobacco by 1.5 million pounds.

Waste Galore

Cotton (which we don't need more of) takes up 26 per cent of all U. S. farmland. It uses up more than two million farm workers and operators, over 21 per cent of all manhours spent on farming in this country. Cotton eats up fertilizer (more than two million tons) desperately needed for food crops.

It uses machinery, transportation, storage space—all needed for food crops.

Just as skilled workers were wasted when manufacturers dallied on conversion to war industry, so are skilled farmers being wasted today—again on the insistence of the "farm bloc" and again due to failure to plan.

It is estimated, by the CIO, by the National Farmers Union and by the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers (CIO) that up to 2.5 million small farmers are unemployed or only partly employed because they can't get capital for full use of their labor power, can't get machinery, fertilizer, etc.

The Natl. Farmers Union estimates that $1 billion lent to small farmers for equipment and rehabilitation would result in a return of at least $1.5 billion worth of food at present prices. The CIO, in the words of Pres. Muray; "endorses and pledges its full support to the Natl. Farmers Union in getting the food produced."

Farm Bloc Says No

But the "farm bloc" doesn't want these farmers in production, despite the war and the critical food shortages. It wants them kept out of "competition" with the biggest growers and the Wall St. land holders.

One government agency, the Farm Security Administration, has tried to put these farmers to work producing food for victory. Last year, it helped some 450,000 of them, chiefly by means of small loans, to get into production. Today, the "farm bloc" in Congress is trying to kill Farm Security by cutting off its funds.

Yet these 450,000 small farmers that FSA helped last year accounted for 36 per cent of the increase in milk output in the U. S., 27 per cent of the increase in dry beans (a staple war food), 10 per cent in chickens and eggs. They could account for even greater increases, if they were allowed to work at their job.

In addition to wasted farmers, we have wasted machinery, wasted farm labor in the midst of food shortages. Government officials estimate that farm machinery is idle one third of the time. Attempts to put through a pooling system on farm machinery met with loud squawks from the "farm bloc." Pooling, a system of credits, centralized repair systems, etc., are all needed to bring it into full use and production.

Idle Acres

We also have idle acreage, over and above the amount now being planted in crops that are not needed. According to estimates of CIO people who have studied the problem, there are more than 100,000,000 acres of land lying idle at the present time. The land is fertile. It needs only to be put to work to do its share in producing the food our country and our allies need for victory over the Axis.

Of course there are farm labor shortages. The "farm bloc" spends half its time (the other half is spent in blowing prices up to inflation points) crying about them. Numerous bills are offered to defer all farm workers from the armed forces, regardless of how this would weaken the army or how long it would postpone the offensive against Hitler Germany. Other complaints are made that factory wages and conditions are luring farm labor from the farms, with the scarcely veiled suggestion that factory wages must be reduced, conditions worsened.

The farm labor shortage again shows the need for planning. As CIO's Cannery and Agricultural Workers Union has pointed out, raise and stabilize farm wages, always the lowest of the low. If necessary, pay farmers subsidies to help them do this. Work out a proper recruitment and placement service, always chaotic in agriculture. Mobilize volunteers for harvest seasons. And above all, take farm labor out of non-essential crops.

Food Prices Zoom

The "farm bloc's" biggest drives are directed on food prices, with the heaviest artillery aimed at any attempt to stabilize the cost of food for the war workers and the entire country.

Three "farm bloc" bills in Congress today — the Bankhead bill (S 660), the Pace bill (HR 1408) and the Brown bill (HR 2002) — would raise food prices to the consumer by four billion dollars and more a year. OPA Administrator Prentiss Brown has said that they will wreck price control if passed. OPA ought to know. Certainly the workers know what another 10 or 15 per cent on food costs would do to food budgets, health standards —and productive efficiency on the war job.

Food price increases won't increase food production. Actually, farm prices have gone up close to 100 per cent since the start of the war in Europe in 1939. In January of this year farm prices were 15 per cent above the parity level that the "farm bloc" makes so much fuss over.

Organized workers have no quarrel with fair prices for the working farmer, any more than the working farmer quarrels with fair wages for labor. These new proposed hikes in food prices would benefit the corporation grower represented by the "farm bloc," not the small farmer.

The working farmer doesn't need and doesn't want inflationary prices on food. What he needs and wants is a chance to get into the production battle with full equipment, full use of manpower, acreage, labor and machinery.

While the "farm bloc" in Congress, acting for the corporations and not for the farmers, maneuvers for higher prices, it kills plans to use a few millions of dollars (few compared to the billions in price increases it seeks) to increase production.

Thus, the bloc killed an appropriation of $100,000,000 for incentive payments to enable farmers to grow more war crops — killed it over the protest of the Secretary of Agriculture that this would further reduce output of needed food crops.

Last year, the bloc crippled the Farm Security Administration by slashing appropriations, making it impossible to mobilize small farmers for victory production. Currently, it is trying to make it impossible for FSA to aid in recruiting farm labor from Mexico in the harvesting.

What To Do

Agriculture in the U. S. must be converted to a war basis. Food is as much a war weapon as anything else we make. Food production now is low—so low that serious food shortages already exist, worse will result if quotas are not raised and more food produced.

Our war workers, our armed forces, the armed forces and war workers of our allies, and the people of the countries the United Nations will liberate depend on America for the food that means victory.

What can we, as workers and people who want to win the war and want to keep our health for our war jobs do to help raise food production?

1. Demand total planning in agriculture as we are demanding in the all war production.

2. Fight the "farm bloc" in Congress, just as we fight the anti-labor bloc or any other defeatist group that seeks to halt the all-out offensive against Hitler.

3. Develop close unity with the working farmers through their bona fide organizations — as the CIO has developed close relations with the Natl. Farmers Union.

4. Demand strict price control, universal rationing to stop profiteering and distribute the food we have where it is needed.

5. Press for conversion of agriculture to war production the way we pressed for it — and got it—in manufacturing.

What Is The 'Farm Bloc'?

What is this "farm bloc"? Does it represent the real farmers of America — the working farmers—the way its spokesmen in Congress claim it does?

Actually, the term "farm bloc" is one of the biggest frauds ever put over. The "farmers" it represents are the corporation interests who own the huge processing plants, the enormous plantations, the banking firms that control vast acreage.

Labor has no quarrel with working farmers. It has every interest in common with them, the chief one, victory over Hitler.

Labor does quarrel with the "farm bloc," that raises prices without raising production, that pushes its inflationary demands through Congress, that refuses to convert agriculture to a war industry.

3 Basic Steps Are 'Musts'

Three basic steps are needed to put U. S. agriculture on a war industry basis, make it produce for the all-out offensive against the Axis:

1. Planning—to increase war food production quotas, cut non-essential crops.

2. Mobilization—to bring two million wasted farmers, wasted farm labor, idle farm acres, idle machinery into the production battle.

3. Stabilization—to stop "farm bloc" drive inflationary prices, pay subsidies where necessary for full production, keep farm manpower at work on its job.

Greatest of these is planning.

Act Now on Casablanca Decision to Invade Europe, UAW Urges

DETROIT, March 20—"To bring Hitler and his Japanese Allies to quick disaster, it is absolutely imperative that the decisions of the recent Casablanca conference be immediately carried out. Now, with Hitler staggering under the blows of our Soviet Ally, invasion of Europe to bring about the unconditional surrender of the Axis is imperative. Defeat for the Axis in 1943 is the battle cry of America's people and those of the United Nations."

That was the demand raised sharply this week by the Executive Board of the United Auto Workers Union, which warned that "against this program of victory sinister forces have moved into action."

"Anti-labor and Quisling groups are carrying forward a feverish campaign to block the decisions of the Casablanca conference—to hamper and hold back invasion of Hitler-dominated Europe—to bring about a 'peace' by negotiation with the mad dogs of Fascism," the Board declared.

"The conspirators against the unity and victory of the American people and the United Nations, the small but powerful groups desiring a negotiated peace with Hitler, have again been echoing Herr Goebbels' gospel of the communist menace. Again as at Munich, Hitler is being portrayed as the world's protector against the 'red danger' providing a 'protection' which entails the acceptance of Nazism by America.

UNITED NATIONS UNIFIED

"This bogey, which was successfully used to bring division, defeat and slavery to all Europe, is again being resorted to as Hitler sees the final defeat of Nazism spelled out in the unshakable unity of the United Nations and their peoples.

"Labor must do its full part toward overcoming the defeatists whose actions today threaten disaster not only to labor but to the whole nation. The program of Casablanca, to which our President has subscribed, must and will be made to prevail over that of the fifth columnists."

To help overcome the defeatists who would negotiate a peace with Hitler, the UAW promised in behalf of its members that they would produce to the utmost and would support to the limit "the President and the armed forces in every move required to bring the economic and military power of the nation to bear so that we may effect the early invasion of Europe and the unconditional surrender of the Axis powers in 1943."

CIO Relief Aid Rings Bell In One More City

Evansville, Ind., March 20—This is another American community which has recently learned the value of enlisting the active support of the CIO behind its fund drives for war relief and local social services.

Much of the success of the Evansville Community War Chest—which was substantially oversubscribed—was due to the cooperation and assistance of the CIO, War Chest Director Best Williams disclosed in a letter to CIO President Philip Murray.

"The CIO was well organized here in Indiana to handle their part of the job well," he wrote, "and it is a real pleasure for me to acknowledge the excellent support which was received from your area office of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief."

He expressed the hope that CIO cooperation would continue, "for it is one of the finest steps I can think of in continuing good relationships between not only war chests and labor, but between labor and management as well and between all groups working for the same humanitarian results."

More Pay For 20,000

Washington, Mar. 20.—A 5½ cent per hour general wage increase and maintenance of membership clause for more than 20,000 employes of nine iron ore companies owning some 90 mines in the Lake Superior region was ordered this week by the War Labor Board. Industry members of the Board dissented.

Prices and the War

Grade Labelling Issue Real Test for OPA

(FLASH—The CIO Cost of Living Committee met late this week with Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes to discuss prices of milk and pork chops. Full details next week.)

One issue which is going to test the mettle of Price Administrator Brown is the grade labelling of the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables.

Months ago the OPA announced that it would require grade labelling of the 1943 pack and would tie its program of price control to the grade labels on the cans. Grade labelling is an obvious necessity for any meaningful program of price control—unless you know what is in the can, it is useless to set a ceiling on how much may be charged for the can.

It is even more a necessity under any honest program of rationing. When the American people are being rationed to about three cans of fruit and vegetables per person a month, elementary decency requires that they should know what they are getting inside the three cans.

The government buys all its canned goods by grade. And the canners find it perfectly just and reasonable that the government should make its contracts on that basis. Nonetheless a considerable group in the canning industry finds it objectionable that dealings with the general public should have to be conducted on the same fair and aboveboard basis. They prefer to sell their goods by advertising ballyhoo that is not tied to facts.

These canners have mobilized their forces in an attempt to prevent the OPA from making good on its promise of grade labelling. Thus far their efforts have been unsuccessful.

But the fight is by no means over. There are persistent rumors that at the last moment Price Administrator Brown is reconsidering the OPA decision in the face of the manifold pressures that the canners' lobby is bringing to bear.

Not until the price program for the 1943 pack is actually announced will we know for certain whether the people or the canners have won the battle of grade labelling. In the meantime pressure from labor and consumer groups would be exceedingly helpful.

GOOD PRICE CEILING

Here is what the new price regulation does. It rolls back prices an average of 15 per cent (from 5 to 40 cents a pair); it sets up national dollars and cents prices (retail stores being divided into two classes, with slightly higher prices for the class of small stores); it provides for quality information or grade labelling; and it requires that both the grade and the price should be clearly shown on the stockings as well as listed elsewhere in the store.

As compared with the ceiling prices under the old General Maximum Price Regulation, the prices under the new regulation will save consumers about $50,000,000 a year. The savings may be greater, since under the old regulation the public did not know what the legal price was and could not protect itself against violations and prices in excess of the legal ceiling. Under the new regulation the public knows the ceiling prices, and for that reason the number of violations is likely to be negligible.

Says Labor Groups Stimulate Ideas To Boost Production

New York, Mar. 20.—The productive thinking of the typical American worker whose brain and hands are both busy on his job can be organized by means of labor-management committees, said Wendell Lund, director of the WPB'S Labor Production Division, in a speech given at the Conference of Social Work here.

"The war crisis called into action the inherent bond among the men who gather under the roof of any industrial plant," Lund declared. That bond exists in a converted alley garage as well as in a great institution covering thousands of acres.

CIO Mothers Turn Lobbyists, Visit Congress

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

A delegation of representatives of CIO's Blue Star Mothers spent four days in Washington last week. They lobbied Congress. They visited heads of government departments. They were received at the embassies of the United Nations. They ended up physically exhausted and convinced that the single most important win-the-war need of the United States is an overall plan to coordinate the war work of all government agencies.

They found absenteeism the burning issue of the week in Congress—but conferences at the Children's Bureau and the Office of Education revealed that lack of coordination between those offices and the Federal Works Agency, which disburses Lanham funds, was resulting in slow progress in meeting child care needs, one of the basic causes of absenteeism.

They found that the Congresswomen—most of whom they visited—agreed that the basic causes of absenteeism were lack of the most elementary provision for the human needs of war workers, but they found no coordinated attempt being made to face the problem and to meet those needs.

LACK OF PLANNING

The most vivid illustration of lack of planning came when a Department of Agriculture official revealed that food production goals for this year had had to be radically revised when the North African campaign was begun. Up to that time the Department of Agriculture had been planning only to meet our home food requirements and lease-lend obligations. They had not been planning for an offensive war.

At the Office of Price Administration the women registered their approval of the price orders on pork and rayon hose. They urged rapid extension of rationing. They asked for simple, understandable, price ceilings which volunteers could be trained to enforce. They discovered that aside from meat and soup, food price ceilings wil be on a markup basis and may change every time the retailer gets a new order from the wholesaler. In fact, unless the Department of Agriculture agrees to price ceilings on farm products when they leave the farm, all food prices are going to go steadily up.

The delegation felt that nationwide pressure on Wickard, Brown, Byrnes and Congress for a real program of price ceilings and rationing is urgently needed if the President's seven-point war economic program is to mean anything.

DELEGATION LISTED

Mrs. Faye Stephenson, president of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries headed the national delegation which included Mrs. Eva Taylor, president of the auxiliaries of the UERMWA; Mrs. Alice Neville, treasurer of the NMU auxiliaries; Mrs. Josephine Cabral of the Transport Workers auxiliaries; and Mrs. Mary Vessey, president of the Farm Equipment auxiliaries. The visitors had tea with Lady Halifax at the British Embassy and with Madame Litvinoff at the Soviet Embassy, and visited the Chinese and Mexican embassies to convey the greetings of CIO women to the women of the United Nations.

Best Bet of Week---Beans Down To 4 Points a Pound

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Dried beans are down to 4 points per pound this week. That is welcome news to all of us. Besides being a good meat substitute, beans have a favorite place all their own at the supper table. Although now you can buy baked beans in the can, you will be stretching your ration points many times over if you prepare that dish of piping hot baked beans yourself, and have at the same time a delicious nourishing bowl of bean soup for each one in your family.

Many of you may have visions of your stove going from eight to 10 hours at a time to turn out those brown juicy baked beans. Well, here is one way to fix baked beans that will save on your time and on your gas bill.

BAKED BEAN RECIPE

It would be a good idea to make a large quantity at one time since they can keep for several days in the frigidaire. Soak overnight one pound of dried navy beans in a good size pot filled to the top with water. If there is not enough water to cover the beans well, the beans will absorb the water and dry out. The next day add enough water to fill the pot again. The more water you use the more soup you will have. Put in an onion cut up fine for flour. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cover and cook until beans are tender, about 1½ hours. Pour off the soup. Mash ½ cup of the beans and add to the soup to thicken.

Fill a well-greased casserole with the remaining beans. Mix:
¼ cup finely chopped onion
¼ tsp. mustard
¼ tsp. paprika
½ tsp. salt
¾ cup water
2 tblsp. dark molasses
1 small piece of salt pork (if you wish)

Thoroughly combine and pour over the beans. Bake in a moderate oven 350 degrees for one hour and 15 minutes, or until brown. If you like your beans sweeter, add 2 tblsp. brown sugar.

VITAMIN A

In the last few columns we discussed the parts that the B and C vitamins play in a balanced daily diet. Another very important vitamin is Vitamin A (or carotene). Vitamin A is commonly known as the "blackout" vitamin, because it is so important in preventing night blindness. Vitamin A is important because it promotes growth, protects eyesight, helps prevent night blindness, helps the body resist infection, helps proper development of teeth.

Vitamin A is found in carrots, sweet potatoes, yellow cheese, apricots, prunes, liver, dairy products, yellow cornmeal and dried peas. Fortunately, Vitamin A, unlike Vitamin B, can be stored in the body and is not usually injured in cooking. Liver is a very rich source of Vitamin A, besides being an excellent source of the B vitamins.

One serving of liver—2 oz.—gives you your full daily share; ½ cup cooked spinach gives a full daily share; a medium sweet potato gives you a half of your daily share; one serving of carrots—½ cup—gives you a half of your daily share; and one serving of broccoli gives you almost a full share.

Use baked sweet potatoes instead of white potatoes whenever you can. Sweet potatoes contain all the vitamins and minerals that baked white potatoes do, in addition to a large share of Vitamin A. There is very little Vitamin A in the baked white potato. Think generally of yellow foods when you think of Vitamin A.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers, under the direction of Brother Walter Harris, came through with a very important victory at the Carborundum chemical plant in Niagara Falls. This is the group once affiliated with District 50 that wanted to maintain affiliation with CIO. A contract was in effect and after much patience on the part of the workers over a period of many months, the NLRB finally ordered an election. District 50 conducted a very costly campaign. The outcome was a victory for the UGCCWA over District 50 by a vote of 1,323 to 1,244. Other victories will follow this one.

The splendid victory lays the foundation for complete unionization of this very important industry in that area. Director Harris and all the organizing staff, local representatives as well as those from internationals, who cooperated, are to be congratulated.

The UGCCWA came through with another victory in New York City at Helena Rubenstein, where CIO got 167 votes to 57 for no union.

Boston Victories

Regional Director Francis Carmichael of Boston comes in with a swell job, well done, in an NLRB election at the United Drug Company in Boston, with a vote of 641 for CIO to 5. This local union at one time belonged to District 50. Brother Carmichael reports an additional victory at the Shawmigan Resins Corporation, Springfield, Mass., with a vote of 90 for CIO and none against.

Robert J. Davidson, director, District 6, MMSW, goes over the top at the Seth Thomas Clock Co., Thomaston, Conn., with a vote of 380 for CIO to 178 for no union.

James Dean, CIO regional director, shows it can be done with a victory at the Armour plant in Fort Worth, Tex., where CIO got 1,118 votes to 212 for no union.

Director of Organization of the IWA-CIO Adolph Germer, reports a victory at the Mill City Manufacturing Company, Salem, Ore., with a vote of 104 for CIO to 25 for no union. Regional Director C.H.Gillman of Georgia reports a victory at the Fox Manufacturing Co., Atlanta, with a vote of 150 for CIO to 79.

The United Steelworkers of America march on! Joseph P. Maloney, district director in Buffalo, comes through with an election victory at the Simonds Saw & Steel Co., Lockport, N. Y., by a vote of 383 for CIO to 133. W. H. Crawford, USA district director in Atlanta, Ga., reports a victory at the Columbus Iron Works, Columbus, Ga., where the USA-CIO received 141 votes as against 50.

UE Wins

James J. Matles, director of organization, UERMWA, sends in eight election victories, as follows: Luminous Process Co., N. Y., 69 to 17; American Pulley Co., Philadelphia, Pa., 246 to 189; Globe Forge & Foundries, Syracuse, N. Y., 168 to 3; Ready Power Co., Detroit, Mich., 32 to 19; Dayton Malleable Co., Dayton, Ohio, 294 to 287; Breese Bros., Cincinnati, Ohio, 53 to 13; American Bearing Co., Indianapolis, Ind., 228 out of 390 for the UERMWA on card-check; American Machine & Foundry, N. Y., 1,005 to 557.

Paul R. Christopher, regional director in Tennessee, advises that Textile Workers Director Joseph R. White reports that TWUA-CIO has been certified by the NLRB as the sole collective bargaining agency for approximately 230 employes of the M. M. Bosworth Co., Memphis, Tenn. Negotiations for a contract are scheduled next week.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers added another Tennessee victory by winning at the Salant & Salant in Martin by a vote of 224 to 70, so reports Brother Carl Albrecht, ACWA Southern director. This is a significant gain for the ACWA and is the second recent victory in two tough shops, the first being the 409 to 141 win at the Henry I. Siegel shop in Dickson, Tenn.

A splendid meeting was held in Detroit on Sunday, March 14, called by the Wayne County Council. It was one of the largest gatherings held in that city, the purpose of which was to discuss legislative matters and lay plans to effectuate labor's objectives and resist the cowardly, unfair onslaughts made upon labor by certain reactionary Congressmen.

Along with Brothers R. J. Thomas, George Addes, National Representative of the CIO August Scholle, Tom Owens, legislative representative for the URWA, I had the pleasure of addressing the conference and seeing the delegates in action. It is evident that the unwarranted, cowardly attacks made upon labor are awakening labor as never before, and while the workers are determined to produce more and more for our armed forces, they are also determined to fight against these unjust and unwarranted attacks and preserve the things here in America for which this war is being fought.

Clothing Workers Announce 1943 Wage Policy

NEW YORK, Mar. 20—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America this week made public its decision not to ask for a general wage increase for 125,000 workers in the men's and boy's clothing industry throughout the country when current agreements are renewed May 1 and May 15. However, the union reserved the right to request an increase any time during the coming year.

Expressing whole-hearted support of the seven-point program advocated by President Roosevelt for the complete stabilization of our national economy, the Amalgamated decision declared:

"At a meeting in New York City on March 11, the General Executive Board gave careful consideration to the question of the union's wage policy in the men's and boy's clothing industry for the coming period. Although the Board took note of the fact that there has been a substantial rise in living costs since the general wage increase which was secured last May, the Board concluded that no request for a general wage increase in the men's and boy's clothing industry should be made at this time."

Stone Union Pact Hikes Pay

Raleigh, N. C., Mar. 20.—A new one-year contract between the Bryan-Monroe Co. and Branch Number 40, United Stone and Allied Products Workers of America, was signed March 8. Sole bargaining rights, maintenance of membership, dues check-off, seniority accumulative for employes in military services, four hours' call-out time with overtime over eight hours are the principal provisions of the agreement.

Wages are increased five cents hourly, with reopening of rate schedules provided for in six months if cost of living warrants. The new rates are subject to the approval of the War Labor Board. Mediation and arbitration of complaints is provided for.

Representative Sam H. Scott and the local committee negotiated the pact.

Burmese Underground Leads Fight on Japs

CHUNGKING, March 19 (ALN)—The Burmese workers, who were unable to put up an effective resistance to Japanese invasion early in 1942 because most of their leaders were still imprisoned by the British, have now begun to fight back. From a reliable source this correspondent has learned of the formation in Burma of a new underground organization, provisionally called the "Co-United Nations Section of the Thakin Party." (Thakins are militant nationalists, many of whom went over to the Japanese at the time of invasion.) Many labor leaders who escaped from prison during the changeover are now active in this organization.

In order to get native labor to repair the oil wells, refineries, railways and bridges blown up by British and American engineers, the Japanese have had to resort to a combined policy of impressment and cajolery. Japanese broadcasters exert themselves over every radio station in Burma promising good treatment, high wages and comfortable quarters to anyone willing to help build new military communications—such as the projected highway from the Siam border to Moulmein. Failure of this policy is indicated by the following fact, related by a man who got out of Burma late in 1942: the huge seven-span Ava bridge across the Irrawaddy, destroyed by the British, is now being repaired by Japanese labor, not Burmese.

JAP PROPAGANDA

When the Japanese first invaded the country their propaganda achieved a certain success. The British authorities—following the great Yenangyuang oil strike of 1939 which lasted more than a year and led to sympathetic action by almost the entire working people—had suppressed most of the unions and imprisoned their leaders. Little was done to mobilize popular sentiment against the invaders. As a result leadership of the people was left to nationalist—and frequently pro-Japanese — Buddhist priests, who enjoy great prestige among the Burmese, most religious of all Southeast Asiatic peoples.

Japanese occupation found the modern economic life of Burma at a virtual standstill. The Yenangyuang oil fields, employing 25,000 Burmese and Indian workers, and the Syrian refinery, with 5000 workers, had been destroyed. The once busy ports were silent. Even Japanese ships were few and the export of rice, once so substantial, fell to almost nothing because the enemy could get it more easily and more safely from Indo-China and Java. This left huge stocks of rice to rot in the hands of the peasants, who were poorer than ever in the midst of plenty.

Among the silver, tin and wolfram mines, those worked by primitive methods soon resumed activity, but the modern teak sawmills slowed down to a snail's pace. With many important bridges destroyed and a shortage of once-imported coal, the railways as well as river and municipal transport were sharply cutrailed. Many Indian workers (the railways employed Indians almost entirely) tried to make their way back home.

BURMESE SURPRESSED

Within a few months the Japanese had suppressed the Burmese self-government committees, which had taken too literally the promise of national independence, and had disarmed the majority of the Burmese Independence Army, composed of misguided nationalists who had helped drive out the British. The Burmese saw that they had been tricked, and the Indians clearly understood what awaited their own country should the Japanese penetrate into it. The violent and arrogant attitude of the enemy toward the Burmese alienated all but a tiny minority of upper-class traitors.

One of the principal results of the campaign against the enemy has been to unite all nationalities among the workers in Burma (in the silver mines in the Shan States, 35 nationalities are employed and 16 languages spoken). Formerly the Indians, who formed a majority in the industries, were in constant conflict wthe the Chinees and Burmese workers.

Celebrate Women's Day In USSR

Kuibyshev, March 19 (ALN)—International Women's Day was celebrated this week by more than 10 million trade unionists. As long ago as 1939, before the replacement of men by women in industry began to take place on a large scale, there were 10,773,000 women out of 28,000,000 people gainfully employed in the USSR. More than nine million were trade union members, and 428,570 held elective posts in trade union bodies, from shop committees to the central committees of national unions.

Among several women on the executive committee of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions (AUCCTU) is Mary Kurkina, chairman of the central committee of the Linen Workers Workers Union, who for the last year has been in charge of the important field of labor protection.

Probably the most prominent woman in Soviet public life is Claudia Nikolaeva, one of the three secretaries of the AUCCTU. Nikolaeva has been a member of the organized labor movement since 1910, when she was elected to the executive committee of the printers' union at the age of 17. She is one of 189 women deputies to the Supreme Soviet, the USSR's highest governing body.

No over-all figures on employment of women have been announced since October, 1941, when it was reported that women made up 45% of industrial workers.

Full Text of Murray's Statement Urging Farm Credit to Hike Output

WASHINGTON, March 20—Warning that the nation is running short of food, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week pledged full support for the National Farmers Union plan of increasing production, and urged that the U. S. Government extend a one billion dollar government credit "to put more than a million farmers in shape to make full use of their land and manpower." Murray's full statement follows:

"We are running short of food. Black markets, empty shelves and exorbitant prices are a warning of what is ahead unless prompt action is taken. Military and lend-lease needs continue to grow larger while, as Mr. Wickard recently reported, the food situation continues to grow worse.

"Our food production goals are too low. Agriculture remains the last great industry unconverted to a wartime basis. The individual farmers of America are no more to blame for this developing food crisis than the city worker who cannot buy meat or butter. The farmer is himself the victim and Adolph Hitler is the chief beneficiary.

"CIO endorses and pledges its full support to the National Farmers Union program of necessary and practical aid to farmers in getting the food produced. It calls for a one billion dollar government credit to put more than a million farmers in shape to make full use of their land and manpower. It proposes pooling of farm labor and machinery and other steps geared directly to the wartime problems which farmers face.

Need Quick Action

"The time is late; farmers are already planning their 1943 operations. Even so it is possible to achieve a large increase in total food production if only quick and effective action is taken. Any increase in our food supply is necessary.

"While farmers out in the country wait for the assistance they desperately need, a Congressional group which calls itself the "farm" bloc delays action. It has been standing in the way of full farm production and opposing all efforts to convert agriculture to a wartime basis. For two years it argued that there was no need to increase farm output, despite growing war demands; now it badly seeks to pass the buck and to blame others for the food shortages that are menacing the country. Meanwhile the farm bloc continues to oppose every measure that would give real help to the farmers.

"In addition to the need for increase in total farm output, there is also the problem of shifting productive resources from less essential to more essential crops. At least one-third of our farm labor and farm resources are being used to produce crops non-essential to the war and should be shifted to vital war crops. We now have on hand a two year supply of short staple cotton and tobacco, yet we are increasing instead of decreasing production of these crops in 1943. So far only one per cent of our farm output has been declared unessential.

Cites Labor Problem

"The CIO is fully aware of the labor shortage which confronts agriculture just as it confronts many important war industries. The United Canning Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers, the CIO union of workers engaged in producing and processing of agricultural products, points out that the labor problem must be met in agriculture just as it is being met in other war industries.

"One-third of the farm workers, those now engaged in production of non-essential crops, must be shifted into essential production. An effective recruiting and labor placement service must be established for agriculture and the drain of farm labor into urban industry must be checked by raising and stabilizing farm wages, if necessary by means of wage subsidies to farmers.

"A mobile corps of experienced seasonal agricultural workers should be set up immediately to provide for this year's crop needs. In addition adequate training programs must be provided to supply skilled, year-round workers. Finally, the CIO offers full cooperation for the mobilization of volunteers to meet peak needs for labor in perishable crops. Such mobilization must be on the basis of real needs, not pressure from factories in the field desirous of attracting a large supply of cheap labor solely for the purpose of beating down local wages.

Inflation Ruinous

"Inflation will be ruinous to the farmers as well as to labor and the entire war effort. The rank and file of American farmers are well aware of this and are not campaigning for higher prices.

"'The present farm price level is about right to help production—neither too high nor too low,' states President James G. Patton of the National Farmers Union. "Prices must be stabilized at the present level. But within the list of farm prices, adjustments downward and upward are necessary in order to get the kinds and quantities of foods and fibers most needed."

"I know it seems strange, Gunther, but Hoover said there was some good stuff in it for my speech about regimentation and the farmers."

Textile Wins 2-1 Victory

Philadelphia, Mar. 20.—A two-to-one victory in an NLRB election held among the workers of the Franklin Process Co. has spurred the drive of the Textile Workers Union of America to bring the benefits of the CIO to the city's textile workers. The vote was 133 for the TWUA to 69 opposed.

The drive is focused on the 12 mills in the narrow fabrics division of the textile industry, reports Sol Stetin, TWUA organizing director for southern Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania.

The CIO textile union has already been certified as bargaining agency in two of the mills—the J. Sullivan Co., employing 300 workers, and the William D. Weimar plant, where 59 of 62 workers are signed up.

Union 'Airs' Finances; Press Silent

Philadelphia, Mar. 20.—The daily press of this city was strangely silent this week about one of the most unusual union stories ever to "break" here—a report on the financial status of the largest white collar union in the State, read over radio station WPEN to the union's membership.

The report came from the Insurance Guild of the United Office & Professional Workers Union, according to Regional Director Albert Shepard.

Included on the program, which stressed CIO-AFL and labor management unity for victory, were speeches by Joseph A. McDonough, president of the City AFL, and Benjamin Rush Jr., chairman of the Red Cross War Fund drive and an executive of one of the largest insurance companies in Philadelphia.

NMU Hits Shipments To Franco Spain As Aid to Axis

Washington, Mar. 20.—Twenty CIO seamen, members of the Natl. Maritime Union and all of them in from the North Africa run, the Atlantic run or the Russian run, came to Washington this week to tell the State Dept. and the War Shipping Administration about two serious beefs they had on their minds.

To the State Dept., the seamen, several of whom were torpedo survivors, brought a copy of a resolution passed at NMU port meetings protesting shipment of war supplies (oil, etc.) to Franco Spain, and their well grounded suspicion that they were being used against the United Nations.

At the War Shipping Administration, they voiced protests against the new war risk insurance policy of WSA that makes it impossible to get compensation for injury or death at sea unless directly due to enemy action. This new ruling, they said, bars compensation to men who die in life boats after their ship has been sunk, and also bars assignment of benefits in case of death to anyone but "blood relatives." Many seamen have their relatives in occupied countries, and cannot assign their insurance to them.

STATE DEPT. POLITE

The men were politely received at the State Dept., they said—and told that the department would gladly hear any evidence that oil to Franco was being handed over to the Axis. According to the men, they have seen Spanish tankers at sea in a condition very obviously indicating that they have recently unloaded their cargo—with more than a strong suspicion that it went to U-boats.

Just by way of pointing up the seamens' protests to WSA and the State Dept., the Navy announced this week that 288 U. S. merchant seamen were lost at sea during February. The known total between Sept. 1941 and March 1943 now stands at 3,905—most of them from the Natl. Maritime Union.

Murray Recommends:

Hike Output to Answer Attacks on Labor

WASHINGTON, Mar. 20—American labor can best answer viciously untrue attacks against it by showing the nation that the efforts of organized workers can boost production of the vital sinews of war our fighters need to crush the Axis, Pres. Philip Murray said this week in a letter to all CIO unions.

Citing the example set by his own union, the United Steelworkers of America, Murray said:

"This union has initiated a series of Regional conferences of representatives of the Labor-Management Committees of the various steel plants throughout the nation. These conferences will be followed by a National conference to be sponsored by the War Production Board. Through this means it is intended to revitalize and intensify the activities of Labor-Management Committees to increase and smash all steel production records.

"At the request of the Steel Division of the War Production Board, the Union has designated a Committee of its ranking officials to participate as an Advisory Committee of the Steel Division. Through this instrument every effort will be made to eliminate all obstacles in the path of increased steel production—the real causes of absenteeism such as poor housing conditions and inefficient scheduling of manpower and materials; the more effective utilization of manpower; and a more integrated scheduling of work and material.

"It is my urgent suggestion that each CIO affiliate immediately proceed wherever possible along the same lines. Labor cannot afford to waste any time in caviling or engaging in idle talk with those who, for one reason or another, do not appreciate the urgent need for increased production. Labor now has a single task—to use its utmost energy and resources for the marshalling of a total national mobilization of all the material of manpower resources of the nation."

Names Steel Labor Advisory Committee

Washington, Mar. 20—Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, today announced the appointment of a Labor Advisory Committee in the WPB Steel Division. The Committee, established to bring about further cooperation of labor and management in the steel industry, and with industry to promote the maximum production of steel, is composed of the following seven men, all officials of the United Steel Workers of America:

Philip Murray, president; David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer; Clinton S. Golden and Van A. Bittner, assistants to the president; Lee Pressman, general counsel; James J. Thomas, Executive Board member and director of Homestead District; and Joseph Germano, Executive Board member and director of Chicago-Gary District.

The Committee will work with Steel Division Director H. G. Batcheller, and with Harold J. Ruttenberg, research director of the Union, who has been assistant to the Director of the Steel Division since December 1.

Longshore Parley

San Francisco, Mar. 20.—The fifth annual convention of the International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union will be held at CIO headquarters here beginning June 4, Intl. Secretary-Treasurer Eugene Paton announced this week.

The opening of the convention falls on Thursday, chosen so that delegates could travel during the middle of the week when the passenger load is lighter. President Harry Bridges, who was authorized by the executive board to set the place and date, said that as much preconvention work as possible would be done to keep the time the convention meets to a minimum.

Decent Conditions Big Help In Cutting Absences, ACA Says

New York, Mar. 20.—Citing a survey of a particular company with which the American Communications Assn. has a contract, the union this week declared that abseenteeism as it relates to laxness on the part of workers is not a problem in the RCA Communications Inc.

"Except for absences due to illnesses, absenteeism is virtually non-existent," the ACA declared, pointing out that decent working conditions have played a large part in the splendid record.

Reasons given for the record include: Reasonable working hours, liberal vacations with pay, paid legal holidays, equitable wage rates, liberal sick benefits, free medical services, a group insurance plan, and stabilization of labor relations.

Carey Warns Of Danger Of Inflation

Washington, Mar. 20. — Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey of CIO warned this week in an American Forum national radio broadcast that the nation faces inflation if the anti-Administration forces continue their tactics of blocking legislation which will establish a controlled economy.

"It is high time for the people to awaken to their danger," Carey said. The issues now are basically the same as they were in 1932 or in 1936: Will the nation grapple efficiently with the immense problems confronting it, or will it permit the representatives of well-organized and well-financed representatives of the reactionary minority to chain wheels of democracy and progress?

"Labor agreed last year to the stabilization of wages, with the understanding that prices and profits would likewise be stabilized. The CIO has steadily urged its members to accept the decisions of the War Labor Board and to refrain from strikes.

"We respect our pledges and we expect others to do the same. But the patience of our members will not last forever. They do not consider a twenty per cent withholding tax on their pay an adequate answer to swollen living costs. Unless prices, profits and salaries are kept at present levels, wages too will have to be increased."

Example In Britain:

Cure For Absenteeism---Don't Just Holler; Attack The Causes

WASHINGTON, Mar. 20—England's struggle to maintain full production by reducing time lost through job absences has disclosed that workers and managements themselves can help most in eliminating voluntary absenteeism, the Office of War Information reports.

An OWI survey, based on official British government reports, disclosed also that an important contribution by the British government was the reduction of excessive working hours.

The large percentage of women war workers, many of them with arduous home duties, and the disorganization of family life even among the male workers are major factors in loss of working time, the reports revealed.

The OWI asserted that the findings closely paralleled those of U. S. war agencies which have been studying the same problem in various war industries here, and that most of the British suggestions, including self-policing by workers' organizations of thoughtless minorities and improvement of working conditions and transportation by managements, were applicable in most U. S. industries.

Summarizing their findings, the British state that during the year ending in June, 1941, labor wastage was high in some factories but low in others. It was higher for women than for men. Factors contributing to a high rate of wastage were:

1. The rapid expansion of industry and the employment of many workers, especially women, who were unused to factory work.

2. The employment of an increasing number of married women who found it difficult to combine factory work with home duties and family responsibilities.

3. The added strain imposed by travelling long distances to and from work.

4. The effect of air raids on home life and transport, especially during the latter half of 1940.

5. The lack of suitable facilities for meals in some factories.

6. The inadequate supervision of workers.

The general conclusions drawn were:

1. Time lost by factory workers through sickness, injury and ab-absence without permission, when undisturbed by extraneous factors, varies with the weekly hours of work.

2. The weekly hours of work over an extended period should not exceed 60 for men or 55 for women.

3. The workers were stimulated to an increased output after the fall of France and, while it was physiologically impossible to maintain the maximum level reached, output in nearly every case has since remained above the previous level.

4. The beneficial effects of a reduction in excessive hours of work, together with the inauguration of staggered holidays, were reflected in an increase in the rate of working afterwards.

Blast 'Work Or Jail' Bill

Wilmington, Del., Mar. 20.—A bill before the State Legislature providing fines and imprisonment for persons found "guilty of absenteeism" was sharply attacked this week by the New Castle County Industrial Union Council.

The Council, through Pres. Gilbert Lewis, pointed out that the "work or jail" bill does nothing to solve the conditions causing absenteeism, and is arbitrary, undemocratic and contrary to American principles."

INCENTIVES: The incentive poster of the Int'l. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Unoin, with a painting by world-famed artist Rockwell Kent, will be placed on docks and in warehouses. Betty Forrest is the hanger-upper and Rae Chaleff gives us a closer view.

Brass Hat Brainstorm --- Army Fights Unionists

CIO Eager For International Unity—Murray

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27—The CIO was ready for full working unity with the labor movements of Britain, the Soviet Union and all the United Nations over a year ago and is still eager for it today, CIO President Philip Murray told a gathering of foreign news correspondents here this week.

"We suggested our readiness to join with the labor movements of all the United Nations then in constructive collaboration for the successful prosecution of the war," he said. "This is also our attitude today."

This unity has not been created, he said, due to the attitude of the leaders of the British Trades Union Congress, who came here to deal exclusively with leaders of the AFL.

"The main barrier to United Nations labor unity is the traditional attitude of some of the leaders of the Trades Union Congress who prefer to adhere to aged relations with the AFL rather than assume the hazard of relations with all the labor movements of the world," Murray said.

Murray told of the visit of Sir Walter Citrine, secretary of the TUC, to himself and other CIO leaders, in which Citrine revealed the existence of the agreement with the AFL to shut out the CIO.

DISAPPOINTED BY CITRINE

"I expressed disappointment at the position of the TUC and repeated the desire of the CIO to join with the TUC and all United Nations labor movements in discussion of common problems," he said. "These problems are those affecting the war and the peace to follow the war.

"The attitude of the CIO is one of joining all labor movements to see that there shall be no more wars after this war is won and that we shall have a peace providing a better life for all people."

Murray added that he hoped the TUC officials' report to the next British convention would result in "some action to establish working relationships between the CIO and the TUC on a basis of equality with the AFL and all bona fide trade unions."

HITS AFL OBJECTIONS

Asked about the attitude of AFL leaders toward the unions of Soviet Russia, Murray said: "The CIO doesn't see any validity in the AFL's objections to collaboration with unions of the Soviet Union, and has said so publicly. If we are United Nations in fact we must be so in practice—not only in the relations between governments but in the relations between the trade unions of the United Nations."

At the same time that AFL leaders continue to block unity with the British and the Soviet unions, they have joined with the CIO in inviting Bernardo Ibanez, head of the Chilean Confederation of Labor and a vice-president of the Latin-American Confederation of Labor (CTAL) to this country, Murray pointed out.

He also said that the CIO was taking the lead in building Western Hemisphere labor unity, which he indicated would be a long step in the direction of full United Nations labor cooperation.

He revealed that delegates from the Canadian Congress of Labor, with which CIO is affiliated, and the Canadian Trades Union Congress, with AFL affiliation, are going to England at the end of March to discuss Canadian-British labor relations.

Keep Your Eye On Congress

Major attention in Congress this week focussed on CIO leaders' testimony before the Senate Truman Committee (on total mobilization), the House Labor Committee (on absenteeism) and the Senate Military Affairs Committee (on Austin-Wadsworth labor draft.) See stories, pages 5 and 6.

The tax debate started in the House as The CIO NEWS went to press, will continue three days. First major fight is on phony Ruml plan. (See story, page 5.) Reactionary Republicans are lining up Democrats to push plan through; labor and the administration are opposed. Both House and Senate have killed the $67,200 limit on salaries.

The Johnson bill (HR 1876) to push absentees regardless of cause was reported out of House Naval Committee, is waiting to go to the floor. The Hobbs union-busting bill (HR 653) is still active, waiting for floor vote.

On the food front, the Pace bill (HR 1408) to inflate food prices passed the House, was reported out of Senate Agriculture Committee. The Bankhead bill (S 729) to freeze farm labor passed the Senate, is now in House Military Committee.

Coffee Asks Probe Of Interest-Free Aluminum Loan

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27—An investigation of an interest-free loan of $68,500,000 made by Jesse Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corp. to Aluminum Ltd., Canadian sister corporation of Aluminum Co. of America, was called for this week by John M. Coffee, Democratic Congressman from Washington.

According to a story by I. F. Stone in the newspaper PM, an agreement was made by the RFC to advance $68,500,000 without interest to build a $65,900,000 power project at Shipshaw on the Saguenay river in Quebec.

Declaring that he planned to organize a bloc of Western Congressmen to demand an investigation into this agreement, Rep. Coffee said:

"I want to know, and I am sure the Pacific Coast wants to know, how Aluminum, Ltd., obtained such good terms, why this agreement was kept secret so long, and how Aluminum, Ltd. was able to proceed with its construction while some of our own vital public power projects were suspended or abandoned.

"I want to know just how many high priority items, refused our own public power projects, were made available to the Canadian and to the aluminum combine, how many of these items came from American companies, how many from Canadian, which American companies supplied these items, and whether the Canadian companies were subsidiaries of American companies."

The $68,500,000 given Aluminum, Ltd., the story in PM reported, is an advance against 1,370,000,000 pounds of aluminum to be delivered by Dec. 31, 1945. In case the war ends before then and the Government decides to cancel the contract, Aluminum, Ltd. will not be accountable for the balance.

"Shipshaw, paid for by U. S. Government funds," Stone declared, "will give the ALCOA'S international aluminum trust its most powerful weapon against our own new publicly owned and financed plants.

ACA Hails $5.60 a Week WLB Panel Award

New York, Mar. 27—A recommendation for increases averaging $5.60 a week for adult employes of Postal Telegraph, and $3.50 for some 400 route aides, made by a panel of the War Labor Board, was hailed this week by the CIO American Communications Association as a victory bearing out the validity of the union's case.

The panel's recommendation must be approved by the WLB before it goes into effect. John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Union Councils, represented labor on the panel, and Arthur S. Meyer, public representative, was chairman.

The wage increases recommended call for a 12½c an hour boost for all employes except messengers and route aids; 10 per cent raise for motor messengers; 7½c an hour for route aids and 3c and 5c for messengers, after three months' and one year's service.

Mr. Union Goes To Washington

Washington, Mar. 27—CIO members in Maryland take the warning, "keep your eye on Congress," quite literally. This week 63 of them under the auspices of the Md. and D. C. Industrial Union Council, converged on the Capital from points as far away as Cumberland to tell their Congressmen just what they thought about the way the war is being run.

The delegates, led by Council Sec.-Treas. Sidney R. Katz, met with Congressmen and other Federal officials and stressed the fact that CIO members from the hinterland are just as much concerned about total war mobilization as are the residents of Washington.

The delegation called for adoption of the CIO's legislative program, and also left messages with the British, Chinese and Soviet Union Embassies pledging cooperation and all-out production for what they described as the hoped for offensive in the West against the Nazis.

Murray Backs 'American Day'

Washington, March 27 — CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged CIO affiliates to cooperate with the "I Am an American" and Good Neighbor Foundations, which he said are sponsors of a program aimed at rededicating the American people to all-out support of the war effort.

Murray said that a national Victory Volunteers Committee will begin a patriotic campaign May 9, designating May 10 as labor day, and ending May 16, "I Am an American" Day.

Ask 48-Hour Steel Week to Help Boost Production

WASHINGTON, MAR. 27—A 48-hour week in the steel industry, replacing the present 40-hour week, was recommended this week to the War Production Board's steel division by a steel labor advisory committee, headed by Philip Murray, president of CIO and of the United Steel Workers of America. The eight hours after the first 40 would be paid for at time and a half, under Wage-Hour Act provisions.

Murray said that a USA survey has shown that the armed services have taken 186,000 workers from steel and steel-fabricating plants, of which 90,000 to 100,000 were from "basic steel."

Declaring that the industry faces a serious situation because of this drain and because of steady expansion of steel capacity, Murray said that the industry will need 50,000 workers in addition to the draft replacements. The advisory committee advanced the longer work week as the best way to meet the shortage.

Spread Ford Bomber Work To Hike Output, UAW Urges

DETROIT, March 27—Decentralization, through subcontracting a large portion of the proposed expansion of the Ford Bomber Plant in Willow Run, was today recommended by the UAW-CIO as being the only means by which the production output of the plant can be stepped up.

A comprehensive brief was submitted by George F. Addes, International Secretary-Treasurer of the Union and Director of the War Policy Division, to the Truman Committee which has been investigating the reasons why the vast sixty million dollar plant has failed to live up to production schedules.

Addes said "that on the basis of present housing programs, achievement of employment for 89,000 workers at the Willow Run plant is a fantastic impossibility," and urged "that agencies of the Armed Forces, together with all agencies of government concerned with the war production effort, immediately move forward along lines of decentralization."

IDLE FLOOR SPACE

Addes proposed that some of the tremendous idle floor space now available in plants of the automotive industry in the Detroit area be utilized for this purpose. He said, "If it is impossible to move 54,000 additional workers to Willow Run and provide housing for them there, then it will be necessary to move the plant in part at least, to areas where both housing and workers are available."

In support of the plan it is stated that in Detroit alone the Dodge, Chrysler, Plymouth and even the Rouge Plant of the Ford Motor Co., are using only a part of available floor space and in other parts of Michigan there is not only plenty of floor space but within a short time there is expected to be substantial supplies of skilled production labor.

The brief points out that "the choice is between concentration at Willow Run with no substantial production and decentralization with an early upsurge in the output of planes so urgently needed by the Armed Forces of Democracy."

Other recommendations submitted by the Union were:

1. That there be an immediate expansion of the Government's present proposed housing program so as to provide adequate shelter for at least those presently employed.

2. All vacant dwellings within the immediate vicinity should be commandeered for the duration and rented to war workers.

3. Rental status of tenants frozen and no more sale of houses permitted.

4. The entire area near the plant restricted to war workers only.

Profits Up, Living High, WLB Blind

Washington, Mar. 27—Disregarding soaring profits and skyrocketing living costs, the Nat'l. War Labor Board this week at a stormy meeting voted eight to four to reject labor's demand that the 15 per cent cost of living formula be readjusted upward so that the standard of living of workers would not be drastically cut.

The public and industry members of the Board composed the majority and the labor members united to form the minority. Voting against the ban on increased wages were: Van A. Bittner and Emil Rieve of CIO and George Meany and Matthew Woll of AFL.

The labor members declared that the Board's rigid adherence to an out-dated formula for determining wage increases amounts to freezing wages.

The labor members pointed out that the Board's position ignores some of the basic propositions which are supposed to govern its decisions—that wage increases may be granted when inequities, inequalities or maladjustments exist, or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

These reasons for increases have been ignored, the labor members said, and the raises that have been granted have been based only on the maximum allowable under the old 15 per cent formula.

Another Anti-Labor Pipe Dream!

Washington, Mar. 27—CIO Council Director John Brophy warned this week of a new anti-labor angle dreamed up in the Oregon Legislature.

The new law puts a six month time limit on wage claims by workers. As explained by Brophy, this can result in many workers losing out on claims for back wages, since they frequently are afraid to put in claims while still working for the employer that has gypped them, are ignorant of their rights under wage laws, etc.

Brophy warned Councils to be on the watch for this one in the current wave of anti-labor bills being promoted (and enacted) in many state legislatures.

Sign 3 More Textile Pacts

Charlotte, N. C., March 27—Announcement of the signing of three contracts this week with the Textile Workers Union of America by Southern cotton mills in as many states, was made by Roy Lawrence, southern regional director of the union. The firms and contract provisions are: Jennings Cotton Mill, Lumberton, N. C., model contract embracing closed shop, check-off and all the trimmings, 270 workers; Kendall Co., Mollohon plant, Newberry, S. C., usual provisions, vacation with pay and check-off, 720 workers; Profile Mills, Jacksonville, Ala., usual provisions, maintenance of membership and check-off, 500 employes.

Murray To Broadcast

Washington, March 27.—CIO President Philip Murray will be on the air Saturday, April 10, at 1:30 p. m. EWT over the Mutual Broadcasting System, speaking from here.

The broadcast will be Pres. Murray's speech at a conference on "War and Postwar Demands for Trained Personnel" called by the Institute of Womens' Professional Relations, meeting here at the time.

U.S. Probes Faked Steel Plate Tests

Washington, Mar. 27—The Dept. of Justice was investigating this week one of the most shocking episodes in the World War II conduct of private enterprise—the deliberate faking of tests of steel plate and the shipping of an estimated 28,000 to 36,000 tons of steel that failed to meet specifications, from the Irvin Works of the Carnegie-Illinois Corp., a subsidiary of U. S. Steel.

The faking was publicly admitted before the Senate Truman Investigating Committee this week, and workers who engaged in it said that they did so on instructions from high company officials.

Fraught with the possibility that this may be only the first of a series of exposures which would rock the nation, the sworn testimony showed that the chief specifications examiner for the Irwin Works had, by his own admission, made fake entries in test record books for steel that was destined for use by the Navy.

George F. Dye, supervisor of inspection for the firm, stated that he had been aware since last July that the mill "was shipping badly laminated and piped plates to the U. S. Navy and U. S. Maritime shipyards" and that "defective steel was being supplied on U. S. Treasury Lend-Lease orders."

He said that he brought the matter to the attention of superiors, but that they told him to "go easy on rejections."

'Draft Labor' Bill Foolish—Planning Is Need, Says CIO

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27—Congress heard from CIO leaders on two major war subjects this week—absenteeism and manpower in extended hearings before committees of both houses.

In the Senate, testimony on the Austin-Wadsworth bill for compulsory labor was presented by R. J. Thomas, president of the UAW-CIO and vice-president of the national CIO, by Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers, and Russ Nixon, Washington representtive of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers.

In the House, the Labor Committee heard testimony from Thomas, from Bittner, from John Green, president of the Marine and Shipbuilding Workers and Nixon. In addition, both President Murray and Green testified before the Truman Committee in the Senate on the whole question of central planning for total war mobilization. (See story and excerpts, pages 3 and 5.)

All the witnesses were sharply opposed to the compulsory labor draft in the Austin-Wadsworth bill, and opposed the Johnson bill (HR 1876) that would punish absenteeism by turning over absentees to local draft boards. All were equally emphatic in calling for a planned approach to both problems, urging that they be treated as part of the whole problem of complete mobilization for total war and in asking passage of the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bill.

THOMAS TESTIFIES

Pointing out that compulory labor is the main prop of the Nazi war economy, Thomas declared: "In truth the chief bottleneck to our maximum war effort at the present time is still the lack of a national production program which provides for the smooth flow of materials, the letting of contracts, the maximum use of machinery and manpower. We cannot avoid the same conclusion reached by the Tolan Committee when a national service bill was discussed last year, namely that such legislation is a 'confession of weekness and inadequacy.'"

Thomas put a finger on sponsors of such bills as the Austin-Wadsworth measure when he said: "The impetus evidently comes from large-scale employers who want a surplus of workers to whom they can continue to pay sub-standard wages."

Speaking before the same Committee, Van A. Bittner emphasized problems of housing, health, shopping facilities, transit etc. in connection with the manpower question, and pointed out that a coercive bill would not make any approach whatever to their solution.

"Passage of the bill would on the one hand lull the nation into a sense of false security with the notion that we had solved our manpower problem when in fact we have not even tackled it. The Austin-Wadsworth bill will not, and does not pretend to solve any of these problems," he said, urging passage of the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bill as a real contribution to war efficiency.

GREEN ON ABSENTEEISM

Green hit out at the "campaign of abuse" of labor on the absenteeism question, declaring that it has resulted already "in a general lowering of morale." He also urged a rational approach to the real problems of absenteeism.

Many of these causes could be handled adequately by joint committees if they met with a sufficiently sympathetic response from the local and federal government authorities which have the power to remedy the evil," he said.

In a brief appearance before the House Labor Committee, Eleanor Fowler, secretary of the CIO Womens Auxiliaries, outlined the steps taken in England to help women workers stay on the war job, including child care, special feeding and shopping arrangements, and the like.

Nixon charged in his testimony on the labor draft bill that the measure "is actually an alternative to taking constructive steps necessary to effectively mobilize manpower. . . . There has been no case made for the necessity of compulsion. Proponents of this bill have not pointed out a single instance where it was the lack of compulsion that actually caused a problem of labor supply."

Murray Demands:

Mobilize Men, Machines, Farms To Kill Fascists

(See Excerpts—Page 5)

WASHINGTON, Mar. 27—The U. S. cannot afford the luxury of an "idle machine, idle man or an idle acre of land" if we are to carry on the offensive against Hitlerism, Philip Murray told the Truman Committee of the Senate this week in the course of lengthy testimony on the whole question of total war mobilization.

Murray's statement, which covered the entire question of planning for total war and of mobilizing all our resources and all our people, contained a strong plea for passage of the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill (S 607) and strong arguments against coercive measures such as the Austin-Wadsworth labor draft bill, the Hobbs bill and the like.

In their place, he urged a rational approach to the question of total mobilization through total planning, stressing the fact that "time is short," and that the offensive must be carried through to complete victory over the Axis.

"We have not viewed this war as a total war," he said. "Our enemies have. Certainly today we must recognize that total war is not limited to the military battlefield. Total war demands a complete mobilization on the domestic front as well."

DEMANDS STABILIZATION

Reviewing the failure to carry out the President's seven-point victory economy program, Murray reiterated CIO demands for real stabilization, to include rigid price fixing, adequate taxes based on ability to pay, universal rationing, increased wages to keep up health and efficiency standards of war workers, and other steps to gear the country's resources to the needs of total war.

MOBILIZE MEN

Murray bluntly told the Senate Committee that we have not achieved national unity, despite the desperate need for it. "As a nation, we have a concrete and accepted national policy," he said. "As part of the United Nations we are engaged in an implacable struggle until we achieve unconditional surrender.

"But either through ignorance or selfish reasons, there are individuals or groups among us who refuse to accept such a policy and instead take advantage of problems and hardships which necessarily must flow from our war effort to advance their special causes although they lead to disunity, confusion and disruption."

HITS LABOR-BAITING

As if to underline Murray's warning, some members of the committee—notably Senator Brewster, Maine Republican—attempted a labor-baiting line in the questioning that followed the testimony.

Brewster was terribly concerned about the problem of the unorganized worker and his "right" to stay out of a union—thus escaping the burden of paying union dues and receiving union wages. He was also worried about "diverting our energies by organizing these unorganized workers."

Murray's answer to this was simple. "No organization of workers has in any way impeded war production," he said. "On the contrary, the record shows that where labor is organized, and where you have labor-management cooperation, production goes sky-high."

Murray also attempted to calm Brewster's fears about union dues, pointing out: 1) That CIO dues were uniformly low and, 2) that CIO unions made their financial reports open to public inspection at all times.

SENATORS UNCONCERNED

None of the Senators on the committee showed much desire to talk over the real problems presented to them in Murray's testimony—problems of winning the war in the quickest possible way. Those who asked questions—Brewster, Ball of Minn., Ferguson of Mich.—were much more concerned with the "labor problem," by which they meant labor's right to organize, collect dues to run unions with, win contracts from employers.

AFL Pres. William Green, who also testified, helped them out by dragging a long and bitter discussion of the beef at the Kaiser shipyards into his testimony. This provoked an hour's talk on jurisdiction, while war planning was forgotten.

'Taxes to Win', New Pamphlet

Washington, March 27.—"Taxes to Win," CIO's newest pamphlet on the need for a real win-the-war tax bill in 1943, contains CIO's tax program adopted at the last Executive Board meeting and the discussion at the Board meeting.

The discussion was led by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel and J. Raymond Walsh, director of research and education. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. Price: 100 for $2.25; 500 for $6.75; 1,000 for $13.

The Ruml Plum

The Ruml plan is a snare and a delusion.

The CIO is 100 per cent in favor of the pay-as-you-go principle. It is urging Congress to adopt proposals whereby workers can pay their current tax obligations through deductions each payroll period throughout the year—instead of having to pay them all at one time and a year late.

But that isn't the big idea of the Ruml plan—not by a long shot.

All the big business interests and their press are spending good money to promote the Ruml plan, because they hope to put in their thumb and pull out a nice juicy plum.

The big idea of the Ruml plan is to provide big cash windfalls for the rich through cancellation of 1942 taxes. Any pay-as-you-go features added later are purely incidental.

If the Ruml plan is adopted, the rich will benefit automatically by cancellation of taxes for a year of extremely high profits. At the time of death there will be particularly large windfalls for the estates of the wealthy—a saving of a whole year's taxes.

Moreover, the savings will be much larger proportionately for the rich than for the poor. The Ruml plan means a saving of $64,000 or 64% on an income of $100,000, as against a saving of $140 or only 7% on an income of $2,000.

The House committee's proposal is no solution either. For it would require a worker to pay two years' taxes this year in order to become up-to-date on his taxes.

The real solution is that proposed by Pres. Murray, on behalf of the CIO, and embodied in the Robertson-Forand proposal—namely to limit the cancellation of 1942 taxes to a single low level, such as the normal tax and first surtax bracket.

This will enable all lower-income taxpayers to go on an immediate pay-as-you-go basis, without unjustified windfalls for the wealthy. Urge your representatives in Congress to vote down the Ruml plum, and to adopt this real pay-as-you-go plan.

The Unorganized

Some Senators who questioned labor leaders Philip Murray and William Green, when they appeared before the Truman committee, exhibited a curious but most persistent interest in "the unorganized."

They wanted to know if some 25 million unorganized workers were not worse off than the organized workers—and conceded that they were.

They wanted to know how these unorganized fared before the War Labor Board; and whether the government should not give them the kind of protection the unions give the organized.

Finally, they seemed to want to "protect" the unorganized from organization, by suggesting an end to organizing for the duration.

All of which reminds us of the government official who once said: "I see the CIO, the AFL, the railroad Brotherhoods and other unions are represented here. But how about a representative of the unorganized?"

Neither he nor the Senators seemed to realize there is no way the unorganized can be represented. They are voiceless, because they can have no spokesmen without organization.

Many politicians, employers and the like will falsely claim to speak for them. But true representation requires election of representatives, and that in turn calls for organization of some kind. So "representation of the unorganized" is a contradiction in terms.

What were the Senators driving at then? Do they want the government to "destroy free enterprise" by going into every plant to fight for the unorganized (as unions do for their members) by handling their grievances, demanding better conditions, and taking up their cases for higher wages? We doubt it.

Or do they think the government should everywhere raise the wages of the unorganized to the level of the organized? That would be too great a favor for labor to expect from the none-too-pro-labor Senators who asked the questions.

Or were they just being demagogic then? Perish the thought.

We're frankly puzzled. For if these Senators are really concerned about the unorganized, the only way they can aid them is by helping them to organize—which they oppose.

But, whether these proclaimed "friends of the unorganized" like it or not, the CIO will show its real friendship, and its patriotism, by continuing to offer the benefits of organization to the unorganized, so they may play their full organized part with full voice in the promotion of our war effort.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

"How much longer can be continue on the assumption that somehow we shall muddle through?"

That was Philip Murray's leading question to the U. S. Senators, when he appeared before the Truman committee to investigate the national war program.

The CIO leader cited instance after instance of muddling in production, manpower distribution, food supply, price control, wage stabilization, etc.

In every case he put forward practical proposals to remedy such muddles—all of them fitting into the pattern of labor's most insistent demand for total war mobilization and over-all planning.

Production of war materials is reaching unanticipated proportions, Murray pointed out, due to labor's efforts.

But far greater production is necessary for victory. This is increasingly threatened by present muddling.

There is no central and planned control of scheduling of material, manpower and plant facilities. The War Production Board, War and Navy Departments, War Manpower Commission have overlapping jurisdictions and frequent friction.

Results: Over-production of some materials, under-production of others; shortages of labor here, hoarding and over-supply there; unused small plant facilities, due to concentration of war orders with big concerns.

Murray told of plants where thousands of war workers have been laid off, due to such muddling, and of other plants that are being used to only one-half or one-third capacity.

He warned that the present absence of over-all planning and control will lead to hundreds of thousands of essential war workers being without jobs by late summer or fall.

As to food production, Murray pointed out that "agriculture remains the last great industry unconverted to a war-time basis."

Production of non-essential crops like tobacco and cotton has been increased tremendously. This has led to a shortage of farm workers for the more essential crops.

Meanwhile the big business "farm bloc" presses for price increases, through the Bankhead and Pace bills, that will raise living costs about 20%. And the interests of the small farmers, who could add so much to our food production, are neglected.

Murray called for incentive payments to farmers for increasing production of essential crops, and for more funds for the Farm Security Administration to aid small farmers to maximum production.

Inflation is one of the most serious dangers that threatens as a result of present muddling and lack of planning.

Labor is compelled to ask higher wages and the scrapping of the Little Steel formula—which one of the Senators appropriately referred to as "the Little Wage formula"—because only wages have been stabilized, while prices and living costs have remained uncontrolled.

Solution: Stabilize prices by over-all rationing and rigid price control. Enact a fair tax program, by taking money from inflated profits and surplus wealth and leaving workers with enough income for health and productive efficiency.

Murray quoted the profit figures of the United States, Republic and Bethlehem Steel corporations. The war profits of these three companies alone in the last three years, after taxes and after extravagant depreciation reserves, will amount to about half a billion dollars.

Yet Congress tenderly protects such war profits from adequate taxation, while it concentrates on soaking the poor to the limit.

What's more, it has thrown out the President's $25,000-a-year limit—as if to emphasize that wage ceilings are only for the poor, and not for the rich.

The steelworkers' wages have been kept down by the Little Steel formula. But not so the wages of Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel. He's had a nice little wage boost of $60,000, Murray noted, from $478,144 a year in 1940 to $537,724 in 1942.

What's the chief step necessary to change from the present muddling and injustices to real planning and war efficiency?

Adopt the proposals of the Tolan--Kilgore-Pepper bills. That's the answer of Murray and the CIO and of the more far-sighted members of Congress.

This means setting up an Office of War Mobilization to coordinate all present government activities for production and manpower planning and economic stabilization.

Such centralized planning and control is absolutely essential if we are to mobilize all our material and manpower resources, and to organize our whole economy on the most efficient possible war basis.

Excerpts from Murray's Truman Testimony:

Mobilize Men, Machines, Land to Smash Fascism

Describing the nation as still lacking the complete mobilization necessary for speedy victory over the Axis, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week told the Senate Truman Investigating Committee that we must fully mobilize men, machines and land if we are to contribute our share to the United Nations' fight to crush fascism in 1943. Excerpts from Murray's testimony follow:

A realistic evaluation of our present situation on the domestic front compels the conclusion that we are a considerable distance removed from the achievement of national unity and complete national mobilization. As a nation, we have a concrete and accepted national policy. As part of the United Nations we are engaged in an implacable struggle until we achieve "Unconditional Surrender."

But either through ignorance or selfish reasons, there are individuals or groups among us which refuse to accept such a policy and instead take advantage of problems and hardships which necessarily must flow from our war effort to advance their special causes although they lead to disunity, confusion and disruption.

Labor did not wait for Pearl Harbor to understand and act upon the issues involved in the war. Labor has not halted by the wayside considering questions as to whether sacrifices should be made in this titanic struggle against the fascist forces.

It was the CIO which over two years ago enunicated the industry council plan. This plan did not seek to accomplish any special benefits for labor. It was designed solely to achieve greater production of materials of war. It sought to forge a unity among management and labor and government to obtain a maximum mobilization of material and human resources.

Not An Idle Man . . .

Under the plan, management and labor, in each industry, with the participation of government and through the top control of scheduling and planned production would have achieved a complete marshalling of all of our power directed toward maximum production. Our basic premise then —as it is today—was "Not an idle man, not an idle machine, not an idle acre of land."

The contribution of labor is unchallenged. Regardless of provocation in many situations, regardless of cause or justification, labor has given its promise, its absolute bond that there shall be no stoppages of work, no interference with the absolute goal of maximum production of war materials. This policy has been maintained without legislation, without threats or penalties—but through the choice of free men determined to remain free.

From the very initiation of our national defense program this nation has not been afforded the opportunity of carrying through a total mobilization of all our resources. We have not viewed this war as a total war. Our enemies have.

Far Short of Goal

We are far short of a complete and total mobilization of all our resources—material and manpower. For this reason, great as our accomplishments have been, they are not what they can and must be through a total mobilization. On the production front we still have a confusing overlapping of administrative agencies with constant recurring jurisdictional fights among them and an absence of centralized and planned control of scheduling of material, manpower and plant facilities.

Agriculture remains the last great industry unconverted to a war-time basis. The individual farmers of America are no more to blame for this developing food crisis than the city workers who cannot buy meat or butter. Our approach to date because of the pressure of the alleged "farm bloc" has been confined to the raising of prices of farm products with the hope that this will result in increased production.

But compare that type of legislation with the proposals that have been submitted by the National Farmers Union and supported by the CIO (a) to provide incentive payments to farmers for increasing production of essential crops, and (b) to provide adequate appropirations for the Farm Security administration to assure maximum production of food crops by small farmers and to continue its program of training and transporting farm workers wherever necessary with protection of wage standards and minimum requirements of health and housing conditions.

President Roosevelt called for a 1942 tax program which would meet in part the financial burden of the nation through increased taxes on those who can best afford to pay. Instead, the 1942 tax legislation became a device to "soak the poor and spare the rich." This will result in actually preventing low income groups, because of their increased tax burden, from having sufficient funds to buy the necessities of life and to maintain a high productive efficiency level.

Let me cite you a few figures from the steel industry. The average net profit, after taxes, over the period 1936 through 1939, inclusive, might well be called peace-time standard. There is not supposed to be any war profiteering.

Let's see. The peace-time average for the United States Steel Corporation was $48,500,000 in round figures. In 1940, the United States Steel Corporation enjoyed, after taxes, $53,600,000 in excess of its peace-time average. In 1941 this excess war profit was $67,600,000. In 1942 this war profit was $23,500,000. Mind you, these are figures in excess of the peace-time average. Also, in 1942 an additional $25,000,000 had been set aside for special contingency—an item that had not appeared in previous years.

Republic Steel Corporation had a peace-time average between 1936 and 1939, inclusive, of $9,300,000. Its war profit, or its excess over the peace-time average, was $11,800,000 in 1940; $14,700,000 in 1941; $7,800,000 in 1942. Also, in 1941 it set aside a contingency of $8,000,000.

The Bethlehem Steel Company had a peace-time average of $19,000,000. Its war profit, or excess over peace-time average was $29,800,000 in 1940; $15,500,000 in 1941; $6,500,000 in 1942. In 1942 the Bethlehem Company set aside $12,800,000 as a special coontingency item.

Pay Affects Work

The CIO has been consistently in favor and has encouraged the adoption of wage policies which will result in increased production with corresponding increased earnings for the workers. Such policy requires, however, the most careful protection to the workers so that their efforts for increased production to further the war effort will not result in merely inflating profits for industry or in the lack of employment because of poor scheduling or shortage of materials.

Therefore the situation which we now have is this. The wage stabilization policy has been efectuated; more, it has been abused by the National War Labor Board in specific cases. The CIO still maintains that the National War Labor Board, as an instrument for furthering the war program, must be preserved. The Board was established as an instrument to assure the disposition of all industrial disputes that may arise and which could not be settled through mediation or collective bargaining in order to assure continuity of production in the interests of the war effort. For this reason its operation must be continued.

However, the wage stabilization policy is an integral part of the national economic stabilazation program. We must have effective price control and the application of an overall democratic system of rationing of all foods and other necessities.

Hits Unlimited Income

In the face of this need, I assure you it is most discouraging to the workers and disastrous to morale for best production and efficiency to witness Congress run rampant on the issue of limiting salaries—after taxes and other liberal allowances—to a "mere pittance" of $25,000 a year, while the workers have voluntarily accepted a stabilization of their wages. The legal niceties as to whether this limitation should be imposed through Executive Order or through tax legislation do not appeal to those who are meeting their sacrifices and their burdens in the interests of furthering the war effort.

Absenteeism is but the result of a number of causes to which no attention has been addressed. We know that because of the unplanned and chaotic issuance of contracts we have created large areas of tremendous overcrowding of people. This has resulted in appalling problems of transportation, poor housing, conditions giving rise to ill-health and disease.

We have brought into American industry millions of women, many of whom have children who need child care facilities while the mothers are at work. But no facilities have been created.

Labor Draft Useless

Of what conceivable use is it to draft manpower when we have people who have been laid off and anxious to work? We have firms still producing unessential goods. Of what conceivable use is it to draft manpower when there are still available people to go from nonessential plants to essential industry? We still have a chaotic wage condition with inequalities and inequities. How can we continue to maintain a high degree of morale and freeze workers with all such prevailing inequalities?

We still have areas which need more manpower, but where there aren't sufficient homes to take care of them or any health facilities or transportation facilities. Some people may call it "coddling the workers" to think of these problems, but you can freeze, draft and assign workers until you are blue in the face, but will you get workers to these places in the face of these conditions?

We know we have not utilized all of the women manpower and Negroes who are still available for work. Of what use is it to talk about freezing or drafting manpower until we have effectively broken down the discriminatory practices which bar women and Negroes or other minority groups form obtaining work in essential industries?

The CIO is therefore necessarily and unalterably opposed to the Austin-Wadsworth bill. It will accomplish nothing except to inject the basis for dissension and disunity and freeze chaos, whereas what we now need are concrete legislative steps for the accomplishment of total mobilization, thereby assuring the forging of an unshakeable national unity.

'Freeze-Chaos' Bill

Our time is short. Our Commander-in-Chief has fixed the sights for the nation. The offensive initiative that has been grasped by the United Nations must not be lost.

Our task is on the production front. We must have an end to all of the internal bickerings and petty cavilling at non-essentials. All peace-time policies and measures and practices must be discontinued at once. We must place ourselves upon a clear-cut and total war basis. This requires a complete national total mobilization. How is it to be done?

After an extensive and exhaustive investigation made by this committee and other Congressional committees, specific legislation has been proposed known as the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills. These bills if enacted into law will accomplish the end we seek. The proposed legislation would establish a war time organization under a single unified civilian command. It proposes to create a single Office of War Mobilization to embrace the activities of war supply, war manpower and of economic stabilization.

It is therefore our considered judgment that to meet our obligation and the needs of the United Nations, this Congress should swiftly enact into law the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bill. That must be our answer to the challenge which has been issued to the United Nations in our all-out struggle for survival against our Fascist enemies.

CIO Analysis Blasts Illusions on Ruml Plan

Washington, March 27—Anybody who still has any illusions left about the Ruml plan should study CIO Pres. Murray's letter analyzing the plan sent to all Congressmen this week.

The letter was sent as debate on the Ruml plan—which labor and the administration are opposing as a windfall for the rich and a serious loss to the U. S. Treasury—began in Congress, with Republican and Democratic reactionaries ganging together for passage.

Describing the Ruml plan as "deceptively attractive," Murray cited a few simple comparisons to show how the rich would benefit exclusively under the plan, while the low income groups received almost no benefit, or at best a very small rebate, on their 1942 taxes. According to Murray's letter:

THE FACTS

1. The man with an income of $100,000 a year would be forgiven taxes amounting to $64,000—one with $1,000,000 a year would be forgiven $850,000. For the 100 grand man this amounts to the equivalent of two years income after present taxes, for the millionaire six years.

2. The man with an income of $2,000 would be forgiven about $140—or less than one month's income.

In place of the phony Ruml plan with its special benefits for the rich and the serious loss of revenue needed to help win the war, Murray proposed a real pay-as-you-go collection system.

Murray called on the Congressmen to vote against the Ruml plan and to enact a collection system to "limit the amount of cancellation for all taxpayers to a single low level, such as the normal tax and the first surtax bracket. This program would eliminate excessive burdens on those truly unable to bear them. It would place on a current basis an overwhelming percentage of the American people."

President Murray has written to the Congressmen. Have you?

Wrong 'Rights' Amendment On Deck—Labor Must Act!

The "Equal Rights" Amendment, one of the oldest pieces of anti-labor legislation before the Congress, is in danger of passing both Houses in 1943 unless organized labor and women's groups institute a drive to defeat it.

Introduced 20 years ago, the amendment has paraded since then as a worthy measure to abolish discrimination against women in the 48 states and territories. It reads:

"Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction."

Active champions of the bill have been limited to members of the National Woman's Party, a small and reactionary group who openly advocate the abolition of laws regulating the hours, wages and working conditions of women working in intra-state commerce.

SENATORS MISLED

Misled by the phrase "equal rights," men like Senators Kilgore and Pepper, who could not be in any sense called anti-labor, have gone on record for the bill because their labor constituents have not opposed it, and because of the incessant visits of the Woman's Party.

The bill is at present before the House and Senate Judiciary Committees. Unless the voice of the opposition is heard on it, it is expected to be reported out favorably by the Senate Judiciary.

The passage of the phoney "Equal Rights" Amendment would mean that the laws which organized labor has fought for 100 years would be obliterated at one stroke. State hours laws limiting women's work to eight, ten and 12 hours a day would go. So would minimum wage orders in the service industries and other occupations in intra-state commerce.

Maternity provisions, widows pensions, all laws that differentiate between, not discriminate against women—would be thrown out as unconstitutional.

THE CIVILIAN WAR FRONT

CIO members who have unanswered problems about rationing, price control and other factors affecting the cost or standard of living should write for information in the CIO Cost of Living Committee, 718 Jackson Place, N.W., Washington, D. C. Members of the committee are: Chairman J. Raymond Walsh, Leo Goodman, Donald E. Montgomery and Russ Nixon.

By THE COST OF LIVING COMMITTEE

With the War Labor Board rejecting labor's request for a change in the "Little Steel" wage formula, attention was focused this week on the quality of OPA price control.

Labor people who looked into OPA policies and OPA administration were greatly disturbed by what they found. There seems to be a tendency either to surrender positions to the enemy without putting up any contest or else to wage sham battles without the intention of winning.

When Prentiss Brown took office in January, his first words were that the cost of living was bound to rise at the rate of one half of one per cent a month.

Labor and consumer groups saw in this an invitation to merchants to raise their prices without objection from OPA. With everybody starting to raise prices, the retreat from price control would quickly become a disorderly rout.

In reply to protests, Mr. Brown later explained that people were drawing incorrect conclusions from his words, and asserted that he would enforce price control to the limit of his authority. This seemed reassuring until a deluge of statements started to issue from OPA about the new policy of "voluntary enforcement" of price and rationing regulations.

SIGNIFICANT TOUCH

Last week Brown repeated his original statement that the cost of living was bound to go up at the rate of a half percent a month. The AP report of his speech added this significant touch:

"He said that the OPA was 'hopeful of staying within that figure' but contended that in any case 'a further rise in wages beyond the Little Steel formula would be dangerous'."

In other words, no matter what happens to prices, wages must not be raised!

On the same day that Brown announced this wage-price policy, OPA Publicity Director Lou Maxon told the National Association of Better Business Bureaus that the OPA had taken off "the boxing gloves and put away the police whistle as an enforcement weapon" and had adopted a humanization policy of seeking public cooperation for price control and rationing. The Brown and Maxon statements fit together like a hand and glove: if you are going to let prices rise, you obviously don't need a police whistle.

PRICE BREAKDOWN

It is not by words alone that price control has been softened up. It is also by specific acts. Here are two crucial instances: dollars and cent prices, and grade labelling.

With the breakdown of the General Maximum Price Regulation, which attempted to hold retail prices to whatever levels obtained in the various stores in March 1942, the Price Department of OPA has sought to work out a program of specific dollars and cents prices either on a national basis or on a local community basis. Dollars and cents prices are easy to enforce. But the job of working out dollars and cents prices involves a lot of detail and progress has been slow.

In the food field, dollars and cents prices have so far been announced nationally for pork products and will shortly be announced for other meat products. They have also been announced on a local community basis for eggs and butter.

For the great bulk of foods, the consumers were promised dollars and cents prices by way of a new food pricing regulation. The regulation, it was explained, would fix retailers' and wholesalers' percentage mark-ups or margins, and these margins would be quickly translated into dollars and cents prices at the community level.

It is now learned that the inner clique in the Brown regime has quietly shelved the idea of dollars and cents prices (except for meats and the few other prices already announced) and has so framed the new food regulation as to make it practically impossible ever to develop dollars and cents prices out of it.

Even clearer is the surrender of OPA to trade pressure in the case of grade labelling. On February 26 --in the one forthright statement that he has made since he took office—Price Administrator Brown announced that the OPA would go ahead with its plans for grade labelling on the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables. This was being done, he explained, in order to protect the public in the rationing of these foods (if everyone is to be limited to three cans of beans a month, you want to make sure that the cans are all beans and not mostly water), and also in order to be able to carry out the OPA's program of dollars and cents prices. Without grade labelling, proper price ceilings are not only difficult to establish, but once established they are easily evaded by the introduction of new brands to which old ceilings don't apply.

Lewis Goons Dump ACW Organizers

La Follette, Tenn., March 26.—Warrants charging assault with intent to murder and naming eight unidentified coal miners are in the possession of Chief of Police H. H. Sutton here following a raid on the local offices of the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America in which two ACW organizers were beaten.

The injured men were Franz E. Daniel, 39, general organizer for the Amalgamated from New York headquarters, and Ed Blair, 26, business agent of the La Follette local.

Chief Sutton said Blair told him the two ACW men "were accosted by eight miners who brandished pistols and blackjacks, that they were soundly beaten and told to leave town."

Blair declared that the United Mine Workers of America had been seeking to organize Amalgamated workers at the LaFollette Shirt Company and the Southeastern Shirt company here, both engaged in war production, where "we have 95 per cent membership on a closed shop agreement."

The UMW, Blair said, had obtained only about 30 of the 800 workers "whom the UMW tried to take over."

Crisis In Child Care Seen For Summer

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The end of the school year is going to bring a crisis for many working mothers. They've managed somehow during the winter with friends, neighbors and relatives keeping an eye on the youngsters after school. But make-shift arrangements like that won't do at all for the two and a half month summer school vacation.

This is a problem in every community where women are working. It's a problem which should be tackled right now because in less than three months school will be out.

The "School Children and War" series of leaflets issued by the U. S. Office of Education has some practical suggestions on how to get community action. In Leaflet No. 2, "All Day School Programs for Children of Working Mothers", they call attention vividly to the need for group care all day, every day, winter and summer, to safeguard welfare of the children and working efficiency of the mothers.

The leaflet suggests that a survey filled out at home by each school child and returned to the teacher is about the easiest way to determine the extent and kind of need for extended school programs. Difficulty in determining the extent of the need for services to children of working mothers in any certain part of town has been one of the chronic problems of child care committees. Women workers often won't tell that they have children needing care because the women are afraid of losing their jobs.

When Ford started hiring women for Willow Run, for instance, two of the first four women to apply admitted they had children. They were sent right home. After that every woman who applied said that she was childless.

PLANT SURVEYS BAD

That's why surveys in industrial plants don't reveal much need for child care. A survey conducted through the school might bring much better results. But the questionnaire suggested by the Office of Education asks where the mother works. That question should be omitted because it's likely to make her afraid for her job.

The summer care problem is just part of the gigantic child care problem we face. It gives us an opportunity to dramatize the need and focus attention on the urgency.

The Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services estimates that 682,600 children will need care in the 103 cities where the Manpower Commission expects to conduct intensive campaigns for recruitment of women before July 1, 1943. 65% of those children will be of school age and in need of a constructive summer program.

The working mothers themselves through their unions, and their allies the women in the auxiliaries, must take the lead in forcing community action on this problem.

Short Of Butter? Here's A Way To Stretch It!

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Were you caught short with the freeze on butter and shortening? Are you wondering how to stretch your family butter ration? Here is one way to turn that last quarter pound of butter into half a pound. This recipe was tested and approved by the General Electric Consumers Institute.

RECIPE

¼ cup milk
½ cup water
¼ pound softened butter

Gradually add the milk and water to the butter—be sure the butter is well softened—beating constantly with a fork, or better still, with an electric mixer. After the mixture is thoroughly blended, wrap and pack in wax paper or in a mould and chill in the ice box until firm.

There are ways to stretch shortening, if you cut the fat trimmings from uncooked meat and poultry and use the drippings from cooked meat and poultry. To make drippings out of the uncooked fat, cut the fat into small pieces. Put in a hot skillet over a low flame with a little bit of water. Let simmer until the pieces of fat curl up and become brown. Strain the fat into a glass jar. Cool, cover and put in frigidaire.

Save all fat and gravies from cooked meats. Use in stews and in soups. To remove any odors and particles from any fat that has been used for frying, fry a few thick slices of raw potato in the hot fat for a few minutes until brown and well done. Strain through muslin over a glass jar, and when cold, cover. This way fat may be used many times for frying. Bacon fat, for example, will not taste like bacon when clarified this way.

VITAMIN D

We have already discussed the Vitamins A, B and C in the last few columns. Now we come to Vitamin D. Almost no food contains important amounts of Vitamin D. Yet, it is very important because it helps the body build strong bones and sound teeth. It prevents and cures the infant disease rickets. It prevents tooth decay and is needed for best growth.

Vitamin D is manufactured under the skin by the direct contact of sunshine. In winter when children spend so much of their time indoors, or are covered so completely when outdoors, it is especially important for them to have two teaspoons of cod liver oil daily. This is especially true in areas where smoke or fog interfere with the sun's rays.

Besides getting Vitamin D from the cod liver oil, it is also a rich source of Vitamin A. Eggs and butter contain a little, but not enough to be good sources. Vitamin D milk is regular milk treated by irradiation—Vitamin D added. The oily fishes like cod, salmon and sardines contain some iVtamin D in the oil. Use the oils of canned fishes when you prepare your meals. Get as much sunshine as you can to assure yourself a sufficient supply of Vitamin D.

Machinists To Vote On Quitting AFL

Washington, Mar. 27—An emergency referendum on the question of withdrawing from the American Federation of Labor will be held by the Intl. Assn. of Machinists, reports H. W. Brown, IAM president, in the current issue of the Machinists Monthly Journal.

The action was taken by the IAM executive council following a complete report of the long controversy with the AFL executive council which was charged with "giving aid and comfort to the carpenters and other unions who are raiding our work jurisdiction."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Regional Director H. C. Fremming of Kansas City advises that the USA-CIO was victorious in an election at the Union Wire Rope Corp., a long-standing non-union firm. CIO received 293 votes to 170 for no union. The USA-CIO keeps 'em rollin'! At the American Rolling Mill Company, Ashland, Kentucky, the CIO polled 1,044 votes as against 967, so reports USA Representative, John Riffe.

Regional Director Pete Mosele reports winning an election at Armour Company Soap Workers, North Bergen, N. J., by a vote of 260 for PWOC-CIO to 21 for no union.

Victory at Buffalo

Adolph Germer, director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports a victory at Robbins Flooring Mill at Rhinelander, Wis., by a vote of 51 for CIO to 12.

N. A. Zonarich, president, Aluminum Workers of America, reports a victory in the election at Aluminum Ore Co., Bauxite, Ark., where CIO received 289 votes to 137 for AFL. This is the sixth election won by the Aluminum Workers in Arkansas in a year.

Ewald Sandner, CIO regional director, reports a victory at the Cornish Limestone Corporation, Hamburg, N. J., where CIO received 714 votes out of 727. The committee, assisted by CIO Field Representative Goldsmith, is now negotiating a contract.

Regional Director Joe Walsh of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., advises that the UWOC won a consent election at the Harding Plant, Scranton Electric Co. by a vote of 112 for CIO to 56.

Harold J. Straub, chairman, Utility Workers Organizing Committee reports the victory in the election at Southern California Gas Co., with a vote of 113 for CIO to six for the independent and 16 for no union.

Claire Brown, ACA regional director, reports that the ACA won a run-off election among Western Union employes in the 6th district covering Minnesota, North and South Dakota, affecting some 330 employes and that CIO showed a conclusive majority. ACA also won an election in February among employes of the Northwestern Telephone Co., in Freeport, Ill.

Mine, Mill Wins

Morris Wright, news editor, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers CIO, advises that during the past month they have won 11 election victories, as follows: American Smelting & Refining Co., El Paso, Tex., CIO won by a vote of 268 to 194; Chase Brass & Copper Co., Cleveland, Ohio, 687 tto 224; Phelps Dodge Corp., Los Angeles, Calif., 343 to 36; Pyne Shaft mine of Woodward Iron Co., Bessemer, Ala., 110 to one; American Lead Co., Indianapolis, Ind., 24 to 0. Mills Novelty Co., Chicago, Illinois, 221 for CIO; 118 for independent and 43 for no union; United Screw & Bolt Co., Cleveland, Ohio, 209 to 58; General Chemical Co., Boulder, Colorado, 17 to 10, and at the mine of Vanadium Corporation of America at Netherland, Colorado, the MMSW won a card check for the workers.

The United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implment Workers of America, came through with a smashing victory in Toronto, Canada, at the DeHaviland Aircraft plant. Some 6,000 workers were involved, with a more than three to one majority for CIO over the Machinists Union. George Burke, International Executive Board member and his staff were in charge of the drive. It is a great showing and adds to the ever-growing numbers of CIO members in Canada.

Elections won by UAW-CIO since January 1 include Parker Wolverine Ordnance Plant Detroit; 266, UAW; 90, MESA; Wright Aeronautical Corp. (six plants) Paterson, N. J., 10,147, UAW; 4,764; MESA; 411 AFL; 1,310 no union; Wright Aeronautical Lockland, Ohio, 7,687 UAW; 2,300 AFL; 2,800 no union; Thompson Products Detroit, 443 UAW; 238 Society of Tool and Die Craftsman; McQuay Norris Corp. St. Louis, Mo., 1,423 UAW; 118 no union; National Coil, Columbus, Ohio, 118 UAW; 12 independent; 22 no union; Gibson Refrigerator, Greenville, Mich., 438 UAW; 311 independent; Toledo Steel Products, Toledo, Ohio, 198 UAW; 123 independent; 4 no union; Federal Engine Ring, Detroit, 126 UAW; 20 independent; Peninsular Dressing, Detroit, 85 UAW; 5 no union; Irwin Peterson Arms, Grand Rapids, Mich., 641 UAW; 57 other union; Dole Valve, Chicago, 596 UAW; 95 no union.

August Scholle, former Regional Director in Michigan, has been appointed National Representative and will travel on various assignments. William B. Taylor, prominent in UAW Ford and other drives, has been appointed Director of the Oil Workers Organizing Drive. His headquarters will be at Fort Worth, Tex., where he will direct an intensified drive. The appointment was made by the Executive Board of the Oil Workers Union in conjunction with the national officers of the CIO.

Physicians Hit 'Organized Medicine' for Ignoring Interests of Public

NEW YORK, Mar. 27—"The failure of the representatives of organized medicine to recognize their responsibilities to the public is interfering with the war effort." That was the charge made by the New York Physicians Forum this week in a letter addressed to the National Conference on Planning for War and Postwar Medical Services, which is meeting in this city. The New York Physicians Forum comprises over two hundred members of the American Medical Association who have been particularly concerned with the study of problems of medical care.

The letter, signed by Dr. Ernst P. Boas, criticized the Conference by stating that: "The absence of proper representation indicates that the plans will reflect special interests rather than the welfare of the nation."

The physicians group asked: "Why have the representatives of organized medicine and of scientific advancement ignored the public and those groups in the community interested in remedial medicine, health and welfare" and "why they have associated themselves among the lay groups exclusively with commercial organizations which make a profit from the care of the sick?"

The list of conference sponsors includes the American Drug Manufacturers Association, the American Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, the American Surgical Trade Association and the Wholesale Surgical Trade Association, the Physicians Forum stated.

Priest Hits Rickenbacker Labor Smear

New Orleans, Mar. 27—The sharp contrast between the speeches of Captain Edward V. Rickenbacker and his CIO partner on a life raft in the Pacific Ocean was stressed this week by the Rev. Jerome A. Drolet of St. Matthias Church, in a speech which took the flyer to task for "his destructive message of labor-baiting."

Father Drolet cited Rickenbacker's partner on the raft, Corp. John Bartek, a member of the Textile Workers Union, as giving speeches to workers "inspiring them to give their best to the production end of the war effort."

Bartek, Father Drolet said, "did not choose to build up the workers' group at the expense of their employers. He abstained entirely from any carping criticism of the proven, profit-madness of some industrialists."

Describing Rickenbacker's speeches as "in sad contrast," Father Drolet blamed him for "a shameful attack on existing sound labor legislation, apparently seeking to drive a wedge between labor and the armed forces."

Father Drolet said that Rickenbacker's attacks "are devoid of any solid basis" and added that "the destruction of labor's standards at home while the boys are at the front would be just about the lowest trick we could play on our soldiers."

Broad Front Of Citizens Backs Bridges

New York, March 27.—Americans from all walks of life, ministers, professors, lawyers, trade union leaders, authors, etc., including thousands of members of CIO and AFL unions, are joining in a petition drive asking President Roosevelt to dismiss the deportation order against Harry Bridges.

The plea for direct intervention by the President is being made in order to enable the West Coast CIO leader and the International Longshormen and Warehousemen's Union which he heads to continue without interruption the effort to speed production and shipping on the West Coast.

WPB Official Hails Labor Committees

Philadelphia, Mar. 27—Full cooperation between union and management through joint production committees will vastly increase war output, Philip Clowes, associate director of the WPB Labor Production Division declared here this week.

Citing the accomplishments of successful committees in steel plants, he told a conference of delegates from 400 Eastern locals of the United Steelworkers of America that "We have only scratched the surface."

The conference, second of a series held by the union, was attended also by officials of steel plants under agreement with the union.

Labor-Management Groups Perk Up In Britain

LONDON, March 27 (ALN)—Although some of Britain's 2400 labor-management production committees are still little more than show-case specimens, an increasing number are playing a highly effective role in the war effort, an Allied Labor News survey shows.

Not only are the committees stimulating production in individual factories, but they are also, through their organic link with the government's regional and district production boards, exerting a real influence upon the centralized planning of production and allocation of manpower.

Because of support from production committees, Oliver Lyttleton, Minister of Production, and Sir Stafford Cripps, Minister of Aircraft Production, are now able to put an effective fight against those vested interests in the war agencies and Parliament who seek to prevent the coordinated planning and execution of national production policies.

"No questions are ruled out of order on our committee," said Jack Painter, workers' secretary on the joint committee at the Clarendon Engineering Works in the Midlands. "There is real cooperation between the workers and management from start to finish. In the last two months we have been able to increase production 45%."

POOLING SET UP

At the time the joint committee was set up last November, Painter said, production was seriously lagging, due to a shortage of materials and parts and a breakdown of the welding process. "We decided to set up a pool of material, so that each worker would have enough to last him through his shift. We called a meeting of the workers and explained the situation. They voted to work weekends and an extra night shift, and in four weeks the pool was created.

The labor-management committee in a big Sheffield tank plant set up a special "United Nations Production Effort Committee" to organize an output drive. This committee tackled the problem of men coming late to work because of transportation difficulties, sent letters to all electricians and maintenance men asking them to make special efforts to keep the plant in good running order, and arranged with the Army to have a tank crew who had seen service in North Africa drive their machine into the plant and address the workers from the turret.

At a large London clothing factory making soldiers' uniforms, members of the Tailors' and Garment Workers' Union on the joint production committee succeeded in getting the firm's inefficient and anti-labor manager dismissed. Within a month production had increased by 40%.

ENGINE OUTPUT

The way in which Britain's workers, through their joint production committees, can now play an important part in the planning of production was illustrated recently in Birmingham, largest industrial center in the Midlands.

Two factories making a certain type of aircraft engine were running at only 30% of capacity due to lack of parts. Despite this, a third factory in the area started to convert for production of the same type of engine.

At the instigation of the labor-management committees in the first two plants, the Birmingham trade union district production committee (comprising representatives of trade unions in all plants in the area) arranged for a meeting between the shop stewards concerned and the Regional Production Board. As a result, the third plant was assigned to produce another type of engine.

N.Y. CIO Acts To Push 2nd Front

New York, Mar. 27 — Detailed plans for pushing the campaign to open a second front in Europe against the Nazis were drawn up this week by the Greater New York Industrial Union Council Executive Committee, for submission to affiliates.

Delegates warned that the main issue of the day is the immediate enactment of the Casablanca decisions, to smash the Axis from both East and West for an early and "unconditional" surrender.

UAW Trounces IAM in Canada

Toronto, March 27—An attempt by the IAM to "muscle in" on the de Havilland Aircraft plant, where the United Auto Workers Union had been organizing for a year, was soundly rebuffed this week by vote of the workers. In a government-supervised election they chose the UAW by a vote of 2,424 to 1,033 for the IAM.

The result of the vote showed the resentment of the workers at the action of the IAM in coming into the plant several months before a vote was scheduled and taking over the company union which announced its dissolution before going on the ballot.

Another vote won by UAW this week set a Canadian precedent when workers in A. R. Potvin Co., Windsor, chose the union by 40 to 0. A third UAW election won was Windsor Bedding, 83 to 13.

Buy Building Bonds

Los Angeles, Mar. 27—Warehousemen's Local 26 of the Intl. Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union has bought $1,000 worth of building bonds to help pay off the debt on the CIO building here. Sec. Charles Pfeiffer of Local 26, in turning over the check, called the CIO building "a monument to victory."

. . . This—CIO Man Fights to Job Despite Freeze

Newark, N. J., Mar. 27—The United Auto Workers Union this week respectively requested the Nat'l Assn. of Manufacturers to call the attention of Edward V. Rickenbacker to the following incident involving a UAW member, Domenick Carotenuto, who works at the Brewster Aeronautical Corp. here.

Carotenuto braved sub-zero temperature recently in an effort to report for work. He was forced to wait three and a half hours for busses, but doggedly stuck to the chilling ordeal.

After a gruelling trip which started at 6:15 a.m. six miles away, the soldier of production reached the plant's entrance and collapsed from exhaustion and extreme cold. Despite the fact that his was the most serious of several cases of frostbite suffered by workers that morning and treated by the plant's first aid department, Carotenuto asked that be he permitted to return to work as quickly as possible after receiving treatment.

Praises Rubber Workers Drive On Absences

Washington, March 27.—Praise for the United Rubber Workers Union's "cause and cure" campaign to check absenteeism was voiced this week by Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward, USN (Ret'd.), chief of the Industrial Incentive Division of the Navy Dept.

In a letter to President Sherman Dalrymple of the union, Admiral Woodward said, "It is gratifying to know that organized labor in America is conducting a campaign to reduce the amount of absenteeism in factories and shipyards."

. . . This—CIO Marine Wipes Out Jap Strongpoint

PHILADELPHIA, Mar. 22—Private First Class William Barnes, Philadelphia Marine, and a member in good standing of Local 1263, United Steelworkers of America, wiped out a Jap machine-gun nest on Guadalcanal although he was hit three times doing the job—once by shrapnel, twice by rifle bullets.

Pvt. William Barnes

The CIO hero returned to duty yesterday after a 30-day leave.

Telling of his experience on Guadalcanal, Pfc. Barnes, said:

"My squad of four men was ordered to take over a Jap machine-gun nest near Henderson Field.

"We got within 25 yards of the nest when we got the business. The Japs sent up a star shell. It outlined us against the sky. The Japs opened up. I got a grenade fragment in the shoulder. It hurt plenty, but I kept going. Then a bullet got me in the arm.

"I still kept pushing forward. Another bullet in the chest stopped me, but I managed to toss a grenade in on the Japs before that. It did the job. Except for a little polishing off with the bayonet."

Pfc. Barnes, who was on Guadalcanal during August and September, was one of a mortar battery of four credited with killing 26 Japs—18 of them at one crack.

Washington CIO Urges: Stamp Out Defeatists

ABERDEEN, Wash., Mar. 27—All out support of President Roosevelt's war program and a request that the commander-in-chief confront the domestic enemies of victory over the Axis with the slogan of Casablanca—"Unconditional Surrender"—featured the annual convention of the Washington State CIO Industrial Union Council here, ending this week.

The delegates hailed President Roosevelt's recommendation that Congress enact a "cradle to the grave" social security program giving the people protection against economic distress in old age, sickness, involuntary unemployment and accidental injuries.

The resolution also cheered the "extension of the principles of the Atlantic Charter to the colony of Puerto Rico" by President Roosevelt who has urged that the people of that country be allowed to elect their own governor and use democratic means to cope with their economic problems.

"These and all other steps," the convention said, "which strengthen the people in the waging of an offensive on the battle front, are being sabotaged by a domestic clique, in and out of Congress, made up of outright Fascists, appeasers, defeatists and 'pettifoggers' who hate President Roosevelt more than Hitler, and fear a free, democratic people more than the blight of Fascism."

C. E. McMillan, president of Seattle Local 1-19 of the International Longshoremen's Union, was unanimously elected president of the council succeeding Jack Bell, Tacoma, who did not seek reelection.

Oscar Rodin was elected vice-president and T. R. Neilson executive secretary.

State, County Low Wage 'Cocktail' No Stimulant to War

NEW YORK, Mar. 20—Take 3,200,000 state, county and municipal workers, mix well with a good shot of administrative anti-unionism, a stiff jolt of low wages, and you'll wind up with a "cocktail" that isn't at all stimulating to the United Nations' drive for victory. And don't blame the workers—they're only human!

That's the message contained in "Labor for Victory," a colorful pamphlet issued this week by the CIO State, County & Municipal Workers of America.

"We're war workers," says the pamphlet of the union membership and of the vast potential membership among the 3,200,000 government employes whose fate it describes. Elaborating on the statement, Pres. Abram Flaxer of the union declares:

"Shall we say that the hospital worker who is protecting health on the home front is contributing less to the war effort than the man whose health has been saved, and who goes back to his job in the factory?

"The war has penetrated into every nook and cranny of our community," Flaxer says. "The 3,200,000 state, county and municipal workers in America must be fully involved in aiding the war effort. Government work is now an aid and an extension of the industrial war machine. Total war means total output. Total mobilization means total mobilization, and it does not mean total mobilization of all except 3,200,000 public workers in states, counties and municipalities."

PAY IS LOW

The pamphlet relates that the government worker's pay averages between $100 and $110 a month, that highway employes average $93.24, hospital workers $76.51, and welfare workers $89.51. Two fifths of all employes of state and local governments earn $1,000 a year or less.

Yet, says "Labor for Victory," the cost of living has risen 20.7 per cent since August, 1939, when war broke out. The food index is 129.6 per cent of the 1935-39 average. The low paid worker has been presented with a 20 per cent wage cut.

"The government worker today does not receive sufficient money to sustain himself and his family," the pamphlet says. "It is up to us to make the government workers into productive workers. This is not only a question of morale, but a question of standards of minimum health and decency in order to insure wartime production."

WORKERS QUIT JOBS

The union warns that "municipal workers are voting with their feet" against the poor conditions imposed upon them. "They are leaving the public service and are going into the more remunerative war industries."

In Akron, Ohio, city job turnover hits the 100 per cent mark. In one Michigan state hospital, turnover of 186 per cent, and the personnel problem is so acute in some state mental hospitals that inmates have been given jobs.

What to do about these problems? The union has the answers—increased pay, decent working conditions, an end to anti-union discrimination, and the formation of an impartial tribunal which will hear and equitably settle the grievances of government workers.

CIO Relief Group Aids Wives Of Seamen

Washington, Mar. 27—The long, beneficent arm of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief reached out with much-needed financial assistance early this year to the distressed families of two merchant seamen. Two badly-needed loans—one of $150, the other of $50—were made to the wife and sister of two CIO National Maritime Union members.

Last week the two women, profoundly grateful for the help, repaid the loans in full.

One of the seamen was a bos'n on a freighter. After he was missing for several months his wife needed money to buy clothes for her two young children. After almost a year her husband returned and she immediately repaid the loan.

Second case was that of a woman whose brother was a steward on board a freighter. He signed on, presumably for a short trip. For four months she heard nothing from him and her money disappeared. Shortly after she applied to the Committee for a loan it was officially announced that her brother had died when his ship was torpedoed. After a long period she established her right to her brother's $5,000 maritime insurances and $800 in back wages, and repaid the loan.

Win Security

Washington, March 27.—Maintenance of membership and voluntary check-off clauses have been granted by the War Labor Board to Local 277, Textile Workers Union, covering some 1200 workers at the plant of the Celanese Corp. plastics division, at Newark, N. J.

UNION CHARGE: Charging the "enemy" with guns that union men helped to manufacture, two officials of the United Auto Workers Union match stride for stride the strenuous pace set by a regular Army private during the three-day visit of 300 UAW men at Camp Atterbury, Indiana. Left to right: George Moran, Local 174, Detroit; PFC Albert Belvedere; and Walter Reuther, UAW vice-president. The UAW-CIO men found regular Army life tough but stimulating, and returned all pepped up to tell the boys at home how hard they should work. The "soldier-unionists" left the Army with high praise from Maj. Gen. Frank Milburn, who described them as "a mighty fine bunch of men."

CIO Push Breaks Red Cross Record

BALTIMORE, Md., Apr. 3—More than 90,000 CIO members in boom-town Baltimore this week concluded the most successful Red Cross campaign in the city's history.

Figures tell the story:

The CIO alone contributed $228,733, pushing the city's quota of $1,538,000 over the top by 12 per cent to a grand total of $1,718,282.

CIO members raised 12.5% of the city's total, an average of $2.30 for every member in Baltimore.

The CIO's participation resulted in Baltimore's being the first major city and Maryland the first state to exceed their quotas.

High praise and fulsome credit for the CIO's outstanding job was freely given by Baltimore and state Red Cross officials.

It was the biggest Red Cross campaign in the city's history and the CIO's contribution was the largest of any labor group.

Making the CIO's success even more impressive was the fact that this was the first year that the CIO had been an organized participant in the campaign.

In a letter to Monroe Sweetland, national director of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, Chief Judge S. K. Dennis, chairman of the Baltimore Red Cross Chapter, expressed "deep appreciation of the valuable cooperation extended with the utmost alacrity by the officers and men affiliated with the CIO in the Baltimore area."

Hails Seamen's Spirit, Same as Russians'

Washington, April 3—One hundred sixty-eight bombings in 38 days at the port of Murmansk, and close association with American merchant seamen, have convinced Capt. Axel W. Pearson that the Russians and the seamen both are tops, and that the best compliment he could pay the seamen would be to say, "They've got the same spirit those Russians have."

Pearson, now serving as captain of the port at San Pedro, Calif., represented the War Shipping Administration at two Russian ports—one of them Murmansk—for four months last year. In a detailed report released this week by the Office of War Information, the captain said:

"My God, what kind of people are these Russians, I said every day. They are tough but friendly. They are kind and happy. They seem absolutely sure of winning the war. The soldiers you see working on the wharves are men on furlough from the front. Instead of taking leave they come to work on the wharves. The women, strong, big, tough women, do a man's work on 11-hour shifts. Everybody thrives on black bread and soup. Never a complaint. I like the Russians. They know what they're fighting for.

"Most of the American seamen like the Russians. I never saw such courage as our seamen have. Nothing stops them. They talk about bombings and torpedoings as I talk about food. They've got the same spirit those Russians have."

War Dept. Probes Army 'Strikes' Lesson

Washington, April 3—The U. S. War Dept. is investigating a story that Army Military Police at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, are being trained apparently to break strikes.

That was the statement that came this week from Secretary of War Stimson, after he was shown a copy of last week's CIO NEWS, which featured on page one two pictures showing MP's with fixed bayonets advancing on other soldiers carrying picket signs.

The Secretary said:

"The War Dept. had no knowledge of this demonstration. It does not prescribe training for intervention in labor disputes, as is well known, and it is now investigating the demonstration."

The demonstration, billed as an example of how the MP's would "quell a riot instigated by enemy saboteurs of war production," was open to the public, was attended by high Army and civilian officials, and received widespread publicity in the St. Paul press.

State Legislatures Pack Anti-Labor Wallop Too!

COST OF LIVING RISE HAS NOT BEEN CHECKED

STILL GOING UP: This chart shows that living costs have gone steadily upward. First retail price control, imposed in May 1942, when living costs were already 17.6 per cent above pre-war, did not check the rise. Wage stabilization and food price controls of October 1942, failed to halt it also.

Fair Warning:

State Legislatures Pack Anti-Labor Wallops Too

WASHINGTON, April 3—War workers who want to stay on the production job without being harassed by constant flank attacks on their unions and their living standards had better keep their eye not only on the Federal Congress but on state legislatures as well, a recent survey of the U. S. Labor Dept. shows.

According to the survey, released this week by the Department's Division of Labor Standards, this campaign against the war workers' morale and their right to organize has reached new and alarming heights, with many bills, even more vicious than anything so far contemplated in the Federal Congress, already passed, and more pending.

The survey puts an accurate finger on the nationwide conspiracy behind the state drive when it points out; "A marked similarity exists in different states in certain bills dealing with particular aspects of industrial relations.

"Certain bills in different states are identical, while others are modified to a limited extent, indicating that the legislation stems from common sources interested in promoting certain measures in as many states as possible."

'CHRISTIAN AMERICANS'

And again, the U. S. government survey puts the finger on the pro-Fascist gang behind the union-smashing drive when it says, speaking of the series of "anti-violence" bills originating in Texas:

"An organization known as the Christian American Association has championed this bill, particularly in the southern states."

Nine states have considered this bill, sponsored by an outfit that southern church leaders have denounced as "neither Christian nor American," and three—Arkansas, Texas and Mississippi—have passed it, the survey says, adding with considerable restraint that the bill could "prohibit picketing and strikes under circumstances usually recognized to be a proper exercise of constitutional rights."

The other states where it has been offered are listed as: Iowa, Kansas, Maryland, N. Carolina, N. Dakota, Oklahoma and Tennessee.

Another favorite in the union-hobbling series is a bill (offered in 15 states) requiring registration and icorporation of unions, listing of officers and members, limits on uses of union funds, etc. The lists of members and officers are of course open to the public—i. e., the employers.

One of these, offered in Missouri, requires all union officers to be state residents for five years, to be property owners, and to prove all property taxes paid up.

Idaho and S. Dakota have bills flatly prohibiting organization of agricultural labor, covering not only farm labor but workers in processing plants as well—workers on any "ranch, farm, feed yard, shearing plant, or other agricultural premise."

Massachusetts, Utah and California all have laws against picketing, "hot cargo" (movement of struck goods), boycott and the like. A large number of states have bills passed or pending against political contributions by unions.

MINNESOTA TOO

Minnesota has one of the most detailed of all anti-union bills, which amends the state labor act which prohibits union activity at any plant not located in the same community where the local union has headquarters, and makes the employer "regradless of any union contract" sole judge of the "number, character and qualifications of his employes."

And so on.

The Labor Dept. survey concludes with a sound tip-off to all workers: saying that it "gives an overall picture of this legislation, so that legislative committees and organizations in any one state can know what is transpiring in other states, comparing such action with local trends."

Keep Your Eye on Congress!

Chief action this week was dumping of Ruml plan to forgive back taxes for the rich, which was sent back to Ways and Means. (See story, page 3.) Plan is far from dead. Nothing has been said yet on ways of raising 16 billion dollars needed for 1943.

The Bankhead bill (S 660) to jack food costs was vetoed by President Roosevelt. He needs your support to make the veto stick. Write your Representative and Senators now.

A new anti-labor bill (HR 2239) makes its formal bow, from Rep. Howard Smith (Va. polltaxer). The bill, under mask of barring foremen from unions, also outlaws union contract clauses on apprentice training, safety equipment for workers, number of workers to a job, etc., and has omnibus clause to prohibit anything "interfering" with full use of manpower.

On food, Pace bill (HR 1408) to inflate living costs was sent back to Senate Agriculture Committee after House passage last week.

Forced labor (Austin-Wadsworth, (S 666, HR 1742), union busting (Hobbs, HR 653), absenteeism (Johnson, HR 1876) are active, need continued attention.

Amalgamated Wins 25 Year Greif Fight

NEW YORK, Apr. 3.—Conclusion of a 25-year struggle by the CIO Amalgamated Clothing Workers to sign up L. Greif & Bros., one of the largest firms in the clothing industry with 11 plants in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Virginia, was announced here at ACW headquarters this week.

President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated stated that the Greif employes had ratified the agreements negotiated by the union. He declared that more than 95 per cent of the men's and boys' clothing industry is now signed up with the ACW.

The Greif-Amalgamated story is almost as old as the Amalgamated itself. From 1914 to 1916 the union succeeded in organizing the entire Baltimore clothing market with the exception of Greif and one other firm.

In 1916 a strike against Greif ended with the signing of a contract, but shortly afterward the firm moved its cutting department to Fredericksburg, Va., and opened up other shops in the tri-state area while curtailing production in Baltimore.

Washington State OK's Equal Pay for Women

Seattle, Wash., Apr. 3.—The dramatic story of women entering war production and other essential occupations has been emphasized anew by the passage this week of a bill in the State Legislature providing equal wages for equal work for women. Michigan and Montana have similar laws, but Washington's is considered best, as it covers all women workers.

Over 250 organizations representing a membership of some 500,000 mobilized support for the legislation, which has been discussed in women's clubs, labor unions, veterans' and community organizations since May 1942.

Thousands of signatures were secured on petitions urging the Legislature to pass the bill, and pre-election pledges were obtained during last year's primaries.

Labor united to back the bill, which excited more interest in the State than any single piece of legislation. A last minute effort by the Washington manufacturers' associa- branch of the NAM to force the Governor to veto the measure failed.

Discuss Problems

Minneapolis, Minn., Apr. 3.—The Minnesota State Industrial Union Council has started a plan of Tuesday luncheons with union business representatives invited to discuss common problems.

China's 1st Lady Urges All-Out War

San Francisco, Apr. 3.—The workers who refused to load scrap iron for Japan five years ago heard Mme. Chiang-Kai-Shek thank them and call for greater and greater unity for victory over the Axis, in a crowded meeting at the local hall of the Intl. Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union here.

"China's cause is your cause, and your cause is China's," she said to a cheering audience of longshore workers. "Because my own people have suffered and bled for six long years I have a message which I would like to bring to you, and that is that unity is strength. We must not only win this war, we must also win the peace. But in order to win the peace we must first win this war, and that at the earliest moment possible."

LABOR UNITY

The meeting was attended not only by ILWU members, coming straight off the docks from a day's work loading war cargoes to kill the Axis, but by officials of the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods as well. Harry Bridges, ILWU president, was on the east coast but sent a message which said in part:

"Our solidarity with the Chinese people was demonstrated by our refusal to load scrap iron and other materials for conquest consigned for Japanese murederers. It is demonstrated now by our eagerness to load ever faster and in ever increasing quantity the materials and instruments of war consigned to China."

Hit Anti-Negro Film

Pittsburgh, Apr. 3.—Members of the Book & Magazine Union, Local 18, United Office & Professional Workers of America, are protesting the release of "Captive Wild Women," produced in the Universal Pictures Studios, which deals with the supposed scientific experiments which change a gorilla into a Negro woman.

'SUITABLE' HOUSING: The Austin-Wadsworth "draft labor" bill proposes that workers be forced to labor in private industry any place the government sends them. The bill asks for "reasonably suitable housing" for such workers. Above, some samples. The ground for top shack rents for $5 a month in the Southern Florida truck farm area. CIO Demands Grade Labelling of Canned Foods

Washington, Apr. 3.—Unions and organized consumers are letting the OPA know that the people back home are on their toes on food prices and the grade labelling question, through delegations visiting here this week from New York, Chicago, New Jersey and other points, and through a steady drive by union representatives stationed here.

Testifying on the grade leballing issue before the House Agriculture Committee, Donald Montgomery, UAW representative and member of the CIO Cost of Living Committee, declared:

"Unless retail price ceilings are tied to quality standards, there will be no effective control of prices, and no stabilization of the cost of living. It is our belief also that if grade labels are thrown out of the canned foods regulation, price ceilings generally will not be tied to quality and price control will fail."

Earlier in the week, the Cost of Living Committee issued a statement condemning the canners' attempt to rescind the labelling requirement as a "only a beginning" which, if it succeeds "would raise living costs by allowing selfish interests to dodge price control by debasing quality."

AUXILIARIES TESTIFY

Similar testimony was given by the CIO Women's Auxiliaries at the Agriculture Committee. Following these appearances, Montgomery went before the Senate Agriculture group to protest against threatened passage of the Pace and Bankhead bills that would jack food prices to new inflation highs and to argue for the CIO food production program.

The delegates from New Jersey headed by Irving Abramson, state CIO president, left a cost of living increase survey with OPA and other agencies, showing huge boosts in living costs.

Other delegates—described as the "biggest delegation ever to visit Washington on consumer issues"—saw OPA officials on the labelling and general price rise issues, leaving a petition signed by thousands of organized workers and consumers.

They brought a five point program stressing food production, rigid price control, grade labelling, rationing and consumer and labor representation.

BLAST WAGE FREEZE: CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green are shown testifying before the Truman Senate Committee. Both denounced the War Labor Board's policy of freezing wages while the cost of living is allowed to rise.

UE Urges Meetings To Back War

New York, Apr. 3—A proposal that unions call town meetings in communities throughout the country to rally the American people behind a strong front at home and abroad in support of the war was made this week by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

Calling upon the people to take the offensive in the growing war crisis, the UE executive board urged the opening of a Western Front in Europe; all-out price control; rationing of all essential goods and services; increased taxes for the wealthy and a democratic handling of manpower questions in place of "schemes to set up labor battalions on the Nazi model."

House Dumps Ruml Plan, But Not In Ashcan Where It Belongs

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3—Congress dumped the Ruml plan this week, not into the ashcan where it belongs, but back into the House Ways and Means Committee, where the whole issue will be threshed out again.

The vote—215 to 198—came after three days of debate over Ruml's gift of ten billion dollars in tax debt to the rich, versus the Robertson-Forand bill to forgive taxes up to 19 per cent of taxable income, which the Administration backed.

This does not dispose of the Ruml plan by a long shot, since after the vote to reject it as sponsored by Rep. Carlson (R., Kans.) its friends pulled a parliamentary fast one in having it recommitted to Ways and Means.

Meantime, after several months of committee hearing and floods of argument, the Ways and Means Committee has failed to unveil its ideas, if any, on the main problem of the 1943 tax bill—how the $16 billion in war revenue that the President asked for is going to be raised.

MAIN ISSUE

"Pay-as-you-go", which CIO supports, has been the sole topic of both the Committee and the entire House. CIO's pay-as-you-go plan, proposed some weeks ago by Pres. Murray, calls for forgiveness on the first $2,000 of taxable 1942 income, with a withholding system to keep taxpayers current after that.

CIO's victory tax program (see pamphlet, "Taxes To Win") calls for raising the revenue needed to win the war by taxes aimed at ability to pay, tightening up on inflated incomes and profits, closing loopholes, and guaranteeing that the war worker and other low income person is left enough money to keep up his health and his efficiency on the war job.

Congress should be reminded that there is a win-the-war tax plan and the Congressmen told to work and vote for it.

And It Burned Up the Boss!

Washington, April 3—Employes of the William J. Burns Detective Agency, who guard the plant of the Buffalo Arms Corp., Cheektowaga, N. Y., voted 55-to-2 for an AFL union in a recent NLRB election.

The Burns agency was once the leading suppliers of labor spies to union-hating firms.

Labor Backs FDR's Veto Of Food Frameup

WASHINGTON, April 3—Full united labor support for President Roosevelt's veto of the Bankhead farm price increase bill (S. 660) was given by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. William Green in a joint statement issued today.

The statement called on all union members to rally behind the veto in order to prevent an over-riding vote in Congress. The vetoed bill would have destroyed price controls on food and opened the door to inflation high, wide and handsome.

In vetoing the bill, Roosevelt said:

"I am compelled to this action by the deep conviction that this measure is inflationary in character. It breaks down the barriers we have erected and which we must maintain in order to avoid all the disasters of inflation. It is wholly inconsistent with our stabilization program and, therefore, dangerous alike to our constructive farm policy and to our whole war effort."

The joint CIO-AFL statement said:

"The American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations express their complete support of President Roosevelt's veto of the Bankhead bill.

"This proposed legislation, if enacted into law, will admittedly raise the cost of living for all the people by several billions of dollars. In the face of our national policy to achieve stabilization on all fronts there can be no justification for any such action.

"The national economic stabilization policy contemplates not only a stabilization of wages but also, as an integral part, the stabilization of prices. Under the price control law the farmers are being guaranteed their parity prices. Under the Bankhead bill cash benefit payments given to the farmers would no longer be computed in determining whether they are receiving parity for their product.

"Purporting to be a measure in aid of agriculture, it would not solve the many practical difficulties which farmers face in meeting their 1943 production goals. In fact, it would operate directly against the interests of many farmers by raising the price of feed which they must buy for livestock and milk production.

"The passage of this legislation over President Roosevelt's veto would be a direct blow and undoubtedly a destruction of the national economic stabilization program. Congress must recognize that a vote in support of the Bankhead bill is a vote to increase food prices and the general cost of living for every American and to invite inflation.

"The American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations appeal jointly to Congress to uphold the President's veto in order to safeguard our domestic economy against the ravages of inflation."

7 CIO Parleys Slated for April, May

Washington, April 3—Seven CIO conventions will be held during April and May. This week-end the Massachusetts Council holds its annual confab in Boston. CIO Director of Councils John Brophy will represent the National CIO as one of the featured speakers.

Other CIO conventions scheduled are:

April 12—Barbers & Beauty Culturists, New York City.
April 13—Pennsylvania Council, Harrisburg, Pa.
April 30—Utah Council, Salt Lake City.
May 3—American Federation of Hosiery Workers, New York City.
May 10—Textile Workers Union, New York City.
May 17—United Furniture Workers, Cleveland.

UE Heads To Visit Soviet Union, England

New York, April 3—The General Executive Board of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America this week authorized the union's national president, Albert J. Fitzgerald, and its secretary-treasurer, Julius Emspak, to visit England and the Soviet Union.

The GEB authorized the trip so that the officers "may see what contribution this union can make toward bringing about a closer relationship among the labor movements of the United Nations."

Camel-Swallowers

A lying story alleging that some union seamen refused to unload a ship at Guadalcanal receives front page space in most of the press. Hot speeches are made about it in Congress, and it is inflated into a national sensation—until its falsity is finally exposed.

And the same goes for any other anti-labor slander, no matter how picayune.

But the same people who strain at such gnats don't mind swallowing at one gulp—and without even a burp—the camels of wholesale disruption and delay of war production and transportation which the CIO exposes from time to time.

As against the phoney Guadalcanal story, consider this actual incident reported by the CIO maritime unions:

One ship lay 100 days off a South Pacific island, during which time the crew made repeated requests to be allowed to help unload arms and supplies, without extra compensation, only to be forbidden by the ship's operators.

This is only one of scores of incidents cited by the CIO maritime unions, and many of them are far worse than this.

They show a shocking wastage of our shipping facilities; inexcusable delays and inefficiencies in transporting supplies to the armed forces, and a lack of planning that amounts to sabotage of our war effort.

For all of these disgraceful situations, the employers and government agencies are responsible—not labor.

The CIO maritime unions have repeatedly made practical and detailed suggestions to the war agencies for preventing the scandalous delays and inefficiencies of which they complain. But these suggestions have been brushed aside.

The CIO demands again that labor's voice be heard. Its cooperation must be accepted to end these shipping scandals, and to get materials moving as they should to our fighting men.

Grade Labeling

One of the most serious dangers to the home front against inflation is the lack of effective price control.

Food prices have soared to dizzy heights. And the steps taken so far to put a ceiling on prices have been slow, halting and indecisive.

It's time for the OPA to get tough.

But instead, most of the current talk from leading OPA officials is about getting softer and kinder—not toward the great consuming public, who need the toughest price control—but toward the profits of minority business interests that are obstructing real price control.

A most notorious example of this is the statement of Prentiss Brown, OPA head, that he is "reconsidering" his order for quality grade labeling of canned foods.

Price control of canned goods will certainly break down, if profiteers are permitted to pass off inferior quality foods at top ceiling prices for the highest quality.

Moreover, customers can have no way to avoid being gypped, or to aid in the enforcement of price control, unless cans of food are plainly marked according to their grade of quality.

Ninety-nine per cent of the American public want grade labeling. The only opposition comes from the canning interests, who claim it would cause them some inconvenience and expense.

Is price control to be allowed to break down, because the OPA wants to be kind to canners, even if it means being cruel to consumers?

Labor demands stiff price control, with grade labeling, and over-all rationing—not appeasement of profiteers.

Anti-Labor Brass-hats

Brass-hats at Fort Snelling, Minn., recently staged a public demonstration of troops with fixed bayonets breaking up a picket line of workers with placards asking higher pay.

Some of these brass-hats don't seem to understand what this war is about or whom it is against.

For their information, American workers consider this to be labor's war against Hitlerism, and against all attempts to introduce labor-fighting Hitlerism in the United States.

We are glad to note Secretary of War Stimson's statement that "the Army does not prescribe training for intervention in labor disputes" and that the Fort Snelling incident is being investigated.

We also suggest an educational course for brass-hats on labor's part in the war effort, our war aims, and the nature of the Fascist enemy we are fighting.

If they flunk this course, they should be returned to the ranks and replaced by men who want to fight the Axis, and not American labor.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

NO, Junior, Ruml didn't plan it that way. He and his crowd planned a killing, but they didn't succeed. Their raid was defeated.

How about that line, you say? I don't know where you learn so much slang. But anyhow, the line put out by the press and the tory politicians was that skipping a year's taxes would enable everyone to pay their taxes as they came due, instead of a year late.

What Ruml really planned was a raid on the Treasury, for the benefit of the rich people who financed the whole campaign. Some of them would have saved hundreds of thousands of dollars. And they probably figured this would be made up by more soak-the-poor taxes.

Do you know what a windfall is?

What's that you say—how could there be a sandstorm if the wind falls? Junior, I don't believe you've been listening to a word I said. If you ask questions, you must listen to the answers. And, for goodness sake, stop fidgeting.

The proper way to get so we can all pay taxes as we go, and have them deducted from wages each pay-day, is to cancel 1942 taxes for the lower brackets only. That's what they call the Robertson-Forand proposal. That would bring most taxpayers up-to-date, without any Ruml grab for the rich.

What's that, Junior? You say you don't know what I'm talking about and that I'm not answering your questions. You asked about Ruml, didn't you? All right, I guess I'll just have to explain it again more simply.

What? Did you say, skip it? That's no way to talk to your father, Junior. And now you want to know what a "delaying action" is?

Well, that's a military term. But if they used it about Ruml, as you say, it must be because the tory crowd that has backed his plan has certainly been delaying things in Congress.

We need 16 billion dollars more this year for the war. And all that crowd has been working on for months is a scheme to grab off something for themselves and their friends.

It's high time Congress adopted a real pay-as-you-go plan, like the Robertson-Forand proposal, and got down to raising the taxes we need to win the war.

The way to do that is just the opposite of the Ruml plan. It's to do away with special tax privileges for the rich, not to grant more of them; to get after inflated war profits and big incomes; to set a $25,000 ceiling; and to avoid sales taxes and other soak-the-poor taxation that won't leave war workers with enough to keep healthy and producing at top efficiency.

But you're not paying any attention again, Junior, and you're going to break the arms of that chair if you don't sit still.

So you don't think I'm paying any attention to you either—and you didn't want me to talk about taxes! Well I never!

All right, just one more question.

Why do they call Ruml "the desert fox?" Why, that's not the tax plan Ruml, that's Marshal Rommel, the Nazi general. You ought to know better than that, Junior. Why didn't you tell Daddy who you were talking about?

You tried to, but I talked too much? Now, Junior, that's no way to speak to your elders.

Oh, you don't know how they spell their names, but you're glad both of them got defeated anyhow. So am I.

Once we've cleared the Ruml plan out of Congress and Rommel out of Africa, we'll have a better chance of getting down to the main job of hitting Hitler where it hurts most.

And that's going to take a win-the-war tax program, and a real offensive against inflation and obstructionism on the home front, as well as a United Nations offensive overseas.

Footnotes on Absenteeism

Thirty-five men were arrested and jailed in New York City after falling asleep in the subway.

Most of them were war workers (some even wearing plant badges), exhausted by long hours and the long distances they had to travel to and from work, Judge Rothenberg noted in dismissing charges.

Three thousand Eastern Aircraft employees at Tarrytown, N. Y., were made absentees by a full week's shutdown for "reorganization."

CIO leaders pointed out that over-all planning and labor-management cooperation on work scheduling could have kept the plant working during the change-over.

Basil Dominic Izzi spent 83 days on a raft after being torpedoed, nearly four times as long as Eddie Rickenbacker. But Rickenbacker has had a thousand times more space in the press.

Izzi is a CIO union member; Rickenbacker a big business executive and anti-union propagandist.

Shipping Scandal!

CIO Maritime Unions Expose Waste Cargoes Of Birdseed, Toothpicks

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3—War shipping space wasted on cargoes of toothpicks, birdseed and caviar, ships taking as much as a month to load, ships dropping out of convoy, one ship making a round trip between here and North Africa carrying 3,000 tons of sand—these are examples of inefficiency and lack of planning cited by President Philip Murray and the heads of the CIO marine unions in a statement made public here today.

"Lives of American and Allied fighting men are being endangered and lost because of insufficient supplies, or delays in supplies reaching the fighting forces," the union leaders said.

"These delays can be overcome, methods of operation changed, and waste of energy, manpower, ships and shipping space that lies at the root of the whole can be eliminated."

100 Days Idleness

One ship lay off a South Pacific island 100 days, while requests of the union crew to be allowed to help unload at no extra pay were denied by the captain. Another waited 10 days at an Indian port for cargo. None was available. She stopped at three more ports, without finding any cargo, was finally sent to the Argentine carrying 800 tons of water ballast.

Ships drop out of convoy due to overloading of deck cargo, faulty stowing of hold cargo. During a recent two week period, six ships left the United States loaded to only 70 percent of capacity, wasting 30 percent. Tanks are washed overboard in rough weather, because they aren't loaded properly.

In a west coast port, lend-lease cargo for the Soviet Union was moving at the rate of only 50,000 tons a month, when the port could have handled 200,000 tons—this at the height of the Soviet Army's winter offensive. At the same time, old vessels were being repaired at a cost of more than $1,000,000 for the USSR, while the companies got new Liberty ships in return that cost $1,600,000 to build. Despite repairs, the old ships couldn't carry heavy cargo.

Despite these examples—and hundreds of others—the CIO marine unions have got nothing but a first class runaround when they approached the war shipping agencies with plans for correction.

"They promise to investigate," the unions said. "They turn away our suggestions and merely investigate their agency, always giving themselves a clean bill of health.

"Such investigations are useless. The agencies are in possession of the facts and have the authority to make corrections. Whitewash has been the main result of our bringing matters to their attention."

"Where union proposals have been adopted by the Army and Navy, they said, "marked improvement has resulted" which has been recognized in official statements.

In presenting the material, Pres. Murray sent it to Senator Sheridan Downey of California, who put it on the Senate floor. Purpose of this is to promote a full investigation by a Senate committee, at which the unions will bring more material and further plans for ending the shipping crisis.

Murray said that the marine unions and the National CIO were prepared "to produce additional facts for investigation and substantiation of these charges."

"We realize the seriousness of the points raised in the statement, and are determined to press with all our vigor for their correction," they said.

More than 250,000 tons of lend-lease cargo was waiting shipment in a U. S. port recently, the statement said, while longshoremen were idle for two full days of that particular week—due again to faulty planning.

War supplies are criminally wasted in faulty unloading, the unions added, saying: "At southwest Pacific ports, ships unloading dump tons of trucks, guns, ammunition into the sea. The fighting men in the forces ashore make jokes about swimming out and diving down to get these supplies."

The seamen's training program is also blasted in the statement, which pointed out that thousands of ordinary seamen are trained sketchily, while none get training as skilled seamen. In one school, lifeboat training is given by a man who doesn't hold a lifeboat certificate.

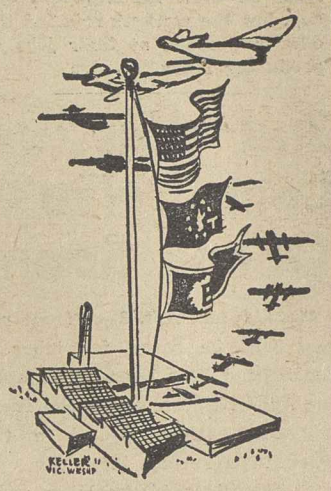
Survivors from torpedoed ships are frequently kept waiting months in foreign ports, and are treated shabbily while they wait. Many survivors have been left without clothing, shelter or even enough food. Some men have been charged money for medical attention.

Even radio is badly planned, since U. S. ships do not have a 24 three-shift radio watch. As a result, they sometimes miss submarine warnings radioed by other ships.

The statement is a complete answer to the smear drive against the CIO marine unions, that reached a disgusting low even for the daily newspapers with the recent phony story of seamen refusing to unload at Guadalcanal, while exhausted Marines feebly cried for food.

As the unions say in their charges: "Because the CIO maritime unions have vigorously attempted to secure greater production and efficiency in the loading, manning, operation and repair of the U. S. merchant fleet, there have been recent efforts to conceal the true nature of the situation by accusing the unions of being responsible for production lags."

LABOR FOR VICTORY



WICHITA, Kan.—Joint management-labor cooperation in an aircraft plant here set a double record. It jumped war output SKYHIGH to win the Army-Navy "E" award, and boosted the plant's War Bond purchases EVERY PAYDAY to a 16% average. Along with the American flag and the "E" pennant, the workers have a Treasury "T" flag flying.

WLB Takes Control Of All Labor Cases

WASHINGTON, April 3.—While the debate continues to rage over the War Labor Board's Little Steel wage formula, tens of thousands of workers suffering from wage inequalities are getting some increases approved by the overloaded Board.

Already banked up with unsettled cases, the WLB announced this week that it intends to take jurisdiction of all labor disputes not settled by other peaceful procedures.

The Board's statement arose out of a unanimous opinion in the case of the Reuben H. Donnelly Corp., New York City, and Local 18 of the CIO's United Office & Professional Workers. The opinion held that the WLB had jurisdiction over the dispute, overruling the company's argument.

Declaring that to limit the Board's jurisdiction would prevent any successful "stabilizing of prices, wages and salaries affecting the cost of living," Dean Wayne L. Morse who wrote the decision stated:

"After more than a year's experience in finally determining a large number of war time labor disputes involving all sorts of issues and almost every conceivable type of dispute, the War Labor Board takes judical notice of the fact that any labor dispute of whatever nature which threatens to result in a strike or lockout does, in fact, affect the prosecution of the war on the home front."

GRANTS RAISES

Meanwhile the Board is continuing to grant a number of pay increases in cases long pending. The hourly pay of employes of the Consumers Power Co., Jackson, Mich., was raised 8½c, retroactive to Nov. 1, 1942. About 2,100 production and maintenance workers are covered. They are represented by the CIO Utility Workers Organizing Committee.

At the Amcelle plant of the Celanese Corp., Cumberland, Md., some 9,400 workers were given pay increases averaging 4c an hour, when the WLB approved an agreement negotiated between the company and the CIO Textile Workers Union.

An agreement was also approved granting 5c an hour increase for 2,200 employes in seven plants of the Deisel-Wemmer-Gilbert Corp., manufacturers of cigars and tobacco stemmery. The company and the United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, CIO, representing the workers, submitted the agreement to the Board.

SHIPYARD INCREASES

Some 2,000 workers in three shipyards in Wilmington, Del., Ambridge, Pa. and Cleveland, were given increases by the Shipbuilding Commission of the WLB in orders approving agreements negotiated by CIO and AFL unions.

The CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and the Dravo Corp., Wilmington, agreed on a premium payment of 13c an hour and an increase from $1.11 to $1.25 in the bonus system. About 400 workers are affected. The other agreement negotiated by a CIO union covers some 1,500 workers at the American Bridge Co. yards in Ambridge, Pa., represented by the United Steelworkers of America. Premium pay of seven per cent was granted for the second and third shifts.

CIO Workers Keep Pledge to Help Smash Axis

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3—You can chalk this up on every billboard in the nation—CIO men and women are concretely keeping the pledge made by their representatives at the 1942 CIO Convention, "to give everything we can in fighting men, in production, in money and in patriotism to enable the United Nations to smash forward into Europe until our drive ends in the heart of Germany and the military destruction of the Fascist Axis has been achieved."

Here's the record—part of it—with lots more to come as American forces redouble their efforts to carry out the Casablanca policy of forcing "unconditional surrender" of the enemy:

1. The United Steelworkers of America, one of CIO's largest unions, announced that 186,236 members from this country are serving in the armed forces. The figures were compiled from records of companies with union contracts. The CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America announced that 70,000 UE members likewise are serving the nation.

2. The War Production Board said this week that of 157 national awards given in March for suggestions to boost production, 63 of them went to workers in war plants where joint Labor-Management War Production Drive Committees have been established between employers and CIO unions.

3. U. S. Treasury Dept. officials said that CIO men and women last year purchased a conservatively estimated billion and a half dollars worth of war bonds.

The 63 production awards to workers in CIO plants brought the CIO total to 173, out of the 389 national honors which have been bestowed to date by the WPB Drive Headquarters Board.

Thousands of man-hours and many tons of critical materials will be saved in hundreds of U. S. factories as the result of these new ideas for victory, which will be "plowed back" into all plants participating in the War Production Drive.

Two-thirds of this month's awards went to men and women workers employed right on the production lines, with only one-third going to engineers and technicians. Only war workers whose production ideas are certified to Washington from the 2,000 joint War Production Labor-Management Committees, covering 4,100,000 workers, are eligible for these national honors.

Murray Named To New WPB Committee

Washington, April 3.—Formation of a management-labor council to meet periodically with the chairman and other top officials of the War Production Board, to discuss WPB plans and policies as they may affect organized industry and organized labor and in general to bring both groups more intimately and effectively into the war program, was announced today by Chairman Donald M. Nelson.

The council will have eight members, four of whom have been named by Mr. Nelson. They are:

Pres. Philip Murray, CIO.

Pres. William Green, AFL.

Pres. Eric Johnston, U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Pres. Frederick Crawford, National Association of Manufacturers.

Each of these men will select one additional member from his own organization to sit with him in the meetings of the council.

In announcing formation of the council, Nelson pointed out that in the past he has frequently consulted with all four of the members individually on matters in which management or labor, or both, had a special interest. While such discussions have been most useful, he said, he has felt for some time that their value could be greatly increased if the channel through which they are held were formally established and if the discussion could take the form of joint meetings with management and labor together.

USA 'Ready, Anxious' For 48-Hr. Week

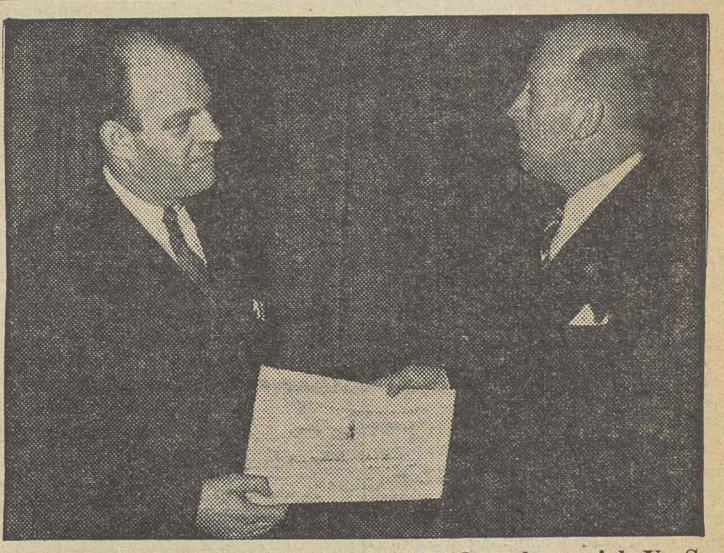
Pittsburgh, Apr. 3—The United Steelworkers are ready and anxious to work a 48-hour week to speed war output, and resent "snide remarks" to the contrary, Philip Murray, speaking as president of the USA-CIO, told the House Military Committee this week.

Murray's letter to Committee Chairman May was prompted by testimony of an Inland Steel Co. official to the effect that no more steel would be rolled under a 48 hour week than is now rolled in 40 hours.

"The United Steelworkers of America formally requested the Steel Division of the War Production Board to place the entire steel industry on a 48-hour week in the endeavor to increase the production of steel," Murray wrote.

He also pointed out that Inland had last year made the "cold-blooded statement" that it expected to produce 250,000 tons of steel less in 1942 than it did in 1941. In answer to this, he said, Inland workers had broken all records in the first three months of 1943.

Inland workers are not allowed to work a 48-hour week more than two weeks out of every eight, Murray added, and are now demanding the 48-hour schedule for every week.



THANKS FOR BONDS: A special U. S. Treasury certificate "for distinguished services" was awarded to the Greater N. Y. Industrial Union Council for having promoted the sale of almost $100,000,000 in war bonds and stamps to its affiliated unions and members. Above, Council Pres. Joseph Curran accepts the certificate from John W. Richmond, Treasury Dept. official.

CIO, AFL Agree On Jurisdictional Meeting Soon

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Agreement to call the first meeting of the joint CIO-AFL committee on jurisdictional differences as soon as possible was reached after two sessions of the CIO-AFL peace committee at the Washington Hotel here.

Philip Murray and Harry Bates, chairmen of the respective delegations, announced that "some progress" had been made in the peace discussions, and that they would jointly set an early date for the next meeting.

The jurisdictional committee was agreed upon in writing Dec. 2, and was subsequently okehed by the executive boards of both CIO and AFL. It is to "hear and decide any disputed jurisdictional differences" between the two organizations and to submit them to arbitration if it cannot agree on their disposition.

The CIO executive board at its last meeting named the following representatives to the jurisdictional committee: Vice Pres. Allan S. Haywood, director of organization; Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers; and James J. Matles, director of organization of the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

The AFL has not yet named its representatives.

The Washington peace meetings were attended by Pres. Murray, R. J. Thomas and Julius Emspak, representing the CIO, and by Harry Bates, William Hutcheson, George Meany and Edward Flore, representing the AFL.

RE-ELECTED: James J. Mitchell, above, this week was re-elected national secretary-treasurer of the United Shoe Workers of America.

Bosses' Leisurely Lunches Irk Workers

Los Angeles, April 3—Not only did the bosses at General Motors Corp. tank manufacturing plant here waste production time on fancy luncheons but they added insult to injury by gorging themselves on inch-thick steaks at a time when workers here can't find meat in their neighborhood markets.

Vigorous protests were lodged by Local 216, United Auto Workers, against the bosses' absenteeism at three special luncheons in the last month, and the management promised that these interruptions of production would not happen again.

In an attempt to mollify the workers, the bosses told them they could have an extra half hour on their lunch period one day, but the workers rejected the offer and stuck at their jobs of producing tanks.

2nd War Loan Drive Opens Soon

Washington, Apr. 3—A front row seat will be saved for labor in the Second War Loan Drive opening April 12, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau said here this week in a special interview with representatives of the labor press.

The Secretary announced that CIO Pres. Philip Murray and AFL Pres. Green will be invited to join Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and himself in a nationwide broadcast opening the campaign to raise 13 billion dollars.

More than 26,000,000 working people are now enrolled in the War Bond Payroll Savings Plan, Morgenthau said, and an equal number are expected to take part in the Second War Loan drive, which will be conducted by the U. S. Treas. War Finance Committee.

The Civilian War Front

See Chance for Grade Labelling Victory

By the CIO Cost of Living Committee

The battle for quality grade labelling continues to make the principal news on the cost of living front in Washington. The chances look brighter this week that the consumers and labor groups may win out in this fight. If they do, it will brighten the picture on price control enforcement, and facilitate dollars and cents prices on foods and clothing.

Last week the House Agricultural Committee held hearings in executive session and almost succeeded in banning grade labelling on the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables. Price Administrator Prentiss Brown came to the hearings accompanied by two key industry men of the OPA Food Division—Dan Gerber and Norman Sorensen—both of whom are opposed to grade labelling.

He did not take along any of the OPA men who have been fighting to protect the public interest by insisting on grade labelling. Brown, despite his statement of February 26 in which he announced the necessity of grade labelling as a wartime measure for price control, told the committee that he had doubts as to whether this step was necessary.

The two industry men testified that grade labelling would interfere with production and would raise costs by a "fantastic" amount. The committee, without bothering to call disinterested experts to check on these allegations, immediately voted 14 to 0 against grade labelling.

Labor Steps In

Labor and consumer groups got busy and demanded an opportunity to present the public side of the case. Over the weekend the CIO Cost of Living Committee issued a strong statement demanding grade labeling as necessary accompaniment to price control.

On Tuesday the House Agricultural Committee held a public hearing at which Donald Montgomery testified for the UAW and the CIO Cost of Living Committee. He was followed by representatives of the Cooperative League, the CIO Women's Auxiliaries and by Paul Williams of the Department of Agriculture.

The attitude of the committee was radically changed from that of the week before. Where formerly they took the attitude that the OPA had no authority to order grade labelling, this time many of them indorsed it in principle, but thought it was too late to order it on the 1943 pack. This argument was demolished by Williams, who showed that grade labelling could not possibly have any obstructive effect on production, and that there was plenty of time to print the labels before they would have to be put on the cans for marketing at retail outlets.

It seemed likely that Justice Byrnes, Director of the Office of Economic Stabilization might intervene in the situation and ask Price Administrator Brown to stick to his original and sound position of carrying out grade labelling as an indispensable aid to price control and rationing.

Lou Maxon, the advertising agency executive whom Brown chose as OPA publicity director, has been the leading influence sabotaging the declared policy on labelling. This week he overstepped himself. He announced publicly that the OPA would abandon grade labelling because it was a "reform measure." He also said that Justice Byrnes in the White House would have no say in the matter.

Then the OPA Labor Policy Committee called upon Price Administrator Brown to remove Maxon because he was working on behalf of private interests. When interviewed by newspapermen, Maxon said that he spoke only for himself and not for Brown.

Maxon Self-Labelled

Maxon, the foe of all grade labelling, has thus had to grade-label himself. He has been trying to pass off his private views and those of his private clients as OPA policy. Now that the public knows that he speaks only for himself and his clients, his power for mischief is lessened. There is not much purpose in his remaining in OPA now that he can no longer serve as a public servant.

Consumers Mobilize Fight For Grade Labelling

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary Treasurer, CIO Auxiliaries

Joint action by national consumer organizations working hand in hand with labor is really making the will of the consumer felt in Washington. Two weeks ago a lot of people were betting 10 to 1 that the OPA requirement of grade labeling on the 1943 pack of canned fruits and vegetables would be cancelled almost immediately. Now they are not so sure. The consumers are putting up a swell fight.

They are fighting because they know that unless quality is specified in the price order and marked on the can consumers can't be protected from lowered quality; and because they know that government A, B and C grades on the cans will simplify enforcement of price ceilings.

Here are the steps consumer organizations have taken together so far:

1. Sent a letter to Prentiss Brown on Monday, March 22 asking for an appointment and telling him that maintenance of grade labeling is an issue on which the "confidence of consumers in your administration depends."

2. Forced their way into a so-called "executive" session of the House Agriculture Committee on Thursday, March 25, at which they and Mr. Brown heard the committee vote unanimously to oppose grade labeling after hearing only the canners' objections to it.

3. Saw Mr. Brown and discussed the issues with him—expressing to him very emphatically the importance attached by consumers to grade labeling as part of the machinery of price control.

4. Insisted upon further hearings by the House Agriculture Committee at which consumers could speak. One such hearing has been held. Another is pending.

5. Agreed on an action program in which each organization pledged to get letters in to Congress from the field urging Congressmen to support grade labeling and to lobby on the Hill in Washington.

Twelve national organizations have worked together on this in Washington these last two weeks: The American Association of University Women, the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, American Home Economics Association, National League of Women Shoppers, National Federation of Settlements, National Farmers Union, Cooperative League of the United States, National Council of Jewish Women, National Council of Negro Women, National Council of Catholic Women, Consumers' Union, and the Ladies Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL.

Here's a Way to Stretch Hamburger Double

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Meat rationing is now under way and we all agree it's about time. To many of us it will mean a decided change in our cooking habits. Instead of relying on roasts and chops, or even hamburgers fixed in the usual way, we will be scanning the papers for hints on how to make the same means do for two means instead of one. It would be a good idea to clip these recipes and send in those you try and find to be good, so the rest of us can use them.

On this week's meat ration list hamburger, prepared in the store and ready for sale, is listed at 5 points per lb. It's the week's best buy because there's no waste in bone or fat. Ordinarily 1 lb. of hamburger would be just about enough to feed four people. Here is one way to make that same pound of hamburger feed eight people—or make enough for two meals for a family of four. Remember, raw hamburger doesn't keep well, even in the frigidaire. Plan to use it the same day you buy it.

This recipe is especially nice to fix when you are planning to have company, because it will give you practically a whole meal in one dish. Meat, vegetables and potatoes can all be fixed and served together. Almost the entire meal can be prepared early enough so you can take time out to freshen up and look your best for your visitors.

MENU

Cabbage Meat Rolls
Potatoes in gravy
Tossed green salad
Apple Betty with whipped cream

Recipe—Cabbage Meat Rolls

1 lb. hamburger
2 sliced onions
6 carrots
juice of one onion
10 ginger snaps
1 cup cooked rice
2 cups canned tomatoes
1 large head of cabbage
salt and pepper to taste.

Wash the head of cabbage well. Leave all outer leaves on. Put the whole head of cabbage in a pot of boiling water, with enough water to cover, for about 15 minutes, or until the leaves are soft enough to roll without breaking. Mix hamburger, cooked rice, salt, pepper, onion juice. Remove head of cabbage from hot water. Cut out core of cabbage so you can separate the leaves without breaking them. In the heart of each leaf put one tablespoon scoop of meat mixture. Fold sides of leaf in and roll like a firm jelly roll.

In a deep heavy skillet, brown 1 sliced onion in any meat drippings, till onions are soft. Arrange the cabbage rolls on the bottom of the pan. Cover with the browned onions, half the carrots cut in strips, 1 cup of tomatoes, ½ of the sliced onions. Make another layer of cabbage rolls and cover with the rest of the ingredients.

Make a sauce of the ginger snaps crumbled in some cold water and pour over the top layer of cabbage rolls. Don't add any water. There will be plenty of gravy if you cover the pot closely and cook over a low flame for about two hours. Don't stir. The Cabbage Rolls and the Apple Betty can be prepared in the morning. About a half hour before serving boil potatoes in jackets till done, peel, cut in quarters and add to the gravy in the pot and let all simmer together until ready to serve. Potatoes get hard if cooked and allowed to stand a long while before serving.

At first glance it may seem like a real task to prepare this dish, but the results are so rewarding in a delicious meal and a good share of nutrition that you will count it among your favorite recipes.

Correction—Last week's recipe to stretch butter—¼ cup milk, ¼ cup water (misprint was ½ cup), ¼ pound butter.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Field Representative A. R. Hardesty reports an election at the Dallas Tank and Welding Co., Inc., Dallas, Tex., with a vote of 66 for USA-CIO to 7 for no union.

George S. Nordstrom adds a UAW victory at the John Deere plant in Waterloo, Iowa, with a vote of 1,907 for CIO to 1,112. Congratulations to all on this splendid achievement.

UE Victories

James J. Matles, director of organization, UERMWA, advises that the following victories were won during the past two weeks: General Electric, Pittsfield, Mass., 148 to 18; Westinghouse Tube Plant, Fairmont, W. Va., 397 to 27; Easy Washer Machine Company, Syracuse, N. Y., 1,134 to 641; Robbins and Myers, Brantford, Canada, 120 to 101; Westinghouse Elevator Company, Jersey City, N. J., 717 to 572; Pratt & Letchworth Company, Buffalo, N. Y., 430 to 168; Ingersoll-Rand Company, Phillipsburg, N. J., 2,330 to 1,050, and Monsanto Chemical Company, Indian Orchard, Mass., 597 to 47. The Monsanto Chemical plant formerly was with District 50, but the workers want CIO!

Ben Henry, CIO regional director in Des Moines, Iowa, reports that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers won an election at the Marso-Rodenborn plant at Fort Dodge, Iowa, by four to one.

Paul R. Christopher, regional director in Tennessee, reports winning an election held at Abraham Bros. Packing Company, Memphis, Tenn., where UCAPAWA polled 109 votes to 34. UCAPAWA Representatives Marcus and Bentley conducted the drive.

Walter H. Harris, director of the Gas, Coke & Chemical drive, reports two additional victories for CIO, where District 50 was formerly intrenched but where the results prove the workers WANT CIO. At the Niagara Alkalia plant CIO polled 204 votes to 7 for no union; at the Isco Chemical plant the CIO polled 97 votes to 13 for no union.

O. A. Knight, president Oil Workers International Union, reports that CIO polled 511 votes to 221 for no union in the election at the Padwater Association, Avon, Calif.

Good News From Michigan

The CIO won an election, 369 to 196 for no union, at the Huron Portland Cement Company, Alpena, Mich., District 50, UMWA, has made repeated efforts to organize these workers but failed altogether, and because of no proof of membership did not appear on the ballot.

National Representative August Scholle also reports that the CIO won at the Foster Boat Company, Charlevoix, Mich., with a two-to-one majority.

The United Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers of America, demonstrated their driving power and the desire of the workers for CIO in an election in Niagara Falls, Canada, on March 30, 1943, at the Norton Abrasive Co., where CIO received 419 votes to 53 for no union. Organizer Edmiston was in charge. The chemical workers on both sides of the border are for the CIO. This makes four elections in the past two weeks, in addition to one at which certification was obtained, and the workers have overwhelmingly gone UGCCWA-CIO. Others will follow.

William R. Henderson, CIO representative in Memphis, Tenn., has been assigned to Little Rock, Ark. This is at the request of the leading CIO representatives of that state, who have assured their fullest support to Brother Henderson. He will take up his duties the early part of April, 1943.

Regional Director Irwin L. DeShetler of Cleveland, has been assigned to take charge of the important drive among the workers of the Kaiser Shipyards on the West Coast. His offices are located in Portland, Oregon.

$53,000 RECORD: That was the sum collected by members of the United Retail, Wholesale & Dept. Store Employes at Montgomery-Ward's Chicago area stores, in 10 days of solicitation, in cooperation with the Nat'l. CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief. Over 95 per cent of the employes contributed. Above, some of the key workers.

Shoe Union Offers War Program

Washington, Apr. 3.—The United Shoe Workers of America this week presented to the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration a comprehensive program which Pres. Frank R. McGrath said is designed to help meet the immediate needs of the shoe industry and aid the prosecution of the war.

Pointing out that it is to the interests of the nation to provide both armed forces and civilians with durable footwear, McGrath urged that shoe manufacturers be allowed to re-grade their products upward providing that they comply with restrictions which would reduce the number of units produced and would save materials.

FRANK R. McGRATH
President, United Shoe Workers of America

McGrath urged that the OPA be empowered to prescribe standards of material and labor which must be met by manufacturers who would participate in the program.

The union also recommended that production of shoes be concentrated in areas where there is no manpower shortage, and urged that an immediate study be made of the productive facilities and manpower situation in the shoe centers of the nation.

Pointing out that shoes are vital to civilian welfare, the union asked that the industry be classified as "essential," and also urged the establishment of an industry council, staffed equally by representaives of labor, management and government, to place the industry on a war footing.

Praise USA Report

Atlanta, Ga., Apr. 3.—The Atlanta CONSTITUTION, a daily paper, this week praised highly the financial report of the United Steelworkers of America. Stating that there has been some criticism of unions' financial reports, the CONSTITUTION declared in an editorial: "Suffice it to say there can be no ground for criticism in the financial statement of the USA."

Jap Fascists Face Tough Labor Problem

CHUNGKING, April 3, (ALN)—Despite the fact that Japan's conquests have given her control over a population of between 350,000,000 and 400,000,000—one third as large again as the population controlled by Nazi Germany—the fascist leaders of Japan today are facing a labor problem as tough as that of their Axis partners, and they are finding it even harder to handle.

Japan is a poor country in natural resources and, relative to the West, in industrial development. But the great trusts that control her economy—the houses of Mitsui, Mitsubishi, Sumitomo and Yasuda—are as firmly entrenched as those of any other country. Wartime sacrifices have fallen entirely on the common people, who even before the war lived just above bare subsistence level.

STRIKES CALLED

The manpower for Japan's army and navy is provided mainly by the peasants. Japan's industrial workers are making their sacrifices in health and strength. Despite severe inflation, fixed wage ceilings have kept their earnings low. So serious is their position that they have braved savage suppression to stage lightning strikes and demonstrations. Desertions of jobs is common. The plight of the workers has been echoed ever in recent conferences of the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, Japan's totalitarian party.

Local bosses charged with filling production quotas are reported in one newspaper to have complained that "with wages so low the workers cannot increase production." The answer of their IRAA superiors was characteristic: "If the workers do not increase production it means that they do not understand the war and their duty to the nation." After this answer production figures showed no increase.

New decrees for the regimentation of labor have been published. One authorizes the arrest of suspected malcontents, even if no actual evidence can be proved against them. Another empowers the government to shift workers to any part of the "Co-prosperity Sphere." Many workers have been shifted in this way to China, Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies, the Philippines, New Guinea and other occupied areas.

To obviate difficult questions of payment, workers so transferred are first formally enlisted in the Army. They are still workers and their job is to produce, but they receive uniforms and are subject to military discipline. Their families must subsist on soldiers' pay, which is much lower even than workers' meager wages.

In most cases they work not for the government, but for their old industrialist employers, who are thus enabled to fill army contracts from profitable enterprises outside Japan with lower-paid, more efficiently regimented labor than ever before.

EVERY MAN A FOREMAN

The Japanese military fascist government treats the whole "Co-prosperity Sphere" as one vast labor pool—but with certain reservations which nullify most of the advantages of this approach. The Japanese brand of race theory demands that industrial skills be reserved for the master nation. In practice this means the scattering of Japan's already inadequate supply of skilled labor throughout the occupied areas. To make this possible, Chinese and Korean labor is brought to Japan proper to do the heavy unskilled or semi-skilled tasks.

To compensate the workers for their semi-serfdom, the Japanese government holds out not only promises for the future but a certain measure of authority at once. The neo-feudal chiefs of Tokyo have propounded the principle: "Every Japanese worker a foreman."

Not Penny Ante!

New York, April 3—Wage increases totaling four and a half million annually were negotiated for 26,800 workers by the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers during recent months.

Australian Unions Enroll 1-7 of People

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3—In Australia, one person out of every seven belongs to a union. Collective bargaining is the rule, and there are no large groups of unorganized workers.

The workers have influence in the government. They control the governments of four of the six states in the Commonwealth, and have a Labor Party in power in the national government.

Lloyd Ross, state secretary of the New South Wales Branch of the Australian Workers Union, writes this in a new pamphlet, "Labor in Australia," released by the Institute of Pacific Relations here.

Ross, who visited the U. S. recently and spent much time with CIO unions and their leaders, traces the history of the Australian labor movement from its beginnings 100 years ago in small craft unions to a powerful, united industrial movement today.

"Labor in Australia" can be ordered from the Institute of Pacific Relations, 129 East 52nd St., New York, N. Y. Price: five cents each, 100 for $3.50, 1,000 for $32.50.

The first union was founded in 1933. From it have grown such powerful bodies as the Australian Workers Union, with 110,000 members, the Arms, Explosives and Ammunition Workers, with 120,000, the Amalgamated Engineering Union, with 54,000. Seventy percent of Australia's factory workers are in war production.

The Australian unions were among the first on deck against Fascism when it began its march of world aggression, Ross points out. Australian workers called for collective security when Mussolini attacked Ethiopia, supported the Spanish people in their fight against Fascist invasion, boycotted Japanese goods, refused to load scrap iron to Japan, fought appeasement in the Munich days.

"Australian trade unions are rightly proud of the fact that we were aware of the menace of Fascism before any other group in the country, and that we were influential in converting public opinion to the need for collective action against aggressors," Ross writes.

"There is a deep strain of international working class solidarity in the Australian labor movement," he says, adding that the unions look to close unity with labor of the United Nations, and that "the best guarantee that the promises of the Atlantic Charter will be fulfilled lies in worldwide working class and democratic solidarity."

Ross puts stress on the political power of Australian labor, pointing out that the Labor Party was a success from the early '90s, when workers found out that police and other state apparatus were being used against them in strikes.

British View On Labor Unity

London, April 3 (ALN) — The British Trades Union Congress delegation which visited the United States last month under the leadership of Sir Walter Citrine, TUC general secretary, failed in its attempt to secure the participation of all U. S. labor groups in an Anglo-American trade union committee, the TUC declared today in an official statement.

"The AFL, CIO and Railway Brotherhoods are of the opinion that the question of a wider form of Anglo-American trade union collaboration can best be settled among the American labor organizations themselves," the TUC states. "The TUC feels that it has no alternative but to accept this position. At the same time, it hopes that the effort it made proves its sincerity in wanting to secure all-inclusive collaboration with American labor."

A full report on the unity negotiations will be given to the TUC convention next September. The TUC will not make a formal reply to the suggestion made in Washington this week by Philip Murray, CIO president, that the "TUC should act to get a working relationship with the CIO on a basis of equality with the AFL," a spokesman for the TUC said.

TRAGIC PLEA: Her nine-month-old baby dead because of lack of nurseries, Mrs. Wallace J. Clairmont, wife of a Seattle union shipyard worker, wants to make sure her son, Marvin, shown above with his mother, will have adequate care. She is rallying support for a comprehensive program to protect children of war workers.

Child Care Problem Spurs Detroit Unity

DETROIT, Apr. 3—The gravity of the child care problem is one of the major forces that is helping to break down the thin barriers separating CIO from AFL in this booming war community that expects to employ a quarter million women in war plants by next January.

Although the organizations held separate child care conferences in the past fortnight, the conferences exchanged delegates and each meeting heard a speaker from the other camp.

The findings of the CIO conference were embodied in resolutions addressed to the President and Congress, to education authorities and to the public. The AFL did not act formally but reached much the same conclusions.

Demands included renewal and increase of funds under the Lanham act under which the government gives dollar for dollar up to certain amounts for child-care if the communities make application; 25-hour operation of nursery schools where needed; proper nursing and medical care for children; transportation where necessary; hot school lunches; school-age canteens for older children whose mothers work in war plants or whose father must sleep by day; no nursery school or canteen fees from mothers earning under $25 a week, and a maximum of $2.50 a week for canteen care and $3.50 for nursery school care, with no mother paying over $4.50 a week regardless of the number of children.

Because of the perpetual runaround and buckpassing in Washington a central agency was demanded to be solely responsible for administration of child-care funds and for seeing that communities observe standards set up by the federal government.

Win $50,000 Back Pay

New York, April 3.—Two and a half years of litigation between the Greater New York Broadcasting Co., operators of Radio Station WOV, and the American Communications Assn. was brought to an end when the National Labor Relations Board this week rendered a decision charging the company with violations of the National Labor Relations Act, and ordered the reinstatement of 26 employes with full back pay, estimated to total $50,000.

UE Frames Win-War Program

Pittsburgh, Apr. 2.—Forty-five thousand war workers, members of District 6 of the Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, CIO, have laid down a 10 point victory program for the legislators of this state to follow.

Issues in the program include: State aid for health, recreation, and child care for war workers' kids; the vote for 18 year old citizens; opposition to anti-union, morale-smashing bills; equal pay for equal work; increased state social security; a win-the-war food production plan; elimination of discrimination in jobs, and a victory tax program.

"All groups within the Commonwealth have expressed their desire to win the war," the program said. "To secure this objective in the shortest possible time will require the carrying out of a legislative program which will strengthen our resources for victory."

Prices Running Riot, Labor Warns FDR

WASHINGTON, Apr. 3.—Drastic action to deal with runaway food prices was urged upon President Roosevelt at a meeting this week of the Combined Labor War Board.

The CIO, AFL, and Railroad Brotherhood spokesmen presented startling evidence of soaring living costs and demanded real price control if wage stabilization is to be made effective.

They also requested that labor be given "top-flight" representation in the newly established Food Production and Distribution Administration headed by Chester C. Davis, as well as in other administrative agencies such as the War Production Board, the War Manpower Commission and OPA.

"We insisted that ceilings be established on all prices, particularly at the retail stores, where food prices are running away," CIO President Philip Murray told the press after the meeting.

"Present retail prices must be reduced to a figure approximating the figure on the date when wage stabilization was put into effect, namely September 15, 1942."

Murray said that labor should be given "top-flight representation in the WPB and the WMC, as well as in the Food Administration, because of labor's tremendous interest in war activities." He also urged the need for "better labor representation in OPA."

PRICES RUNNING RIOT

Both Murray and AFL President William Green emphasized that while wages have been stabilized, "prices are running riot."

Green added that he gained the impression President Roosevelt "plans to deal decisively with the subject," though he made no commitment at the meeting.

To illustrate the extent of food price increases, the labor men presented to President Roosevelt a table of food prices in medium-priced grocery stores in the typical war production town of Canton, Ohio. The table showed how these prices had increased between January, 1941, and January, 1943.

Among the price increases cited were: butter, 51 percent; eggs, 69 percent; coffee, 42 percent; canned corn, 50 percent; canned peaches, 132 percent; lettuce, 90 percent; carrots, 150 percent; cabbage, 100 percent; potatoes, 96 percent; oranges, 145 percent.

Pork chops, 105 percent; sirloin steak, 165 percent; hamburger steak, 212 percent; bacon, 81 percent; pot roast, 160 percent; boiling beef, 260 percent; lard, 191 percent; and bottled milk, 25 percent.

Attending the White House meeting were Alvanley Johnston, grand chief, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, representing the Brotherhoods; Murray and Julius Emspak, CIO; and William Green and George Meany, AFL.

Murray to Talk At Milwaukee

Milwaukee Wis., April 3—CIO Pres. Philip Murray was scheduled to address the convention of District 32, United Steelworkers of America, over the week-end. It will be Murray's first visit to this city.

OF COURSE! With two years' supply of cotton in warehouses, press agents for lovely Lucille Ball of the Screen Actors Guild say that she wears this swimming suit, designed along such sparing lines, to save material.

'Baby Wagner Act' On Deck In Canada

TORONTO, Apr. 3—Canada's largest industrial province, Ontario, prepared this week to enact a little "Wagner Act" following the unanimous recommendation of a legislative committee. The committee was composed only of Government members since the Opposition refused to sit on it.

The committee sat for 12 days and heard united presentations from AFL and CIO groups as well as representatives of the Canadian Manufacturers association, other business groups and individuals. Numerous witnesses testified that the formation of company unions was creating disharmony in war plants.

Chief proposals in the committee's report provide for compulsory collective bargaining, the outlawing of company unions and the establishment of a Labor court presided over by a judge of the Supreme court. Labor is expected to oppose the labor court whose decisions would not be subject to appeal.

The proposed bill says that collective bargaining agencies shall not include "any such union or association the administration, management or policy of which is dominated, coerced, improperly assisted or improperly influenced by the employer in any manner whether by way of financial aid or otherwise."

The proposed labor court would have exclusive jurisdiction in all matters arising from the Act; it could delegate its powers to any persons; hold closed sessions. A fine of not exceeding $1,000 would be levied on employers failing or refusing to bargain collectively; penalties for other persons under the Act would be $50 for the first offense and $100 thereafter.

A fine of $100 including costs would be levied on the employer or bargaining agency which refused to furnish the court with any information or document requested or to falsify records filed with the court registrar.

One of the provisions to which strong objection has been taken by labor would provide for the compulsory filing of annual financial statements by each bargaining agency and their submission to individual members and compulsory annual elections.

The Act would apply only to employers of 15 persons or more and would exclude farm labor, domestic or menial servants, any municipal corporation or municipal administrative unit, professional engineers and learned professions.

Suit Bares Threat To Labor Press

SEATTLE, Wash., Apr. 3—A new threat to labor and liberal newspapers was trotted into court this week when a $35,000 libel suit was filed against the NEW WORLD with the unprecedented request that a receiver be appointed to take over the paper.

The suit was filed by Ashley Holden, former secretary of the Seattle Japan Society and bitterly anti-labor political writer for the Spokane, Wash., SPOKESMAN-REVIEW.

According to Terry Pettus, NEW WORLD editor, attorneys have advised that there is no precedent in law for such a receivership request, but that a judge could, without a hearing, appoint a receiver.

"This is unquestionably an attempt to set a legal precedent whereby any labor or anti-Fascist publication could be gagged merely on the pretext of a libel action," Pettus said.

"The Seattle ARGUS, a weekly which recently called for a blanket cut in shipyard wages and which said editorially that, "There is much to be said in favor of the National Socialism of Germany," gloats in its current issue that the receivership request "could conceivably be a forerunner to a subsequent campaign of extermination of many scurrilous, irresponsible journals. . . ."

Back Invasion Plan

Indianapolis, Ind., Apr. 3.—The Executive Board of the Indiana CIO through its State Secretary, Walter Frisbie, in a letter to President Roosevelt, assured him of the full support of the Indiana CIO in waging the war to unconditional surrender and finishing it in 1943 through invasion of Europe.

ABOVE is cover of CIO's new leaflet, revised from an earlier one called "The Church Speaks Out for Labor." The new version contains new and more up-to-date material, plus a message to churches by CIO President Murray. Order from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Pl., Washington, D. C. Price: 100 for 60 cents; 500 for $2.75; 1,000 for $4.75.

CIO Shipyard Worker Solves Traffic Problem

Los Angeles, April 3—The Los Angeles harbor traffic problem, which has become hopelessly snarled in recent weeks, last week was unraveled very simply by a CIO shipyard worker—Arthur M. Sues of Local 9, IUM&SWA—who had answers for all the questions which had puzzled traffic engineers, civic officials and military leaders.

Army and Navy big-wigs came to Sues in desperation, when they heard he was a recognized authority on traffic problems, and asked him to call a conference. Through the CIO Shipyard Workers, a traffic conclave was called and all the experts sat like children learning their ABC's while Sues analyzed what was wrong and what to do with the Harbor traffic problem.

His solution covered every possible point, but stressed the need for labor management cooperation, and coordination between war plants and municipal and governmental authorities. More highways to and from war plants, more traffic police, added hospital and ambulance facilities, and more control over traffic by police and plant protection officials were some of the Sues' suggestions.

CIO No-Raiding, Joint-Action Plea Rejected By AFL

Army Busts 'Union Buster'

OMAHA, Nebr., Apr. 10—The brass hat Army colonel whose anti-labor "strike breaking" demonstration recently caused a national incident has been busted by his superiors. Col. Joseph J. Shy has been relieved of his command of the 710th Military Police battalion at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, and has been assigned to the station complement there to await further orders.

Col. Shy was responsible for a public demonstration which featured MP's attacking "saboteurs" who carried signs which stated that they were "on strike for more pay." The incident was given national publicity in the CIO NEWS, and resulted in an immediate investigation by the War Dept.

The colonel, who apparently has yet to learn why we're fighting this war, insulted local labor leaders when they protested that the demonstration was harmful to morale. "One of the labor leaders," the colonel was quoted as saying, "asked for an apology and I told him where he could go to."

Which just about evens up the score, because labor told the colonel—and made it stick.

Judge Flays Rickenbacker As Aid to Hitler

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—Ex-Capt. Eddie V. Rickenbacker and others like him "have outlived their usefulness and are creating disunity, bigotry, hatred, and prejudice as bad as the saboteurs and fifth columnists of France and Spain." That was the statement made from the bench this week by Magistrate J. Roland Sala, in a case involving racial prejudice.

"It is the duty of all courts today," the Judge declared, "to squelch all persons who show religious, economic and racial bias. These persons are bringing about disunity in this country by inflaming religious and racial prejudices, by arousing one racial group against another and one economic group against another.

"In the economic phase, a flagrant offender has been ex-Capt. Rickenbacker, who is doing everything he can with his labor-baiting to create prejudice against that group, namely labor, which is making incredible sacrifices for the war effort."

Says Thousands In South Live On $1 a Day

Washington, April 2—Thousands of workers in the poll-tax ridden South are still trying to live on $1 a day wages, Richard T. Frankensteen, UAW-CIO vice-president, told Sen. Walter F. George (poll-taxer, Ga.) in a letter this week.

Frankensteen's letter took up George's statement that the proposed $25,000 net income ($67,200 before taxes) limit would, if it had been the rule in this country from the time of the founding fathers, have condemned America to a $1 a day income level for all.

"On this issue Congress has failed to represent the views of the people," Frankensteen said. "To say, as you do, that the limitation 'has a place in no economy save a Communistic state' will not conceal the fact that Congress has resorted to parliamentary trickery to soak the poor and favor the rich."

Urge Win-War Meet

Newton, Iowa, April 10—Endorsement of a National CIO Executive Board proposal for a win-the-war conference of CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and the National Farmers Union was voted this week by Local 1116, United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers.

UE Wins Check-off From Gen. Electric

NEW YORK, April 10—The General Electric Co. has agreed to a check-off of union dues and full maintenance of union membership, Secretary-Treasurer Julius Emspak of the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers announced today.

The UE represents approximately 120,000 employes in 34 plants of General Electric, which is the largest company in the electrical and machine manufacturing industry.

The check-off agreement with General Electric is the first such agreement to be reached in the last two years with a large firm by direct collective bargaining, rather than through directive order of the Natl. War Labor Board.

This provision went into effect at once, when the company posted notices of the agreement in its plants.

"As a result of collective bargaining negotiations conducted since the middle of March," Emspak declared, "this union and the General Electric Co. have come to the following agreements:

"(1) That there will be a check-off of union dues;

"(2) That there will be a full maintenance of union membership provision;

" (3) That either the company or the union will have the right to invoke arbitration as the means of composing any disputes arising under the contract;

"(4) That any other adjustments made as the result of negotiations will be made retroactive to April 7."

As to negotiations now in progress with the second largest firm in the industry, Westinghouse Electric, Emspak stated that "complete deadlock" has been reached, since the company has declined so far "to agree to the retroactive date arrangement already agreed to by General Electric."

Murray to Talk To Barbers

New York, April 10—CIO Pres. Philip Murray will speak at the first constituoial convention of the Barbers and Beauty Culturists of America which opens here tomorrow at the New Yorker Hotel.

Allan S. Haywood, director of organization, is also scheduled to address the delegates. The CIO union is headed by Pres. Mario Arcario and P. Charles DiNeri, secretary-treasurer.

CIO Wins 10 Big Textile Plants

NEW YORK, Apr. 10—Cotton mill workers in 10 out of 11 mills in New Bedford, Mass., have chosen the CIO Textile Workers Union as sole bargaining agent, in one of the largest elections ever conducted by the National Labor Relations Board in the textile industry, TWU Pres. Emil Rieve announced here at union headquarters.

The TWU defeated the AFL New Bedford Textile Council, carrying a majority of the total 11,504 votes cast in the election, and winning in all but one of the 11 mills.

For the purpose of voting, nine of the 11 mills, all members of the New Bedford Cotton Manufacturers Assn., constituted one unit. Employes of the Kilburn and the New Bedford Cotton Mills voted separately.

In the large unit, the TWU received 4,634 votes to 4,319 for the AFL. Kilburn Mill workers voted 601 for the TWU to 525 for the AFL. The election at New Bedford Cotton, was won by the AFL 564 to 361 for the TWU.

With the exception of an election at the Riverside and Dan River Cotton Mills in Danville, Va., won last summer by the CIO textile union, the New Bedford balloting was the biggest in the history of the textile industry.

Rieve said that with a few minor exceptions, the TWU is now sole bargaining agency for all the fine cotton workers in New England. As soon as the NLRB certifies the TWU as the union selected by the workers, he said, "we shall proceed to negotiate contracts."

Bay State CIO Membership Breaks 200,000 Record

BOSTON, Apr. 10—Membership of CIO unions in the state now exceeds 200,000, an increase of 40,000 during the past year, it was reported at the sixth annual convention of the Massachusetts CIO Council which met here last week-end.

Nearly a thousand delegates attended the convention which met in the same hall at the Statler Hotel where the national CIO met last November.

President Joseph Salerno, who was re-elected to head the Council for another year, in his main speech answered some of the charges leveled against labor by Edward V. Rickenbacker and "other labor baiters" and put the blame for absenteeism on poor planning, management, housing, transportation. and or sickness and fatigue.

BROPHY WARNING

Two CIO leaders from outside the state, John Brophy, director of Industrial Union Councils, and Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers touched in their speeches on the problems facing labor after the war.

Warning that "we must see to it that there is a job for every man willing and able to work" if we are to avoid a catastrophic economic depression when the war ends, Brophy called for a program that will assure jobs for soldiers returning from the war.

He also warned labor that it is in for heavy weather now, on the legislative side.

"There is every indication of a carefully integrated attack on organized labor through the state legislatures, well planned behind the scene which has met with considerable success in the places where labor is the weakest," Brophy said.

Hillman declared that we must "unify our ranks, cement the bonds which united us with our Allies, and reach agreements on the broad outlines with a comman program of objectives for the post war world."

The defeat of Hitler, he said, can be accomplished "only on the continent of Europe by a full-scale Anglo-Saxon invasion, supported by the aroused people of the occupied nations, while our heroic Russian ally continues to battle him in the East."

Governor Saltanstall and Mayor Tobin of Boston, were the principal speakers at a banquet held for the delegates Saturday night.

Clothing Workers Give Hospital to Soviet Union

NEW YORK, April 10—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers announced this week that it has agreed to equip a 1,000-bed hospital in Soviet Russia as a contribution to the Russian War Relief.

Jacob S. Potofsky, ACW secretary-treasurer, said that the union has already purchased $25,000 worth of blankets, sheeting and woolen material for bathrobes and night clothes for the Moninsky Hospital of the All-Union Central Trade Union Council near Moscow.

President Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated had previously suggested to the Russian authorities that the union would prefer to earmark its contributions for a specific relief project in Russia. The suggestion was welcomed by the Russian government and an arrangement was worked out to equip the Moninsky hospital.

The Amalgamated has also earmarked $10,000 for an industrial school in China for the rehabilitation of boys and men.

CIO Radio Men, Back From Fighting Fronts, Call Rickenbacker's Bluff

NEW YORK, April 10—You can take it from the CIO boys who brave the bombs and torpedoes on the North Atlantic run—ex-Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker is a union-buster who trades on his title of "captain" from the last war to stooge for the National Association of Manufacturers.

The CIO men—23 of them who are members of the American Communications Assn. — told the ex-captain off in a personal letter this week. The boys who pound the radio keys on our merchant ships said:

"We union men in the merchant marine, together with a Navy escort, have just gotten through delivering thousands of tons of munitions and supplies to vital war fronts. We've sat at our keys in the radio room, listening tense and alert for enemy subs, and ready to do our part if trouble came.

"We got through okay. But when we looked at the casualty list in our New York ACA Union Hall, our hearts sank. Old John Spray and old John Dudor, two of the oldest marine men in the radio operating game, are gone. John Dudor had already survived one torpedoing when the Nazis got him. Leon Roux, a fighting union man of French birth, who hated fascism like poison, is missing. Mel Stein, a swell Jewish kid out of Boston who'd just got married before he sailed, is lost. And so are dozens and dozens of our best brothers.

"While our brothers have been suffering their lives at sea, we understand that you have been in danger of straining a tonsil in violent speeches against our unions. While labor is producing and delivering the goods, you are guilty of stabbing us in the back by your false charges of gross absenteeism from the war effort.

TRADES ON TITLE

"You, a civilian have been trading your title of "Captain" from the last war to stooge for the National Association of Manufacturers. You have been trying to get Congress to apply to the entire country the union-busting policies which you used while heading Indianapolis Speedway and the Eastern Airlines.

"We understand the latest scheme you've cooked up is a national association of mothers to lobby for union-smashing legislation. We think you'll have to count our own mothers out of this scheme which helps the Axis, Mr. Rickenbacker. Yes, and you'll have to count out the mothers of the men in America's armed forces, most of whom come out of the ranks of labor.

"That is all we've got to say right now. The hero's halo around your head is getting kind of thin. Get wise to yourself, stop blasting those who are working to win the war. Do something for Victory yourself."

House 'Agy's' Shun Grade Labelling But Battle Isn't Ended

WASHINGTON, April 10—Despite a short but intensive education on why grade labelling on canned goods is a war measure, the House Agriculture Committee this week voted a "recommendation" against grade labeling at this time. The decision, however, is still up to OPA head Prentiss Brown, and labor and consumers groups are working to educate him and make the job stick.

Purpose of grade labelling is to save price control by enforcing quality standards on the canners. With labelling, the buyer knows what he's paying for. Without it, Grade C food will be sold everywhere at Grade A prices, and price control goes out the window.

The committee, fed on canners' propaganda, kept harping on the supposed fact that labelling would hold up production and you wouldn't want to do that in a war. The clincher was the final remark of one member that labels couldn't be printed in three years time—a crack that brought a gust of laughter from the witnesses.

These questions were effectively answered when Donald Montgomery, UAW-CIO representative, said: "We don't belive any of the canners' arguments that they can't get labels printed and that labelling would slow production. But if OPA abandons grade labelling, then labor and consumers will demand that we pay only Grade C prices for the entire pack, except where items are graded."

Some 50 witnesses wanted to testify in favor of labelling, but only a few were allowed. These included people from the American Home Economics Assn., the League of Women Shoppers, the CIO Womens Auxiliaries, the National Education Assn., and similar labor and civic organizations.

Meantime, pressure should be kept on OPA head Prentiss Brown, who has indicated that a decision will be made soon.

'Whipping Hitler Best Answer To Persecution'

Washington, April 2 — Victory over the Axis by offensive action of the United Nations must be our answer to Hitler's extermination of the Jewish people, John Brophy, director of CIO Councils, told a meeting of the Joint Emergency Committee here this week.

"Let us protest," he said. "Let us, if we can, bring down the heavens. Let us also move forward to a well-calculated attack. Let us press the quick victory of our arms."

UE Ends 40-Year OpenShop

PHILIPSBURG, N. J., April 10—Forty years of the open shop at Ingersoll-Rand Co., came to an abrupt end this week with a smashing UE victory in an NLRB election won by Local 451 by a 7 to 3 vote.

The I-R workers voted 2,330 for, 1,052 against the UE in a "yes" and "no" consent election. The total number of eligible voters was 3,061 production and maintenance employes.

A few miles from Bethlehem Steel Corp., Ingersoll-Rand Co. is a part of the industrial Lehigh Valley on the New Jersey-Pennsylvania border. The UE victory should open up the way for further complete organization of the area. Seven attempts in 40 years had failed to organize Ingersoll-Rand.

GIRLS MISSING: Carrie Basttista, left, a daughter of a CIO member, and her companion, Grace Pinelli, both 15 years old, were reported missing this week by Local 83, United Rubber Workers Union, 1561 E. State St., Trenton, N. J. Miss Basttista is 5' 3", 120 lbs., has chestnut hair, dark brown eyes. Miss Pinelli is 5' 3", 125 lbs., has olive skin, brown eyes, long brown hair.

Back Murray's WLB Policy

Kansas City, Mo., Apr. 10—Unanimous endorsement of CIO Pres. Philip Murray's recent statement on the CIO's policy toward the War Labor Board was expressed this week by a meeting of more than 50 representatives of CIO unions from Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and Iowa, attending a regional meeting on wage and manpower policies.

Smash Record

Washington, Apr. 10—American merchant shipyards last month smashed all previous records for ship deliveries with the completion of 146 new vessels, according to the Maritime Commission.

They're Crawling, Simply Crawling, Mr. Maxon

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—There's something wormy in Washington, and that something is right in the food that war workers and their kids are expected to eat.

Here's what it is: Dan Gerber, of the Gerber baby food canning firm, is a big shot in OPA. He's opposed to grade labeling on canned foods, as are all the big canners. Last week, Gerber's canned baby food was found to be well supplied with worms, the Federal Pure Food and Drug Commission reported.

Here's more: Lou Maxon, a big advertising man, (clients, H. J. Heinz, etc.), is chief of information in OPA, has been given ample powers by Prentiss Brown. He's opposed to grade labeling on canned foods.

Last week, a luncheon firm at the Willow Run bomber plant was found selling sandwiches to war workers literally crawling with maggots. Maxon's name was on the list of people incorporating the firm.

After Local 50, UAW-CIO, made a big squawk about "sandwiches on legs" sold at the plant, Maxon withdrew from the firm, the firm became a partnership—and Mrs. Maxon is one of the partners.

Still another: A member of the House Agriculture Committee ,hearing testimony on grade labeling, wouldn't believe there could be "foreign matter" in canned tomatoes. "I'd like to know what on earth you found in tomatoes you'd call foreign," he asked.

"A cockroach," the witness answered.

UNITED ACTION: New York City's seven million subway, trolley and bus riders are discovering that labor is united for victory through the New York Labor War Chest. William Green and Philip Murray, AFL and CIO presidents, are shown with John P. Stevens, Jr., vice-chairman of the Big City's Red Cross War Fund, displaying the first car card of the New York Labor War Chest to come off the press. The Chest has an announced goal of $4,000,000 for 1943, but Labor Chest officials are confident that the goal will be surpassed.

CIO No-Raid Plan Rejected by AFL –

WASHINGTON, April 10—AFL rejection of a CIO proposal for no raiding and for joint labor action on war issues on a national, state and local basis, was revealed this week in a letter from Pres. Philip Murray to CIO officers.

The rejection took place at the recent meeting of the CIO-AFL peace committee in Washington. It was based on the insistence of the AFL representatives that the proposed no-raiding agreement should also include specific protection for all union contracts, even though they might be collusive "sweetheart" agreements in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

The CIO representatives pointed out that such a provision would be violation of the December 2 agreements between CIO and AFL, which specified that no arbitration must over-ride "the rights of a labor union or an individual worker under existing law."

In his letter, President Murray reported on the unity negotiations as follows:

Murray Report

"You have been previously advised by me regarding the agreement dated December 2 executed by the CIO-AFL Labor Unity Committee. For the information of your membership I now submit an additional report.

"The Labor Unity conference was reconvened for further discussions on April 1. The CIO representatives submitted for discussion a proposal, a copy of which I enclose." (See below for full text.—Ed.)

"The AFL representatives insisted that a preliminary problem had to be disposed of before any other issue could be discussed. Their demand was for an agreement to the effect that the prohibition against raiding must embrace all situations where collective bargaining contracts are outstanding for the duration of the war even though they might be collusive agreements in violation of the National Labor Relations Act.

Cites Agreement

"The CIO representatives pointed out that they could not abrogate the CIO-AFL December 2 agreement which provided that:

"No grant of authority shall be vested in an arbiter selected by the AFL-CIO joint committee or an arbiter named by the President of the United States, to deal with any subject affecting the rights of a labor union or an individual worker under existing law.

"No agreement was therefore obtained on the issues covered in the CIO proposal which is attached.

"The CIO representatives advised that the members of its committee, which under the December 2 agreement was supposed to meet with the AFL committee to dispose of jurisdictional differences, had been named and are ready and willing to meet at the earliest opportunity.

"The AFL representatives advised that they could not designate the membership of their committee until after the meeting of the Executive Council of the AFL which is not to be held until the middle of May.

"The CIO representatives further suggested that this Labor Unity conference resume its discussions next week or as soon as possible. The AFL representatives advised that they could not do so for one reason or another until after the aforesaid meeting of the Executive Council of the AFL."

CIO's Full Text

Following is the full text of the CIO proposal referred to in President Murray's letter:

"On December 2, 1942, the AFL and CIO Peace Committee, in an effort to make its maximum contribution in the war, and for the furtherance and protection of the conditions of the workers, entered into certain agreements establishing a joint AFL-CIO Committee to hear and decide any disputed jurisdictional differences that may arise between the two organizations.

"For the effectuation of this program and without in any way affecting the provisions of the agreements of December 2, the AFL and the CIO Peace Committee today agree upon the following:

"(a) There shall be no raiding between the organizations. The joint AFL-CIO Committee, established under the agreements of December 2 to hear and determine any disputed jurisdictional differences, has been directed to meet on Monday, April 5, for the purpose of immediately initiating its work. Its first case shall be the one involving the Kaiser Shipyards on the West Coast.

"(b) The President of the CIO and the President of the AFL, together with the representatives of the Railway Brotherhoods, should immediately seek to establish joint action on all issues directed toward an intensified prosecution of the war and a fuller participation of labor in the war effort. They should also seek to create similar committees on a local and state-wide basis throughout the nation.

"Such measures as total war mobilization, economic stabilization, manpower, organizing the unorganized, labor-management production committees, and anti-labor legislation merit the immediate attention of such joint labor action."

In rejecting the above no-raiding and joint-action proposal of the CIO, the AFL representatives sought specific protection for collusive "sweetheart" agreements, regardless of existing labor law, in a proposal worded as follows:

"It is the unanimous policy of this committee, in pursuing its objective, namely labor unity, that there shall be no raiding by the AFL where the CIO has a contract or agreement or has won a representation election and that in return there shall be no raiding by the CIO where the AFL has a contract or agreement or has won a representation election."

Senate Slaps Down Bankhead Bill, but It May Come Back

WASHINGTON, April 10—Win-the-war forces gained a partial victory this week and the Wall Street farm bloc gained a strategic point when the Senate voted, 62 to 23, to send the inflationary Bankhead bill (S. 660) back to committee after the President had vetoed it.

The victory was only partial because the bill was not killed but was put in cold storage in the reactionary Senate Agriculture Committee, where it can be thawed out and put back on the floor the minute the banker-farmers feel the situation is more favorable.

In the committee, the Bankhead bill will snuggle in with the even more inflationary Pace bill (HR 1408) already past the House and designed to raise food prices more than 25 per cent by including so-called "labor costs" in figuring farm prices. Administration leaders declared flatly that the Bankhead bill would raise food costs by more than $2 billion, would add 500 millions to the cost of feeding the armed forces.

The President's veto had the support of CIO President Philip Murray and AFL President William Green, who issued a joint statement last week urging full labor support for FDR's stand. UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas and other labor officials joined in demanding a clean-cut sustainer of the veto.

The farm bloc, which hasn't anything to do with real working farmers and everything to do with the profit-hogs who want inflation, saw a major defeat if the veto was sustained and slipped out of it with the parliamentary maneuver of recommitting the bill.

BANKHEAD MANEUVER

The maneuver was put over by Senator Bankhead, (polltaxer, Ala.) author of the bill and sponsor of another measure (S 729) now before the Senate-House Military Affairs Committee. This bill, which has passed the Senate, would freeze farm workers to their present jobs, regardless of wages and regardless of whether or not they are working on war crops.

The farm bloc, largely dominated by big cotton-growing interests, wants to freeze a huge farm labor surplus on its plantations, wholly ignoring the serious labor shortages in essential crop areas. This is the real purpose behind S 729 and behind the smokescreen about releasing farm workers from the Army.

Says Willful Absenteeism Negligible

Washington, April 10—Willful absenteeism is a negligible factor in the total picture, and the major causes of absenteeism are beyond the workers' control, Rep. Mary T. Norton (Dem., N. J.) said today in releasing a report of the House Labor Committee's study of the problem.

People who have been beating the drums on the other side are trying "to create the impression that American workers are slackers," she said, in an implied reference to ex-Captain Riberbacker and other anti-union propagandists.

"The typical American worker is not the deliberate truant, but the fellow who gets up early, shares his car with fellow-workers, drives oftentimes from 10 to 50 miles to work in all kinds of weather, puts in a long day of work in an over-crowded workshop, and gets home late at night frequently to face additional responsibilities," she declared.

Work Passionately to Win War, Murray Urges; Warns Unions at Stake

MILWAUKEE, Wis., April 10—"Work together in your plant, in your mill, in your factory, in your union. Work together passionately to help your country win this war." That was the message brought the District 32 Convention of the United Steelworkers of America this week by Philip Murray, president of the CIO and of the giant Steelworkers Union.

Telling the story of a German union leader who was murdered by the Nazis, Murray said that "he died and his union died because the authorities in Germany decreed that all labor unions must die."

Recounting a list of countries where the same thing has happened, Murray declared:

"That, my friends, is one of the reasons why you and the millions like you all over the country must needs wage a winning war. Your right to associate yourselves in great trade unions is at stake, as is the right of a free press, radio and freedom of worship."

CIO Fights Smith, Colmer Anti-Labor Bills In House

WASHINGTON, April 10—CIO's "thumbs down" on two anti-union, anti-war production bills was given this week in testimony before the House Military Affairs Committee by Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, and Pres. R. J. Thomas of the United Automobile Workers.

The twin bills are sponsored by twin polltaxers—Smith of Virginia and Colmer of Mississippi—and are aimed at wiping out labor's gains and labor's rights to organize. The fact that both of the bills would disrupt war production may or may not be part of the design; at any event, both Smith and Colmer are more concerned in these bills with smashing labor than they are with helping to smash the Axis.

THOMAS' TESTIMONY

In his testimony, Thomas said that he was appearing not only on behalf of close to a million UAW members engaged in producing arms and munitions, but also on behalf of more than 150,000 members now serving in the Armed Forces.

The UAW president protested emphatically "against the attempts being made in Congress and elsewhere to drive a wedge between organized labor and the rest of the nation, particularly between organized labor and the Armed Forces."

Speaking on the Smith bill (HH 2239), Pressman pointed out that it would (1) make illegal any union contract specifying the number of workers to a job; (2) wipe out union contract specifications on apprenticeship training; (3) lower pay scales based on length of a job, if the job takes a shorter than usual time, and (4) make anything "which in any other manner interferes with the full utilization of the nation's manpower" a criminal offense.

The bill completely ignores the "affirmative approach" needed on the manpower and production problem, Pressman said, adding that the CIO was backing the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore war mobilization bill as a real step toward a solution.

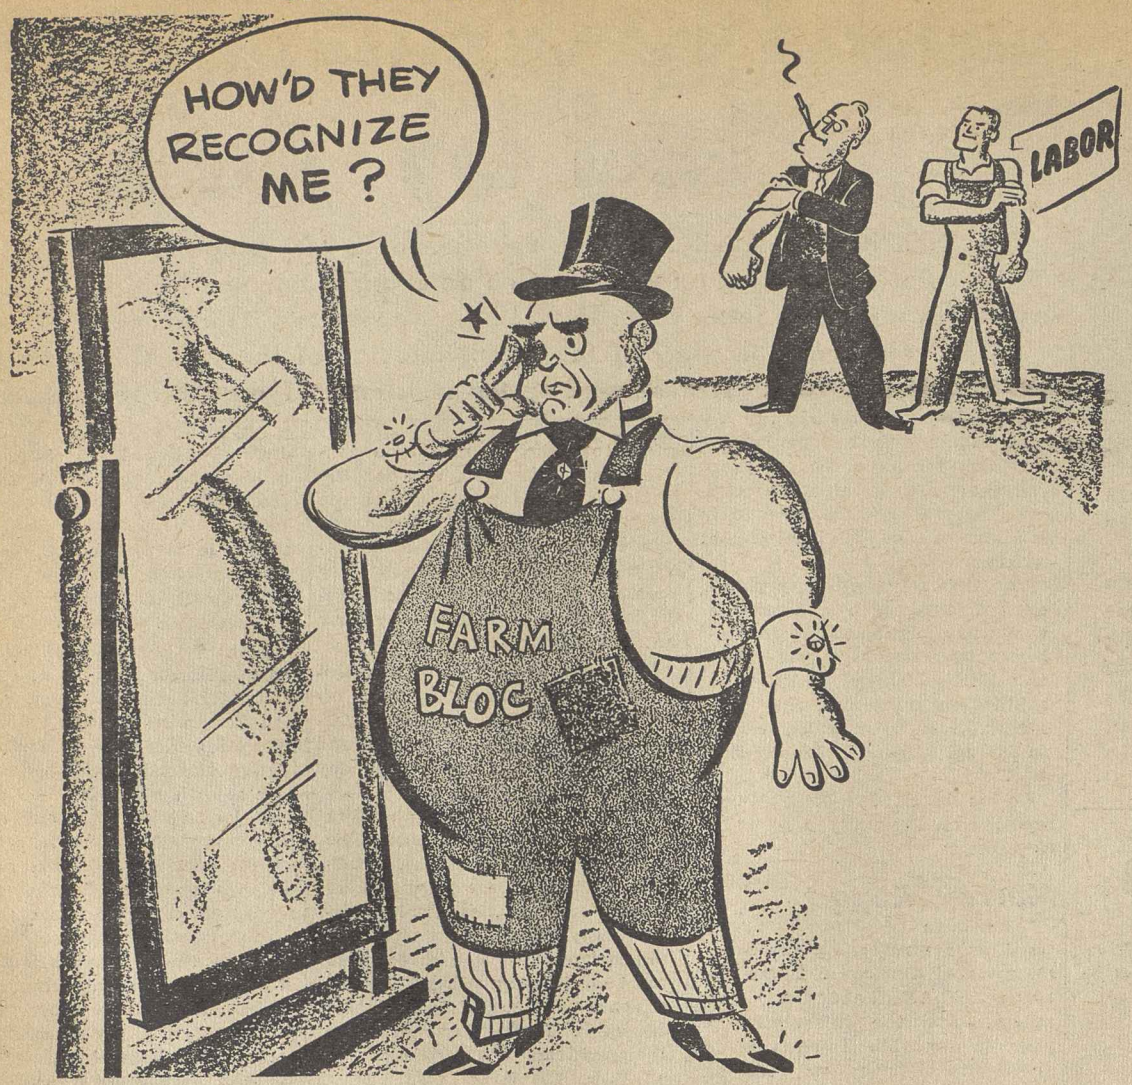
ONE DOWN AND ONE TO GO!



The Landlords' Lobby

Let's relax rent control just a teeny-weeny bit, pleads the landlords' lobby now at work in Washington.

It asks that rents be controlled by local rent committees, instead of federally; and that rents be adjusted to other prices and to tenants' incomes.

But the CIO Cost of Living Committee estimates that such relaxation of present federal control would result in a billion dollars a year increase in workers' rents.

It also notes that landlords, even under present controls, increased their incomes by from 14 to 26 per cent in the last two years, according to OPA reports. In Detroit, apartment house landlords increased their income last year by 43% over 1939, and landlords of smaller structures by as much as 64%.

The landlords' lobby is working hard on both the OPA and Congress. It has introduced seven bills and two resolutions in the House and one in the Senate.

It hopes that the present tendency of top OPA officials to appease profiteers with gifts of inflation stolen from the public, will work in its favor.

It is also counting on Rep. Howard Smith's administration-baiting committee to do a job for it in Congress by questioning OPA's authority to control rents.

CIO members, and all others concerned with fighting inflation, must therefore let both OPA and Congress hear their loud demand that there be no relaxation, but on the contrary a tightening and extension, of present rent controls.

War Bond Drive

This week sees the launching of a new drive to sell 13 billion dollars worth of war bonds to the American people.

CIO has taken the lead in war bond sales from the very first. In fact, it estimated that CIO members out of their small earnings have already purchased as much as a billion and a half dollars of war bonds.

CIO is also out in front in this new drive. Pres. Murray has already called on the entire membership to redouble its efforts to raise the money we need for victory in this most constructive and voluntary fashion.

"The workers of America must not only maintain but must increase their participation in the payroll savings plan," Murray says.

He suggests a series of special campaigns sponsored by national unions, state and city councils and local unions, with definite objectives, such as "Buy a Bomber," "Name a Liberty Ship," "Buy a Jeep" etc.

Working, fighting, giving, or buying war bonds, the members of the CIO take pride in being the first to answer their country's call. This people's drive to finance a people's victory in this people's war can count on CIO's unlimited support.

Bankhead Bill Veto

Organized labor, both CIO and AFL, was first to rise to Pres. Roosevelt's support when he vetoed the inflation-breeding Bankhead bill.

It can claim most of the credit for checking the Senate from over-riding this veto.

The Bankhead bill, like the Pace bill, would result directly in big food price increases from which not only the workers, but the whole American public, including the farmers, would suffer.

Labor supports real dirt farmers' bills. But that's not what these bills are. They are an attempted profit grab for the benefit of a small minority of big landowners, speculators and business interests that farm the farmers.

It is worth remembering that 17 per cent of a working farmer's expenditures go to buy foodstuffs at retail stores, and another 11 per cent to buy seeds and feeds.

The real farmers would suffer, along with the workers, from the price increases resulting from such legislation. They would also suffer even worse from the wholesale inflation—and subsequent deflation—that would result.

Labor and the working farmers will be on guard against any attempt to revive the Bankhead bill, or to enact the equally vicious Pace bill.

A Worth-While Movie

Congratulations are in order to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for producing a really effective anti-Fascist movie, "Keeper Of The Flame."

It doesn't just denounce Hitlerism in distant lands and wink at Fascist beginnings in our own midst. It boldly and excitingly shows how it could happen here.

Not least appropriate is the movie's demonstration of how even a great hero can be used for labor-baiting, for the divisionist propaganda of the power-greedy rich, and for even more sinister purposes.

This is one movie that brings right home to us what we're fighting against.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE CIO today is engaged in more and bigger bread-and-butter battles for the workers than ever before in its history.

Wage stabilization doesn't mean an end to wage struggles. It simply means a shift in emphasis from money wages to real wages.

What's happening to your wages today? They're just melting away in your hands like butter.

In the first place, your wages are cut by the mis-named "Victory Tax" before you get them. Then income and other taxes take a big slice.

Before you can lay you down to sleep, you have to pay more for rent than you ever paid before.

The same goes for clothing and all other necessities.

But the worst wallop to what's left of your wages comes when you feel that urge to eat.

Restaurant prices have about doubled, and just ask your wife about those prices at the grocery store!

Despite all the talk of price control, there's hardly a price on anything you have to eat that hasn't taken the bit in its teeth and just run clean away with your wages.

So you think your union should get you a wage increase? Naturally. It's not wage stabilization for wages to be cut in half by unstabilized living costs.

The CIO is doing its best to get wages adjusted to increased costs, so they will actually have some stable purchasing power.

But suppose there were no governmental wage control and you could get some really big wage increases.

What would that profit you, if Congress enacts sales taxation and more soak-the-poor taxes; if rents are allowed to jump; if farm bloc bills boost food prices 10 or 20 per cent or more; and if the prices at your stores continue their dizzy rise?

You would be doubly worse off. Not only would runaway prices take away more than your money increase, but the general inflation would upset our whole economy and endanger our war effort.

So the bread-and-butter wage interests of its members demand that the CIO place its major emphasis on reducing the prices of food and other living necessities, on keeping down rent, on getting real rationing, and on fighting soak-the-poor taxation.

Here are some of the things the CIO is doing on the biggest bread-and-butter battlefronts of today.

CIO President Murray has launched a national campaign to reduce retail store prices to the level of Sept. 15, 1942, in accordance with the intent of the stabilization law enacted by Congress.

Wages and prices were supposed to be stabilized as of that date. Wages were, but not prices. So now we've got to level prices down, if we're to have any stabilization.

The CIO, along with the rest of labor, has been chiefly instrumental in preventing Congress from over-riding the President's veto of the Bankhead bill—which would have raised food costs by more than 7 per cent.

The CIO is also on guard against the Pace bill, which would result in even bigger increases in food prices.

It is fighting to hold the dikes of rent control against present demands of the real estate lobby, that would result in a billion dollars cut in workers' wages through higher rents.

The CIO's demand for quality grade labeling is a battle against hidden price increases, through sale of lower quality canned goods at highest quality prices.

At the same time, the CIO is fighting tax wage-cuts for the lower-paid by demanding income-tax exemption for single persons earning $800 or less, for married couples with $1500 or less, with an additional allowance of $400 for each dependent.

On all these and many other economic battlefronts, the CIO is not only the most aggressive guardian of the workers' bread-and-butter interests—it is also the outstanding champion of the whole American people's fight against inflation and for a healthy wartime economy to speed the day of victory.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The farm bloc lost a strategic decision this week when the inflationary Bankhead bill (S 660) was sent back to the Senate Agriculture Committee after the President's veto. The bill, however, is still available and can be dragged out again when the big money farm boys feel the time is riper. A clean-cut upholding of the veto would have been a real victory for the war. (See story, page 3.)

Debate on the Hobbs union-busting bill (HR 653) starts this week. Several amendments will be argued. CIO is opposed to the bill as a whole.

Though the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore war mobilization bill (S 607) is still locked up in the Senate Military Affairs Committee, pressure should be kept up to get it out and through to a vote.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
		FOOD COSTS
Bankhead (S 660)	Inflates food prices by taking benefit payments out of parity base.	Sent back to Senate Agriculture after FDR veto.	Watch this one, as it can be pulled out again any day.
Pace (HR 1408)	Inflates food prices up to 25 per cent by including so-called labor costs.	Passed House, in Senate Agriculture. Hearings set.	Watch this one, too. CIO to testify this week.
		ANTI-LABOR
Smith (HR 2239)	Outlaws most union contracts. (See story, page 3).	House Military Affairs.	Wire your Representative against.
Colmer (HR 992)	Outlaws overtime pay, jails strikers.	House Military Affairs.	Wire your Representative against.
Hobbs (HR 653)	Cripples unions on pretense of stopping racketeering.	House debate this week.	Wire your Representative against.
		WAR MOBILIZATION
McKellar (S 575)	Cripples war agencies by putting personnel under Senate review.	Reported out of Senate Judiciary.	Write your Senator against.
1943 taxes.		Referred back to House Ways and Means.	Continue demands for real pay-as-you-go, CIO win-war tax program.

NOTE—Grade Labelling on canned foods was turned down by House Agriculture, is still up to OPA Head Prentiss Brown. Letters and wires demanding labelling should keep coming to him. (See story, page 2).

U. S. Col. Blimps Muddle War Shipping

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—Following up serious charges of waste and inefficiency made by CIO President Murray and the leaders of CIO maritime unions last week, the CIO Maritime Committee this week presented additional evidence of lack of planning and chaotic misuse of United States war shipping.

The new evidence was made public after an interview by officials of the CIO maritime unions with the War Shipping Administration and Admiral Emory S. Land, WSA Administrator. At the interview were Harry R. Bridges, president of the Longshoremen and Warehousemen; Joseph Curran, president of the National Maritime Union and vice-president of the CIO, and Bjorne Halling, CIO Maritime Committee secretary.

"The WSA officials whom we saw told us that the proposals and charges made by CIO President Murray and ourselves last week are 'unwholesome and impractical,'" they said.

"The answer given to the CIO's proposals served to highlight what was pointed out in the proposals—that the multiplicity of government agencies now operating shipping, and the lack of proper planning and coordination by these agencies, went to the heart of the problem."

According to the new evidence cited by the maritime union officers, "two U. S. ships were 'lost' in a New Zealand port for several weeks until a high U. S. diplomatic official came to WSA demanding that they be put to use again."

Scores of ships have been "held in overseas ports simply as storage places or floating warehouses, thus wasting ships, vital supplies, money and skilled manpower."

CRITICIZE TRAINING

The training program for seamen was again criticized in the statement and was brought to President Roosevelt's attention in a separate letter from Curran, who wrote that $83,000,000 of government funds is being wasted to give sketchy training to make boys into unskilled seamen, while the real need is for skilled men.

The maritime statement bluntly said that the WSA's promise to investigate CIO charges and proposals would merely result in another "coat of whitewash," and warned that "it will become apparent in the near future that we can lose the war" unless "there is drastic change in the methods used to operate our merchant shipping.

Answering the WSA's statement that leaks to the enemy might result from joint labor-management-government councils in merchant shipping, the CIO maritime leaders pointed out that no one has made any such suggestion in the hundreds of war industries where the system already operates, and that the WSA's statement "is an insult to loyal American workers."

MORE INEFFICIENCY

Further instances of waste and inefficiency included evidence that morale among east coast longshoremen is dangerously low and that "stoppages of work, averaging almost one a day, occur through the disgust of the men trying in vain to interest someone in a situation they know and feel is costing the lives of American fighting forces abroad."

In a final blast at WSA fumbling, the CIO's statement took up a recent WSA news release to the effect that sending ships out on long voyages in ballast, while essential cargo lies on the docks, was justifiable because "it takes time to load and discharge ships."

"This statement is fantastic." they said. they said. "This is saying in effect that the way to save time on ship turnaround is to send ships out without cargoes.

"We of the CIO maritime union intend to keep on pressing for necessary changes until the chaotic situation is ended and our shipping is used at full wartime capacity."

Allis-Chalmers Local Wins Security Clause, Army-Navy 'E'

WEST ALLIS, Wis., April 10—One week after the award of an Army-Navy "E" to the West Allis works of the Allis-Chalmers Co., the Nat'l. War Labor Board on April 4 granted Local 248, United Auto Workers Union, a maintenance of membership clause for the protection of the union at the plant.

The Board, in a 10-2 decision, pointed out that the company "is a vital link in our chain of war plants."

"The attainment of maximum production from this plant is one of the prerequisites to a speedy and successful termination of the war," the board majority held, adding that they believed "that the institution of this clause (maintenance of membership—Ed.) will materially assist the parties in their efforts to improve the labor relations situation at Allis-Chalmers and thus contribute to the successful prosecution of the war."

Under the clause, workers must authorize the union in writing to check off dues monthly, the authorization remaining in effort for the life of the union contract.

U. S. Future Depends on CIO, Says Robeson

Fort Wayne, Ind., Apr. 10—Paul Robeson, famous Negro baritone, here for a concert, found time for an exclusive interview with a reporter from the Fort Wayne UE Herald, weekly labor paper.

Expressing the belief that the CIO is the only national organization that has a complete program in the real interest of the common people of the nation, Robeson said that "the future of America depends largely upon the CIO's progressive program."

Educational Films

State College, Pa., Apr. 10—Film and library services available to citizens of the state, and of especial interest to labor groups, are described in a folder recently published by the extension services of the Pennsylvania State College and are available in quantity without cost. The folder may be obtained from the Extension Library Services, Room 9, College Library, State College, Pa.

Westinghouse Stalling On UE Pact

Washington, April 10—Contract negotiations involving 75,000 members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers and the Westinghouse Co. broke down this week and the dispute is headed for the War Labor Board, the UE announced here.

The union has demanded that any wage agreement must be retroactive to April 8. The company has flatly refused to agree to this, and negotiations will not be resumed until the War Labor Board clears up the point.

Last year the UE members in Westinghouse lost two months of a wage raise because it was made retroactive only to May 31, though other clauses went back to the April date.

83 Days on Raft But He's No Rickenbacker

New York, April 10—Eighty-three days on a liferaft—the experience of U.S. Navy man Basil D. Izzi—doesn't make a Rickenbacker out of you if you know the score on what union men in the merchant marine and in the war plants are doing to win the war.

This was proved when Izzi, a member of the CIO Textile Workers before he joined the Navy and went through his terrific experience, broadcast on last week's CIO Labor for Victory radio program.

Appearing on the program with members of the Nat'l. Maritime Union, who discussed problems of "keeping 'em sailing," Izzi declared: "I remember how the trade union leaders used to work to keep us all aware of why we should keep production rolling, to beat the Japs and the Nazis.

"All I can say is, I know you guys are doing a job, and doing it well. Keep it up. We've got the so-and-sos on the run. I guess I don't need to tell you NMU guys anything. You'll keep 'em sailing."

On the program with Izzi were four rank and file NMU men, who told the audience something of the manning problems in the merchant marine—and the waste and inefficiency that goes on due to lack of planning on top.

Buy Bonds, Asks Murray

Washington, Apr. 10—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week appealed to all CIO affiliates to support wholeheartedly the U. S. Treasury's current 13 billion dollar War Bond drive.

"Your government must raise additional billions of dollars by sound methods, which will not increase our cost of living or dislocate present money values in a way which will penalize all wage earners," Murray said. "Here is your chance to help our nation to reach complete victory.

"On top of this, it is desirable that all national unions, state and city councils, and local unions adopt special War Bond programs, both for investing their own funds in government securities and for giving their members additional incentives and opportunities to buy War Bonds during the campaign.

Give Byrnes Price Control to Halt Inflation—CIO

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10—Final control on all prices to prevent inflation should be kept by Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, the CIO Cost of Living Committee said here this week.

"Full and consistent control of all farm and food prices is an absolute necessity to prevent inflation," the committee said. "Inflation does not come in a single swoop but as the result of a number of individual price increases, such as have been allowed over recent months.

"We urge that final control of all prices be retained by Mr. Byrnes, with whose office we are maintaining close contact, and not delegated to any other agency. We oppose the proposal of Food Administrator Chester Davis that his agency have final say.

"Organized labor is gravely concerned over the future effectiveness of OPA. It is watching the struggle over grade labeling as a test of OPA's ability to hold the line against inflation. If the line is not held, labor's fears for OPA will be confirmed."

The Civilian War Front:

Cash Meat Prices Good And Bad; Landlords Out for Blood

By THE CIO COST OF LIVING COMMITTEE

The OPA dollars and cents prices on beef, veal, and lamb, which were announced this week to go into effect April 15, are both good and bad.

They are good because they are uniform and easily enforceable ceilings. Like the pork prices previously announced, these prices vary with the nine regional zones into which the country has been divided. There are two classifications of prices, one for the independent stores and one for the chain stores doing a business in excess of $250,000 a year.

All prices are tied to Department of Agricultural grades of meat. The grades must be shown on the meat, while the list of prices for the various cuts and grades must be plainly posted in every store.

What is bad about the new prices is that they represent a substantial rise over previous legal ceiling prices, which varied from store to store. The rise is particularly marked when the comparison is made for the chain stores. Their previous legal prices were anywhere from 10 to 20 per cent below the present ceilings.

It is true that the low chain store prices were mostly a fiction since these stores have had very little meat to sell. Most of the supplies went to the stores that had higher ceiling prices or to stores that sold their meat without regard to ceiling prices, high or low. Nevertheless many consumers have been buying at least part of their meat at substantially lower prices than they will now be forced to pay.

"Monkeyshines"

The OPA has sought to explain the new prices as lower than the actual prices which consumers have been paying in recent months. This explanation makes a monkey of the B.L.S. Cost of Living Index, whose meat prices, evidently reflecting legal ceiling prices rather than actual prices, have shown almost no change since March, 1942. The B.L.S. figures will now have to make a long jump in order to catch up with reality.

An organized campaign to break down OPA's rent control program—the best and most effective program the OPA has carried out—has been started by the National Association of Real Estate Boards. This organization, defeated in its efforts to push through anti-rent control bills in Congress, has been putting pressure on OPA officials in Washington to change its physical administration as well as to modify its policies.

Among the demands made by this organization are that rent control should be put into the hands of local rent committees, affiliated with the local rationing boards, and that rents should be adjusted to the prevailing level of other prices and to the income of the tenants.

Landlords Want Gravy

These demands sound reasonable until it is recalled that under the administration of rent control by local committees, which preceded the present era of Federal rent control, rents increased sharply. The argument that rents should be adjusted to other prices is simply a demand that the landlords should be permitted to share the gravy enjoyed in some other field where price controls have been less effective.

The figures on net operating income compiled by the OPA show that the landlords have no case to support their allegations of inequity of the present system of rent control. In apartment houses net operating income is 14 per cent greater than in the two years before rent control went into effect; for small units, net operating income is 26 per cent greater than in 1940 and 1941.

If the demands of the real estate lobby were carried out it is estimated that there would be a rise of a billion dollars a year on the nation's rent bill. This is equivalent to a billion dollar cut in workers' wages.

Pressure On OPA

Under ordinary circumstances, the landlords' campaign would be doomed to failure. But these are not ordinary circumstances at the OPA national offices. The new OPA regime seems particularly sensitive to pressure from reactionary business and Congressional circles. It was learned this week that the landlords' campaign has secured the help of Congressman Howard Smith, Virginia Tory, who heads a committee "to investigate acts of executive agencies beyond the scope of their authority."

Watch for hearings of this committee at which testimony will be introduced that the OPA has exceeded its legal authority in establishing rent ceilings. When that happens, labor all over the country should serve notice on Price Administrator Brown that they are not going to stand for any nonsense, and that it should not be necessary for them to organize marches from war plants upon Washington to show the intimate connection of rent control to war production.

The CIO Cost of Living Committee, following a conference with Justice Byrnes, director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, has publicly urged that final control be retained and exercised by this office on all items of the cost of living. Justice Byrnes is the supreme authority on wage stabilization and it is only fair that he exercise his coordinate authority on price and rents in the same spirit in which his authority on wages has been exercised. The authority on prices should not be frittered away by delegation to the Department of Agriculture or by faulty and loose administration on the part of the OPA.

CIO Leaders Named to Head Nat'l War Fund

Washington, Apr. 10—Three national leaders have been named to the Board of Directors of the National War Fund, coordinating agency for all local war appeal drives, it announced this week.

The CIO representatives are CIO Pres. Philip Murray; Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO Committe for American and Allied War Relief; and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The National War Fund, which has the active support of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, will correlate the raising and distribution of funds to 22 participating agencies. A coordinated fund-raising drive next Fall will make it possible for the first time for Americans to contribute through one unified campaign to war relief and social agencies that might otherwise conduct separate drives.

CIO Officers Back Murray Price Policy

Washington, Apr. 10—CIO executive officers, meeting in Washington Thursday, voted full support for Pres. Murray's recently stated demand that retail prices be restored to the level of September 15, 1942, when wage stabilization was made effective.

A big campaign is planned to bring pressure for this reduction in living costs.

The CIO executives also voted endorsement of the Ball-Burton-Hatch bill for international action to preserve world peace.

The position of the CIO representatives on negotiations with the AFL was approved (see story elsewhere in this issue), as was also Pres. Murray's support of the veto of the Bankhead bill.

The executive officers include the CIO president, secretary-treasurer and nine vice presidents.

OPA Appointment

Wilmington, Del., Apr. 10—Pres. Gilbert Lewis of the New Castle County Industrial Union Council this week was appointed CIO representative on an Office of Price Administration Labor Advisory Committee.

UAW Women Urge Child Care Action NOW

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Action to meet wartime child care needs was the theme of the three-day visit to Washington last week of Dorothy Keene and Catherine Gelles, president and secretary-treasurer of the Women's Auxiliaries of the United Automobile Workers, CIO.

Sister Gelles has been named by Secretary George Addes of the UAW to head the child care work of the union. She came to find out why the urgent child care needs of hundreds of thousands of UAW women are not being met.

Here's the story on Detroit, for instance. The Wayne County Child Care Committee was established almost two years ago. Finally, in January, 1943, the Board of Education sponsored a project for Lanham funds for 50 nursery schools and 25 before-and-after school care centers. Two months later Federal Works approved the program but cut substantially the amount of Federal money requested.

Detroit needs care for about 44,000 children now. The new projects will meet only half the need. In the meantime, a very serious black market in child care is growing up.

And Detroit is far better off than many other war industry centers. In Milwaukee the Board of Education has refused to continue sponsorship of existing WPA nursery schools or to apply for funds for any additional facilities, although working mothers are in desperate need of them. In Evansville, Ind., where the city population has increased by 30,000, UE reports "there are no day nurseries, nor any plans for them."

SAME OLD STORY

It's the same story over and over again. There is no real understanding of the importance to victory of adequate provision for the care of children of women workers.

There's a hue and cry about absenteeism, and a bill is proposed in Congress to punish workers for failure to report to their jobs. And when you get right down to cases, you find that the rate of absenteeism is twice as high for women as for men and that one of the principal reasons is lack of child care facilities.

President Murray told the Truman Committee about four-year-old Joan Travis, who was burned to death in Providence, Rhode Island, while her mother Carmela was at work on the night shift in the shipyard. He asked, "Will legislation ease the minds of such mothers while they are at work so as to dissuade them from staying at home occasionally to make adequate provisions for their children?" Of course not.

MILLIONS MORE NEEDED

That's why Catherine Gelles and Dorothy Keene came to Washington—to tell all the federal agencies concerned that child care is an urgent war manpower problem. They came to protest the typical government approach which begins: "Of course, women with children under 14 should not be working." They came to point out that millions of mothers of young children are working and that millions more will be needed to win the war, and that the job that must be done is to enable those women to be efficient production workers by establishing child care centers.

Above all, they came to demand that all the federal agencies concerned—the Office of Defense Health and Welfare Services, the Children's Bureau, the Office of Education and the Federal Works Agency—stop jurisdictional wrangling and pool their energies and resources to help war areas provide care for children of working mothers as quickly as possible.

Stretch Out Your Meals With Delicious Hot Breads

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Now that meats are rationed, the all-in-one oven meal is fast becoming the practical way to prepare dinner. As meat stretchers, the casserole dishes are coming into their own, especially when served with delicious hot buttered muffins or biscuits. Slip a pan of muffins into the oven along with the rest of your dinner and you'll have them for the next day with creamed leftover meat and vegetables.

As a time saver, you can have a jar of muffin mix, prepared by yourself, all ready to use for breakfast, lunch or supper. You can make the basic muffin mix and store it in a covered jar in the frigidaire. It will keep for several weeks.

By adding milk and eggs you can make any one of a number of hotbreads and desserts in a hurry. This recipe makes about seven cups of dry muffin mix.

RECIPE—DRY MUFFIN MIX

6 cups sifted enriched flour
2½ tablespoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons salt
¾ cup sugar
¾ cup shortening

Sift dry ingredients together. Cut in shortening, using two knives or pastry blender, until mixture resembles meal. Store in covered jar in refrigerator.

RECIPE—PLAIN MUFFINS
(1 dozen large muffins)

2 cups dry muffin mix
2-3 cup milk
1 egg, Grade B

When you measure the muffin mix, pack it lightly into the measuring cup and level off with the back of a knife. Combine beaten egg and milk and add to muffin mix. Stir only until dry ingredients are damped. Don't beat smooth. Fill well greased muffin pans 2-3 full of batter. Bake in a hot oven 400 degrees for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to 375 degrees and bake about 10 minutes more. Serve hot.

The secret of making light muffins is to work quickly and stir liquid only long enough to dampen the dry ingredients.

JAM MUFFINS

The children will like these too. A little extra sweets will add a little extra energy.

Recipe—Fill muffin pans 1-3 full of plain batter for plain muffins. Add ½ teaspoon thick preserves or jam. Cover with remaining batter and bake as usual.

Blueberry muffins—if you can spare the points. Add 2-3 cup canned blueberries, well drained, to Plain muffin recipe. Bake as usual.

Waffles—Serve with maple syrup, sour cream or as a base for creamed vegetables or left over meats.

Recipe:

2 eggs, Grade B
2 tablespoons melted butter or oleo (with Vitamin A added)
1¼ cups milk
1¼ cups muffin mix

Mix and pour over hot waffle iron. For variations, add grated cheese, or chopped apple to the waffle batter.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Representative Joseph J. LaMorte, District 22, USA-CIO conducted the organizational drive at Trojan Steel, Charleston, W. Va., which resulted in an election victory for USA-CIO, as reported in last week's column and comes through with another victory at Chamberlin Metal Weather Strip, Ironton, O., where CIO polled 86 per cent of the votes. Brother Charles Artis participated in the organization of this plant also.

The USA came through with a victory at York Safe and Lock polling 2079 votes to 1938 for AFL, George Medrick, USA District Director, reported. Al Whitehouse, director, District 25, USA came in with victory at United Welding, Middleton, O., where CIO received 115 votes to 30 for AFL.

Adolph Germer, director of Organization, IWA-CIO, reports a victory for the Woodworkers at the Ewauna Box Mill in Klamath Falls, Ore., with a vote of 204 for CIO as against 202.

Wilbur E. Bade, Organization Director, American Newspaper Guild, sends in a victory from Portland, Ore., in the circulation department of the Journal. The vote was 50 for CIO to 10 for no union.

First Victory

Regional Director Frank Bender sends in a victory for the UAW-CIO at Precision Development, and Martin and Schwartz, Inc. Mill by a vote of 97 to 56. This is first election victory on the astern shore of that state.

CIO Director Fullerton Fulton sends in a fine victory for the Transport Workers Union and many Tracklayers of Chicago Surface Lines, with a vote of 1011 for CIO to 37 for AFL, 15 for independent and three for no union.

Regional Director Fullerton Fulton sends in two more UAW-CIO victories in the Chicago area, Link Belt, Chicago, 722 to 440 for no union; Metal Specialities, Co., 96 for CIO as aganst 14 for no union.

Field Representative John D. House reports a record smashing NLRB election victory at Sciota Ordnance by a vote of 241 for United Rubber Workers, a 99 99/100 per cent plus vote for CIO.

On The Million Membership Mark!

The UAW-CIO is determined to respond to our call for million duespaying members from that splendid organization. The following election results in Canada show the strength and vitality of our movement in the Dominion. Following the DeHavilland Aircraft election victory of last week where CIO polled 2424 votes to 1033 for the AFL, President R. J. Thomas reports reports these additional victories: Canada Foundry & Forgings, Welland, Ont., UAW-CIO, 375 to 78 for no union; Bendix Exlipse, Windsor, UAW-CIO, 351 to 118 for no union; A. R. Potzin Co., UAW-CIO 34; no union, none; Windsor Beeding, Windsor, UAW-CIO 87 to 13 for no union; Trusconsteel Corp., UAW-CIO 243, no union 86; Walker Metal Products, Windsor, UAW-CIO 333 to 107 for no union; Dominion Forgings Co., Windsor, UAW-CIO 363 to 142; Eaton Wilcon Rich, Windsor, UAW-CIO 144 to 43 for no union.

George S. Nordstrom, UAW-CIO Director, Region 4, gets in the victory column again with the following in addition to the two Chicago victories given above; Wisconsin Motors, Wilwaukee, CIO won by two to one over AFL.

Big Textile Victory!

President Emil Rieve, TWUA-CIO, announces that cotton mill workers in 10 out of 11 mills in New Bedford, Mass., have chosen the Textile Workers Union in one of the biggest elections in textile history.

TWUA was selected by the workers in the Kilburn, Hathaway, Nonquit, Quissett, Nashawena, Naushon, Peiree Bros., Soule, Gosnold and Wamsutta Mills. A total of 11,504 votes were cast. Nine of the 11 mills constituted one unit. Employes of the Kilburn and New Bedford Cotton Mills voted separately. In the large unit, the TWUA-CIO received 4,634 votes, AFL 4,319. Kilburn Mill cast 601 votes for TWUA-CIO and 525 votes for AFL. In the New Bedford Cotton Mill, 564 votes were cast for the AFL as against 361 for TWUA-CIO.

Congratulations to all participating in this very fine achievement!

NMU Pamphlet Tells Of Fight Against Bias

NEW YORK, April 10—Two stories are told, one without words, of the fight of the National Maritime Union for the rights of its Negro members, in the 16page leaflet, "The NMU Fights Jim Crow," recently issued by the NMU.

Fred Wright, NMU cartoonis' now in the service of his countr has drawn a series of running ca toons telling the ironic story o an ambitious young Negro janitor' struggle for an education.

In the first sketch, he is shown with his mop and pail. The las sketch shows him finally landing a job—as janitor—again with the mop and pail.

The other story tells in print some of the outstanding cases in which the NMU has gone to bat with various steamship companies and government officials for the right of Negroes to hold jobs without discrimination.

Rubber Wins At Gadsden

Gadsden, Ala., Apr. 10—Gadsden, once scene of much anti-labor violence, is now highly organized by CIO. Latest CIO victory is at the United Rubber Workers has won an Goodyear rubber plant, where the election by 1144 to 327 votes.

This follows closely on the CIO United Steelworkers' victory at the big Republic Steel plant here.

Pres. S. H. Dalrymple and other URW organizers were once beaten within an inch of their lives in earlier attempts to organize the Goodyear plant.

'If Industry Were As Good As Labor . . .'

Washington ,April 10—If industry's war record were as good as labor's the nation would be farther on the way to beating its enemies, Allan S. Haywood, CIO director of organization, said in a radio broadcast last Sunday.

"No group of Americans has taken its war-time responsibilities more seriously than organized labor," he declared, "but this cannot be said of industry."

Aside from "such scandals as the supplying of faulty steel for ship construction, or the shocking wastage of our shipping facilities recently exposed by the CIO maritime unions," Haywood took industry to task for delays, shutdowns, failure to make full use of plant facilities, and other obstructions to our production program.

He asserted that labor has put winning of the war first, and has "accepted wage stabilization at a time when profits are soaring to dizzy heights."

CIO-AFL PLEAD FOR ACTION: Albert Shepard of the CIO United Office & Professional Workers; Louis B. Baycroft, War Manpower Commission official, and Pres. James L. McDevitt of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor, spoke at a Philadelphia CIO-AFL Win-the-War Conference of white collar workers recently. The Conference, representing 35,000 workers, called upon President Roosevelt to open a second front in Europe.

To Help Beat Hitler:

World Labor Congress Urged by Mexican CTM

MEXICO CITY, April 10 (ALN)— Six thousand delegates to the national convention of the Confederation of Mexican Workers (CTM), representing more than a million organized workers, voted this week to urge the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL) to call a continental congress of all labor organizations in the western hemisphere, as a step toward affiliation of hemispheric labor with the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

A world congress of all the United Nations' labor movements, a unanimously-adopted resolution stated, is immediately necessary to win the war and guarantee a democratic peace. All CTAL affiliates except two have now voted to undertake unity negotiations with the Anglo-Soviet Committee.

Fidel Velasquez was reelected general secretary, heading a unity ticket supported by all section of the CTM. The newly elected Educational Secretary is Alexander Carrillo, editor of the CTM daily, El Popular, who accompanied Toledano on his recent trip to the U. S. The CTM executive consists of six secretaries—for Labor Conflicts, Organization, Farm Action, Education, Economics and Finances —in addition to the general secretary.

The unity of the convention was a striking rebuke to the Mexican Fifth Column. "Complete unity of Mexican labor within the CTAL came out of this convention," Lombardo Toledano, head of the CTAL, told Allied Labor News. "Organized labor in Mexico, more unified than at any time in its history, will work ever harder to win the war against Nazi-fascism in the interests of Mexico and all the peoples of the world."

URGE WORLD UNITY

Toledano, in a speech to the convention, renewed his call for a Latin American expeditionary force to fight beside British and U. S. troops in Europe. Fifty thousand Mexican workers, trained in the CTM labor militias, would volunteer for this force, he said, and another 50,000 volunteers could be raised in other Latin American countries.

He warned that reaction was on the offensive in Mexican politics and that "international appeasers" were trying to isolate the Soviet Union and "leave the United Nations divided when final victory is won." This, he said, pointed to the pressing need for national and international labor unity.

The convention called unanimously for freedom for Puerto Rico and India under the Atlantic Charter —"the banner of Latin American and Mexican labor." On the domestic front, it voted to seek general wage increases to keep pace with the rise in the cost of living, and demanded drastic government action against runaway prices.

The convention wired President Roosevelt: "We send the people of the U. S. this expression of our solidarity in the struggle against Nazi-fascism and our faith in the triumpth of your progressive policies and the fulfillment of the Atlantic Charter, which guarantees the neighborliness of the American nations." Other wires were sent to Premier Joseph Stalin, Prime Minister Winston Churchill and Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

Roy Hendrickson, National Food Distribution Administrator, is urging that the government subsidize low-income groups and physically handicapped persons to enable them to buy sufficient food for their existence, in a period of rapidly rising prices.

Tells Europe Of CIO's Democracy

Washington, Apr. 10—Many races and creeds are represented among the millions of members of CIO unions organized under the industrial democracy of America, Clinton S. Golden told foreign workers in a speech recorded here for the Office of War Information. The speech will be translated into a number of languages and broadcast over short wave to European countries.

Pointing out that he spoke as an assistant to Philip Murray, president of the United Steelworkers of America as well as head of the CIO, Golden estimated that the CIO steel union, now in its seventh year, had more than 50 different nationalities in its ranks.

Jew and gentile, Protestant and Catholic, Negro and white, "all are brothers in the democracy of our unions," he said.

Toledano, Ibanez In Unity Talks

Mexico City, Apr. 10—(ALN)— Leaders of U. S. labor are showing a growing awareness of the need for unity among the allied labor movements, Bernardo Ibanez, general secretary of the Confederation of Chilean Workers (CTCh) said here this week.

Ibanez, who is also a vice president of the Conferdation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), stopped in Mexico City to consult with Vicente Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, before returning to Chile after a tour of war plants in the U. S. under the joint auspices of the CIO and AFL.

"I have had an exchange of views with Lombardo Toledano on the international problems confronting Latin American labor," he said. "We have arranged that within a few weeks the executive committee of the CTAL will meet in Santiago to discuss forms of collective effort with labor in other countries. I believe that we must come closer to the labor movements of the U. S. and Canada, to create a collaboration which will serve for the defense of labor during the war and afterward."

"While in the U. S. I talked with government officials and representatives of all groups in the labor movement," Ibanez said. "In everyone I dealt with I found a keen desire to extend the bonds between the United States and Latin America. Among the labor leaders I discovered a growing unity, a greater comprehension of their obligations to the labor movements of other countries. I am taking back with me to Chile an impression of the great effort the United States is making to win the war against fascism."

No Pikers Here:

CIO Digs Deep to Aid Red Cross, War Fund Drives

WASHINGTON, April 10—CIO members in Detroit and Pittsburgh have contributed more than 18 percent of the total amounts given to the Community War Chests of their respective cities, it was announced this week by the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief.

In Detroit, the CIO membership dug deep into its pockets for $1,302,603 as its part of the auto city's $7,075,186 war chest goal. The Pittsburgh CIO pledged $898,894, representing 18 per cent of the city's $4,913,077 quota.

Other cities thruout the country turned up similar records, many of them due solely to the generosity and organizational impetus given by strong CIO unions.

In Milwaukee, the CIO alone raised $171,127 for the American Red Cross—11.6 per cent of the total. At the same time the CIO people were swelling Milwaukee's Community War Chest by $280,000 or 10 per cent of the city's total contribution. The first two cities to compile complete reports—Milwaukee and Baltimore — reported that CIO members alone in the two cities contributed more than $1,038,000 to their cities' Red Cross and Community Chests. Cleveland War Chest officials tabulated $270,774 in contributions from members of CIO unions.

2 CIO Vice-Presidents Sponsor Soviet Council

NEW YORK, Apr. 10—Sponsors of the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, Inc., whose formation was announced here April 6, include two CIO vice presidents—R. J. Thomas, president of the United Automobile Workers, and Pres. Joseph Curran of the Natl. Maritime Union.

Dr. Corliss Lamont, chairman of the Council, said its purpose "is to promote better understanding and strengthen friendly relations between the United States and the Soviet Union as essential for winning the war and establishing world-wide democracy and an enduring peace. To this end the Council will take action against anti-Soviet propaganda aimed at dividing the United Nations."

Among the other sponsors are Sec. of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, William L. Batt of the WPB, Senators Claude Pepper and Elbert D. Thomas, Leopold Stokowski, Albert Einstein, Raymond Gram Swing, Paul Robeson, Charles Chaplin and Joseph E. Davies.

GEORGE WEAVER, newly appointed director of the CIO's Committee to Abolish Racial Discrimination, has taken up his duties at National CIO headquarters in Washington. He is a member of Local 1001 of the Transport Service Employes which has some 500 members among station employes in Chicago. Willard S. Townsend, national TSE president, is a member of the committee. Other members are CIO Secretary James B. Carey, chairman; James Leary, Boyd Wilson and Ferdinand Smith.

Pledge Fight On Absenteeism

Monsanto, Ill., April 10.—A pledge to fight absenteeism so that organized labor can make its full contribution in this "people's war against world-wide domination by the forces of Fascism" was voiced this week by Local 538, Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers Union.

CIO Backs Battle To Wipe Out Race Discrimination

NEW YORK, Apr. 10—CIO's stand for total mobilization of all our resources includes mobilization of the Negro people by destroying discriminations that now keep them out of a full place in our democracy, CIO Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey said in speaking to a Natl. Negro Congress meeting here today.

"Today our struggle against discrimination takes on a new significance," he said. "It is no longer a matter of simple justice that discriminations be removed. It is a matter that runs to the very survival of our country and our freedom.

"We fight the polltax for this reason, because the polltax keeps 10 million of our citizens—both Negro and white, let us note—out of full participation in our democracy and consequently out of full participation in our country's war."

"Our young men, white and Negro, Jew, Catholic, Protestant—men of all origins and all beliefs—are united in fighting fascism on the battlefronts. They are united also with the armies of our great allies, together in one common cause.

"We must achieve the same national and international unity that they are achieving on the battlefield. In this way, we shall be sure that everyone of our people is fully involved in this people's war."

Guildsmen Take To Air To Counter Anti-Labor Lies

NEW YORK, Apr. 10—CIO newspapermen here have a new angle on radio news commentary that they're broadcasting over Station WLIB at 7:30 p.m. every Friday. The newsmen, members of the N. Y. Newspaper Guild, call their new program "The News—and What To Do About It."

First week's program gave news of the Willow Run bomber plant, dealt with the Red Cross drive and former Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, the ex-hero of World War I, and urged listeners to send letters to OPA chief Prentiss Brown on grade labelling of canned foods.

"The Newspaper Guild does not present itself as a know-it-all outfit," John T. McManus, local Guild president, said in the first program—a refreshing contrast to the way the professionals present themselves.

"We have no politics that anyone can put a label on, beyond the fact that we are anti-fascist and intend to expose every fascistic person and action we discover on the home front and in the areas abroad under American influence or protection."

Whip Over Europe:

Slave-Labor System of Nazi Germany Fed By Torture, Trickery and Starvation

Increased resistance against the Nazi forced-labor decrees in Occupied Europe has focused attention on one of the biggest manhunts in all history. It is the Nazis' ruthless search through Europe for more and more labor for the German war machine.

In the process of obtaining this labor the Nazis have created a vast slave society. Millions of workers are laboring for the Nazi "masters" in the occupied countries, building fortifications and roads and working in the factories and in the fields. Millions have also been shifted from one end of Europe to another, and other millions of workers have been transplanted to Germany.

This report is the story of the Nazi slave-labor society. It is issued by the Office of War Information on the basis of material reaching the OWI and other Government agencies.

"We shall consider it a matter of course not to husband foreign lives at a time that is exacting such a hard sacrifice of our own life. Joined indissolubly and loyally to our allies, we shall carry on the mobilization of the spiritual and material values of Europe such as our continent has not hitherto experienced in its several thousand years history."

Thus declared Adolf Hitler on February 24 in a message to the German people celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Nazi Party.

The Nazi system is a primitive, brute-force society in which the bayonet and concentration camp have replaced the free labor market; in which men, women and children are shifted about forcibly from one end of Europe to the other like pawns in a gigantic chess game; and in which millions of captive peoples are exploited by a "master race."

Undetermined millions out of Europe's Nazi-dominated working population of 165,000,000, almost all of whom live in territories with labor-conscription laws, are working for the Axis war machine in the occupied countries.

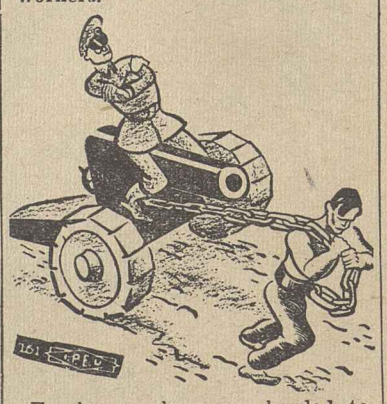
More than 5,000,000 foreign civilians and prisoners are also working for the Axis war effort in Germany.

Methods of persuasion for obtaining workers have been accompanied in the Western occupied countries by systematic techniques of compulsion to make workers volunteer. These techniques include:

1. Exploitation of economic distress. By closing large numbers of factories in the occupied countries by way of "rationalizing" foreign economic systems into the German war economy, the Nazis have thrown thousands of workers out of jobs and given them the unhappy alternative of starving or going to work in Germany.

2. Manipulation of the rationing system. If a desired worker refuses to go to Germany, the Nazis use the simple expedient of taking away his food or clothing ration card.

3. The "work book" and the police round-up. Compulsory labor laws and the introduction of the German "work book" in the occupied countries have made it easier for the police and the Gestapo to round up unemployed workers.



Foreign workers are herded together in camps, barracks and unused factories, and, in some case, billeted in private houses when they are working in cities. According to reports reaching United States government agencies, the camps are crowded, the food—cooked by the workers—is bad, the heating is meager, and some of the camps even lack lighting and running water. No food ration or clothing cards are issued to workers living in groups, and the workers' clothes are obtained through their industrial establishment.

The cost of their upkeep is deducted from their wages. Despite promises made by the Nazis before the workers get to Germany, the movements of all foreign workers—always under suspicion as possible saboteurs—are restricted.

The hours of work for most workers are reported to be 60 to 72 a week, and the workers, with the exception of Eatsern laborers and prisoners, get over-time at straight pay.

According to one report of condition in a Polish workers barracks in Germany, the workers there got up at 4:30 A. M., were marched to work under bayonetted soldier guard at 5 A. M., and worked until 10 P. M., with forty minutes off for lunch. They got an allotment of a half pound of bread a day, said the report, which added that breakfast consisted of unsweetened black coffee (ersatz), while lunch usually consisted of turnip soup or a soup made of beet leaves.

War has made the already inflexible German labor system even more rigid, and it has placed the German worker too completely at the mercy of the state. It has strengthened the penal powers exercised over German workers by German employers and the Nazi trustees of labor, giving employers the power to fine workers without regard to existing plant regulations of Nazi statues.

Formerly, conduct "contrary to discipline"—forbidden conversation, whistling, singing, unnecessary visits to the washroom, and violation of the labor contract—was punishable in German factories. Now, in addition, conduct "contrary to duty" is also punishable. Nazi officials determine the interpretation of the word "duty."

This is the slave-laber society that the Nazis have created in Europe. It represents the Nazi conception of the "New Order," under which the Nazis claim the "right" to rule a continent of serfs as members of a "master race."

It is a reversion to medieval feudalism—with two major differences.

While feudalism was a system of fixed status and gross inequities, it was also a system of reciprocal duties. The serf was forced to work for the master, but the master was also honor-bound to look after him and protect him. Germany's slave-labor society is more one-sided. The Nazis do not consider themselves honor-bound to protect the worker. Only through coldly-calculated logic do they stop short of oppressing the worker at the point where his productivity would be impaired.

There is another difference, too. From the standpoint of the German worker, the Nazi "New Order" is a strange kind of feudalism. For him, as a member of the "master race," it is a feudalism in which the "masters" as well as the serfs are enslaved.

FDR Blasts Ban On Salary Limit

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt this week took Congress to task for killing his salary limitation order, thereby allowing from 2,000 to 3,000 individuals to continue receiving salaries equal to or in excess of $67,200 a year, before taxes.

Criticizing Congress for lumping the salary limitation provision with an important measure extending the public dept limit, President Roosevelt said:

"The result is that Congress has authorized the drafting of men into the Army for $600 regardless of whether they are earning $100 or $100,000 a year, but has refused to authorize the reduction in the salary of any man not drafted into the Army no matter how high his income may be."

The President let the repeal of the limitation order become law because if he had vetoed it, he would have had to kill the public debt measure.

Dies Right? He Says So Himself!

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—Any doubts anyone might have about the policies of Congressman Martin Dies would be speedily resolved if the Texan had his uninhibited way in the world—Dies is right, for he says so himself.

Nephew Tells Labor-Hater Hoffman to 'Get on Beam'

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., Apr. 10—Rep. Clare Hoffman of this state, notorious anti-labor Congressman, was told off by his own nephew this week. Nephew Robert Hoffman, a URWA member, wrote his uncle what the workers think of the Hobbs Bill soon to come up in the House.

"If the workers' rights are to be kept up," wrote Robert Hoffman, "the Hobbs Bill must not go through. We urge you to vote 'No' when the bill comes up."

Robert Hoffman is a member of Local 210, URWA-CIO, here.

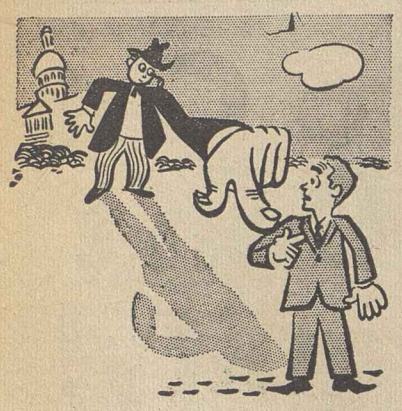
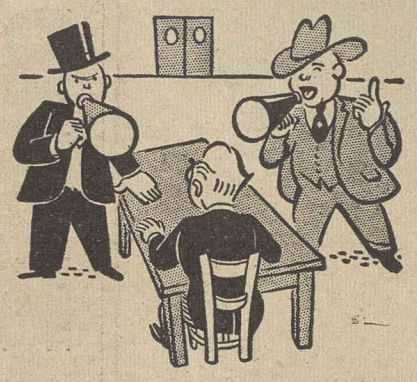
Your War Job With Congress

You have a war job with Congress, just as important as your war job in your grievance committee, your negotiating committee, your production committee. This job must be done every day. You cannot hope for a real win-the-war program from your Congressman and your Senators unless you tell them and keep on telling them what the workers and the plain people feel and what they want from their elected representatives. This job has to be done in an organized way. These sketches, prepared for a forthcoming CIO pamphlet, show the various steps that must be taken and kept up in order to keep Congress on the victory beam.



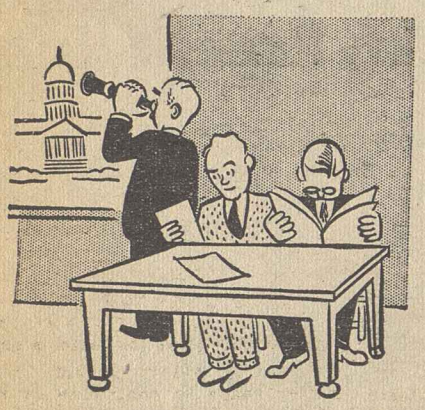
EVERYTHING Congress does affects you and affects the war. No matter how far you work and live from Washington, Congress reaches out and touches you as a war worker, on your job, in your union, at home. Your wages, your living standards, your rights as an American are constantly being affected in Washington.

IN THE SAME WAY, you affect Congress. If you keep still, if you fail to let your Congressman know what's on your mind, he forgets about you—until election time rolls around again. Let him know what's on America's mind. He's elected and paid to do what the people tell him. Your Congressman is no mind-reader. He has to be told.

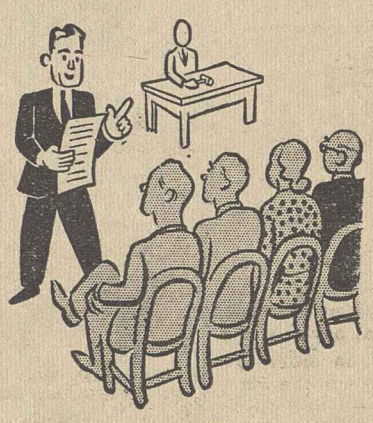


BILLS in Congress are handled first in committees, where their fate is often decided before they hit the floor. Lobbyists, many of them working against the people and against the war, keep a close watch on what goes on in committee, do some of their most effective work here.

WAR WORKERS must learn to operate in Congressional committees as effectively as the lobbyists do. Congressmen are there to listen; the function of committees is to hear what the public has to say. Keep your legislative eye on the progress of measures in the committee.



THE LEGISLATIVE Committee in your union is just as important as any other union group. It serves to keep the membership informed on what cooks in Washington. It also serves to keep the membership aware and interested and on their toes when pressure is needed. It must be made a real win-the-war arm of the union.



MAKE your Legislative Committee a full-time part of your union, with a real place on the agenda of every meeting. Give it your best and most active union members. Don't let it be pushed aside. And above all, don't let it become a sporadic affair that functions only when there's an emergency. You can't win with Congress if you simply stagger from crisis to crisis.

LETTERS and wires are the quickest, easiest and most popular way of working on Congress. Keep them brief, to the point, and see that they're individual letters, not boilerplate. Your Congressman will read them. What's more, he'll answer them. Congressmen have plenty of secretaries whose job is to keep score on the mail.

KEEP a friendly tab on your Congressman when he comes home. Visit him, get him down to the union hall, meet him at the train—that's why Congressmen come home, to find out what the voters are thinking. Help him out, and he'll work better for you. NOTE: Congressmen and Senators will most likely be coming home this week (April 19) to stay home for two weeks.

Organize to Win Pa. CIO Urges

HARRISBURG, Pa., Apr. 17—Close to 1,000 delegates, representing CIO workers in the war industries of one of the country's most highly industrialized states, met here this week for the 6th annual convention of the state CIO Council.

Headed by Pres. John A. Phillips and Sec.-Treas. Harry Boyer, the council delegates came from steel, from auto, from rubber, from electrical and manufacturing plants, and from dozens of service industries.

The convention discussed the state and national CIO war program, together with the task of building stronger CIO organization to make the CIO victory program a living reality in the state.

CIO OFFICIALS SPEAK

It heard greetings and speeches from CIO Organization Director and Vice-President Allan S. Haywood, from USA-CIO Secretary-Treasurer David J. McDonald, from John Brophy, and from various officials of U. S. government war agencies.

Paying tribute to the leadership of CIO President Philip Murray, McDonald revealed that membership in the United Steelworkers was now at 711,708, which is a one third increase since August, 1942.

Locals affiliated to the Council were directed to set up "their own permanent organizations for practical political work" and to join "with all other labor, farmer, liberal and progressive forces" with the "single aim of winning the war and a just and durable peace."

As a main step winning the war, the delegates called for a second front in Europe as an immediate necessity "for the carrying through of the decisions of the Casablanca conference calling for the unconditional surrender of the Axis," and in order "to win victory over Hitler in 1943."

As another factor in the victory program, the convention unanimously supported "the immediate need of international labor unity without qualification on the part of their American, British and Soviet trade unions to help in the effort to bring about victory of the United Nations over the Axis."

Support for the coal miners in their wage demands "as a matter of equity and justice" was expressed, together with sharp criticism of John L. Lewis.

Labor Must Have Voice In Post-War World, Says Murray

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17—The two million CIO members now serving in the armed forces want to know what kind of a contribution their labor movement is going to make to humanity when the war is over, CIO President Murray said here this week at a dinner sponsored by the American Friends of German Freedom.

The labor movement has a definite responsibility to the nation and to the soldiers for the post- war world, and must have a voice in planning it, Murray declared.

Warning that there are forces at work in America and other countries determined to prevent labor from having a voice in the reconstruction of Europe, Murray said that "in the face of these dangers we must promote interest among the people of the United States to see that labor is given representation at the peace table when peace comes."

"The CIO stands four-square for international labor collaboration—it does not qualify this," Murray stated.

FIRM POLICY

"We shall urge a firm policy toward the aggressor nations. We shall see to it that they do not re-arm. We shall see to it that they root out the tyrannies which have turned these nations against the world. But we shall not deceive ourselves with the easy thought that peace is to be guaranteed by dismembering Germany or by imposing an alien dictatorship upon the German or Italian peoples."

The CIO is pledged, Murray told the representatives of foreign labor, to "lend every practical support" toward building independent democratic nations in occupied Europe. He reiterated pledges made at CIO convention backing the enslaved peoples of Europe after the war.

Pres. Murray's speech was preceded by a short talk made by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt who said that "in the world we are facing, there must be a joining of hands of the people that are willing to work for the freedom we are seeking."

Among the groups in all countries standing for the four freedoms, she said "it will have to be the workers, the people as a whole" who will work together in all countries for a common cause.

'Four Fifths of Workers Buying War Bonds'

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—At least four-fifths of all industrial workers in the Nation are buying bonds regularly, CIO Pres. Philip Murray told a radio audience last Monday on a national broadcast opening up the Second War Loan drive.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau launched the drive in an address given at a rally in Carnegie Hall, New York City.

"According to our government's figures, there are 172,000 war savings plans of all kinds in operation," Murray said. "It has been proved beyond question that the most successful of these plans are the ones in which a joint committee of labor and management are cooperating wholeheartedly."

Urging support of our men on the fighting fronts, Murray said that there is "scarcely a worker in American industry who does not have a brother, a son, a husband, or even a daughter somewhere along the fighting fronts."

Hobbs Bill Passes House, Can Be Hobbled in Senate

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—The Hobbs bill, aimed at busting the unions under the mask of "anti-racketeering," went through the House this week by 270 to 107—accompanied by floods of oratory from those "friends of labor" who prefer to do their dirty work with hypocritical phrases about helping the unions to "clean house."

An amendment, offered by Rep. Celler of N. Y., to exempt all acts now legal under the Wagner Act, the Clayton Act, the act and the railway labor act was defeated by 167 to 126. Another amendment, offered by the majority of the House Judiciary Committee that reported the bill favorably a few weeks ago, was accepted. This amendment states that the bill shall not modify the Wagner Act.

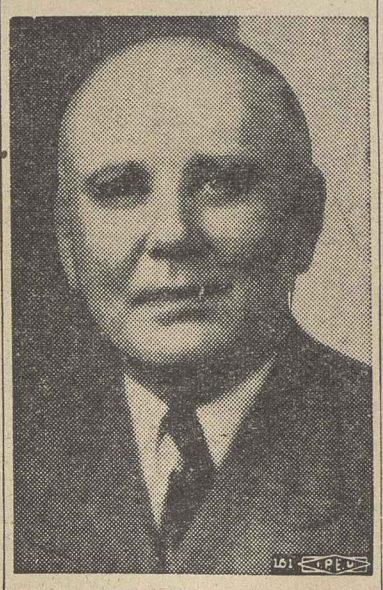
Possibly the lowest point in the anti-labor, anti-war snake dance that preceded the vote was reached by Rep. Hobbs himself, who quoted from the national anthem and the Bible in demanding passage of his bill.

Rep. Clare Hoffman, grizzled labor-hater and isolationist, was more frank. He criticized the bill because it did not do an outright job of repealing the Wagner Act, the Norris-LaGuardia Act and any other act that protects labor's rights.

Rep. Sadowski, Mich., put the the case against the bill when he declared: "The Hobbs bill is a bad bill. It is a vicious bill. Success of bills like the Hobbs bill will pave the way for fascism in America exactly the same way Hitler fastened the bloody tentacles of fascism upon the unhappy people of Europe."

Others who fought against the measure were Reps. Marcantonio, N. Y., Furlong, Pa., Bradley, Pa., Baldwin, N. Y., Miller, Conn., Sauthoff, Wis., and others.

But the anti-union, anti-war production boys in Congress were having a field day against labor and against the war. Now the bill goes to the Senate. Every worker and every win-the-war group in the country must hurry their protests in to the Senators.



WLB APPOINTMENT: Van A. Bittner, assistant to the President of the United Steelworkers of America, this week was appointed by President Roosevelt as a labor member of the Natl. War Labor Board, along with Almon E. Roth, president of the San Francisco Council of Employers, as an industry member. Bittner replaces Thomas Kennedy, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers, who recently resigned.

Calls for Rule To Correct Pay Inequalities

(See Complete Statement—Pages 6 & 7)

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged all CIO affiliates to take aggressive leadership in the fight to win full support for President Roosevelt's program to stabilize the national economy. Hailing the President's recent Executive Order as "an important step forward in establishing real stabiliza-tion of prices," Murray declared in a letter to CIO affiliates:

"It is now of the utmost importance that our affiliated unions and membership extend the fullest support to this action taken by President Roosevelt in order to impress Mr. Prentiss Brown, Price administrator, and Mr. Chester Davis, administrator of food production and distribution, with the absolute need for interpreting the Executive Order as an order to reduce prices to the levels which prevailed on September 15, 1942."

Murray pointed out that the Executive Order has a serious omission in that apparently does not give the War Labor Board the authority that it previously had to make necessary wage adjustments to correct gross inequities.

Noting that the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 specifically provided for adjustments in pay to correct gross inequalities and to aid in the effective prosecution of the war, Murray declared:

"It shall be our contention that the National War Labor Board must receive the authority which it has heretofore had regarding the elimination of inequalities. Any other result would create the most dangerous confusion in our industrial life."

"We must contend that outstanding collective bargaining agreements which contain provision for the elimination of inequalities of individual wage rates through the operation of grievance machinery must be permitted to function.

"It could not have possibly been the intent of the recent Executive Order to set aside the operation of such collective bargaining agreements. To do so would be to create discord where harmonious industrial relations now prevail."

President Murray and other CIO leaders were consulting about the President's order with high government officials, including Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes.

Representatives of CIO Electrical, Auto, Textile, Rubber and Shipbuilding Workers, with CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman, participated in some of the discussions.

Don't Put Away That Fishing Rod!

Washington, Apr. 17—Don't put away that fishing rod! Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, said this week that it's OK for war workers to take vacations. In fact, he approves of the policy and thinks that it will be helpful to production.

"Experience has shown," he said, "that the volume of production is increased if the workers can restore their energies through periods of physical and mental rest, change and relaxation. After a brief vacation a worker should be in better shape to contribute to the increased effort which our war program makes necessary.

"But it must be realized that our war production goals this year are twice the size of last year's. Wartime vacations must be planned so as to avoid interruption of working schedules.

"Management and labor can and should plan the release of workers for vacations by working ahead in some departments and by arranging for staggered vacation schedules."

Barbers Set Up New Union, Hear Murray Call For All-Out War Against Nazis

NEW YORK, Apr. 17.—CIO's newest international, the Barbers and Beauty Culturists Union of America, was set up at the new organization's first constitutional convention held here this week. Officers of the new international, formed from an Organizing Committee, are John Tartamella, president; P. Charles di Neri, secretary-treasurer and Joseph Gugliotta, vice-president.

Speaking before the 100-odd delegates and guests at a convention banquet, CIO President Philip Murray welcomed the new CIO affiliate and urged it to fight with brother unions for the full CIO win-the-war program.

Murray was critical of failures to enforce the full seven-point economic stabilization program, declaring: "We have fought strenuously to have all this program put into effect, not simply that part dealing with control of wages. Here again we have encountered difficulties. There has been a campaign on the part of certain interests to freeze wages but to permit salaries and profits to rise."

He stressed the need to return inflated food prices to levels of September 15, 1942, adding: "When wage stabilization became effective September 15, 1942, Congress wrote into the act regulations to provide that wages, prices and salaries be stabilized. If the cost of living is kept down, this would provide for a stop-gap against inflation."

"I want to say a few words to you about the role of labor in the war program," Murray said in a broadcast speech. "In spite of the part that labor is playing in the drive toward victory, it continuues to be attacked in many places. Let us get the facts of the matter straight."

"Our country is facing today the greatest struggle in its history. The outcome of this war against the Axis aggressors will decide whether as a nation and as individuals we live or we die. The Axis powers, headed by Nazi Germany, have set out on a role of world conquest that directly involves the future of every man, woman and child, not only in the United States but in all the world.

"The fighting forces of the allied nations are doing a magnificent job on all fronts. Hitler is in a very much weaker position than he was a year ago. But the war is not yet over, and it will not be over for many months. We cannot afford to sit back and wait for the Germans and the Japanese to crack up. The fight must be pushed from every side—and the home front is not the least important of the battle areas.

"It is of the utmost importance that labor assume a leadership on the home front. Our immediate task is to translate the war effort of the people into striking and offensive action. This calls for swift and complete conversion of all the nation's resources to total mobilization, calls for planning on a national scale: planning for production, for a strong and secure civilian economy, for every bold and resolute step necessary to meet the needs of all-out war. It calls also for the abandonment of every practice and concept that stands in the way of victory."

The new international "is a credit to themselves and to the CIO," CIO vice-President and Director of Organization Allan S. Haywood declared in speaking to the convention.

Thee major resolutions, in addition to a constitution, were adopted by the Barbers and Beauty Culturists. Of these, one called for "a second front land invasion of the continent in Europe now," a second urged "labor unity of our country and the labor movements of our allies in this great war, Britain, Soviet Russia and China," and a third pledged CIO barbers to put a damper on military gossip whenever they heard it in their shops.

Members of the Executive Board elected at the convention are: Malvina Freedman, Abraham Greenwald, Peter A. Sessa, Edward Holden, Charles Rizzuto and John J. Sherman.

CIO Calls For Pay-Go Tax Plan

Washington, Apr. 10—All sides in the House should remember the war and forget their past differences in enacting a real pay-as-you-go tax collection plan, in order to clear the way for a win-the-war tax program, CIO President Philip Murray wrote this week to Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee.

CIO fully supports real pay-as-you-go, he pointed out, and has called for a plan that will forgive taxes on the first $2,000 of taxable income only. In this way, Murray said, Congress can avoid "a tax grab for the highest income brackets" as proposed in the Ruml plan which would forgive taxes for the rich.

"The people of the nation are in favor of a program for deduction of taxes currently from wages so that tax obligations may be more easily met," he said. "On the other hand, the people are equally insistent that the popular demand for a pay-as-you-go tax plan must not be used as a cloak for a tax grab for the highest income brackets through the Ruml plan."

Murray criticized each side in the House for the failure to put through a sound and equitable tax collection system and urged that "there is still time for such a program to be enacted."

Such a move, he said, would clear the way " for an examination of the more important basic tax problems" and would allow the Congress to get down to the real business of raising the huge tax revenues that are needed for war financing.

Rubber Union Membership Sets Record

Akron, Ohio, April 13.—Membership in the United Rubber Workers has reached a new all-time high of 132,266, Charles Lanning, URW secretary-treasurer, reported here. As of March 1, this was the number of dues-paying members, he said.

His figures also showed that 9,103 members of the CIO Rubber Workers are now in the armed forces.

Freezing Chaos

One of the most important functions a union can perform to increase war production is the adjustment of wage inequalities that create confusion and lower morale.

Labor therefore is deeply alarmed at the failure of the President's recent executive order to authorize adjustment of gross inequities, and the subsequent stand taken by the War Labor Board that it no longer has the power to deal with them.

"Anyone familiar with wage rate structures prevailing in American industry recognizes the chaotic conditions that exist as a result of outstanding inequities," CIO Pres. Murray declares.

He warns that dangerous industrial confusion will result from depriving the Board of the authority to eliminate inequalities. It would mean "a freezing of chaos," he says.

Many union agreements provide machinery for correcting inequalities in individual wage rates. These constructive activities must be continued. Labor cannot believe the President intended any interference with them. For this would lead to disruption and discord in present harmonious industrial relations.

The CIO therefore calls on its unions to continue adjusting wage inequalities through collective bargaining and by application to the War Labor Board, where necessary; and to do everything possible to impress upon Stabilization Director Byrnes and the Board the danger to the war effort that will result from any attempt to freeze inequity and injustice.

Labor has accepted wage stabilization to hold the line against inflation. But it also demands that living costs be rolled back and stabilized at the same level as wages. And it insists that wages be equitably stabilized to insure the highest morale and productive efficiency for winning the war.

Cut-Backs

Amazing as it may seem, plants are being closed and hundreds of thousands of workers confronted with layoffs at the height of our country's war production drive.

These shutdowns and layoffs are called cut-backs. They result from "over-production"—believe it or not— of certain war materials and weapons.

That is to say, more have been produced than can be shipped to where they are needed most, due to a transportation bottleneck. Or else, changes in style of weapons cause layoffs until plants are converted to new production.

CIO Pres. Murray estimates that 650,000 war workers will be thrown out of work from such causes in the next three months.

What is responsible for the tragic irony of such unemployment in a period of unparalleled demand for manpower?

Nothing but the lack of planning against which the CIO has been warning since long before the war.

There is work to be done by every willing worker to win this war. All our industrial equipment needs to be kept busy for our supreme effort—not only for existing needs on all the fighting fronts of the United Nations, but also for the promised second front in Europe.

But close, coordinated and centralized planning is necessary to adjust one production need to another, and to keep all workers and all plants working without interruption.

That's why the CIO demands again and again, and ever more insistently, the over-all planning and centralized administration envisaged in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills.

Block The Hunger Bloc

The plot of the Hunger Bloc—as the mis-called farm bloc has come to be known—to destroy the Farm Security Administration is back-firing on its instigators.

The indignation of the working farmers, of labor and of all win-the-war forces has caused a revolt in Congress, as this is written, against the House appropriations committee's proposal to abolish FSA.

The FSA is the one agency that aids the small farmers to play their sorely needed part in bringing about maximum food production; and that has a program for the orderly mobilization of farm labor, with protection for minimum wage and living standards.

But the big land and plantation owners, and the business interests that farm the farmers, want to ditch the FSA, because their sole interest is in inflationary price increases and cheap labor recruited from dispossessed farm families.

The CIO joins with the National Farmers' Union in demanding more funds for the FSA and more aid to the millions of small and working farmers for all-out food production.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

TALKING of "holding the line," labor has had a call in to Washington for a long time, about stopping inflation.

It's still holding the line.

There's been a "busy" signal at Congress right along. Calls from profiteers about their favorite tax loopholes have had priority over labor's call.

So have calls from country-clubbers who just couldn't get by on $25,000 a year; from land-hogs and speculators who want to raise the price of food; and from dinner-jacket commandos who want to open a second front against American labor.

Congress has been too busy protecting unlimited salaries and super-profits, and passing Bankhead and Hobbs bills, to answer labor's call.

Labor has also been calling the various administrative agencies about stopping inflation through real price control and universal rationing.

There have been a lot of "busy" signals there too. So many business interests have had so much to say about a little higher prices here, and a little higher prices there!

So labor has been holding the line—and holding the bag.

This is the background to President Roosevelt's recent "hold the line" executive order on prices and wages.

About a year ago the President announced his famous seven-point recipe for a stable economy. It called for keeping down prices, through rationing and price control, and for real taxation of the profiteer, as well as for wage stabilization.

Labor took its dose of wage stabilization in the "Little Steel" formula. And the dose has been plenty bitter, with none of the President's other ingredients added.

Congress, it is true, passed a price control act last October. It called for prices as well as wages to be stabilized as of Sept. 15, 1942.

Since then, the wage line has been held. But the price line has been only a skipping rope—something to be jumped over. Food prices, for instance, have risen since Sept. 15 anywhere from 25 to 35 per cent.

So both CIO and AFL have asked the President either to roll back prices to the Sept. 15 level, as intended by the law, or else to adjust wages to the price increases.

The President's executive order is a partial answer to this plea. It orders a stop to further price increases and profiteering, and the reduction of "excessively high, unfair or inequitable" prices.

It also speaks of rolling back some prices to the Sept. 15 level.

There are still too many loopholes in this price control order. But its intent is clear. So it is now up to labor to redouble its pressure on Price Administrator Brown and Food Administrator Davis to carry out the President's mandate for rolling back prices.

On wages, the order has a most serious and dangerous omission. It allows for wage adjustments to correct substandard conditions, for increases within the Little Steel formula, and for merit and incentive increases. But it omits adjustments to correct gross inequities.

If the War Labor Board is deprived of authority to correct wage inequalities, there will be "the most dangerous confusion in our industrial life," CIO Pres. Murray points out.

He therefore calls on the unions to impress on the Board and on Stabilization Director Byrnes the importance of correcting wage inequalities, and of the continued operation of collective bargaining agreements that provide machinery for eliminating inequalities.

Inflated war profits as well as inflated prices must be controlled, if we are to hold the line against inflation.

Even after increased taxation, corporation profits in 1942 are estimated to be 66 per cent higher than in 1939.

Tax legislation is necessary this year that will really dig into such profits, that will close present loopholes, and that will limit individual net incomes to $25,000.

The line against inflation cannot be held by labor alone.

Workers Not Slackers, Is U. S. Report

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17—Attempts to create the false impression that "American workers are slackers" were denounced here by Representative Mary T. Norton of New Jersey, chairman of the House Labor Committee, in a Committee report on absenteeism.

Asserting that "witnesses who spoke for management and those who spoke for labor unanimously agreed that wilful absenteeism is negligible," Mrs. Norton declared:

"To create the impression that American workers are slackers when actually they are working hard under difficult conditions is not going to make it easy for labor, management and Government to join in solving this problem."

She deplored "an attitude which blames irresponsible workers for production delays," warning that it "causes a natural resentment among the vast majority who are giving their best to war work."

"People close to war production problems know that to date material shortages, not absenteeism, have been one of the most important factors in retarding output."

Urging that "for the sake of unity in this country the way be kept open for voluntary cooperation to meet this problem, Mrs. Norton said this misapprehension about labor slackers must be corrected.

Carey Warns Farm Bloc Plan Is Threat To War Program

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—"Farm bloc" plans to wipe out the Farm Security Administration, now under way in House Appropriations Committee hearings, are a serious menace to food production needed to win the war, James B. Carey, CIO secretary, told CIO affiliates in a circular letter this week.

If their plans succeed, Carey warned, "the hunger bloc" will defeat plans to bring food production up to levels needed to give our armed forces, our war workers and all civilians, and our allies, the food needed for victory. At the same time, they also plan to "rip the ceilings off farm prices" and put food costs on the basis of whatever the traffic will bear, he added.

"This is a program of starvation, disunity and defeat," he wrote. "Unless the people are awakened, and quickly, this program may win. The hunger bloc is riding high . . . The food crisis is being used by enemies of political and economic democracy.

"By stalling conversion of American agriculture to war needs, this bloc has already scored a major victory over the American people. Action four months ago would have increased 1943 food production by 20 per cent. Today the maximum possible increase is less than 10 per cent and the percentage is dropping every day action is delayed."

In urging CIO members to get together with all labor and win-the-war forces to persuade the Appropriations Committee and the farm bloc to drop the starvation plan. Carey said: "This is a matter of food this year and next year for your families, your fellow workers, the men in the armed services, our allies, and the starving millions now enslaved by fascism. Action is imperative."

CIO War Board Members Blast Pay Freeze

WASHINGTON, April 17—The order of the War Labor Board cutting a referee's recommended 5.5 cents per hour increase to 1.8 cents in a case involving the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers and the Universal Atlas Cement Corp. is a completely negative interpretation of the FDR executive order fixing wages and prices, the CIO members of the WLB said in their opinion, released today.

"The board's opinion stresses the negative aspects of Executive Order 9238," the two CIO members, Van A. Bittner and John Brophy, said. "It emphasizes the limitations that have been placed on the powers of the WLB and demonstrates at some length that the board cannot, at least at the present time, deal with inequalities and gross inequities in wage rates."

Pointing out "the futility of attempting to force our wage economy into a straitjacket," the two CIO members called on the board to avoid "the feeling that it is no longer possible to take an affirmative and creative approach to the solution of wage problems."

The board should utilize the positive aspects of the Stabilization Act of 1942, which left ample provision for the correction of inequities, Brophy and Bittner added. "We wish to emphasize that the act of October, 1942 is still the law of the land," they said.

MAY MAKE ADJUSTMENTS

"That act provides, among other things, that the President may adjust wage and salaries to the extent that he finds necessary in any case to correct gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

Freezing injustice ,at the Universal Atlas order has done "will neither secure stabilization nor promote production," they said. "It is as important to keep workers' morale up as it is to keep prices down."

Such freezing, they said in quoting from CIO President Philip Murray, "would necessarily have the most disastrous effect upon the production of our essential munitions of war."

In urging the board to take a positive and constructive approach to the wage problem, the two CIO representatives said: "Only by such a course will deterioration of morale be prevented. Only by such a course will the board successfully perform its most important functions."

Workers Save Half Million Man-Hours

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 17—The Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. said this week that ideas suggested by its employes have saved a half million man-hours during 1942.

The employes for the most part belong to the CIO United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America.

"Ideas contributed by our employes," a company official declared, "also conserved tons of vital materials—scarce copper, steel, aluminum and rubber, and increased the output of our machine tools and other equipment.

"Suggestions enabled Westinghouse to make more gun mounts, more shell cases, more electric motors, more radio equipment and more of the hundreds of electrical products needed by the armed forces."

"Betcha Dad worked on those engines!"

They're talking about a Flying Fortress powered by Studebaker-built Wright Cyclone engines

JUST a little while back, expert machinist John H. Williams and his two sons, Evard and John, were working together at Studebaker.

Today, they're still working together in spirit—but many miles apart.

The father is building Wright Cyclone engines for the mighty Boeing Flying Fortress in the Studebaker factory. The boys have hung up their working clothes to put on the fighting uniforms of Uncle Sam.

There are many families such as the Williams family whose names shine brightly these war days on the Studebaker roster—families that are steadfastly maintaining the great Studebaker father-and-son tradition at home or far away.

And when the fighting job is done, that tradition will be exemplified again in outstanding Studebaker motor cars and motor trucks for civilian use. The solid principles of integrity that underlie Studebaker craftsmanship will remain unchanged.

Back Roosevelt to Cu
Calls for Ruling to Co

The CIO NEWS this week prints one of the most important statements of CIO policy in months. The following statement by Pres. Philip Murray has been sent to all affiliates. It deals in detail with President Roosevelt's Executive Order on prices and wages, and is MUST reading for all CIO members who wish to be correctly informed about CIO's position.

The President issued an Executive Order dated April 8, 1943, defining regulations with respect to control of prices, wage and salary increases as are necessary to maintain stabilization.

Certain fundamental problems are raised by this Executive Order. I shall attempt to analyze these problems in light of the policies and objectives of the CIO.

(1) The CIO has consistently sought the stabilization of the cost of living and the prevention of inflation.

The Emergency Price Control Act of 1942, which the CIO has supported, specifically provides that stabilization of prices should be on the basis of the levels which existed on September 15, 1942. It is conservatively estimated that food costs since September 15, 1942, have risen over 25 per cent. The CIO has therefore been urging the government officials responsible for price control not merely to enforce outstanding maximum prices but of equal importance, to take immediate steps to roll back the present prices to levels of September 15, 1942.

Toward this end the CIO recently requested the President of the United States that either prices be rolled back to the levels of September 15, 1942, as demanded by the law, or that wages be adjusted to meet the price increases which have occurred since the Little Steel formula was established.

The recent Executive Order is an important step forward in establishing real stabilization of prices and thereby meeting the demand of the CIO. The directive to the Price Administrator and the Administrator of Food Production and Distribution is:

Cites Price Cut Order

"To prevent further price increases, direct or indirect, to prevent profiteering and to reduce prices which are excessively high, unfair, or inequitable."

It is now of the utmost importance that our affiliated unions and membership extend the fullest support to this action taken by President Roosevelt in order to impress Mr. Prentiss Brown, Price Administrator, and Mr. Chester Davis, Administrator of Food Production and Distribution, with the absolute need for interpreting the Executive Order as an order to reduce prices to the levels which prevailed on September 15, 1942.

Our position must be that any other procedure or policy would be most unfair in that with wages stabilized, the increases in food costs since September 15, 1942, mark a reduction in the standard of living of those least able to bear such increased burden, namely, the low income groups.

Need Democratic Rationing

The policy of rolling back prices must be accompanied by immediate steps, as requested by the CIO, to actually enforce such ceiling prices and to broaden the scope of rationing so that we may have a democratic system of overall rationing of the necessities of life. The degree to which this all-important stabilization policy will be effectuated and actually enforced will depend henceforth upon the action taken and the support given by our membership throughout the nation.

We should anticipate vicious and unprincipled attacks from various sources against the effectuation of the price policy set forth in this recent Executive Order. It will be up to organized labor to offer the leadership in local communities throughout the country to rally the people behind this mandate of our Commander-in-Chief as our domestic offensive against inflation.

It should be carefully noted that the President's Executive Order recognizes the possibility of affording increased income to farmers through incentives for increased production, and with no increase in the cost of living. Under such policy, complemented by steps for aiding the farm labor and machinery shortages, a real solution will be provided for the problems of the farmers without the resort to wild run-away prices as espoused by the misnamed "farm bloc."

Wage Adjustments Allowed

(2) The Executive Order also seeks to stabilize wages as of the levels of September 15, 1942. However, allowances for wage adjustments may be approved by the National War Labor Board:

(a) To correct standards of living;

(b) To compensate in accordance with the Little Steel formula as defined by the National War Labor Board for the rise in the cost of living between January 1, 1941 and May 1, 1942;

PHILIP MURRAY

(c) To provide for promotions, reclassifications, merit increases, incentive wages or the like.

The tasks which now rest upon our Unions and our leaders are quite different from those which we encountered in our wage negotiations in peace time. Today we must accept the basic principle of stabilization of wages. But as the CIO has consistently maintained, stabilization of wages cannot mean a complete freezing.

Urges Careful Analysis

It is essential that our unions very carefully analyze and understand just how the Little Steel formula should be applied so that our membership will get the full benefit of the allowance permissible under this policy. Further, the definition "substandards of living" as given by the War Labor Board in a few of their cases, must be enforced. Thus the Board in one case held that "by substandard wages it means wages which do not permit of the maintenance of living standards and health conditions."

In many instances, as in the cases of promotions, reclassification and merit increases, wages must be adjusted allowing for greater earnings because in so doing efficiency and morale are improved, thereby assuring greater and increasing production.

Further, the wage stabilization program specifically permits collective bargaining agreements to be effectuated between employers and unions pursuant to which for increased production, employes will receive increased earnings.

This general category is one that promises to be of extreme importance to labor and should be examined very closely, because on the one hand it would result, if successfully utilized, in increased earnings for the wrokers, and on the other hand, will increase war production.

Asks Local Incentive Plans

However, any such agreement must be worked out between the union and the employer directly involved. The CIO will oppose any attempt by any government agency to impose a national wage incentive system. This problem must be solved through collective bargaining in specific cases between the Union and the employer affected.

Such agreements should be simple and understandable and should incorporate guarantees that: (a) the increase effort of the workers for increased production will not result in the lowering of hourly or incentive rates; (b) the employes will be assured a minimum 40-hour work week to avoid layoffs during the week re-

t Prices, Murray Urges; rrect Wage Inequalities

will oppose any attempt by any government agency to impose a national wage incentive system.

• The Executive Order has a very serious omission in that it does not appear to confer upon the Natl. War Labor Board the authority which it heretofore has had to make necessary adjustments to correct gross inequities.

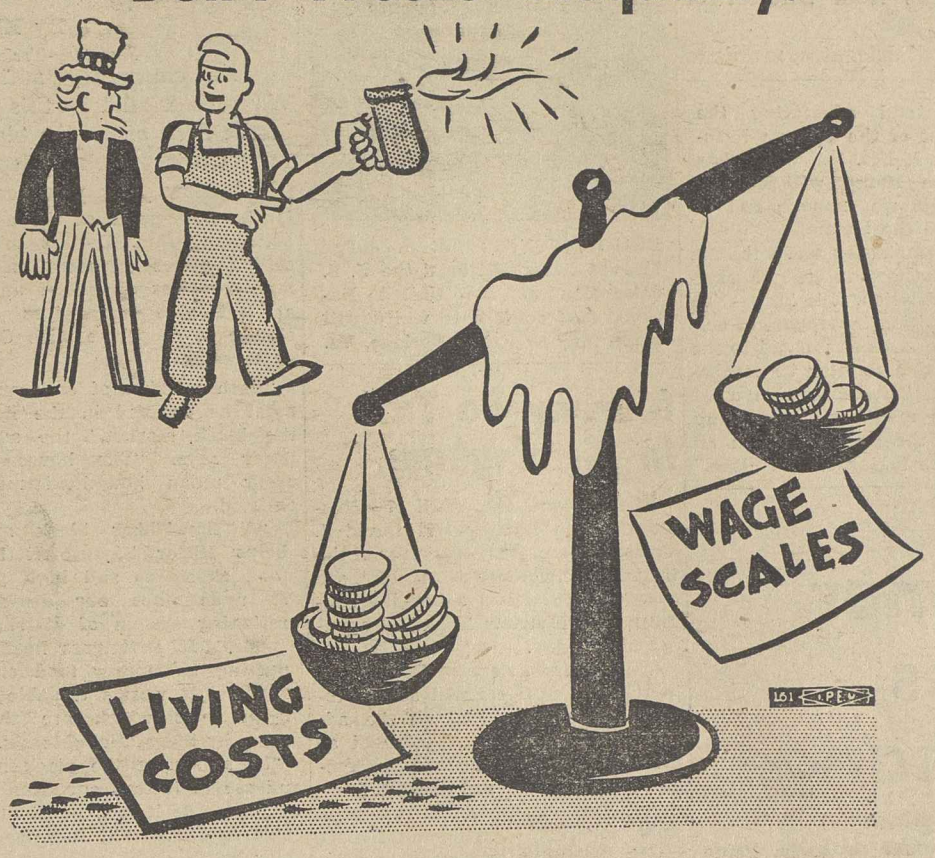
• It shall be our contention that the Natl. War Labor Board must receive the authority which it has heretofore had regarding the elimination of inequalities. Any other result would create the most dangerous confusion in our industrial life.

• We must contend that outstanding collective bargaining agreements which contain provision for the elimination of inequalities of individual wage rates through grievance machinery must be permitted to continue to function.

• The corporations are enjoying a Roman holiday from grossly inflated war profits. The estimated net income AFTER TAXES for 1942 for all active corporations is about $6,800,000,000, roughly a 66 per cent increase over 1939.

• The American people must make known to Congress their demand for increased taxation of the upper brackets, limiting any individual's annual net income derived from any source to $25,000, and for closing the loopholes through which small select groups reap their special financial privileges.

Don't Freeze Inequality!



It shall be our contention that the National War Labor Board must receive the authority which it has heretofore had regarding the elimination of inequalities. Any other result would create the most dangerous confusion in our industrial life.

Any one familiar with wage rate structures prevailing in American industry recognizes the chaotic conditions that exist as a result of outstanding inequities. If the National War Labor Board were deprived of the authority to eliminate such inequalities the result would be a freezing of chaos.

The consequence of any such program would necessarily have the most disastrous effect upon the production of our essential munitions of war. The need for meeting this problem through an equitable adjustment must be made known by our membership to the National War Labor Board and to the Director of Economic Stabilization, James F. Byrnes. This can best be done by the direct presentation of specific cases which should be continued as in the past.

Furthermore, we must contend that outstanding collective bargaining agreements which contain provision for the elimination of inequalities of individual wage rates through the operation of grievance machinery must be permitted to continue to function. It could not have possibly been the intent of the recent Executive Order to set aside the operation of such collective bargaining agreements. To do so would be to create discard where harmonious industrial relations now prevail.

Lists Recommendations

I am therefore recommending to our affiliated unions that we continue (a) to function under our collective bargaining agreements as we have in the past, including where applicable, the disposition through the grievance machinery of problems relating to wage inequalities, and (b) to present such issues to the National War Labor Board where unadjusted in collective bargaining.

In the presentation of our cases relating to the elimination of gross inequities, we must make it clear that we are not seeking to obtain general wage increases beyond the September 15, 1942, levels, but rather to eliminate inequalities because their continuance would necessarily lead to a serious deterioration of morale and of productive efficiency. Our sole objective in this regard must be what is best to aid in the prosecution of the war by assuring the maximum of production.

(4) The national economic stabilization policy incorporated, as an integral part, the need for an equitable tax program. The 1942 tax legislation did not accomplish the objective set forth in the President's original anti-inflation message of April 27, 1942.

Congress completely ignored in that legislation the need for increasing taxes of the high income groups, corporate profits and the elimination of loopholes whereby special privileges and benefits were permitted to continue.

President Roosevelt's directive limiting net salaries to $25,000 a year has been ruthlessly set aside by Congress by attaching such provisions as a rider to another bill in order to prevent the President from vetoing the same.

We know that the corporations are enjoying a Roman holiday from grossly inflated war profits. Profit increases in 1941 for individual corporations after taxes ranged anywhere from 11 to 955 per cent of the prewar level.

The estimated net income after taxes for 1942 for all active corporations in the United States is about $6,800,000,000 or roughly 66 per cent increase over 1939. As an example of increased profits, the basic steel industry has received during the years 1940, 1941 and 1942, after making extensive allowances for depreciation, post-war credits, and special contingency funds, over one-half a billion dollars of profits, after taxes, in excess of the net profits derived in that industry, after taxes, for the year 1939.

The American people must make known to Congress their demand for increased taxation of the upper brackets, limiting any individual's annual net income derived from any source to $25,000, and for closing the loopholes through which small select groups reap their special financial privileges. Unless this is done the reactionaries will seek to duplicate this year, the 1942 tax legislation by continuing to soak the poor and spare the rich. The CIO tax program is addressed to this very problem.

It is essential that we receive the most extensive support for this program from our own membership and from all other groups in the nation in order thereby to actually achieve the objective that we all seek, namely, the stabilization of our cost of living and an allocation of our national financial burden on a basis that will permit war workers to retain sufficient income to purchase the things they need in order to retain their health and efficiency for maximum production.

sulting from poor managerial scheduling of work; and (c) the base of normal production to be chosen as a guide post to determine increased production and increased earnings should be related as of September, 1942, in order to take into consideration the increased production which has resulted since then for which the workers may not have received any increased earnings.

Serious Omission

(3) The recent Executive Order has a very serious omission in that it does not appear to confer upon the National War Labor Board the authority which it heretofore has had to make necessary adjustments to correct gross inequities.

The Emergency Price Control Act of 1942 specifically provided that under the stabilization program, adjustments in wages and salaries could be made to the extent found necessary in any case to correct gross inequalities and also to aid in the effective prosecution of the war. Pursuant to this statutory authority, the President by Executive Order 9250 issued on October 3, 1942, directed the National War Labor Board not to approve any increases in the wage rates prevailing on September 15, 1942, unless such increases were necessary to correct maladjustments or inequalities or to aid in the prosecution of the war.

The recent Executive Order confers upon the Director of Economic Stabilization, Mr. James F. Byrnes, all of the authority which the President has under the Emergency Price Control Act of 1942.

Call Public Meeting on Cost Of Living—Brophy

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—CIO affiliates this week were urged to call public conferences on the rising cost of living, in an effort to halt the trend toward inflation and to back up President Roosevelt's sound program for a controlled domestic economy. A letter to CIO Industrial Union Councils from Director of Councils John Brophy said:

"These conferences should include council delegates, members of legislative committees in affiliated local unions, representatives of other labor organizations wherever possible, representatives of progressive groups on a broad basis, including all elements in the community which can be reached, and if possible representatives of working farmers in the vicinity who may be friendly to labor.

"These conferences should adopt appropriate resolutions which should be sent to United States Senators and Representatives supporting the President's veto of the Bankhead bill, opposing passage of the Pace Bill (H. R. 1408), and advocating the amendment of the Cannon Resolution (H. J. Res. 96), which has passed the House without the amendments we support, and is now before the Senate.

"Let me emphasize again that in all these matters related to agricultural legislation, it is imperative that our position in support of certain positive measures of aid to the farmers of this country be emphasized. This positive position must not only be mentioned in passing but put to the forefront, with all other policies taking second place."

FOOD EXPERT: U. S. Judge Marvin Jones will head the U. S. delegation at the United Nations' food conference which will begin May 18 at Hot Springs, Va.

Murray To Talk In Birmingham

Birmingham, Ala., April 17—President Philip Murray and David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America, are scheduled to attend a two-day conference of Districts 35 and 36 opening here today.

Officials and delegates from locals in the two districts will attend today's meeting, which will be addressed by Secretary McDonald at the morning's meeting and by President Murray in the afternoon. Murray is also announced as the principal speaker at a general CIO meeting Sunday afternoon.

CIO Auxiliaries Urged To Fight Black Markets

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

An emergency anti-inflation letter by the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries this week urges every CIO auxiliary to enlist in the fight again the black market, and for the CIO campaign to roll prices back to September 15, 1942.

"Know your price ceilings and boycott the black market," is the first point of the auxiliary action program. Dollars and cents ceiling prices on meat and community prices on butter and eggs at last give housewives a real chance to cooperate with OPA on enforcement.

"Each member of each auxiliary must be enlisted in the fight on the black market," the auxiliary letter says. "The housewife in every union household must be enlisted.

"A flourishing black market helps Hitler because it brings food shortages and high prices. It undermines our democratic rationing system of distributing goods. It endangers health by putting unsanitary food on the market. It wastes valuable meat by-products which are thrown away by illegal slaughterers.

"Let's boycott the black market and see to it that our friends and neighbors do it too. Black markets can't do business if they can't sell their goods.

Every CIO auxiliary received with the anti-inflation letter a chart on which to compare September 15, 1942, food prices with prices today. The auxiliary Congress will use this material from all over the United States to publicize the pressing need for the CIO program to roll prices back to the wage stabilization level.

"One of our big responsibilities this month is to see to it that the Second War Loan Drive reaches its 13th billion dollar quota in record time," President Faye Stephenson of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries said this week in a letter to all CIO auxiliaries.

"President Murray has called on all CIO unions to launch special projects to speed war bond purchases. He suggests, for instance, that they set goals of enough bond purchases for a bomber, or a tank, a liberty ship or a jeep.

"Our Auxiliaries have had practical experience in campaigns like that. Just last month our United Automobile Workers auxiliaries presented their third and fourth jeeps to the army. Let's put our money-raising talents at the disposal of our unions.

"And let's each and every one of us assume the personal responsibility for increasing our own war bond and stamp purchases in April. Remember this money is for the fighting equipment our boys need for speedy victory. Let's see that they get every cent we can possibly give.

The Civilian War Front

Labor, Consumer Pressure Forces Meat Price Change

By the CIO Cost of Living Committee

FLASH—As a result of labor and consumer protests, Price Administrator Brown on April 14 suspended the new schedule of beef, veal and lamb dollars and cents prices which was to go into effect on April 15. A new set of price ceilings more in conformity with the President's "hold the line" order is expected to be announced by the end of the month.

Despite the President's Executive Order calling for a wage-price freeze, official price ceilings are still moving upward at OPA. And there is still no reversal of the soft policy of enforcement which has been specially characteristic of the Prentiss Brown regime.

A quick look at some of the regulations and amendments which have come into effect since the President's "hold the line" order shows a five cent increase in the ceiling on corn; an increase in the price of edible lard and other shortenings sold to bakers; a rise in the terminal price of dry onions and potatoes; and a substantial jump in the price of beef carcasses and other wholesale cuts.

It is obvious that price rises at the pre-retail level eventually mean a rise in retail cost of living, unless subsidy funds are made available to absorb the rise before it gets to the consumer.

OUTLOOK IS CLOUDED

With the present temper of Congress, the outlook for subsidies to hold food prices—let alone roll them back—can scarcely be regarded as bright.

More important than the rises foreshadowed by the adjustments at the wholesaler and producer level, is the fact that the week of the President's order saw the inauguration of the new dollars and cents retail ceilings on meat. These new prices, effective April 15, are far more inflationary than they seemed at first glance.

The most important cuts of meat at certain store butcher shops are upped by an average of 25 per cent over the previously prevailing chain store ceiling prices.

For all retail stores, the new schedule of meat prices means, according to official estimates of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, an average rise of 4.4 per cent over the average of prices prevailing in February.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics claims that the prices it quotes in its cost of living index represent actual prices, not necessarily the legal ceiling prices. In the period rationing, chain stores tended to observe the low legal March, 1942, ceilings but had very little meat to sell. The small stores which sold most of the meat, violated ceiling regulations with complete impunity. Their prices had risen steadily during the year since the general maximum price regulation was issued.

Thus, the new meat prices are price increases, whether they are compared with actual average prices, or with the low chain-store ceiling prices. It is noteworthy that in the opening weeks of rationing, the chain stores had abundant supplies of meat and were selling them at the low ceiling prices of March, 1942. Perhaps, they were taking a beating at these low prices. But with a 25 per cent rise, it is certainly the consumer that will take the beating from April 15 on.

During the week Price Administrator Brown suspended for one month the new retail hosiery ceiling which was supposed to go into effect on April 15. Reason? Because the hosiery trade complained and needed additional time "to present its views and to be heard on the prices and margins written into the regulations.

When merchants complain about a price regulation, its operation is suspended. When consumers complain, as they have done on the meat prices, nothing is done.

Incidentally, the suspended hosiery regulation provides for grade labelling. In announcing the suspension of the regulation, Price Administrator Brown announced that he endorsed grade labelling "in principle." That means, watch out that it is not opposed in practice.

The grade labelling of the 1943 pack of canned goods appears at this writing to be sick. After telling the canners that he is reconsidering his decision and then delaying a definite announcement for weeks and weeks, Brown will be able to say after a while, as the House Agriculture Committee has already said, that the principle of grade labelling is excellent, but that it is too late to put it into operation for the 1943 pack.

It is significant that the newspapers report that Brown removed a provision for grade labelling which appeared in an early draft of the President's wage and price freeze order.

Unless the conflict between the President's "hold the line" program and the appeasement policy of the Food-Price Branch of the OPA is quickly resolved, the whole anti-inflation offensive will break down. Wages cannot be frozen if prices are kept liquid and allowed to boil up and up.

Phony, Fatty Hamburger 'Melts' in Frying Pan

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

There has been much newspaper talk this week about complaints coming from housewives on the poor quality of ground meat sold over the counter as prepared and ready for sale and rating five ration points to the pound. Some housewives complained that there was so much fat mixed in with the hamburger that almost the whole thing melted in the frying pan and left very little for the family to eat. Under such circumstances, it's not very hard to see that five ration points for one pound of hamburger is far more expensive in points and money than six points for one pound of beef liver, or boneless chuck when ground at the store at your request.

Because ground meat is one very good way to stretch the meat dish in combination with other foods, and because of its low point rating as compared with other cuts of meat, when meat rationing went into effect many housewives bought the prepared hamburger, honestly believing they were practicing good economy. But it didn't take them long to find out how wrong they were. As a result, complaints came pouring into the OPA offices.

Now some effort is being made to define in percentages how much fat and scraps may be ground in with the meat for hamburger. As it stands now, the OPA definition of hamburger as meat plus scraps plus fat is so loose that there is nothing to stop the butcher from using mostly scraps and fat in preparing ground meat, and evidently he does.

KEEP ON PROTESTING

The moral of this tale is—don't buy prepared hamburger until OPA takes steps to improve the quality of the meat. Keep on protesting 'til you get results.

And you don't have to accept cuts of meat that have more than the usual amount of fat or bone. Insist on a fair trimming job. OPA regulations are rather loose in this respect, too. Your butcher will just as soon stretch his meat supply by trimming less fat and bone if you don't say anything about it. Let him know that you know the rules, too.

Probably your best bet will be to select a cut of meat. Choose beef whenever you can get it. It contains more nourishment than either lamb or veal. Take boneless chuck, for instance, at six points to a pound. Have it ground for you at the store or do it at home yourself.

USE MEAT GRINDER

If you don't own a meat grinder, scout around and get one. You'll find it handy for fixing leftover meats, making bread crumbs of left over bread or even putting fish through the grinder along with the rest of ingredients for making fish cakes. You'll find it a good investment these days when every bit of food has to go a long way.

Here is one recipe that uses the meat grinder to make a tasty meal of leftover meat and potatoes:

Recipe—Potato Meat Rolls

2 lbs. potatoes or leftover mashed potatoes
2 tbsp. oleo (Vitamin A added) or butter
1 cup ground cooked meat
1 small onion
2 tablespoons drippings
Flour, parsley, cayenne, salt, pepper.

Boil potatoes in jackets till soft. Peel, mash and add 2 tbsp. oleo, 1 tsp. salt, peper and ¼ cup flour. Beat till smooth. Cool. Put leftover cooked meat, onion, parsley through meat grinder. Add ½ tsp. salt and dash of cayenne. Flour left hand and put about 2 tbsp. mashed potatoes in palm. Press hollow in center. Put about 1 tbsp. meat mixture in hollow. Bring edges of potato together. Make oblong roll. Roll lightly in flour. Makes about 16 rolls. Heat drippings in frying pan and brown potato rolls on all sides. Serve.

Leftover mashed potatoes can be used by mixing in a little flour before shaping into rolls.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The disruptive Hobbs bill (HR 653) went through the House early last week by a vote of 270 to 107. It now heads for the Senate, where immediate and very clear protest should be registered. (See story, page 3.)

The phony "Equal Rights" amendment (HJ Res. 1, HJ Res. 18 and SJ Res. 25) has been reported out of the Senate Judiciary Committee. This bill, ostensibly to give women "equal rights" with men, actually would wipe out every law that protects women workers, pave the way for similar attacks on on all labor laws.

The polltax repeal bill discharge petition (DP 3) now has 179 signatures. Keep after your Representative to sign, get other signatures.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Hobbs (HR 653)	Cripples unions and war production under guise of "anti-racketeering."	Passed House, now goes to Senate Judiciary Committee.	Wire two two Senators at once, urge vote against.
"Equal Rights" (HJRes. 1 & 18, SJ Res. 25)	Wipes out all labor laws protecting women workers.	Reported out of Senate Judiciary Committee.	Write your Representative and Senators, urge vote against.
	FOOD COSTS
Bankhead (S 660)	Inflates food prices by taking benefit payments out of parity base.	Sent back to Senate Agriculture Committee after veto.	Watch for this bill. It can be brought out again any time.
Pace (HR 1408)	Inflates food prices up to 25% by including so-called labor costs in price base.	Passed House, in Senate Agriculture Committee. Hearings soon.	Write your Senators, urge vote against.
	ANTI-LABOR
Smith (HR 2239)	Outlaws union contracts, rules out large groups of workers from unions.	House Military Affairs Committee.	Wire your Representative against.
Colmer (HR 992)	Outlaws overtime pay, jails strikers.	House Military Affairs.	Wire your Representative against.

NOTE: Congressmen and Seators will very likely be coming home this week for a two-week vacation. Don't fail to call on them and let them know what labor thinks of their work in Washington. If the Congressman has been doing a good win-the-war job, tell him so. If his work has been lousy, tell him that, too.

NMU Blames 'Col. Blimpism' For War Waste

NEW YORK, Apr. 17.—The "Colonel Blimpism" that has a tight grip on the collective mind of the U. S. Maritime Commission is responsible for a situation that is forcing hundreds of young workers to fret away their time in idleness while they could be working to help win the war. That was the charge made this week by Pres. Joseph Curran of the Nat'l. Maritime Union, in a letter to all CIO and AFL unions.

Curran said that the U. S. Maritime Service has lured young men to take training courses in seamanship, promising them jobs, high pay and quick promotion.

"Many members of trade unions, eager to held their country's war effort, have answered the appeal," Curran declared. "They have enrolled in the schools only to find themselves after graduation forced to remain in a shipping pool for months before a job on a ship turns up."

Curran pointed out that the schools do not train experienced seamen, and that there is no shortage of the inexperienced among the maritime unions.

"These training schools do not turn out skilled men," Curran declared. "The result is that a bottleneck had been created in which thousands of young trainees waste time after graduation waiting for a chance to ship.

Pointing out that over a year ago the NMU offered a sensible program to solve the difficulty, Curran said that if the plan had been adopted, there would be no bottlenecks. The plan follows:

1. Have a survey made of the manpower required to man the ships.

2. Teach the merchant seamen gunnery.

3. Reduce number of men in the Navy gun crew with the exception of gunnery officers.

4. Use the quarters made vacant by the gun crew for putting 9 trainees on the ships—3 in the deck, 3 in the engine, and three in the steward's department.

Smith Bill Hits Unions, CIO Charges

New York, Apr. 10—The Smith bill (HR 2239) barring "executive, administrative, professional and supervisory" employes from joining and forming unions would be a serious blow to participation of such workers in the war, the CIO's Office and Professional Workers writes to CIO NEWS this week.

The bill, opposed in House Military Affairs Committee testimony by UAW President R. J. Thomas and CIO Counsel Lee Pressman last week, would be used against both the UOPWA and the Federation of Architects, Engineers, Chemists and Technicians, the UOPWA points out.

This would result in denying workers eligible to both these organizations the right to join a union and thus cut them off from playing their full part in CIO's win-the-war activities.

Hit Lewis Strike As War Sabotage

NEWARK, N. J., Apr. 17.—A phony strike called by John L. Lewis' personal empire, District 50 of the United Mine Workers, is "brazen sabotage of the war effort" at the plastic division of the Celanese Corp. here, according to Milton Rosenberg, assistant state director of the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO.

"This strike is characteristic of the irresponsible attitude of District 50 which has regard neither for the welfare of the workers involved, nor of the war effort of this country," Rosenberg said.

"There are no real union issues involved in this attempted stoppage," he said. "The TWUA supported by all CIO unions in New Jersey guarantees full resumption of work for all Celanese employes. District 50's raiding party in Jersey is going to be stopped once and for all. This act of sabotage of the war will not be allowed to continue."

Right in the Smear Sheet's Face!

AKRON, Ohio, April 10—A unique way of answering an anti-labor attack was taken by the CIO United Rubber Workers here. The union paid for a full page ad in the Beacon Journal to reply to cracks made by the newspaper, itself, against the URW.

The Beacon Journal is the paper which printed the false story about union merchant seamen refusing to unload ships in Guadalcanal. It is Akron's only daily paper.

Headed "Who Knows Best, the Beacon Journal or the Government?" the ad accuses the paper of trying to poison the public mind against labor and against the War Labor Board by misrepresenting a recent wage increase recommended by a Board panel for rubber workers.

The URW denied the newspaper's insinuation that an increase would put "Akron out in front" in the matter of wages, and dubbed it a cheap revival of its old ghost town yarns. The union's ad pointed to the inflated profits of the big rubber concerns, and to the increase in living costs and taxes which would more than eat up the small pay increase recommended.

Listing some of the patriotic sacrifices made by labor to the war, the ad states regret "that in this hour we should have to take time and money and effort to fight an enemy at home which in its own way is doing a job of disruption and disunity.

"Our only newspaper, instead of forging an unbreakable unity among all Americans of good will, has devoted itself to creating turmoil, dissension and resentment among the workers in our factories, and suspicion and distrust among the public generally."

CIO Official's Son Spends 14 Months Bombing Axis

By FRED D'AVILA

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—A 23-year-old lad with an unruly thatch of brown hair, a windreddened face and "dead-pan" eyes dropped into CIO headquarters this week to tell rather unwillingly of 14 months he spent in Africa bombing hell out of the Axis. He was James Cowan, of Evansburg, Pa., and he was visiting his father, Nathan Cowan, director of the CIO Legislative Dept.

Young Cowan, who is shortly to return to the fighting front, is a master sergeant and a flight engineer—the guy responsible for checking the instruments of the big Flying Fortresses that Jimmy rode—and also the fellow who squints through a thin and utterly unprotective sheet of flexi-glass as he swaps machine gun bullets from the waist of the plane with enemy fighters.

The elder Cowan declared himself perfectly willing to let the younger build the family's reputation for flying—he'll do his fighting on the ground. Two other of the Cowan boys are providing some competition, however, in the Army Air Corps, and another is holding up his end with Army Ordnance.

Young James described going into battle as feeling like your first football game, where you aren't sure whether you'll come out with your neck intact.

"You get the same feeling every time you see those Nazi fighters," young Cowan declared, "but as soon as you go into action you're calm and collected and concentrated on the job you've got to do—which is to get the other fellow before he gets you."

Cowan, who flew the Atlantic to get back to the States, explained the routine of night bombing raids against the Axis. They usually begin with the flyers going to bed about four o'clock in the afternoon and getting up at 1 a.m. for a last-minute check-up on equipment.

The plan during the last month he was in Tunisia was to fly over the target at about 4:30 a.m., two hours before sunrise, and then to trek for home as fast as possible.

Frequently Axis fighters attack the big bombers, sometimes to be driven off by United Nations' interceptors, but often to sneak through, spitting fire and death at the Flying Fortresses.

"It's an eerie business," Cowan said, because you can't hear your enemy over the roar of your own motors—all you see in the waist position is a streak of metal hell-bent on destruction coming so fast that you have time to fire maybe two or three machine gun bursts at him—three seconds to a burst.

"You start firing a burst or two when you see them coming at about 3,000 yards, and often the whole show takes only 10 or 15 minutes," he said.

"When you let go with the gun it feels just like hanging on to a reducing machine. You don't use the sights. You can see the tracer bullets streaking out toward the planes.

"Some of these fellows are plenty lucky. One came roaring down on our tail and passed underneath us. The tail gunner, I, and the nose gunner all got pot shots at him. We could see the slugs going right into him. Yet he kept on going."

HELPED CHANGE MAP: James Cowan, 23-year-old son of CIO Legislative Dept. Director Nathan Cowan, tells his father at CIO headquarters how he and his buddies helped change the map in Tunisia. Back on a brief furlough after 14 months in Africa bombing Axis air fields and other military objectives, young Cowan had only one request to make of the boys back home—"Pass the ammunition and we'll feed it to the Axis."

Murray Predicts 650,000 Lay-offs In 3 Months

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—Widespread unemployment among war workers, expected to reach as high as 650,000 within the next three months—gives the lie to anti-labor propaganda about absenteeism, CIO Pres. Philip Murray said at a meeting of the Institute of Womens Professional Relations here this week.

Citing figures to show that "the U. S. is to experience its greatest mass unemployment in the next few months,"—figures that include a predicted unemployment of 75,000 aircraft workers, of thousands of workers working on shell and tank production, Murray said.

"Why, then, is there this cry of absenteeism? Why are there false charges against labor when all the available facts clearly indicate that American wage earners have increased their efficiency more than the workers of any country in the world?

"Tremendous confusion has arisen in the public thinking concerning the manpower problem and, particularly, who it is that controls our manpower. We have the War Manpower Commission, headed by an estimable gentleman who tries to do a great work—yet the Army controls all plants. Hence the Army controls America's manpower.

"Instead of talking of the Austin-Wadsworth bill and the regimentation of workers, the Government should concentrate all manpower agencies upon one head.

"I wish I could assure you that the women who are now making airplanes and tending the wounded will have satisfactory opportunities for work outside the home when war ends. Although I am deeply concerned with this problem, I cannot frankly declare that the matter is being adequately dealt with. The employment possibilities open to women after the war will depend on how fully we Americans are able to utilize our vast material resources, our huge industrial plant and our wide variety of personal skills.

"Widespread unemployment after the war would certainly affect women workers more than men. Many women are employed in war production and will automatically be dismissed when war contracts are canceled completely."

Two Canners Down, A Lot More to Go In Labeling Fight

WASHINGTON, Apr. 17.—Two resignations and two flat statements from "Canning Age" and "The Canner," organs of the canning industry, marked the week's score on the quality grade labeling fight here this week.

One resignation came from Dan Gerber, official of the Gerber baby food company that was found guilty of selling wormy peaches to tots, resigned from OPA. With him went Norman Sorenson, of the Colman Canning Co., Wisconsin. Both men have been leading opponents of grade labelling in the OPA.

The Canning Age statement flatly denied that grade labeling would add to costs, declaring: "At last, a canner will be able to merchandise his packs upon their merits." Similarly, "The Canner" said: "No, grade labeling isn't the menace in 1943 that some canners fear. It will be something of a nuisance because of the label changes and that's about all."

Meantime, the Smith committee in Congress, set up to do a smear job on all government agencies, heard OPA Chief Prentiss Brown say that his mind was still more or less open on the grade labeling issue, and that he was still waiting for a directive from Congress. His assistant, Kenneth Galbraith, declared before the same baiting committee that "you can't have price control" without grade labeling.

The Smith Committee, headed by Howard Smith (polltaxer, Va.) was set up to do a job of attacking every government war agency, with a general license from Congress to investigate any agency that may have exceeded its power, or may do so at any time in the future. The committee has already indicated that it will do the same kind of job that the notorious Smith committee did some years ago on the National Labor Relations Board.

Mine, Mill Vice-President Wilson Dies

Denver, Colo., April 17.—Ora L. Wilson, vice-president of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers since 1936, who died here suddenly, April 8, spent 40 of his 61 years in the labor movement.

He first joined the old Western Federation of Miners in 1903, later working in coal mines as a member of the United Mine Workers. From 1922 to 1933 he worked in the mines of the Coeur d'Alene district in Utah. Eight days after Local 18 at Kellogg, Idaho, was organized, Wilson was fired.

Later he organized cooks and waiters, teamsters, teachers and a women's auxiliary in the area. In 1934 he was elected board member for District 7 and was re-elected in 1935 and 1936.

Quicker Promotions

Washington, Apr. 17—An agreement providing for establishment of a wage schedule based on an accelerated system of promotion affecting some 3,000 employes at the Sunbeam Electric Mfg. Co., Evansville, Ind., was approved this week by the War Labor Board. The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers negotiated the wage agreement with the concern.

Smear Publisher Gets U. S. Censorship Post

AKRON, O., Apr. 17.—Apparently attracted by the "accuracy" of his editing, the U. S. Government this week appointed the publisher of the Akron BEACON-JOURNAL smear story against the Nat'l. Maritime Union to an important censorship post in London. The publisher is John S. Knight, who also owns the Detroit FREE PRESS and the Miami HERALD. The smear story was proved untrue.

Knight's BEACON-JOURNAL tried to smear the seamen by carrying a lying tale that members of the NMU had refused to unload a ship on a Sunday at Guadalcanal. The story later was proved by official investigation to be a complete fabrication.

Protest of the appointment came this week from Port Agent E. J. Cunningham of the NMU in Detroit, who said:

"It is certainly surprising and discouraging to find the Roosevelt administration putting a questionable journalist with pronounced anti-labor habits in a key position where he can do untold harm to labor and the cause of victory. Had Knight been wooed with some stuffed-shirt desk job in Washington, that might not have been so bad, but to place him in London, a world maritime center, in a strategic confidential censor post, cannot pass without vigorous labor protest."

UAW Starts New Publication

Detroit, April 17—Union stewards, committeemen, educational committee members and officers are invited to send brickbats or bouquets in the form of letters and suggestions to Ammunition, new monthly official publication of the United Automobile Workers Education Department.

William H. Levitt, director of the department, is editor of Ammunition. The first issue features articles on how to organize education in local unions, how women strengthen the union, and the first of a series by Edward Levinson, UAW publicity director, on "Rise of the Auto Worker."

Australians Confirm CIO Facts on Shipping Chaos

NEW YORK, Apr. 10.—Confirmation of the fact that bad planning and lack of labor representation are responsible for serious bottlenecks in shipping was seen in a letter from the head of the Australian longshoremen's union reprinted in the Nat'l. Maritime Union Pilot this week.

The letter, from B. T. Healy, secretary of the Australian Waterside Workers Federation, bore out charges made by CIO President Murray and the heads of four CIO maritime unions, to the effect that long delays in ship loading and turnaround were holding up shipment of war supplies to the fighting fronts.

Some of these delays have reached fantastic proportions, according to the CIO charges, including layovers as long as 100 days in South Pacific ports while no cargo was unloaded. Statements of President Murray and the CIO maritime leaders placing the blame on lack of planning are confirmed by the Healy letter, which said:

"The chief reasons for delay to American vessels in Australian ports can be attributed to inefficiency in some part of the American Control System. American vessels have been partly discharged and the work of discharging has been delayed while inquiries are made as to where further portions of the cargo are intended for.

"Quite a number of cases have occurred where cargo has been discharged and re-loaded into the same vessel. In many cases it is questionable whether American vessels arriving here have been loaded according to a plan."

Healy also pointed out that in many cases, ships have arrived without a "manifest or other documentary advices as to stowage and destination. As can be imagined, this caused considerable delay because the cargo had to be viewed before it could be decided what its proper destination was."

Pointing out that many ships have laid-to without being able to discharge cargo over long periods of time, the Australian waterfront leader wrote: "There may be quite good military reasons for this; but to me, it seems an outrageous waste of shipping space which could be avoided by better planning or perhaps better knowledge of the area by those charged with the planning."

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Through Organization, Right Will Prevail! The United Rubber Workers and the International Woodworkers demonstrated the truth of this in two NLRB elections held last week in the deep South. Many of our readers will remember the brutal slugging of President Sherman H. Dalrymple and later a group of organizers, in Gadsden, Alabama. Just a few weeks ago in Vicksburg, Mississippi, the IWA organizers were similarly beaten.

Now the workers have given the answer! At the Goodyear Rubber plant in Gadsden, the workers voted 1144 for CIO to 327 for no union; at Anderson Tully in Vicksburg, Mississippi, the workers voted 572 for CIO to 42 for no union.

These elections demonstrate the American workers' faith in democratic processes and their abhorrence of Nazi methods. The United Steelworkers had previously paved the way in Gadsden by an election victory.

On The March To The Million Mark!

G. George DeNucci, CIO Sub-Regional Director in Columbus, Ohio, reports a UAW-CIO victory at the Columbus Forge and Iron Co., with a vote of 73 for CIO to 45 for independent. UAW Representative Lewis Strickland was in charge. Paul E. Miley, UAW regional director, reports the victory at the Aeronautical Products, Inc., Washington Court House, Ohio, by a vote of 482 for CIO to 219 for no union. International Representative Dale Toler was in charge of this drive. President R. J. Thomas reports another victory at the Ohio Crankshaft, Cleveland election, where CIO received 1940 votes to 758 for the AFL.

Regional Director Powers Hapgood reports the election victory at the Diamond Chain Co., Indianapolis, Indiana, where USA-CIO polled 352 votes to 330.

Regional Director E. D. Hodson, Delaware, reports that the American Federation of Hosiery Workers won the election at the Danita Hosiery Mills, Newark, by a vote of 47 for CIO to 40 for no union.

CIO Regional Director Frank Bonacci reports victory at the Vanadium Corporation of America, Monticello, Utah, in behalf of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers, by a vote of 74 for CIO to 4 to no union.

Walter Smethurst, director of the Shoe Drive, reports winning the election at International Shoe, Claremont, N. H., by 177 for CIO to 55.

ILWU Wins At Sears-Roebuck

James Ritchie, CIO regional director, advises that the ILWU won the election at the Sears-Roebuck plant in Minneapolis, by 450 for CIO to 423.

Regional Director Harvey C. Fremming reports that as a result of the NLRB cross-check, Local Industrial Union 1316 voted for CIO. The workers are employes of the Home Building Corporation and this plant had formerly been with the Construction Workers. At the last minute the UMWA notified the Board they did not want to participate.

August Scholle, National Representative and CIO Regional Director, reports that the Amalgamated Clothing Workers won the election at the I. M. Dach Underwear Co., Jackson, Mich., by a vote of 174 for CIO to 39.

Edward T. Shedlocks, Midwest Regional Director for UWOC-CIO, reports a double victory in Detroit, as follows: Detroit Edison Co., Connors Creek Power Plant voted 201 for CIO to 32; Trenton Channel Power Plant voted 158 for CIO as against 56.

UAW scored another victory at Ohio Crankshaft Company, Cleveland, Ohio, as per announcement by Paul E. Miley, Regional Director, Region 2A.

Three thousand five hundred workers of Ohio Crankshaft voted three to one for the UAW-CIO. The company union had been previously ordered disestablished by the National Labor Relations Board and did not appear on the ballot. The vote was "Yes" or "No."

Argentine Election Seen Affecting Anti-Axis Unity

BUENOS AIRES, Apr. 17 (ALN).—Jose Domenech, general secretary of the Confederacion General del Trabajo (CGT), was defeated for reelection last week at a turbulent meeting of the CGT Central Committee. The new general secretary is Francisco Perez Leiros, Socialist Deputy, secretary of the Union of Municipal Workers and vice-president of the CTAL.

The replacement of Domenech is expected to have considerable bearing on the developing movement for unity of democratic organizations against the pro-Axis policies of President Roman Castillo. Domenech, the principal labor representative of the doctrines of apoliticismo—preoccupation with strictly union affairs—not only opposed the unity movement, but expelled from his own union, the National Union of Railwaymen, large numbers of workers who helped form local Unity Committees. Perez Leiros, on th other hand, is one of the country's leading opponents of the Castillo government.

OUST DOMENECH

In recent years, under Domenech's control, the CGT has become less and less effective. The meeting of the General Congress in December, the first in 29 months, decisively rejected Domenech's policies, elected Angel A. Borlenghi, secretary of the Clerical Workers Union, president by a vote of 117,000 to 60,000 for Domenech, and instructed Domenech to call a meeting of the Central Committee early in January.

The meeting was called last week only after energetic protests from the country's largest unions. Before it convened, Domenech expelled two leaders of the Buenos Aires Railwaymen's Union, Rodolfo Gomez and Gabriel Quetlas, making them ineligible for membership on the Central Committee. Nonetheless, in voting marked by much confusion and frequent heated interruptions, Domenech was defeated by a vote of 23-22.

The future course of the CGT, on which, to a large degree, depends the outcome of the forthcoming presidential elections, remained uncertain this week. Domenech and his followers refused to recognize the legality of the election. The anti-Castillo section of Argentine labor has been strengthened by the formation of the Labor Federation of Buenos Aires, uniting 82 unions of the capital and suburbs.

First act of the new federation was to send a telegram of endorsement to Perez Leiros. Similar telegrams have been received from Enrique Rodriguez, secretary of the Confederation of Workers of Uruguay, and from labor bodies in Chile and Colombia.

END OF THE WAR: Guarded by Red Army men and prodded by a small boy, a Russian Quisling is marched away to explain his cooperation with the Nazi invaders. Soviet justice is swift!

Chinese Get Dirty Deal As Seamen

New York, April 17 (ALN)—Wage and working conditions for Chinese seamen aboard British, Dutch and Norwegian merchant vessels threaten to become a major source of disunity among the United Nations, Mon Sou, president of the newly-formed Chinese Seamen's Union of America, told Allied Labor News this week.

"These conditions present an opportunity to enemies of the United Nations not only to drive a wedge between the Chinese and British peoples, but also to spread the tale among the Indian, African and other colonial peoples that Britain does not intend to be faithful to the principles of the Atlantic Charter," Mon said. According to his estimate, more than 20,000 Chinese seamen are today sailing aboard British and Dutch vessels.

The main grievance of Chinese seamen employed by British shipping companies, according to the Chinese Seamen's Union, is that they receive lower wages than British seamen and are treated by the ship's officers as "colonial coolies."

Under the terms of an agreement reached in April, 1942, between Dr. Wellington Koo, Chinese Ambassador in London, and the British steamship companies, wages of Chinese seamen were increased by $8 a month, and a $20 war risk bonus was added.

Even with these increases, Mon said, Chinese seamen still only receive an average of $65 a month (including war bonus) compared with $90 for British seamen.

PAY HELD UP

Most serious of all the Chinese seamen's grievances, he said, is the continued refusal of the British companies to pay the men wages and back pay (sometimes amounting to a full year's wages) while they are ashore in American ports.

Giving instances of this, Mon said: "In April last year, the S.S.— docked in New York from Liverpool. Eleven Chinese seamen went to the captain, asked for shore leave and back pay. The captain refused, and in an argument shot and killed Lin Young-tsai, one of the seamen. The rest were arrested on a charge of rebellion. After a trial, during which Chinese organizations and the Chinese consul in New York raised several thousand dollars to pay expenses, the ten were found not guilty and released. But the captain was not punished and Lin's family was not compensated."

Ohio CIO Unions Hold Legislative Conference

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Apr. 17.—Four hundred representatives from Ohio CIO locals and city and county Councils met here in an informal legislative conference to review the activities of the Ohio General Assembly.

Jack Kroll, Cincinnati, president of the Council, expressing dissatisfaction at many anti-labor bills in the legislature, declared that "last fall our ideas were the same as now—to work and sweat to produce the materials needed for our boys."

"At election time," Kroll continued, "many of our members were too busy and tired to take proper interest. Now, our people back home in the plants and steel mills are finding out first-hand that legislators are taking advantage of our lack of interest at the polls. Labor is aware of what is happening, however, and there will be a day of reckoning."

Following Kroll's opening address to the conference a discussion ensued about ways and means to register labor voters, preparatory to the fall municipal elections.

Paul Fessenden, secretary of the Akron Council, said that labor groups in that city had already secured 3,000 new registrations with a goal of 20,000 in mind.

A reference to Captain Eddie Rickenbacker was made when Kroll said, "Rickenbacker is making himself ridiculous by going before a slothful legislature—which has passed a scant dozen bills in 14 weeks to criticize workers who are creating a modern production miracle. Let's just ignore Rickenbacker and continue our strenuous efforts to produce needed war materials. The man has a right to talk even if he doesn't know what he is talking about."

A motion was adopted urging local unions and city and county industrial union councils to participate in unified legislative activity "as practiced by the state CIO, AFL and railroad organizations."

Negotiate Laundry Pay Increases

New York, April 13.—A group of 600 laundries employing 1,100 workers in Greater New York have agreed to pay increases ranging from $2 to $5 a week in a contract negotiated by the Laundry Workers' Joint Board, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

The laundries, through the Brooklyn Hand Laundrymen's Association to which they belong, agreed to raise the existing $16 weekly minimum to $21, and to reduce hours to 48 for male workers and to 42½ for women, with time and a half for overtime.

Jack Kroll, manager of the Joint Board, said that the pay increases must be approved by the War Labor Board, but that he was confident they would be granted, as the hand laundry industry has been regarded as substandard.

War Hero Gets His Job Back

Cleveland, O., April 17.—A 49-year-old CIO member injured in the merchant service, and with two sons in the Navy, this week credited the United Auto Workers' Union with winning back his job at the Champion Machine & Forging Co. He is Jay Womack, a member of UAW Local 65. "I never would have got my job back if it hadn't been for the CIO," he declared shortly after being released from a Marine hospital.

Ask Free Bargaining For Bolivian Labor

LA PAZ, Apr. 17 (ALN).—The Joint U. S.-Bolivian Commission, which recently completed an investigation of conditions in Bolivia's mining districts, has recommended that the government restore labor's rights of free association and collective bargaining and has outlined a program for improvements in workers' wages, housing, health and education.

Complete text of the report will not be released for some weeks, but La Razon, important La Paz morning newspaper owned by the Aramayo mining interests, summarized its principal provisions last week on the basis of information from "reliable, though unofficial" sources. They include:

1) Raising minimum wages. 2) Shortening working hours, which extend from sun-up to sun-down in some mines; enforcement of the Labor Code recently drafted by Remberto Capriles Rico and Gaston Arduz of the Labor Ministry. 3) Lowering the appalling illiteracy rate by increasing the number of teachers, raising their wages and improving their qualifications with the help of the U. S. Office of Education. 4) Guaranteeing the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively, a right which Bolivian unions have been forcibly denied in recent months. 5) An adequate social security system: unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, and accident insurance.

6) Public employment offices to replace the present system of enganche (labor hiring), under which employment agents travel through rural districts recruiting labor for the mines with extravagant promises of high pay. The agents' commissions are later deducted from the miners' wages, already at starvation level. 7) Housing projects in the mining areas, "where families of six or seven persons live in one-room huts four or five meters square." 8) Health improvements and a change in workers' diet to do away with the widespread practice of chewing cocaine leaves; removal of customs duties on imported food for mining areas; extension of sanitation services, exchange of medical experts with the U. S. and an increase in the number of doctors (at present there are only 425 in Bolivia).

Penthouse Taken Over By CIO Union

NEW YORK, Apr. 17.—Penthouses are commonly regarded here as the habitat of the Lord Plushbottom species of humanity, but Local 65 of the Wholesale & Warehouse Workers Union has given this notion a blow by taking over a spacious penthouse, roof garden and all, with a panorama view of lower Manhattan and part of Brooklyn.

"As it stands now," reports Local 65, "the penthouse consists of a vast auditorium, surrounded on three sides by a wide open veranda enclosed with a shoulder-high wire fence.

By the time the hot sticky weather rolls around, Local 65 expects to be ready to transfer its cabaret socials up to this breezy roof-garden, with dancing and music inside the big airy hall, and tables and chairs for relaxing and romancing on the outside.

Colored lights will be strung along the outside walls to add the finishing touches to the natural atmosphere. As one member exclaimed, "It'll be like having a boat ride every Saturday night!"

Ask Rededication To Support of Fighters

Washington, Apr. 17—Citizens in every walk of life will be asked to rededicate themselves to all-out support of our brave fighting forces during Victory Volunteer Week which starts Sunday, May 9, in the churches of the nation.

Monday, May 10, has been set aside for labor. The week will culminate with "I am an American Day" on May 16.

A National Advisory Staff composed of labor, farmer and business groups, has been formed with CIO Pres. Philip Murray as chairman and Mercedes Daugherty as secretary.

Washington, Apr. 17—Women are started at a lower rate than men in four out of five important war industries during 1942, according to the Labor Information Bulletin, U. S. Dept. of Labor.

Plan National Campaign to Hit Bias

NEW YORK, Apr. 17—The Eastern Seaboard Conference of the Nat'l. Negro Congress this week adopted a program aimed to eliminate all types of discrimination against Negroes in the armed forces and in industry.

The Conference urged the establishment of a mixed military unit containing both whites and Negroes and said such a grouping would do much to better Negro morale "which is fast waning due to undemocratic conditions in this democratic country."

A resolution pointing to the shortage of manpower in war industries and on the farms, said that "in spite of this acute problem there remains virtually an untapped source of manpower, the Negro, who is trained and stands ready to answer the call."

The resolution, endorsed by the 300 delegates, also stated that "the ultimate victory can be won only through the working in unity of all the people in America with full integration of the Negro in our Nation's production forces."

Endorsing the Fair Employment Practice Committee, the delegates urged that it be reestablished as an independent body with power to hold hearings, subpoena witnesses and records, and fix and enforce its mandates by appropriate penalties.

The delegates also urged the establishment of a second land front in Europe as a means of speedy victory against the Axis.

ACW Bank 20 Years Old

New York, April 17.—The Amalgamated Bank of New York, pioneer labor bank controlled by the members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, today celebrates the 20th anniversary of opening its doors for business.

Dedicated to "the service and advancement of the labor movement," the Amalgamated Bank, during two decades, has expanded its services to include the small businessman, the government employe and professional harrassed by "loan sharks," and more than a million persons abroad depending for their lives on remittances from friends and relatives in this country.

Capitalized in 1923 at $650,000 with a $350,000 surplus, the bank today has assets of over $11,000,000. It has 6,000 depositors in its checking department and 3,500 in its savings department. While it conducts a banking business strictly conforming with state and federal banking laws, the Amalgamated Bank is regarded as unique among banks and is looked upon with the friendliest eyes by other banking institutions which regard it as "non-competitive."

CIO on March In Canada

TORONTO, Apr. 17.—The second defeat in recent weeks was administered the AFL Int'l. Assn. of Machinists when the United Steelworkers of America won an election at Prairie Airways, Ltd., Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. The vote was 431 for USA, 127 for the IAM, and 131 for a company union. Previously the UAW decisively defeated the IAM at de Havilland Aircraft.

Continuing the phenomenal progress it has experienced in recent months, the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America won an election at Defense Industries Ltd., subsidiary of the Dupont niterests, by a vote of 3,648 to 405.

Five elections in a row were won by the UAW in the Windsor area with a total of 1,318 to 577. The most spectacular victory was won at Wallaceburg where the UAW defeated a company union by 235 to 199.

The workers stood solidly behind the UAW despite intimidation through the presence of 100 provincial police in the town during a strike in another plant in which efforts to obtain an election failed because of a lack of legislation.

Snooty Detroit Gold Coast Gets Taste of CIO Action

DETROIT, Apr. 17.—While the snooty Detroit gold coast town of Grosse Pointe, full of both thinly inhabited mansions and of contempt for war workers and their housing needs, prepares to jail Mrs. Pearl Adams for zoning violations, the United Auto Workers (CIO) is not idle. It is mobilizing to meet the emergency.

Mrs. Adams was found guilty by a Grosse Pointe justice of the peace of renting rooms to war workers in her spacious University Ave. home. He sentenced her to 15 days in jail and $100 fine. The prosecutor was Albert E. Meder, a neighbor on the same street, a corporation attorney detested by many unionists for his reactionary influence on courts and government agencies.

The UAW housing committee, headed by Wm. F. Nicholas, came to the rescue of the luckless landlady. He pledged the committee's full and unlimited support in her legal appeal to the circuit court. The appeal is expected to be heard within a month, according to Atty. Nedwin Smokler of the law firm of Maurice Sugar, general counsel to the UAW.

"If Grosse Pointe tries to evict those workers from Mrs. Adams' home the UAW rank and file housing committee will see that this is stopped," Nicholas said. "If they are evicted anyhow they will be escorted back in again, together with their furniture."

The issue between property rights for a few soulless millionaires and human rights for victory in this war was underlined by Nicholas who added:

"This is everybody's war—and this is true of Grosse Pointe. Some Grosse Pointers think they can make a deal with Hitler to save their property. They should wake up to the fact that the only alternative they have is to have Hitler's agents himself occupy their homes."

Efforts to have the Grosse Pointe council relax the oppressive zoning ordinance for the duration were fruitless, said Nicholas after polling the councilmen. They were adamant for property rights against human rights and victory, he said.

Liberty Ship To Be Named For Douglass

Washington, April 17.—The U. S. Maritime Commission this week announced that a Liberty Ship, assigned for construction at Baltimore, will be named for Frederick Douglass, famous Negro orator and journalist of the Civil War period.

Suggestion for the name came from Local 43, Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, representing workers at the Bethlehem Fairfield yard shipyard. Douglass, a Maryland-born slave, once worked near the yard as a ship caulker.

The S. S. Frederick Douglas will be the third ship in a series named for outstanding Negro Americans. The S. S. Booker T. Washington is now in active service, and the S. S. George Washington Carver is under construction at a West Coast shipyard.

Ship Stalled 30 Days in War Zone Because Army Can't Unload; NMU Men Do Job in Record Time

SAN FRANCISCO, Apr. 17.—A story of how union men, fighting to defeat fascism and defend labor against appeaser slanders, chalked up a world record for the war effort, was told by a National Maritime Union crew today, in the LABOR HERALD.

Faced by acute manpower shortage that prevented military authorities in the South Pacific from assigning their ship a longshore gang, the 60 CIO men turned to and, working as many as 32 consecutive hours, had their war cargo ashore in 18 days, completing a job expected to take 30 days.

Speaking for all the crew—deck, engine and stewards departments—Able Bodied Seaman James S. Kendall, ship's delegate, told the story. He stressed that there were no individual "stars," that the achievement was a group job made possible by cooperation.

Crew Gets Restless

"We lay offshore for 30 days," Kendall said. "There was no action on our cargo, and the crew, knowing how vital the supplies were to the war effort, got restless."

The ship's bos'n, "Sailor" McClusky, a former ILWU longshoreman from San Pedro, took the crew's complaint ashore to the army officer in command.

The army sent back word that the ship, a C-2 freighter, wasn't even on the unloading list, and that no time had been set for work to begin on its cargo.

16 Hours a Day

"They said that if the crew would unload, the military command would furnish us barges," Kendall said.

"The authorities asked if we'd work 8 hours. We held a crew meeting and sent back word that we'd work 16.

"We had heard those lies printed in some newspapers that NWU crews had refused to unload on Sunday, so we decided to show them up."

On Feb. 28 at 8 a.m., the huge job began. Port authorities expected the crew to knock off at midnight, but throughout the following weeks work continued often to 2 a.m.

About the world unloading record, Kendall said:

"We set ourselves a quota for each day, and then worked to meet it or beat it. One day we fell behind the amount we'd done the day before, and the crew felt they'd fallen down.

"The day after that one hatch unloaded 312 barrels in an hour. That's 62 tons, and a world record. The whole ship put out that day.

"Throughout the job we averaged a steady 15 tons per hour, which is good—considering we were loading to barges in water that often was rough and the native bargemen were inexperienced."

Credit to Navy Men

Kendall gave full credit to the Navy gun crew, whose members, some of whom weighed only 130 pounds, kept even with the huskiest seamen in the unloading job.

"There was one Navy man named Jim Massey," Kendall said. "He got the nickname 'volunteer boy,' because whenever there was work to do that was little harder than usual, he'd volunteer for it."

One 500-ton barge came out from shore with the military authorities expecting it would keep the crew busy for 3 days. It went back again fully loaded before 8 hours.

Final 32-Hour Spurt

The ship was emptied by noon March 17. The crew had worked all day March 16 and all night until the last cargo went over the side at noon. Then they secured gear until 4 p.m., making a total shift of 32 hours.

Morale-builders aboard ship included an A.B. named Bugrillio, nicknamed "Bugs," whose line of kidding kept the weary seamen on their feet. Louie Du Moulin, former San Francisco movie projectionist, kept the crew's movie machine in repair and rounded up new films for nightly shows at which Army, Navy and Marine personnel and crews of other ships were guests.

While giving these men credit, Kendall and Bob Penfield, another A.B. aboard the vessel, made it clear that the job was collective, dependent on work of all hands and co-operation of officers.

Officers Co-operate

"I never sailed with a better bunch of fellows or with workers," Kendall said. "We passed a resolution at a crew meeting to give the officers credit too for being the finest officers we'd sailed under."

The crew shipped out of the San Francisco NWU hall, but it included men from all over the country, and of all nationalities.

A Negro band composed of army men entertained at one of the crew's shows, and when the musicians left they said "they'd never been treated better," Kendall said.

The crew received congratulations from the Army Transport Service commander in a wire thanking them for "work well done."

Not satisfied with their record job in the South Pacific, 25 members of the crew donated blood to the Red Cross blood bank three days after their arrival in San Francisco.

ALLIED FORCE HEADQUARTERS
Office of the Commander-in-Chief

25 March, 1943.

Dear Mr. Sentner:

The greetings sent to me and the Allied Forces in North Africa by the members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, reached here only today. It is one of the most encouraging and heart-warming messages I have had from any group. It reflects a determined fighting spirit and, since it was written at a time when our units in central Tunisia were having very heavy going, it shows, also, that your members are not to be discouraged by hard knocks. This is the true soldier spirit, and I am going to see that your message receives the widest possible circulation among our troops.

With everybody - whether worker or soldier - doing his best, day in and day out, we will shorten the time required for beating down and utterly destroying Hitlerism.

Sincerely,

Dwight D. Eisenhower

DWIGHT D. EISENHOWER
General, U. S. Army
Commander-in-Chief

Mr. William Sentner,
General Vice President -
United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America
1734 Washington Avenue,
St. Louis, Missouri.

BACKING 'EM UP: The letter reproduced above was received from Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, in reply to a pledge of full support for the efforts of him and his men in their see-saw battle with Rommel's Fascists. The pledge came from the United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America local at Evansville, Indiana, and said in part: "Our machines of production will whirl faster and faster to aid you to turn defeat into victory. More and better bullets, planes, ships and cannon is our answer. Kill and destroy the Fascist beast so that he may never again rise to disturb the peace of the world."

Use Labor Pacts To Stabilize Manpower

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt to replace his recent job freeze order with a policy providing that "employment stabilization will be governed solely through the operation of joint labor-management stabilization agreements," containing proper safeguards for workers.

Workers Give Time To Help Speed War

SOUTH PORTLAND, Me., Apr. 24—CIO workers in the New England Shipbuilding Corp's. yard want to help beat Hitler and Fascism. This week, the employes who are members of the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, made the most concrete contribution that they could think of.

Two thirds of them were not scheduled to report on Sunday as the yard went on a new six-day-week schedule.

But two thirds of them did report—with the other third that was regularly scheduled for work.

And the two thirds worked without pay, at their job of building Liberty Ships, "donating their time in the interests of the war effort to speed the building of ships which are bringing supplies to our sons and brothers serving in the armed forces of the United States."

All of which, we hope, will be pasted in Mr. Rickenbacker's scrap book!

Steel Swamps IAM in 2nd Largest Vote in Canada

WINDSOR, Ontario, Apr. 24—In the second largest labor election ever held in Canada, the United Steelworkers of America this week defeated the AFL Int'l. Assn. of Machinists. The vote, at the John Inglis Ordnance Plant, was:

USA-CIO	6,691
IAM	1,044

The election was exceeded in size only by the Ford vote, won by the CIO United Auto Workers Union.

RETURN VISIT: Eighty "non-coms" of Camp Atterbury, Ind., this week visited Detroit war plants organized by the CIO United Auto Workers, to repay the three-day stay of UAW members who toured Army camps last month. Sgt. Richard Hatfield, left, one of the visiting soldiers, pledges solidarity with his younger brother, David, a Chrysler test driver at the Chrysler Tank Arsenal. The soldiers enjoyed a dinner and dance, on the union, and went back to camp convinced that unity between the soldiers of war and the soldiers of production is the best formula for smashing Fascism.

Murray Asks:

Use Labor-Management Pacts To Stabilize Manpower Setup

CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week urged Manpower Chairman Paul V. McNutt to replace his recent job freeze order with a policy providing that "employment stabilization will be governed solely through the operation of joint labor-management stabilization agreements," containing proper safeguards for workers. Murray's complete statement follows:

On behalf of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, I wish to express our serious disagreement with certain provisions of the recent directive order that you issued, dated April 8, 1943, pertaining to the transfer of employes from one job to another. Also, I call your attention to certain very basic shortcomings in the administration of our manpower problems.

Your recent directive is addressed to a single point, namely, to prevent employes from transferring from one job to another where in so doing they may receiving a higher rate of pay. This approach does not even purport to have any relationship with any manpower problem but is intended solely to impose a most unjust burden upon the workers.

Cites Labor Pacts

Through the democratic procedure of joint labor-management cooperation there have been adopted, with the approval of the War Manpower Commission, employment stabilization agreements in those areas where it has been deemed necessary to aid the war effort.

These agreements, as you know, have proved to be exceedingly successful and have stabilized employment and discouraged unnecessary migration. This has been true because these agreements have had the single approach, namely, how best to utilize all available manpower at the highest level of skill.

Your recent directive negates the democratic procedure established under these stabilization agreements. Further, your directive merely seeks to prevent workers from obtaining a fair wage for their work regardless whether this absolute fiat destroys the morale and efficiency of the workers and thereby prevents the achieving of maximum production.

The crazy quilt approach of your directive is demonstrated by the fact that in critical areas where stabilization agreements have been thought necessary, employes will be permitted to transfer from one job to another in accordance with the provisions of such agreements, all of which are based upon the single test of whether the transfer aids in the prosecution of the war.

On the other hand, in all other areas in the country where a critical manpower situation has not developed, and therefore no stabilization agreements have been thought necessary as yet, employes are prevented from transferring from a job in one essential industry to a job in another essential industry at a higher rate of pay even though such transfer may aid in the prosecution of the war.

How can the War Manpower Commission justly attempt to freeze men to their jobs while at the same time employes are being discharged because of no available work?

As you know, in hundreds of plants throughout the nation men are being laid off, having worked themselves out of jobs by producing "too fast and too much." No provision has been made to assure continuity of work for these employes. Your directive under these circumstances can only serve to destroy the morale and efficiency of workers.

Not Aid to War

Further, in those areas where stabilization agreements are in operation, your directive superimposes a condition that employes may not leave their place of employment because their rate of pay is "substantially less than that prevailing in the locality in the same or substantially similar work."

How can it be urged that such condition can possibly aid in the prosecution of the war? The impact on the morale and efficiency of the employes who are thus compelled to remain at work at a sweated or substandard wage which can only benefit the employer in terms of inflated profits, will necessarily be devastating.

Any program of stabilizing employment to prevent unnecessary migration must be correlated with an appropriate national wage policy that would assure employes who remain at their present jobs that they will receive the wages and be employed at such hours and working conditions prevailing in the area or industry as determined through bona fide collective bargaining.

Your recent directive actually negates the democratic procedure established through the employment stabilization agreements. Further, your directive fails to meet the problem of how to stabilize employment for the purpose of utilizing all available manpower at the highest level of skill in order to achieve maximum production. The stabilization agreements did accomplish this objective.

Asks Policy Change

For these reasons the Congress of Industrial Organizations must insist that your directive be replaced by a policy whereby employment stabilization will be governed solely through the operation of joint labor-management stabilization agreements to be put into effect wherever they may be needed and which shall be predicated upon the following basic principles:

(a) Investigation of plants to be covered so as to be certified that they are complying with (1) health and safety requirements; (2) wages, hours and working conditions prevailing in the area or industry as determined through bona fide collective bargaining; (3) requirements for adequate training facilities; and (4) requirements for maximum utilization of available manpower in the plant.

(b) Employes in the covered plants should of course be permitted to leave their present employ for the purpose of seeking employment elsewhere if the employe is doing so to obtain employment where he can be utilized at a higher skill or for a greater number of weekly hours than he is enjoying at his present job.

(c) Employes, for remaining at their jobs, should be guaranteed that as long as they are ready, able and willing to work, and do report for work, they should receive a minimum weekly wage equal to their average earnings of 40 hours. Where an industry or a plant has been requested to operate on a longer week, the employes therein employed should be guaranteed a minimum weekly wage based upon such longer work week with premium pay in accordance with outstanding collective bargaining agreements, statutes and the President's Executive Order 9240.

Letter Unanswered

At this time I wish again to call your attention to my letter to you of December 21, 1942, in which I submitted certain basic elements for a program to effectuate a total mobilization of manpower. To date I have received no reply to this letter.

I do not believe that there can be any real manpower mobilization on a piecemeal basis which has been the approach of the War Manpower Commission to date. I take this opportunity of repeating the proposals which I had made.

(1) If there is to be a maximum mobilization of available manpower resources there must be a complete correlation of the activities of those agencies which have jurisdiction over procurement, the issuance of contracts and disposition of raw materials with those in the Manpower Commission.

It would be futile to continue to have haphazard methods of having a contract agency issue contracts so as to create crises of manpower and then seek to utilize the Manpower Commission solely as a fire department squad to meet those continuing crises.

Contracts of available material must be correlated with the manpower requirements and supplies. Total mobilization cannot be restricted to manpower but must embrace mobilization of material resources as well. As Chairman of the War Manpower Commission there has been imposed upon you both the responsibility and authority to achieve this goal.

(2) All available manpower, such as Negroes, or racial groups and women must be utilized. We must have an end to the utterances of pious hopes in regard to this policy and enter into a field of action whereby employers will be compelled to accept this available manpower. Complete equality of opportunity for employment must be made available to all workers and under the basic principle of equal pay for equal work.

(3) Labor recognizes that to meet some critical situations employes should transfer to plants which have a serious shortage of available manpower. We are anxious to do so in order to aid the effective prosecution of the war. But where transfers are to be made, certain safequards are essential.

We believe that the Manpower Commission should address itself to this problem and make adequate provision for:

(a) The payment of traveling expenses.

(b) Health, housing and child care facilities for the transferred employes.

'Protects Earnings'

(c) Protection of the earnings of the men at their new jobs so that they will be equal to those received on the jobs from which the employes were transferred.

(d) Protection for the men so transferring so that they will be able to return to their old job on the basis of their accumulated seniority and all of their rights and privileges provided for under the collective bargaining agreements covering the place of their original employment if they had been continuously at work.

The CIO has consistently approached the manpower problem on the basis of what has to be done to assure the fullest mobilization of our manpower resources. We merely request that all steps be taken which will meet the needs of our nation by assuring the maximum production of war materials.

We are firm in our belief that that can be done only through the protection and maintenance of the health and morale of the America workers and not through the imposition of arbitrary directives which do not meet the problem but rather merely seek to punish.

Hails Work Done by Joint Labor Groups

St. Louis, Mo., April 24—Labor-management committees have contributed millions of man-hours to war production, but for maximum effectiveness their duties must be extended in production, and their functions must go beyond the actual production job, William Sentner, general vice-president of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America, CIO, told the regional meeting here of the National Conference of Social Work last week. Sentner was the main speaker on this subject at the meeting.

Sentner also contended that the production program must go beyond this valuable labor-management cooperation, and that "it is labor's belief that there must be established one single organization that will plan, coordinate and direct the war production and economic stabilization program for the nation" as embodied in the Pepper-Tolan-Kilgore bill.

After reviewing the operation of the labor-management committees and pointing out that more than a year before Donald Nelson of the WPB called for establishment of these committees, the proposal had been made by Philip Murray, president of the CIO, Sentner said:

"The general work of labor-management committees has resulted in contributing millions of additional man-hours to production. No estimate or facts can be obtained, but the sum total out-put is increased on individual jobs by 10 to 400 per cent. Multiply this by the millions of workers involved and the figure becomes staggering."

CIO TANKS ROUT AXIS: M-7 tank killers, built by members of the United Steelworkers of America at the Schenectady, N. Y., plant of the American Locomotive Co., helped rout Rommel at the critical battle at El Alamen. That was the statement made this week at a city-wide celebration, honoring the soldiers of production, by Maj. Gen Russel L. Maxwell, commander of U. S. forces in the Middle East, and by Col. Alan G. Cole, of the British Eighth Army.

Murray Hits Crowd Out to Smear Labor

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Apr. 24—Interests in Washington who are distracting attention from winning the war, and creating confusion by persecuting organized labor were severely criticized by CIO Pres. Philip Murray in a speech made at the district con-ference of the United Steelworkers of America held here last weekend.

Pres. Murray, who is also head of the CIO Steelworkers, was given a tremendous ovation by delegates and visitors to the conference, held by Districts 35 and 36. Sec.-Treas. David McDonald, of the USA-CIO, and Lee Pressman, CIO general counsel, who also spoke, were included in the ovation.

186,000 IN FORCES

Urging union members to give their entire cooperation in seeing that war material be kept moving to speed the winning of the war, Sec.-Treasur. McDonald called attention to the fact that already 186,000 members of the union were now in the armed services.

Pres. Murray told the conference delegates that the union now had more than 20,000 grievance committeemen, 25,000 local union officers and 30 district directors in the bargaining service of the members.

"The democratic principles and methods used in the running of our union have commanded the respect of the nation," he said.

BACK FDR

Declaring that the CIO has given whole-hearted support to Pres. Roosevelt in his fight to win the war, Murray bitterly attacked those interests in Washington that are more interested in fighting unions than in fighting the war.

CIO labor has placed its full weight behind a program to roll back living costs to the level of September, 1942, Murray said, as part of its support of the President's executive order stabilizing wages. He called for the elimination of excessive profits and for price control as necessary to an effective war program.

At the Saturday afternoon session, Lee Pressman, who is general counsel for the USA as well as for the CIO, spoke at length on the legislative problems of the union, and urged members to keep their congressmen informed of their stand on legislative measures benefiting workers.

Tune in for the Candid Facts From A CIO Soldier's New Guinea Diary!

Murray Urges:

Use Labor-Management Pacts to Stabilize U.S. Manpower Setup

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called upon Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission to replace his recent job freezing directive with a policy "whereby employment stabilization will be governed solely through the operation of joint labor-management stabilization agreements," with proper safeguards for labor.

In a letter to McNutt, Murray expressed the "serious disagreement" of the CIO with certain provisions of McNutt's directive order and called attention to a number of "very basic shortcomings in the administration of our manpower problems."

Murray declared that joint labor-management agreements for employment stabilization have been "exceedingly successful," but that "your recent directive negates the democratic procedure established under these stabilization agreements."

Noting that under the directive workers may still transfer from one job to another in critical areas where stabilization agreements exist, "based upon the single test of whether the transfer aids in the prosecution of the war," Murray denounced "the crazy quilt approach" of the directive in prohibiting transfer to higher paid jobs in areas where no critical manpower situation has developed and no stabilization agreements have been thought necessary, "even though such transfers may aid in the prosecution of the war."

The CIO leader particularly attacked a provision in the directive that, where stabilization agreements are in operation, employes may not leave their jobs because their pay is "substantially less than that prevailing in the locality in the same or substantially similar work."

HITS BLOW TO MORALE

"The impact on the morale and efficiency of the employes who are thus compelled to remain at work at a sweated or substandard wage which can only benefit the employer in terms of inflated profit, will necessarily be devastating," Murray said.

"For these reasons the Congress of Industrial Organizations must insist that your directive be replaced by a policy whereby employment stabilization will be governed solely through the operation of joint labor-management stabilization agreements to be put into effect wherever they may be needed."

Murray said that such agreements should provide for adequate health, safety, wage and working conditions; for transfers to jobs where a worker can be utilized at a higher skill or for a greater number of weekly hours; and for a guaranteed minimum 40-hour weekly wage.

PIECEMEAL BASIS

Finally, Murray declared that there cannot be "any real manpower stabilization on a piecemeal basis, which has been the approach of the War Manpower commission to date." He urged:

1. That there be "a complete correlation of the activities of those agencies which have jurisdiction over procurement, the issuance of contracts and disposition of raw materials with those in the Manpower Commission."

2. That all available manpower, such as Negroes, or racial groups and women, must be utilized, with complete equality of employment opportunity and equal pay for equal work.

3. That where job transfers must be made to meet manpower shortages, safeguards are essential for payment of traveling expenses; health, housing and child care facilities; protection of equal earnings to those on previous jobs; and protection of seniority and other rights under union agreements in the original place of employment.

'Hunger Bloc' Knifes Food Production Plans

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—The hunger bloc in Congress, masquerading as the "farm bloc," this week dealt three serious blows to food production plans and added heavily to the food deficit that will have to be faced unless its plans are checked.

First step was the knifing of the Farm Security Administration which helps small farmers to get into the food production program, done on the Agriculture Department's appropriation bill in the House.

Along with killing the FSA—whose continuance was backed by the administration and by CIO and the National Farmers Union—the House also dumped the government's plan for incentive payments to boost output of essential food crops and the government's crop insurance scheme, which aids production by protecting farmers against crop loss.

Only hope of restoring these items is in the Senate, where the measure now goes to the Appropriations Committee. Last week the CIO urged all members to oppose the House knifing and to roll up all the backing they could for the FSA and other increased food production programs.

At the same time, the House Agriculture Committee started hearings on the Fulmer bill (HR 1728), which, like the companion Bankhead bill (S 729) in the Senate, would freeze all farm labor to existing jobs, regardless of whether or not the workers were on essential crops.

WOULD FREEZE WORKERS

This would result, according to testimony of CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers' President Donald Henderson, in freezing hundreds of thousands of workers on cotton plantations, tobacco farms, etc., despite the fact that we have a two years' supply of both and do not need further supplies to help the war.

"These bills do not get at the heart of the food problem," Henderson said. "They freeze the peacetime status which was based on a huge farm labor surplus, one-third of which will remain tied to non-essential crops."

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The hunger bloc is riding high in Congress this week, with the knifing of the Farm Security Administration in the House and the scuttling of the food production program through killing incentive payments, crop insurance and the general program of bringing millions of small farmers into the production battle. In addition, the Bankhead (S 729) and Fulmer (HR 1728) farm labor freeze bills are active, as is the Austin-Wadsworth general labor draft bill.

The tax bill is also cooking, with the Ruml plan to forget taxes of the rich coming to life again. The Hobbs bill (HR 653) has gone to the Senate Judiciary Committe, where a fight has to be made to secure open hearings.

A great many Congressmen and Senators are going home for an Easter vacation. They must be visited and talked to by the voters on the home grounds—the most effective method of reaching them with labor's win-the-war program.

The polltax discharge petition (DP 3) now has 193 signatures. Only a handful more to go—keep after your Representative. Even if he has signed, urge him to help get other signatures and work for a quick vote when the bill (HR 7) comes up.

95% CIO Vote Won In Chicago

Chicago, Apr. 24—Some 1,300 track department employes of the Chicago Surface Lines voted more than 95 per cent for the CIO's Transport Workers Union in an election conducted early this month by the National Labor Relations Board. The final results showed that 1,011 voted for the TWU, 15 for an independent union, 37 for the AFL and 3 for no union.

The trackmen who formerly belonged to an independent union, sought affiliation with the CIO, and through the independent petitioned the NLRB to hold an election. More than 710 of the trackmen signed up in the TWU in a one-day whirlwind campaign.

The company consented to the election, as did the AFL Hod Carriers Union, to which the trackmen belonged before going independent.

UAW Wins 2 More Elections

Cleveland, O., April 24.—The United Auto Workers Union this week announced victory in two more elections. At the Columbus Forge & Iron Co. the organization defeated a company union 2-1. At Aeronautical Products, Inc., Washington Court House, Ohio, the UAW polled 482 votes against 219 for no union.

Our Children's Milk

The CIO Cost of Living Committee has disclosed a shocking secret decision of Food Administrator Chester Davis to suspend government aid to school-lunch and penny-milk programs, from which more than five million children in 80,000 schools have been benefiting.

Donald E. Montgomery, former consumers' counsel in the Dept. of Agriculture and now a member of the CIO committee, also revealed that relief milk distribution for low-income families is also being stopped on Davis's order.

In England, where the milk shortage is much greater than here, the children are given first shot at it, with much larger rations than adults, with free milk in schools and with specially reduced prices or free supplies for low-income families.

But in wealthy America, it is now actually proposed to take milk from the mouths of millions of children who can't afford their full share of this essential food.

The school-milk and school-lunch programs have already been hard hit by the withdrawal of WPA aid, and if all further federal aid is withdrawn, as ordered by Davis, they will probably collapse.

The Food Administration is attempting to excuse its scandalous order on the grounds that the House appropriations committee approved language which may have been aimed at these programs.

But this language was not approved by the House. And the law as it stands authorizes programs of this type, and provides money for them.

The school-milk and school-lunch program must not only be continued, it must also be expanded until all American children are assured the food on which their future health and strength and the nation's welfare depend.

Let Administrator Davis hear from you.

Manpower Crazy Quilt

The job-freezing order of War Manpower Chief McNutt is a sad example of the distorted, piecemeal and crazy-quilt approach which has so far bungled the handling of the nation's vitally important manpower problems.

The CIO has long been calling for a carefully planned mobilization of all our manpower resources, so they may be utilized to the full for winning the war.

It has pointed out that this requires a complete correlation of manpower activities with procurement, contract allocations and disposition of raw materials; for complete employment opportunuity for Negroes, women and other groups now discriminated against; and for adequate labor safeguards where job transfers are made.

But McNutt's order leaves such real manpower problems untouched. It simply prohibits essential workers from taking other better-paid essential jobs, in areas where there is not yet a critical manpower situation, regardless of reason.

In critical areas there are already successfully operating employment stabilization agreements, worked out through labor-management cooperation. In these areas, workers may transfer from one job to another, under the terms of the agreements, if such transfers aid in the prosecution of the war.

But McNutt has now imposed a shameful restriction on these agreements in critical areas —namely, that a worker may not change jobs because his pay is "substantially less than that prevailing in the locality in the same or substantially similar work." This means freezing workers to sweated jobs at substandard wages, regardless of the effect on labor morale and production.

The whole order negates the democratic and effective procedure of labor-management agreements for employment stabilization and places a most unjust burden on the workers.

On behalf of the CIO therefore, Pres. Murray calls for the scrapping of this order, and its replacement by labor-management job stabilization agreements wherever needed.

These agreements, he says, should include proper safeguards for working conditions; should permit job changes where a worker can be more usefully employed; and should guarantee workers a minimum 40-hour weekly wage.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

MRS. HOG grunted and turned up her snout. "See what I mean?" she said. "We Hogs have influence in Washington!

"Right after the President's order to hold the line against price increases, Food Administrator Davis made clear it doesn't apply to us.

"He said he wasn't authorizing any limit to the price of hogs. . ."

"And beef cattle, deary," put in Mrs. Cow, rather mournfully. "But I'm not bragging, and this whole subject is indelicate, to say the least."

"Delicacy be damned!" snorted Mrs. Hog. "You don't have anything to brag about anyhow.

"Administrator Davis has shown what he thinks of your milk. He's ordered an end to the school-milk and school-lunch program for some five million American children.

"And anyhow, you've missed my whole point about the special consideration given to hogs of all kinds in Washington."

The farmer brought out another pailful of hog-food, harnessed the horse and started ploughing.

Mrs. Hog guzzled her fill, rolled over lazily and continued:

"Working is all right for those who don't know any better. But when you get down to it, we hogs are the people who really count.

"After all, we give people work looking after us. And, as they say, you can't cut down on the money-hogs without destroying the incentives that make our industrial system work.

"Take this war.....The laboring folks are dead-set on winning it. They're working their heads off, and their sons and brothers are doing most of the fighting. But we hogs look out for ourselves first.

"The labor folks say it's all-important to stop inflation, to win this war. They've agreed to their wages being stabilized. But they also say prices and living costs must be rolled back, and profiteering ended, if inflation is really to be stopped.

Mrs. Hog rolled around contentedly, and went on:

"As I said, we hogs have influence in Washington. And that goes for price-hogs, salary-hogs and profit-hogs.

"You know, the U. S. Treasury and the labor folks wanted to do some real taxing of the profit-hogs last year. But our friends in Congress stopped that. They took it out on the workers and farmers instead," Mrs. Hog chuckled.

"As a result, war profits last year, even after taxes, were about 66% higher than before the war.

"As for the salary-hogs, Congress has taken good care of them too. It has stopped the President from limiting salaries to $67,200 a year. Workers' and soldiers' wages are limited, but there's no limit for salary-hogs. That's a good hog-laugh!"

"But what about the President's executive order?" inquired Mrs. Cow. "That's supposed to roll back prices and crack down on the price-hogs, isn't it?"

"Sure, sure," said Mrs. Hog, with a hog-wink. "It's supposed to. But we hogs have influence!

"There's a big land-hog bloc in Congress, with all sorts of bills to push up food prices. And even if the President vetoes these, the OPA and Food Administration believe in being kind to price-hogs these days.

"Why, even after the President's order, they've allowed a price increase for feed corn—and no ceiling on hogs and beef cattle.

"And note how easy they've been on canners who don't like grade labeling, as compared with the crackdown on the children's milk.

"So, you see, we hogs should worry!"

A rasping noise came from the barn, and Mrs. Cow broke in:

"I don't want to be crude, deary. But that sounds like a knife being sharpened, and I think you hogs should worry.

"After all, life wouldn't be fit even for a hog, if Hitler wins.

"Furthermore, there's a glint in the eyes of the labor and working farm folk these days. They're not being hoggish about their own pay; and they're not going to let your kind go hog-wild on inflation and lose the war.

"The CIO is setting up legislative committees all over the country to put the heat on the hog-crowd in Congress. And they're raising particular hell with OPA Chief Brown and Food Administrator Davis about really enforcing the President's order on prices.

"So put that in your trough and gulp it, Mrs. Hog, before you get too snouty."

CIO Hits OPA Heads For Flop on Control

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—The conduct of the OPA in handling problems of inflated food prices, grade labelling, quality control and personnel for enforcement shows its top officials are "either naive or an instrument of anti-price control forces," the CIO's Cost of Living Committee said in a press conference here this week.

This is shown, the committee said, by OPA Chief Prentiss Brown's flat failure to carry out the price freezing end of President Roosevelt's executive order of last week, and is further proved by the five-cent rise in corn ceilings ordered by Food Administrator Chester Davis, an action that followed the FDR order by a few days.

HIT PERSONNEL

On personnel chosen by Brown supposedly to enforce OPA ceilings, the committee cited the appointment of George Burke as new general counsel to succeed David Ginsburgh. Burke, an anti-union lawyer from Michigan, was selected despite CIO and AFL protests and despite a demand for appointment of a man who was really interested in controlling prices and stopping inflation.

Burke's statement on taking office, it was pointed out, went along the familiar OPA line of refusal to enforce price control, with the new man talking about "reasonable and understandable control" on his first day in office.

Discussing the grade labelling situation, the committee members pointed out that anti-price control forces in OPA and in the food industry are using Congressional committees as a means of "mounting their offensives" against control.

Brown's passing of the buck on labelling to the House Agriculture committee, in which he turned his back on his own order signed last February for labelling by asking Congress for "authority" he already possesses was cited as an example.

SCHOOL LUNCH STOPPED

The committee sharply criticized Davis and the Dept. of Agriculture for dropping the school lunch and penny milk projects, which Chairman J. Raymond Walsh described as "declaring war on the children."

This program, according to committee member Donald E. Montgomery, has served more than five million children of low income families with free lunches in schools and has given millions of workers' kids a chance to get a half pint of milk a day at a cost to them of one cent a serving.

RELIEF MILK

Milk distributed in relief areas—of which there are many in the nation—is also being stopped on Davis's order, Montgomery said, pointing out that this was a particularly revolting example of "economy" at the expense of the people who are fighting the war.

Turning to the possibility of rolling back food prices to September 15 levels, the committee recommended that a beginning be made on fresh vegetables. Growers' prices on these have increased enormously between March '42 and March '43, they said, citing a 40 per cent rise in potatoes, 100 per cent in tomatoes, 45 per cent in carrots, 89 per cent in lettuce, 125 per cent in cauliflower, spinach, eggplant, etc.

Civilian War Front:

CIO Hits '1-Sided' Freeze Enforcement

By The CIO COST OF LIVING COMMITTEE

The President's "hold the line" order of April 8 is being administered as a "hold one side of the line" order—as a directive to freeze wages and to freeze workers into their jobs, but to do nothing about prices and the mounting cost of living.

This fact is clear from the events of the past 10 days. On the side of wages, which had already been stabilized under past rulings of the War Labor Board, we have seen a succession of draconian edicts aimed at freezing inequities and at chaining workers to ill-paying jobs. On the side of prices, where the breakdown of controls had already amounted to a scandal, we have seen legalized price increases and a continuance of the OPA policy of soft enforcement.

Corn Price Raised

The ink was scarcely dry on the President's executive order when an increase in the price of feed corn was authorized by the OPA and the Food Administration. This increase, accomplishing much of the purpose of the vetoed Bankhead Bill, was authorized despite the President's solemn assurance that "no further price increases are to be sanctioned unless imperatively required by law."

The explanation that this is a readjustment in price relationships which will not increase the cost of living is scarcely convincing. In view of the attitude of Congress towards subsidy payments, it is only too likely to result in an increase in living costs.

A flagrant increase in retail meat prices, which was scheduled to go into effect on April 15, was temporarily averted as a result of labor protests. But in view of the intrenchment of trade interests in the OPA organization and the extreme reluctance of Food Administrator Davis to agree to ceilings on livestock, this victory may prove short lived.

Repeatedly since April 8 Food Administrator Davis has declared that he will not authorize the Price Administrator to put ceilings on hogs and beef cattle if he can possibly avoid it. The President ordered both of these officials to place ceilings on all commodities affecting the cost of living.

The only explanation that has been offered for this failure to comply with the President's order is that livestock ceilings may be difficult to administer. But this explanation is itself condemned by the President's statement that "the only way to hold the line is to stop trying to find justification for not holding it here and not holding it there."

The statements of responsible OPA officials since the President's order indicate that OPA will continue to administer price control with a view to helping business rather than the hard-pressed consumer. Price Administrator Brown continues his filibuster against his own order for the grade labeling for canned goods. Because of the canners' pressure, he now professes doubt as to his authority to prevent the evasion of price ceilings by tying prices to grades, and wants Congress to pass new legislation on the subject. We are not going to win the battle against inflation by conducting an administrative filibuster whenever trade groups object to price control enforcement.

Safe for Business

Ex-Senator Herring, chief assistant to the Price Administrator, continues the policy of the discredited Maxon in making price control safe for business. In a statement to the Journal of Commerce he has assured business that the President's order will not block the upward readjustment of ceilings.

Contrary to the President's policy of using subsidies to prevent price increases to the public, Mr. Herring, according to the Journal of Commerce, "indicated that the Price Administration will make every effort to avoid subsidies and to effect the adjustment in costs through an upward revision of ceiling prices wherever possible."

CIO Wins NY Transit Pay Raise

New York, Apr. 24—The Board of Transportation has agreed to grant a wage increase and to confer with officers of the Transport Workers Union on the allocation of the raises to the various groups among the 32,000 employes of the N. Y. C. Transit System, the TWU announced here.

The union stated that although the Mayor had estimated that the increase would amount to $3,000,000 a year, TWU officers hold that it will amount to substantially more.

TWU Pres. Michael J. Quill, Sec.-Treas. Douglas L. MacMahon, and General Counsel Harry Sacher, met with Chairman John H. Delaney of the Board of Transportation to negotiate the increase. Further meetings were planned to discuss distribution of the increase on the basis of the rise in the cost of living, inequalities and substandard rates.

Meanwhile the union announced that nearly 1,100 employes of the Fifth Ave. Coach Co. have received back pay checks for increases due them since May 1, 1942. Amounts range from $175 to $300 a member.

'Straitjacket' NG for US, Morse Says

Washington, April 24—America's war economy "is a dynamic one and cannot be controlled by economic straitjackets," Dean Wayne Morse, public member of the War Labor Board, said here this week calling for a straight 10 cents an hour increase for 26,000 west coast workers in place of the 7.5 cents given by the Board majority.

"This writer has taken the position over and over again that flexible principles must be applied in controling and regulating wartime wage policies," Morse said.

Sharply advising the Board majority to go to the Pacific Northwest woods and see for themselves "the cost of living problems which confront these workers," Morse declared that the 10-cent figure was amply justified by the conditions under which timber workers live and work and added that the increase would be used only for the barest necessities of health for maximum production.

Morse's opinion was underlined by recent warnings of War Production Board officials that the lumber shortage, already acute and threatening to become even more serious, is hampering production of the materials needed for war.

He also pointed out that the Board decision was not governed by the President's freeze order of last week since the case was initiated some time ago.

CIO City Workers Win 10% Raise

New York, April 24—A determined campaign, featuring mass rallies, newspaper advertising and other pressure on public officials by the CIO State, County and Municipal Workers of America this week showed the tidy gain of $13,500,000 in pay raises for 96,000 State and City employes.

State employes, numbering 45,000 happily watched the Legislature pass a bill giving 10 per cent increases to those earning up to $2,000, and 7½ per cent raises to those making between $2,000 and $3,900 a year. The total gain was $5,200,000.

City workers, numbering 51,000, won a $1.200 yearly minimum, and pay increases ranging from 50 cents a day for per diem workers to $180 a year. The maximum salary affected was $2,500. The total yearly increase amounts to $8,000,000.

Auxiliaries Celebrate 'Save Children Week'

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

The first week in May is being celebrated by CIO Auxiliaries throughout the country as "Save the Children Week."

"Our week has a double purpose," CWA President Faye Stephenson said in announcing it. "First we want to focus attention on the importance of protecting the welfare of all our children in wartime, and second, we must arouse our communities and our nation to the special urgency of adequate care for the children of working mothers.

"'Save the Children Week' begins May 1, Child Health Day, which is dedicated to the President's proclamation to 'recognition of the vital importance of the health of the children to the strength of the nation'," she said.

"In this war emergency the health of our children can only be safeguarded by community action. Hundreds of thousands more must work in order to meet rising living costs or to supplement the meagre allowance to wives and children of servicemen.

"For over a year the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries has been calling for establishment of child care facilities as an essential war welfare measure. We have pointed to the experience of Britain where public facilities care for hundreds of thousands of children of working mothers. We have worked for establishment of similar facilities here so that women can give their best work to the war effort, secure in the knowledge that their children are cared for.

PROUD OF WORK

"We are proud of the work our auxiliary women have done. In Los Angeles, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland, Washington, D. C., and other cities they have been the driving forces which pushed local child care committees into arranging application for federal funds.

"But progress has been too slow. The need is critical. Hundreds of skilled women workers are leaving industry each day because their children are not well cared for. Juvenile delinquency rates are rising. 'Save the Children Week' is a call to intensified action."

The Auxiliary Congress is stressing a four-point action program for the national week.

FOUR-POINT PROGRAM

1. Education of Congressmen and Senators on the urgency of adequate federal appropriations to meet war child care needs.

2. Pressure on the Federal Works Agency and the Office of Education to take immediate steps to speed action on child care projects. Today communities sometimes wait two or three months for funds after applications are submitted.

3. Pressure on Food Administrator Chester Davis and on Congress to continue the school lunch and school milk programs both of which are being curtailed and are threatened with being discontinued.

4. Immediate local action in each community to keep schools open this summer wherever necessary to meet child care needs.

Letters and telegrams to Washington, meetings throughout the country, and delegations to Congressmen and to local officials of the federal agencies concerned will carry this program into effect.

Foods to Use As Meat Substitutes

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Many of us have found out by now that 16 points per person for meat, cheese, and fat—including butter—doesn't go very far. Whether we want to or not, we find ourselves wondering what to fix to take the place of meat. It isn't merely a question of preparing food that's filling. Plenty of macaroni or starchy foods could take care of that. It's really a question of keeping the body supplied with the proper nourishment needed to maintain good health. And meat is one important food that does that job.

To know what foods to use as substitutes for the food value of meats, we ought to know first what it is that makes meat such an important part of our diet.

Meat is one of our main sources of protein. Protein is especially needed in building the soft tissues of the body. It is an important part of all living tissue in plants and animals. Since all food comes from plants or animals, some protein will be found in almost all foods.

Yet, not all proteins are of equal value to the body. Proteins are made up of several different amino acids. However, not all proteins contain all of these amino acids. Those proteins that contain all the amino acids are called "Complete Proteins." The "Iincomplete Proteins" are those proteins that contain only some of the amino acids Meat is one of the few foods that contains the "Complete Proteins,"

SOURCES OF PROTEIN

COMPLETE PROTEINS

Lean meats, poultry, fish
Milk
Cheese (cottage cheese or American cheese)
Eggs
Peanuts and soybeans

INCOMPLETE PROTEINS

Cereal grains
Gelatin
Dried peas and beans
Lentils

Generally, think of the animal proteins—milks, meats, cheese and eggs—as "Complete Proteins." Plan to include these first in your menus.

DAILY SHARE OF PROTEINS

If you have one pint of milk, one egg, one serving of lean meat, poultry or fish—plus the breads, cereals and vegetables you ordinarily eat during the day, you'll get your daily quota of proteins.

Dried peas and beans are often suggested as meat substitutes. Actually, although these are good sources of protein, they do not furnish the complete proteins of meat. When using beans or peas, plan to have milk or cheese during the day to fill in your daily quota.

Don't count on bacon to supply your protein. Think of bacon more as a supply of fuel for your body because of its high fat content. It will take about ten slices of bacon to supply the protein of one ounce of meat.

Mothers should keep in mind that growing children especially need more protein than adults because protein is directly connected with growth. In the adult, the protein is used mainly for maintenance and repair of the body tissues,—or in rebuilding tissue after an illness.

Adolph Germer, organization director of the IWA, sends in a victory at the Moser Box Company in St. Louis, Mo., where the vote was 52 to 32. Fred Fudge, CIO representative in Dayton, comes through with a victory at the Fosdick Glass Company, Dayton, Ohio, which voted—CIO, 29; no union, two.

CIO Beats District 50

George Craig, director in Philadelphia, reports a victory at the A. P. De Sanno & Son, Inc., plant at Phoenixville, Pa., with a vote of 216 for the CIO and 44 for District 50. In addition, he reports bringing into the USA-CIO 400 boiler workers of the Badenhousen Corp. The CIO is now recognized as sole bargaining agency.

Joseph M. Walsh, regional director in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., won an agreement for Local 265 of the Utility Workers Organizing Committee with the Scranton Electric Co. This is the first contract with that corporation and provides for a 9-cent increase.

Hugh Thompson, director in Buffalo, reports signing an agreement between the Sardik Food Products Corp., Lockport, N. Y., and the Cannery and Agricultural Workers. The agreement provides for a 5 to 25-cent hourly increase; union shop and checkoff; two 15-minute rest periods daily; paid lunch period; one month's pay for workers who enter the armed forces and auxiliaries; one week's vacation for six months' service and two weeks for one year; one month's sick leave; eight hours' pay for seven hours and ten minutes' work, and Christmas bonus of $25.

Director Thompson also sends in an election victory at Niagara Textile, Lockport, N. Y., for the TWUA with a vote of 88 to 28. Marcel Scherer, international vice president of the FAECT, sends in a victory at the American Smelting and Refining Company plant, located at Selby, Calif.

Another Victory for UE

The UERMWA polled a victory at the Elwell-Parker Electric Company, Cleveland, 257 to 133 for the E. P. E. Employes Association. Regional Director McCrone of New Haven, Conn., sends in a victory for the UE at the New Britain Machine Co. plant, voting CIO 1,419 to 910 for independent union. This was followed by another at the High Standard Mfg. Co., New Haven, CIO 2,201, to no union 668.

James J. Matles adds the following to the above victories for the UE: Ohio Tool, Cleveland, 632 to 243; Atlas Powder Company, Weldon Springs, Mo., 202 to 59; East Shore Machine Products, Cleveland, 66 to 20; A. B. Chance, Centralia, Mo., 179 to 18; Scott Atwater Company, Minneapolis, Minn., 238 to 38; Greenfield Tap and Die, Mass., card check 1,087 for CIO out of 1,309, and two victories in Canada, Stokes Rubber Company, Welland, Canada, 217 to 50, and Defense Industries, Ltd., Ajax, Canada, 3,648 to 405. This is splendid work!

An Australian hero advises Captain Rickenbacker. Hew Roberts, of the Australian Teachers Union and an RAF hero, addressed a joint rally at Wyoming Valley, Pa., and according to Regional Director Walsh, he made quite a hit. In addressing a Kiwanis Club luncheon our Australian brother, Hew Roberts, had this to say in his appeal for national unity:

"I regret to see a fellow flyer, Rickenbacker, not contributing to this unity. He probably feels he is justified, but I disagree with him. The people of Australia have learned to know the value of unions, and in this crisis they are the backbone of the nation just as unions are here."

Joint Labor-Management Groups Break Output Records in Britain

LONDON, April 24 (ALN)—Striking evidence of the effectiveness of joint production committees in increasing output of war materials is contained in the third production report of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, published this week. The report, covering the period June-November, 1942, is based on replies from AEU members on production committees and shop stewards in 1,481 plants employing a total of 1,270,000 workers.

The AEU, which admitted women to membership January 1, now has nearly one million members. Fifty-five percent of the plants with joint committees showed production increases—in some cases as high as 300%—whereas in 58% of those without committees there were no increases or production declined.

WORKERS' IDEAS IMPORTANT

"The key to the effectiveness of production committees is to be found in the proportion of acceptable suggestions coming from the workers' side," the report states. "Sixty-five percent of workers' ideas were adopted. Two-thirds of the concerns with committees attributed production increases to cooperation between workers and management in such important matters as workshop organization, coordination of departments, optimum use of skilled labor, tools and materials.

"Only 29% of the plants without committees showed improvement from these causes." Forty-four percent of the plants with committees also attributed increased production to guaranteed piece rates and incentive wages.

Other ways in which the committes had increased output were: improvement in lighting, heating, ventilation and blackout conditions; better canteen facilities—especially in those plants where the canteens were operated by private catering firms; and improved sanitation.

Canada Wins Labor Law

Toronto, April 24 — Collective bargaining in Ontario is mandatory by an Act passed by the Legislature and signed by the Lieutenant-Governor this week. The united forces of labor won what they have been seeking for at least a decade. Passage of the bill represented a defeat for reactionary forces who launched a last-minute campaign of newspaper advertising and misrepresentation.

Company unions are outlawed in the legislation, which will operate as soon as a judge of the Supreme court of Ontario is named to head a labor court provided in the Act. Excluded as bargaining agencies are "any such union or association the administration, management or policy of which is dominated, coerced or improperly influenced by the employer in any manner whether by way of financial aid or otherwise."

The Act will be administered by the Labor Court and unions desiring negotiations must apply to the court for certification. The court is empowered to arrange for elections by secret ballot, and to order reinstatement of workers with back pay for unlawful discharge, to levy penalties against employers and otherwise to restrain violations of the Act.

Although labor urged substitution of the one-man labor court by a three-man labor board, it was generally agreed that an outstanding victory had been won in the passage of the bill.

Possibility of Dominion legislation is now seen in the decision of the National War Labor Board to hold public hearings at Ottawa starting early next month to review all phases of Canadian wages and labor relations and "any matters relevant . . . to the complete and effective organization of industry and labor for the furtherance of the war effort."

Labor Hits Draft Bill, Says CIO

Washington, April 24—Labor is against the Austin - Wadsworth manpower draft bill because it makes "no contribution whatever to the maximum use of the nation's manpower, and, as a matter of fact, carries with it grave dangers of interference with that program," Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers declared this week in testimony prepared for the House Military Affairs Committee.

Bittner's testimony, delivered by USA - CIO Representative Tim Flynn, reaffirmed CIO's demands for a planned, national approach to the manpower problem as part of total planning for total mobilization.

He cited a Pennsylvania tank plant whose orders were discontinued after a force of 9,500 workers was assembled, and the workers left without jobs, as an example of the folly of attempting to meet the manpower problem by merely passing a law.

"We can set up all the machinery we like, complicated or simple, for the moving of men from one place to another," he said. "Unless the movement of these men, however, is part of a unified and integrated production plan, it can mean wasted manpower, not increased use of manpower, and wasted transportation facilities."

Pointing out that the same criticisms applied to other coercive measures pending on the manpower problem, Bittner urged that the committee turn its attention to the Pepper-Tolan-Kilgore bill which calls for an overall national administrative agency to take in all angles of war production, manpower and use of resources in total mobilization.

Slave Wages and Hunger Cut Ore Output in Bolivia

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—Slave wages, lack of health care, "workers' homes forlorn, overcrowded, unhygienic, and lacking in elementary sanitary facilities" and the absence of genuine collective bargaining are the source of Bolivian tin workers' inability to produce the vital war metal at top efficiency.

A "frequent lack of safety appliances and promiscuous use of child labor," plus a farm tenancy system "little short of feudal serfdom" and an appalling rate of death due to industrial disease, add to the low productivity of both tin and rubber workers — men and women who produce resources desperately needed by the U. S. and all the United Nations.

This is the picture drawn by the U. S. section of a joint U. S.-Bolivian Commission that visited rural and mining areas to find the real causes of low output and to trace the sources of the recent tin miners' strike in which hundreds of workers were massacred.

The commission, which had two U. S. labor representatives—Martin Kyne, vice-president of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, CIO, and Robert Watt, AFL international representative—revealed these facts in a report to the Bolivian government following their trip some weeks ago.

STATE DEPT. CENSORSHIP

Since that time, the U. S. State Department has been sitting on the report, and only this week made it public in a single copy that was reluctantly shown to individual newspaper reporters without general distribution.

The report gives special attention to the need for real collective bargaining in Bolivia. "The evidence collected by the commission is sufficient to show that trade union activities do not pursue a free and normal course in Bolivia," it says. "There is an almost total absence of the kind of straightforward collective bargaining that is an accepted feature of life in modern democratic communities."

In 1936, the report shows, union membership was made compulsory by law, but the law also provided for a system of government inspectors to attend all union meetings and required a three-fourths majority vote before a strike could be legally called.

URGES UNION ACTIVITY

The report calls for repeal of this kind of government restriction and supervision, urges free collective bargaining and declares that "legitimate union activity is a healthy and necessary factor in the life of a democratic community."

Highlighting the terrible undernourishment of the Bolivian workers, the report calls attention to the universal workers' practice of chewing coca leaves for their narcotic effect in deadening hunger pains.

"These leaves contain a small amount of cocaine and their chewing is claimed to deaden sensory nerves, quiet hunger pains, temporarily stimulate energy, decrease the power of endurance, and constitute a degenerating force that markedly reduces efficiency," the report says.

Buenos Aires Cops Block Office of Democratically Elected Union Officials

BUENOS AIRES, April 24 (ALN)—Backed by the Buenos Aires police force—among the most anti-labor bodies in the hemisphere—Jose Domenech, recently defeated for re-election as general secretary of the Confederacion General del Trabajo (CGT), refused this week to hand over CGT property to the new officers.

When Francisco Perez Leiros, the new secretary, and other members of the Administrative Committee arrived to take possession, they found the building surrounded by a police cordon. Legal action is now under way to force Domenech to abide by the results of the election.

The new CGT Administrative Committee unites spokesmen for all anti-Castillista groups. Marcos Lestelle is secretary of the local Olavarria organization of the Union Civica Radical, which, with the Socialists, controls the Chamber of Deputies. Perez Leiros is Socialist deputy.

Although Domenech and Perez differ most strikingly on foreign policy, they are opposed in other matters. Domenech is accused of opposing close ties with the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), of deliberately keeping the CGT weak by postponing Central Committee meetings for as long as 29 months, of refusing to follow the instructions of the last CGT Congress to participate in national unity against Castillo and of failing to protest Castillo's frequent interferences with trade union rights.

Perez Leiros, a vice president of the CTAL, advocates national unity of all pro-democratic parties in next fall's elections. First act of the new CGT officers last week was to visit the Minister of the Interior and demand the release of labor leaders recently imprisoned by the Special Police.

CTAL Central Committee To Meet on War

Mexico City, April 24 (ALN—A special session of the Central Committee of the Confederation of Latin American Workers (CTAL), will be held in Santiago, Chile, early in May, Vicente Lombardo Toledano, CTAL president, announced yesterday. The Central Committee, made up of two representatives from the labor movements of Mexico, Cuba, Colombia, Chile and Argentina, will "discuss problems of the war and the postwar" and take action on CTAL affiliation with the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee.

If transportation facilities permit, representatives of CTAL affiliates in 14 Latin American nations will also be present. Unions in the U. S., Canada and Europe have been invited to send delegates.

Murray to Talk In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, April 24—Plans for the greatest mass labor rally ever staged in Southern California were in full swing this week as Los Angeles prepared to welcome Philip Murray, president of the CIO and the United Steelworkers of America. Murray, now on a tour of the nation, will arrive in Los Angeles this week to address a meeting sponsored jointly by the Steelworkers District 38 and the Los Angeles Industrial Union Council.

SHIPBUILDERS BACK WAR: A tangible contribution to the war effort (and a darned safe investment as well) was made this week by the Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers through the purchase of $50,000 in War Bonds. Left to right, negotiating the transaction, are: Emmanuel A. Smith, Camden, N. J., war bond official; Frank A. Evans, president, South Jersey Industrial Union Council; Howard M. Holt, Union comptroller; Philip H. Van Gelder, IUMSWA secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. George J. Morhauser, secretary to IUMSWA Pres. John Green.

CIO Fights New 'Brush-off' On Shipping Plan

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—U. S. shipping agencies received another pat on the back and CIO proposals for making full use of shipping were again brushed off in the report of the Senate Truman Committee, the CIO Maritime Committee charged this week.

The statement was made following release of a Truman report which, while admitting the reality of many of the accusations made by CIO Pres. Philip Murray and four CIO maritime unions, at the same time declared flatly that "the request of the maritime unions for participation in the control of ship and shore operations and in the training of seamen" should not be granted.

"CIO President Philip Murray and the CIO maritime unions presented a plan to increase the efficiency of the merchant marine by 25 per cent," the Maritime Committee said. "This plan has not been seriously considered, though the Truman Committee readily accepts the War Shipping Administration's lame explanations of why the union's proposals have not been acted upon."

While the Truman report repeated the WSA's alibi that the routing of ships between here and North Africa in sand ballast and other ship wasting practices could not be avoided, it also said that "the subject is of such importance that the committee is undertaking a detailed study, which will take more time to complete."

Inferentially, the Truman report made a further endorsement of the CIO charges of inefficiency in the declaration that "the responsibility for the continuance of wasteful practices will rest on the WSA," adding the warning note: "It should speak with a firm voice."

"The Truman Committee accepts, with few reservations, all the WSA alibis on why the job is not being done," the CIO maritime group said. "These alibis of WSA show that this agency is unable and unwilling to face the facts of the war shipping crisis."

Charges made by Pres. Murray and the CIO unions three weeks ago, and reaffirmed in the statement, include: "Delays in loading ships, bunching of ships in ports not equipped to handle them, lack of planning in routing of ships, wastage of shipping space in long and costly voyages in ballast, use of sorely needed ships as floating warehouses," etc.

"The organized workers in the shipping industry know the problems and know how they must be solved," the CIO committee said. "It is a serious mistake to ignore them and brush their proposals aside."

American Labor Gives Half Million To British Workers

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—More than a half million dollars contributed by American labor will build 10 new war relief projects for British workers in 1943, it was revealed this week in a joint announcement by Irving Abramson, chairman of the National CIO War Relief Committee, and Matthew Woll, president of United Nations Relief, AFL.

Swelled by contributions from members of the large independent Railroad Brotherhoods, organized labor's gift will enable the British War Relief Society—acting jointly with the British Trades Union Congress—to establish hospitals, rest homes, week-end camps and mobile relief units for 10,000 British workers in 1943 alone.

"Rest-break" homes for war workers throughout England, Wales and Scotland are the most crying need. The British war workers are exhausted and worn out after nearly four years of labor under nerve-shattering conditions of war.

Estimated cost of equipping eight "rest-breaks" is $100,000. Since labor and construction materials are not available, the government has taken over eight large dwellings with the consent of the owners. Because of the aversion of British workers to charity, each worker will pay a small sum for room and board. In this way it is hoped that the "rest-breaks" will eventually pay for their own operation.

Men and women in factories and shipyards who show signs of being worn out by long stretches of overtime will be certified by examining physicians as n need of rest. Ten thousand men and women will be accommodated in these rest homes during the year.

Biggest Box Firm Goes CIO

Klamath Falls, Ore., Apr. 24—The largest box factory in the world is now CIO, the International Woodworkers of America reported this week. Employes of the Ewauna Box Co. here voted for the IWA as sole bargaining agency in a National Labor Relations Board election.

Commenting on the victory, the IWA said: "The employes of the Ewauna Box Co. showed their appreciation of what the IWA-CIO has done for the men and women employed in the lumber industry in this district in the past year, in securing wage increases, vacations with pay, better hospitalization and better working conditions."

USA Plant Wins Army-Navy 'E'

Atlanta, Ga., April 24.—Award of an Army-Navy "E" was made to the Murray Co. this week. The firm's employes are represented by the United States Steelworkers of America. They pledged continued all-out production for victory.

CIO Unions Blast 'Inequalities' Lack In FDR's Order

CLEVELAND, Apr. 24—UAW-CIO representatives on regional War Manpower Commission policy committees were instructed to resign and to refuse to serve until the inequalities in the new FDR executive order and the Commission's job-freeze directive are cleared up, in a meeting of the UAW international executive board held here this week.

Earlier action taken in New York by leaders of the third largest CIO union, the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, described the President's order as "a distinct retreat from the position enunciated by the President a year ago in the seven point program."

To the UAW board, the provisions of both order and directive are "a menace not only to labor, but to national mobilization for victory as well." Both unions called for a vigorous return to the entire seven point program, with special emphasis on the roll-back of prices to September 15, 1942, levels and on ironing out the terrific gap between wages and the cost of living.

The UE called for increased labor pressure to "work vigorously for the strengthening of the order in the respects where it is weak, for the amendment or rescinding of the order in the points where it is wrong and for the support of the order where it helps advance the stabilization program."

MINE, MILL POSITION

From Denver, leaders of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers denounced the War Labor Board's haste in rigidly enforcing the wage freeze angle of the President's order, pointing out that this action junked scores of union cases that had been pending "before the WLB for months for settlement."

The Wisconsin CIO State Council, backing the order, called it "an important step forward," insisted that real price control and a roll-back should be enforced and urged setting up of incentive wage systems.

Two hundred CIO leaders in a special conference in New England backed the order in praising President Murray's policy on it, and also called for an end to wage inequalities and for effective stabilization of the cost of living.

Writing in the union's official paper, President Donald Henderson of the Cannery and Agricultural Workers declared that "holding the line is not enough" in urging a definition of sub-standard wages that would "give workers (men and women of all races) a wage that will enable them to produce at maximum capacity."

Henderson's statement also demanded a roll-back on prices, an incentive pay system, and a complete clearing up of wage inequalities that now hold down morale, health standards and war production.

Murray, Curran Praise Work Of Foreign Born

New York, April 24—High tribute to the contributions of the foreign born in the United States was paid this week by Presidents Philip Murray of CIO and Joseph Curran of the Nat'l. Maritime Union, in messages to a "United Nations in America" dinner held by the American Committee for the Protection of the Foreign Born.

"America is a nation peculiarly indebted to the devotion and generous loyalty of peoples from every land and every race and creed," Murray said. "At a moment when the essential fraternity of men has been called in question by the terrible instrument of war, it becomes us all as good Americans to reiterate our devotion to that fraternity which is the spiritual center of the cause for which we are fighting."

Congratulating the Committee "for the splendid work it is doing protecting the democratic rights of the foreign-born Americans," Curran said that "the loyalty of these people and the contribution they are making in this war against Fascism has been proved many times on the field of battle."

Washington, April 24.—The Gregg shorthand system "went union" this week as the U. S. Department of Agriculture branch of United Federal Workers of America, Local 1, used it in a leaflet to tell stenographers and typists of a war production conference.

Guild Backs FDR's Order But Outlines 'Misgivings'

NEW YORK, Apr. 24—The Int'l. Executive Board of the American Newspaper Guild this week declared itself "in complete agreement" with the "stated purpose" of President Roosevelt's recent price and wage order but announced also that it viewed the order with misgivings, and called for return to the War Labor Board of authority to "determine the validity" of wage agreements. The Executive Board said that withdrawal of the WLB's authority was a positive defect in national economic policy in wartime.

"The taking from the WLB of its authority to determine validity of either voluntary or disputed wage agreements which eliminate gross inequalities and inequities in the wage structure, is a step which will tend to destroy rather than improve harmonious industrial relations," the Board stated.

"This freeze of one of the basic elements of collective bargaining represents appeasement of those forces in this country which have been busily selling the idea that all wage increases are inflationary. . . .

"We cannot expect to uphold the morale of . . . workers, who are now underpaid, when all hope for quality of treatment is removed for duration of the war."

Cannery Workers Ask Grade Labelling

Philadelphia, April 24. — The workers who know what goes into canned food want quality grade labelling to protect price control and to save fellow war workers from being gypped by unscrupulous canners.

"We who work in this industry know grade labelling is essential if the public is to be protected and the honest canners helped against the chiselling, dishonest ones," the CIO's United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers wired to OPA head Prentiss Brown in demanding labelling on the 1943 pack.

They also know an industry man when they see one, as they showed when they demanded dismissal of Lou Maxon, OPA publicity head who works for the canners and against price control by resisting grade labelling within OPA.

Murray Calls Price-Wage Crisis Parley

Blasting the complete failure of government agencies and Congress to carry out President Roosevelt's economic stabilization order, CIO Pres. Philip Murray this week called a special, enlarged CIO Executive Board meeting for May 14 to take up the issue of forcing either the "roll back" of prices or the upward adjustment of wages.

UAW Tops Nation With Million & Half Gift to Red Cross

WASHINGTON, May 1—The CIO United Auto Workers, largest union in the nation, this week proved that its generosity equals its organized strength. UAW Pres. R. J. Thomas proudly announced that UAW members have contributed one and a half million dollars to the American Red Cross—more than any other organized group in the country.

Thomas said that thousands of UAW members contributed under the plan of the National CIO Committee for American and Allied War Relief, which called for donation of one hour's pay a month during March and April.

War Relief officials said that incomplete returns from CIO unions indicate that the CIO membership has already contributed more than $7,000,000 to the Red Cross drive.

CIO Shops Win More Than 50% of Army-Navy 'E', Maritime 'M' Awards!

WASHINGTON, May 1—You can take this to labor-baiting Eddie Rickenbacker and tell him to swallow it—and HARD! If he's got any kind of a conscience, it ought to bother him plenty when he learns that an exclusive CIO NEWS survey showed this week that within a recent six-months period CIO organized shops won, on the average, better than 50 per cent of the combined totals of Army-Navy "E's" and Maritime "M's," granted for excellence of war production.

Here's the way the figures stack up, shop by shop and shipyard by shipyard, in eight major centers of war production:

CIO	109 awards.
AFL (with fewer contracts in war industries)	10
Non-union	47
No information	36
Independent union	2

The figures were gathered laboriously by letter, and by the excellent cooperation provided by CIO field officials. The survey would take one-fiftieth the time if the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission would alter their entirely non-understandable policy of refusing flatly to list the unions in shops granted awards.

NO CENTRAL LIST

No central list of organized shops exists so that the only way the CIO NEWS could ascertain whether an award had been granted to a union or non-union establishment was by the process of inquiring of local CIO officials.

The survey covered plants in the following cities and their immediate vicinities:

New York, Philadelphia, Newark, Chicago, Detroit, Dayton (Ohio), Birmingham and Los Angeles.

In CIO factories and shipyards all over the nation, high Army, Navy, Maritime Commission and other government officials have praised in glowing terms the contributions of the workers, and—unlike Rickenbacker—have urged them on to greater effort by telling them of the splendid fight they have been making on the home front to stamp out world Fascism.

CIO Federal Workers Sign Up 10,000 More Members in 6 Months

WASHINGTON, May 1—The United Federal Workers of America this week announced that it had made a substantial contribution to CIO's "organize for victory" policy. The UFWA has added 10,000 members in the last six months, according to the organization's national executive board.

To aid in stimulating the union's victory program, the executive board, meeting here this week, made two recommendations to President Roosevelt:

1. Set up a new agency, the Office of the Administrator of Federal Personnel, to assure that federal service will be geared to highest possible efficiency.

2. Increase base pay of federal workers, particularly those in the lower brackets, 15 per cent, thus applying to federal service the government's "Little Steel" formula.

The UFWA pointed out that although government workers receive overtime pay, they have had no general increase in base pay, despite rising living costs.

The substantial growth in UFWA membership was attributed by Sec.-Treas. Eleanor Nelson to enthusiastic acceptance of the union's war program among government employes. She said the union has more than doubled its organizing staff and will push concerted drives in four cities—Washington, New York, Philadelphia and Baltimore, where there are large concentrations of federal workers.

This Town's No Place For Rickenbacker!

Austin, Minn., May 1—Workers in this community are proud of living in the strongest CIO city in the United States. Besides the nearly 4,500 employes of Hormel & Co., who belong to the CIO Packinghouse Workers, which is the largest union here, several hundred store clerks, block butchers, waitresses, bartenders, hotel clerks and others are members of the CIO Uptown Union, according to the Austin Unionist, CIO weekly paper.

Says Inglis Plant Biggest In Canada

Windsor, Ont., May 1—The CIO NEWS this week is glad to add the fact that the United Steelworkers of America victory last week at the John Inglis Ordnance plant was won at the largest factory in Canada.

Although the actual vote was smaller than that at the Ford plant in Canada, as it was a purely voluntary poll, the Inglis firm is the largest industrial plant in Canada and the largest small arms producer in the United Nations, according to Murray Cotterrill, of the USA.

Dept. of Justice Told:

Lynch Thugs Wield Ball Bats, Threaten Death For CIO Clothing Organizers

NEW YORK, May 1—A reign of terror is being whipped up against the Amalgamated Clothing Workers by anti-union forces seeking to prevent organization of the eight work shirt plants of Salant & Salant in Tennessee, the ACW charged this week, in a statement to the Dept. of Justice demanding an investigation and criminal prosecution.

In an eight-page document submitted to the DJ's Civil Liberties Unit, a number of acts of coercion and violence against the Amalgamated in Lawrenceburg, Paris and Union City, Tenn., where the shirt company has plants, were cited.

ORDERED OUT OF TOWN

One union representative was approached at his hotel by a group of 12 men and told "to get out of town before he got hurt."

Another was threatened by a mob which shouted, "Kill him, lynch him, cut his damn throat." In Paris, Tenn., a person driving the plant manager's car drove up to a union meeting and broke it up. On another occasion two men rushed out of a factory, one brandishing a baseball bat, and took leaflets away from a union organizer by force.

In Union City a foreman in the plant and a number of anti-union workers tried to drive union workers out of the plant. Last week in Paris two men approached an Amalgamated representative at his hotel and threatened to kill him if he was seen on the streets the next day.

Murray Hurls Challenge—Roll Back Prices or Hike Wages!

Tells L. A. Mass Meeting Cost of Living Still Rising

By CHARLES ELLIS

LOS ANGELES, May 1—Before a jam-packed crowd of 9,000 in the greatest labor rally in the history of Los Angeles, CIO Pres. Philip Murray took off the kid gloves and challenged Director of Economic Stabilization James F. Byrnes to fulfill his responsibility to the American people by either rolling back the cost of living to price levels of last September 15 or by providing for necessary wage adjustments to take up the slack.

Murray hurled his fighting challenge to Byrnes last Saturday night before a gathering of the most prominent citizens of the state, Sen. Sheridan Downey, Rep. Will Rogers, Jr., State's Attorney Gen. Robert W. Kenny, labor leaders, rank-and-file labor, and the public at the Olympic Auditorium here. He was introduced by California CIO Director Harry Bridges.

Declaring that while "wage increases have been thrown out the window" as a result of last week's so-called wage-freezing order, the cost of living is still soaring, Murray said:

"Through the medium of this great meeting here tonight, I ask Mr. Justice Byrnes, the Director of Economic Stabilization, what he is going to do about this?"

The CIO's chief executive told his audience that in the wage stabilization and price control act of October 2, which was to be retroactive to September 15, Congress pledged to the American people that it would stabilize wages and halt runaway prices.

"But," he emphasized, "contrary to the spirit of that law, wages were stabilized and prices were left uncontrolled, so that since September 15, although the nation has had wage stabilization, living costs, particularly in foodstuffs, have increased approximately 38 per cent for the average worker in the United States."

Prices Run Riot

Murray said that the October price control and wage stabilization act had utterly failed to halt zooming price rises — while it clamped a close ceiling down on wage raises. Nevertheless, he added, certain wage hikes to iron out inequities and inequalities were possible under the act.

But "last Friday," he said, "down came the so-called wage freezing order, preventing the orderly adjudication of inequality, inequities or maladjustments. Wage increases were thrown out the window in general on September 15, 1942; inequalities and inequities are thrown out the window now, and the cost of living is still going up. That is the stark tragedy of this situation."

Calls for Equality

Calling for "equality of sacrifice in this country in the spirit of equality and exact justice," Murray cited the swollen profits large corporations and corporation heads are making out of this war.

He pointed out that last year U. S. big business netted approximately $6,800,000,000 after all taxes had been skimmed off. "That was 66 per cent more profit than it netted in the year 1939," he said.

"Labor is asking for no special privilege," he said, "it asks that no special privilege be protected. It simply says that in the name of good government and good citizenship, let there be equality of sacrifice in the United States of America for the duration of the war."

Hits "Fat Boys"

Urging speedy renegotiation of cost-plus contracts, Murray declared "there ought to be immediate renegotiation of these contracts, and the fat boys ought to be put on some sort of rationing diet, a wartime diet, the kind of a diet that everybody should be placed on during a war, no matter what their status in life."

In discussing international labor unity, Murray said:

"The CIO without quibbling or qualification stands for international labor collaboration. We want labor all over the world to know this; we want to sit down with them and talk with them about these many mutual problems, before the war is over and after the war is over."

The tone for Murray's talk was sounded in Harry Bridge's introduction of the CIO leader.

"To those who do not understand, or do not wish to understand," the California CIO director said, "the labor movement is regarded as a special interest bloc. But to those who know, the labor movement is judged on performance and policies."

Praises Murray

Bridges praised the CIO for its leadership in war production in a score of industries and lauded Murray for his leadership.

James Thimmes, Steelworkers district director, chaired the meeting and acted as master of ceremonies. District 38, USA, sponsored the rally. Among the guests introduced by Thimmes were David J. MacDonald, international secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers, who cited his international's contribution to the war effort in terms of production and service-men; Sen. Downey, Rep Rogers, Archbishop John J. Cantwell, who delivered the invocation; Bishop W. Bertrand Stevens, who gave the benediction; Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, who spoke briefly; Mayor Fletcher Bowron, who turned the keys of the city over to its famous labor visitor; Atty. Gen. Kenny, and a host of civic and political leaders.

Welcome to Murray from California labor was given by State CIO President Philip M. Connelly. Mervyn Rathbone, state CIO secretary, also participated in the honors heaped on Murray.

Hollywood Oomph Peps Up L. A. Rally

Los Angeles, May 1 — "Three Union Brothers From Out of Town," 15-minute dramatic sketch which preceded President Philip Murray's address last Saturday night at the Olympic Auditorium, simply wowed the audience of 9,000.

Presented in the best Hollywood tradition with some of the finest actors of stage and screen, the sketch told a powerful story of war production and the CIO's role in the making of munitions to blast the Axis off the map.

The payoff line, describing "Babe," a nebulous character embracing the CIO war effort, was: "Babe is labor's striking power—not strikes but striking power—production for victory—patent pending!"

The play was written by Earl Robinson, of "Ballad for Americans" and "Song of Freedom" fame, and Paul Jarrico, screen writer famed for M-G-M's "Russia" and others, and directed by Herbert Biberman.

Lena Horne, beautiful young Negro actress and singer, brought down the house in her role as an aircraft worker. Lionel Stander played the role of an ex-salesman turned CIO war produtcion worker and had the crowd rocking with laughter.

Others in the cast were:

Marc Lawrence, Fred Graff, Art Smith, Victor Kilian, Danny Mann, Elliott Sullivan, and Stephen Barclay.

CIO's Problems Are The Nation's, Says Murray to Texans

HOUSTON, Tex., May 1—CIO workers of Texas and Oklahoma thrilled to the "personal touch" of their chief last week when Pres. Philip Murray made Houston his headquarters for two-day conferences with directors, organizers and union workers in the great Texas defense area.

With Murray was David J. McDonald, secretary-treasurer of the United Steelworkers of America, who is accompanying him on a swing of the country.

Frank A. Hardesty, CIO regional director in Texas, and director of District No. 37 of the United Steelworkers of America, arranged the conference.

Murray told CIO representatives that, "The problems confronting labor in this area of war are not alone the problems of the CIO. They are the problems of every man and woman in this all-important job of winning the war.

"We are all fighting to be free—to have free speech and worship, freedom from want, freedom from fear," he said. "An integral part of this freedom from fear means that the workman will not fear for his job."

Denouncing detrimental anti-labor legislation and propaganda against unionized labor, Murray also flayed the profiteering from war and the exhorbitant profits of capitalism. On this occasion, he also took opportunity to laud the heroes of the merchant seamen.

"When our torpedoed seamen who have spent not 23 days, but as many as 83 days tossing in the ocean on liferafts finally are rescued," he said, "you do not see them rushing to a microphone to broadcast to the country that labor is not doing its part to win this war. These men ARE labor. These are the men who in the line of duty risk their lives—and then go back to risk their lives again."

EN ROUTE: CIO Pres. Philip Murray stopped off at Houston, Texas, on his trip across the country to Los Angeles. Shown above, at a dinner held in his honor, are, standing: Frank Hardesty, district director, United Steelworkers of America, which Murray also heads; Murray; Sec.-Treas. David J. McDonald. CIO Key Pounders Win Ship Victory

WASHINGTON, May 1—One practical step toward the CIO plan for 100 per cent use of war shipping was put into effect this week, with the announcement that the War Shipping Administration has agreed to place an extra radio operator on all merchant ships sailing from U. S. ports.

The need for an additional operator was shown by the American Communications Association, CIO, in the shipping plan submitted some weeks ago by CIO President Philip Murray and the heads of four CIO maritime unions.

Under the old system, only one operator was carried, which meant that the radio was unattended for at least eight hours a day while the operator slept. As a result, the CIO pointed out, U. S. ships frequently missed submarine warnings, were unable to relay distress signals, receive rerouting orders, etc.

Dramatic confirmation of the soundness of the CIO shipping plan also came from the west coast, where a CIO longshoremen, "Sailor" McCluskey, was praised by U. S. officials for his leadership in getting war supplies unloaded in a South Pacific port.

SPEEDS ARMY'S JOB

According to the union's paper, the ILWU Dispatcher, McCluskey took over the unloading job when inexperienced native workers were causing long delays and were smashing planes due to their lack of skill and knowledge.

Organizing the crew in a volunteer gang, McCluskey got the stuff out of the holds in record time and without loss or damage. Under this system, also urged in the CIO maritime plan, the ship was unloaded in four days rather than the 30 or more that it would have taken otherwise.

CIO Gives Blessing To Doughton Plan, Hits Ruml Grab

WASHINGTON, May 1—CIO supports the Doughton bill (HR 2570) for pay-as-you-go tax collections as "an effective compromise," continues to fight the phony Ruml plan as "a tax grab for the highest income brackets," and demands win-the-war taxation based on repeal of the so-called Victory Tax and higher income tax exemptions for the wage earners.

The CIO position was made clear in a letter of President Murray to all Congressmen and in a circular letter to all CIO affiliates by Nathan Cowan, here today. It came as Congress, returning from its Easter vacation, planned to take up the tax bill first thing this week.

The fight in Congress is on the issue of complete forgiveness of 1942 taxes via the Ruml plan, which would mean a huge windfall to the rich, and the Doughton plan which forgives taxes on a sliding scale, with the larger percentage of forgiveness to the lower brackets. The Doughton plan would put collection after July 1 on a 20 per cent withholding system.

Both sides were lining up for a stiff fight on the Doughton bill vs the Ruml plan, and Cowan asked all CIO unions to shoot wires into their Congressmen at once in favor of the Doughton plan.

MURRAY REMINDER

Meantime, the Congressmen have been so taken up with methods of tax collection that no one has said anything about how the $16 billion in taxes that the President has asked are to be raised. Reminding Congress of this, Murray wrote:

"The CIO expressly reasserts the position which it has taken with reference to the 1943 tax program, which has yet to be considered by Congress, that a) the so-called Victory Tax must be repealed, and b) personal exemptions must be increased to assure a minimum standard for the low income groups."

Murray also hit sharply at Congress for its refusal to carry out the stabilization program, criticizing especially the repeal of the President's order limiting net salaries, after taxes, to $25,000 a year —a limit that had amounted to a $67,200 ceiling on gross salaries.

PRESSMAN MEMO

With the letter to CIO affiliates, Murray enclosed a memo on the tax picture prepared by CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman. Discussing the Doughton forgiveness plan, the memo points out:

1. 1941 tax rates and exemptions are applied to 1942 tax liability—i. e., at $2,500, tax liability will be reduced 65 per cent, at $5,000, 52 per cent, and so on up to 14 per cent forgiveness on a million dollar income.

2. This means cancellation of taxes on 1942 income for about seven million people, particularly in the low income groups that were not taxed in 1941. About $4.7 billion will be forgiven.

3. The reduced tax is payable in three installments, from March 1944 to March 1946. A six per cent bonus goes to those who can pay off the whole liability by 1944, two per cent by 1945.

4. All men in the armed forces will be entirely exempt from income taxes on sums up to $3,500.

Price-Wage Crisis Parley Called by Murray for May 14

WASHINGTON, May 1—Blasting the complete failure of government agencies and Congress to carry out the economic stabilization program of President Roosevelt, CIO Pres. Philip Murray today called a special enlarged meeting of the CIO Executive Board for May 14, to be held in Cleveland.

The meeting, Murray said, will take up the issues in the President's recent executive order "to roll back prices to the Sept. 15, 1942 level or make the necessary wage adjustments to meet the increased cost of living and to change or stop the present policies of the administrative agencies and Congress which can only result in inviting inflation and undermining the war effort."

Full text of the call to the extraordinary meeting of the CIO Executive Board follows:

SERIOUS CRISIS

"A very serious crisis has developed with reference to our national economic stabilization policy as enunciated by President Roosevelt.

"The recent Executive Order of President Roosevelt directed a firm stabilization of prices and a roll-back to the level of September 15, 1942.

"The developments to date are: A complete failure on the part of Economic Director Byrnes, Administrator Brown of OPA, and Administrator Chester Davis of Food Administration charged with responsibility of carrying out the Executive Order, and repeated concessions to certain elements by further increases in prices; refusal to permit the War Labor Board to make wage adjustments in inequalities to protect efficiency and morale of workers; and arbitrarily freezing of men to jobs without relationship to needs of war production.

"Further, these administrative agencies in seeking to hide their own failures issue arbitrary directives against labor which can only result in undermining the morale and efficiency of workers with a devastating impact upon war production.

DISREGARD FOR WAR

"Congress has also demonstrated a complete disregard for the war effort by rejecting President Roosevelt's proposal for incentive payments to farmers to increase food production, denying appropriations to the Farm Security Administration to thwart the effort of small farmers and repealing President Roosevelt's limitation upon net annual salaries, after taxes, to $25,000.

"A grave responsibility is thereby imposed upon the CIO to mobilize its membership and the entire nation to either carry out the directive of President Roosevelt's Executive Order to roll back prices to the September 15, 1942, level or make the necessary wage adjustments to meet the increased cost of living and to stop and change the present policies of the administrative agencies and Congress which can only result in inviting inflation and undermining the war effort.

"To this end, I am calling an extraordinary meeting of the Executive Board of the CIO which will be open to additional representatives from each affiliated union. The meeting will be held in Cleveland, Ohio, at 10 a.m., May 14. Notification of the meeting place will be wired to you."

SWEET ASSISTANCE: The 80 sergeants and corporals who had guided a contingent of CIO war workers through Camp Atterbury, Ind., were enthusiastically greeted on their return visit to Detroit war plants, as guests of the United Auto Workers Union. Spike Phoney Farm Bill, Plan Labor Safeguards, CIO Urges Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, May 1—Urging a real program to recruit farm labor for the 1943 food crop "by guaranteeing adequate wage and living standards," the CIO this week asked President Roosevelt to veto House Resolution 96, which freezes farm manpower on non-essential crops and "opens the way to indiscriminate importation of Mexican labor by Associated Farmers and like interests."

The request was made by Nathan Cowan, CIO legislative representative, and also urged the President to "call on Congress to enact legislation which will provide the necessary labor by guaranteeing adequate wage and living standards."

The present bill, Cowan said, hands over the recruitment of Mexican farm workers to private interests such as the Associated Farmers and is a direct contradiction of "guarantees for Mexican farm labor in the U. S. which were reiterated by you in your recent meeting with President Camacho."

Back FDR, Urge Shoe Workers

Washington, May 1—Urging the membership of the United Shoe Workers of America to support President Roosevelt's campaign for a real stabilization program, USWA Pres. Frank McGrath this week pointed out that if workers are to receive equitable treatment the Natl. War Labor Board must have the power to adjust wages to eliminate inequalities.

McGrath asked: A high enough definition of "substandard" wages so that workers will get a decent living; the roll-back of prices, promised by the President; democratic rationing; and an equitable tax program, based on the principle of taking more from the rich and less from the poor.

CIO Asked To Call Price, Wage Parley

Chicago, Ill., May 1—A recommendation that the CIO call a national conference on prices and wages was made this week by the Chicago Industrial Union Council, at an emergency conference on the high cost of living, attended by 1,200 delegates.

Urging full support for President Roosevelt and the war, the Council asked: 1) That prices should be rolled back to the September 15, 1942, level; 2) that until such action is taken, the "Little Steel" formula should be considered inadequate, and the War Labor Board should make wage adjustments accordingly; and 3) that the WLB should reinstate all cases pending before it prior to April 8, and should judge such cases on the basis of policies then prevailing.

Pay As We Go

Attempts to pass the Ruml grab plan continue to confuse Congress in its much-delayed response to the people's demand for real pay-as-you-go tax legislation.

The CIO has consistently fought for legislation that will permit the up-to-date payment of income taxes by deductions from wages and other current income as they are earned.

At the same time, it helped defeat the Ruml plan, as a tax grab for the highest income brackets. It has favored instead the abatement of 1942 tax obligation for the first $2,000 of taxable income only.

But now the issue has boiled down practically to two alternatives: either revival of the Ruml plan, or passage of the Doughton plan (H. R. 2570).

The Doughton plan will forgive more 1942 taxes on high incomes than the CIO has favored. But at the same time it will put low income groups on a pay-as-you-go basis, forgiving most of their 1942 tax liability. And in any case, it is indefinitely preferable to the Ruml plan.

That is why the CIO is now urging passage of H. R. 2570 (the Doughton plan) as an effective compromise. Don't delay asking your Congressman to vote for it, as the issue is before the House this week.

Under-Cover Pressures

The failure of OPA head Prentiss Brown to enforce grade labeling of canned foods is but one of a series of shameful administrative retreats on the anti-inflation front.

It is obvious that there cannot be effective price control of these goods without grade labeling.

Though the President has called for a roll-back of prices to September levels, new meat ceilings have been announced that mean a substantial rise over existing prices; and the OPA has increased one price after another.

Since the President's order, the price of corn has been raised by 5 cents per bushel; and Food Administrator Chester Davis has refused to put ceilings on livestock and other farm products affecting the cost of living.

More than that, he has ordered discontinuance of the school-lunch and school-milk program, that benefits some five million American children.

The direct pressures of business interests and price-profiteers that have caused some of these retreats are obvious. But less obvious, and more effective, have been the under-cover pressures from the tory element in Congress.

Among its first acts, the present Congress set up a number of "investigating committees," each headed by the worst type of poll-tax and anti-New Deal reactionary, to harry and smear the administration.

In addition to the notorious Dies committee, there are the Cox committee to probe the FCC, the Smith committee to probe almost any agency it chooses, and other committees.

These committees have been working secretly, and with little publicity so far, to frighten government administrators into doing their will. They are set on eliminating anything that smacks of "social reform" — which means almost anything that benefits the common people.

For fear of Congressional attack, many administrators are yielding again and again to this reactionary pressure, which amounts to political blackmail. To "appease Congress," some of them even retreat before the anticipated pressure is applied.

To counteract these secret business and tory pressures, labor must apply the public pressure of a storm of popular protest—not only to the administrators directly responsible for betraying the public to appease the profiteers, but also to Congress itself.

'Nuff Sed, Mr. Dooley

The sponsors of the anti-labor bills passed in Colorado, Texas and other states, like the Congressmen who voted for the Hobbs bill, all say they're for unions "if properly conducted." On this, page Mr. Dooley:

"Shure," said Mr. Dooley, "if properly conducted. An' there we are; an' how would they have thim conducted? No strikes, no rules, no contracts, no scales, hardly iny wages an' dam few members."

The Colorado act outlaws strikes, provides for only plant agreements, forbids court enforcement of existing contracts, insists on the open shop, and provides for heavy fines for individual members for violations of the law by the "labor corporations"—the law's Fascist name for its "properly conducted unions."

'Nuff sed, Mr. Dooley!

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

LEADERS of all CIO unions have been called to Cleveland on May 14 to deal with a national crisis that reaches into every kitchen in the country.

The issue is how to buy enough groceries for the family with your paycheck.

Wages have been pegged, but prices have run up, up and away.

Ever since the war began, the CIO has been demanding real inflation-control — which means keeping prices down, so they don't run away from wages.

A year ago, President Roosevelt called for a seven-point program to do just this. But Congress threw this program out of the window.

Wages were pegged by the War Labor Board, under the Little Steel formula. But little or nothing was done to stop the cost of living from rising.

So inflation — rising prices — continued on its merry way.

Then, last October, Congress passed a law that prices as well as wages should be stabilized as of Sept. 15, 1942.

Pres. Roosevelt assigned Justice James Byrnes, as Director of Economic Stabilization, to carry out this mandate.

Byrnes has failed to do the job. While wages have remained pegged, the cost of groceries has risen from 25% to 35% more since last September.

The situation has become a national crisis, endangering our whole war effort, since the President's executive order of April 8 to "hold the line" against inflation.

This order directed that prices be rolled back to the September level, as intended by the law.

But instead of doing this, the various government agencies have seized on omissions and loopholes in the order to widen the gulf between wages and prices.

The War Labor Board immediately interpreted the order as a complete freeze on wages, denying labor even the right to adjust gross inequalities and injustices in wage rates.

The War Manpower Commission issued an order to freeze workers to sweated jobs at substandard wages.

Meanwhile, OPA Administrator Brown and Food Administrator Davis have continued to yield to business pressures for higher prices, and have done nothing to roll back living costs to September levels.

Congress bears much of the blame for the continued inflation, which is squeezing the workers, small farmers and consuming public so intolerably.

It has repeatedly violated the spirit and intent of the price control act which it passed itself.

Congress passed the price-boosting Bankhead bill, which the President had to veto.

It has rejected the President's proposal for incentive payments to farmers to increase food production.

The House denied appropriations to the Farm Security Administration, the one agency that does most to aid the working farmer to produce more, and thus to keep down food prices.

Finally, Congress has increased the squeeze on low-income war workers and farmers by soak-the-poor taxes, while rejecting adequate taxation of inflation-breeding war profits and the $25,000 limit.

In this inflation crisis, the workers' fingers are being skinned and their bellies pinched, because they have been left to hold the line alone.

Either Congress and the administration must grab hold of the line too, and roll back prices to September levels; or wages must be raised to meet the increased cost of groceries.

This is simple justice, in line with the declared intent of the President and Congress. It is also a war necessity.

Congratulations are due the Federal Communications Commission for its forthright defense of two victims of Dies Committee persecution.

It has served notice that it will resist attempts to have Dr. Goodwin Watson and William E. Dodd, Jr., fired despite the recommendation of the Kerr subcommittee.

Both these employes are being persecuted for a consistent record of anti-fascism, which Dies and his kind cannot match.

The FCC points out that because of their "'close contact and exhaustive study of world affairs," both Watson and Dodd "perceived earlier than many of their countrymen the rising menace of the Nazis, Fascists and Japanese.

"Spurred on by this insight, they sought by speech, by writing and by cooperation with others working toward similar ends to awaken their countrymen to the peril which became manifest to all Americans at Pearl Harbor."

One of the flimsy pretexts on which Dodd was held "subversive" is that he assisted in the defense of Harry Bridges. That would make the whole CIO "subversive."

An unmentioned count against Dodd is that he ran for Congress, with united labor support, against labor-baiter Howard Smith, one of the pet cronies of the Dies poll-tax crowd.

Polltax Leeches Keep Death Grip on U. S. Victory Struggle

By C. W. FOWLER

WASHINGTON, May 1—For several years now labor and progressive forces have been working to get rid of the polltax, on the very correct belief that polltax democracy is no democracy at all; that 9,000,000 people who aren't allowed to vote can't be said to govern themselves.

We're all pretty familiar with the arguments against the polltax. We know that a polltax Senator or Congressman represents only a fraction of the Americans who live, but don't vote, in his state. We recognize that this is a negation of the democracy we are fighting to defend, and that its continued existence is a drag on our war.

But the polltax Congressmen do more than merely fail to represent the people who live in their districts. Actually, they represent some very dangerous and sinister forces in our nation, and they carry a great deal of weight in Congress—a weight that is thrown against national unity, against the mobilization of our people and our resources for total war and victory.

Horrible Example

Take a look, for example, at the Hon. Sam Hobbs, polltaxer of Alabama. Sam Hobbs represents about four per cent of the people in his district, where 12,000 people out of a population of 283,000 voted for him.

In April, Sam Hobbs realized an ambition of several years; he got his Hobbs bill (HR 653) passed by the House and on its way to the Senate. The vote was 270 to 107.

The Hobbs bill subjects unions and their members to severe criminal penalties for certain acts which it leaves up to the courts for interpretation. The CIO, AFL, the Railroad Brotherhoods and a few Congressmen were against it, because they rightly feared it would be used to throttle legitimate union activity and thus damage morale and war production.

Workers Patriotic

The unions have been publicly praised by President Roosevelt and scores of high-ranking war officials for the way they are producing for the offensive and victory. Nobody—not even the sleek Sam Hobbs himself—disputes the patriotism and hard work of the organized workers.

Why then was the Hobbs bill passed—the Hobbs bill that insults American workers and threatens them with long prison terms for acting through their unions? Why did the polltax gang and certain Republican reactionaries and all the defeatist, appeasement elements vote so eagerly to shackle labor?

The plain reason is this: the polltax gang is the spearhead of every anti-FDR, anti-victory, anti-United Nations conspiracy that exists in Congress. The polltax gang leads, the others follow. The gang leads because its constituents can't hold it in check, because they don't vote.

Bankhead Bad Too

Take another look at the record. Senator Bankhead, also of Alabama, led the plot to put over the Bankhead bill (S 660) that would jack up food prices by several billions of dollars (on top of already inflated levels) by a gift of new inflationary prices to the "farm bloc"—that represents Wall Street, not the working farmers.

Representative Steagall, Alabama, was the author and sponsor of the companion bill in the House. Representative Pace, polltaxer, Georgia, was the sponsor of the Pace bill (HR 1408) to hike food prices another 25 per cent. This bill, also passed the House, is waiting in the Senate.

These two bills alone, sponsored and led by polltaxers, with the rest of the anti-victory crew following eagerly behind, would wreck the home economy and cripple war production by kiting food to unobtainable price heights.

Don't Forget Smith!

Then there's Howard Smith, the Virginia polltaxer who looks more like Simon Legree than anything else in Congress. Currently, Smith has a bill in the House to exclude hundreds of thousands of workers from unions, outlaw union contracts that contain safety clauses, upgrading clauses, apprentice training systems, etc.

Smith is also busy on a hatchet job in his special committee on Federal government war agencies. At the moment, the Smith committee is doing a job on the OPA and price control, seeking to undermine the few protections against inflation that we have.

Eugene Cox is another Georgia polltaxer with a mile long anti-union record and a determination to sabotage the work of essential war agencies. Cox's special campaign is against the Federal Communications Commission, which supervises our communications network—radio, telegraph, etc.

Cox a Smear Artist

Working closely with polltaxer and other reactionary friends on the Rules committee, Cox jammed through a resolution to investigate (read "Smear") the FCC. Cox is mad at the FCC because it caught him taking a $2,500 fee from a radio station for which he was trying to get a license from the FCC—which is a Federal offense.

And of course there's Martin Dies, the polltaxer Goebbels from Texas, of whom Vice-President Wallace said: "The effect on our morale (of Dies disruption) would be less damaging if Mr. Dies were on the Hitler payroll."

The list is a long and painful one; Rankin of Mississippi, Negro-baiter; Starnes of Alabama, Dies committee lieutenant; "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina, hunger bloc leader; Vinson of Georgia, an old enemy of labor and everything progressive.

Run Committees

The polltaxers in Congress are dangerous as more than individuals. Due to the seniority system that governs Congressional committee appointments, they run many of the most important bodies in Congress, have the say on what happens to practically every bill long before it hits the floor for debate and action.

In the House, polltaxers head these committees: Agriculture, Judiciary, Navy, Merchant Marine, Banking and Currency; in the Senate: Agriculture, Appropriations, Finance, Foreign Affairs, Immigration, Rules.

The polltax gang doesn't attack labor unions alone, although that in itself is a sure mark of the defeatist. It attacks every group and every agency that is trying to do a job of winning the war, that is trying to make a strong, united nation that will use all its resources for the offensive and victory.

It reaches right into the living standards and welfare of every person in a war job, whether in factory, office or on the farm. It makes the war harder to win, for civilians and soldiers alike. It seeks by every move to sabotage the leadership of the Commander-in-Chief.

That is why the polltax repeal bill (HR 7) is the concern of everyone in the nation, Negro and white, worker and farmer, professional and business man—everyone who wants to win the war and live in a free world.

What You Can Do To Speed Repeal Of Polltax

There's a polltax repeal bill (HR 7) now in the works in Congress. It is backed by a coalition of Congressmen—Democrat, Republican and American Labor. To get the bill out of committee and on the floor of the House, we need 218 signatures of of Congressmen on a Discharge Petition, (DP 3).

One hundred and ninety-three Congressmen have signed so far. As The CIO NEWS goes to press, we need 25 more signatures.

If we can get the 218 signatures by May 10, there's a good chance that the polltax repeal bill will be passed by the end of this month. Otherwise, it will have to wait under House rules until the second week in June.

Last session, the repeal bill went through the House with a huge majority. Unfortunately, it passed the House close to the end of the session, and it was filibustered to death in the Senate.

This time, we have a good chance to get the bill through the House early in the session and prevent a successful filibuster. Even a polltaxer like Senator Theodore (The Man) Bilbo can't filibuster for months.

Keep after your Congressman for his signature. If he has signed, don't let him withdraw, as some may do under pressure. Get him to secure other signatures. And start working on your two Senators, so they will be ready when the bill comes to them.

For democracy and an early victory, demand repeal of the polltax.

CIO Blasts Closed-Door Policy of Bermuda Refugee Conference

WASHINGTON, May 1—CIO protest against the "closed door" policy of the current conference on European refugee problems in Bermuda was expressed this week in a letter from President Murray to Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles.

Responding to an appeal from the General Federation of Jewish Labor of Palestine, Murray wrote to Welles: "We appeal to you that the voice of the people's organizations of the United Nations be heard at this conference.

"The closed door policy gives us deep concern that this conference might be a mere diplomatic nicety. We would regret a repetition of the futile Evian conference. We urgently request that you reconsider the closed-door policy and admit our representatives to be heard on this tragic matter."

In reply, the undersecretary urged that any communications the CIO had on the matter should be sent at once to the conference, through the State Dept. He also denied that the conference was taking place behind closed doors.

Shoe Workers Aid Loan Drive

Washington, May 1—A pledge of full support to the Federal government's second War Loan drive was given concrete expression this week by the United Shoe Workers Union, which not only bought $20,000 in bonds but also urged local unions and members to buy a million dollars worth more, according to Sec.-Treas. James J. Mitchell.

Here's Action On Unity For Victory

Washington, May 1—Unity of all labor for win-the-war measures in State Legislatures and to fight union-busting bills promoted by the Christian Americans, the NAM and similar anti-morale groups went forward in two states with the formation of joint committees in Texas and Iowa this week.

Meeting in Houston, Tex., the CIO, AFL, Brotherhoods and an independent formed the United Labor Committee whose "prime objective is to exert every effort in support of President Roosevelt's program, to abolish all class legislation" and to "support the Atlantic Charter and put forth every effort to defeat any attempt to sabotage the United Nations."

This includes as a major point the fight against "the present trend of state and national legislation," which has been aimed at destroying unions and thus cutting war production, and aims to rally farmers, professional workers and businessmen as well as industrial workers.

In Iowa, CIO, AFL, Railroad Brotherhoods and Mine Workers decided to make their Federated Legislative Council a permanent affair, pledging it to a similar program. The council was successful in the state legislative session just ended in blocking some of the worst anti-union measures.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The House was still in recess as THE CIO NEWS went to press. It starts work again this week—invigorated and refreshed, no doubt, by contact with the voters back home.

Did you visit with your Congressman while he was home? Did your local call on him? Did your legislative committee look him up? If you didn't, you missed a chance at talking to him in the best possible circumstances—on the home ground, face-to-face, where he can't wriggle away from you.

The polltax discharge petition (DP 3) now has 193 signatures. Only a handful more to go—keep after your Representative. Even if he has signed up, urge him to help get other signatures and work for a quick vote when the bill (HR 7) comes up.

BULLETIN: The Connally bill (S 796) to seize plants, smash U. S. war labor agencies will hit the floor this week. RUSH wires to your Senators against.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
1943 Tax Bill	CIO supports the Doughton plan for pay-as-you-go (HR 2750), continues opposition to Ruml plan, demands repeal of Victory Tax, income tax exemptions increased in lower brackets. (See story, page 3.)	Up in Congress this week.	Wire your Representative for HR 2750, CIO tax program.
Bankhead (S 729)	Freezes farm labor on non-essential crops, tying up manpower needed for war food production.	Senate Agriculture Committee.	Write your Senators against.

Kewanee Labor Unity Wins 4 Elections

Kewanee, Ill., May 1—Skeptics who doubt that labor unity pays should look at this city, where the combined forces of CIO, AFL and other progressive elements have won four elections, including that for the mayoralty.

Victor in the race for mayor was Daniel Bates, who was fired for union activities back in 1910. Three commissioners also were elected, one of them a member of the United Steelworkers of America, and the others favorable to labor.

All Labor Joins In Demand For Price Roll-Back

WASHINGTON, May 1—Intense activity on the price control and general stabilization front marked the week in Washington here, with the question of grade labelling, as a major key to price control, rapidly approaching a head.

In the OPA, Administrator Brown was reported ready to give grade labelling an indecent funeral early in the week, only to put his decision off again for another week when CIO protests poured in.

On the whole stabilization front the CIO called an emergency board meeting for May 14 (see story on page 3); the CIO, the AFL and the Railroad Brotherhoods issued a united statement asking Roosevelt to roll back prices to 1942 levels, and the UAW executive board met in Washington to take up the situation directly with Stabilization Director Byrnes and other high officials.

Immediately on hearing reports of the lynching job planned on labelling, the CIO Cost of Living Committee said that it "opens another breach in the President's hold-the-line order," and urged Byrnes to override Brown. At the same time the CIO women's auxiliaries wired Byrnes urging him to uphold labelling. A group of 15 women's organizations also wired him.

TWO-FACED POLICY

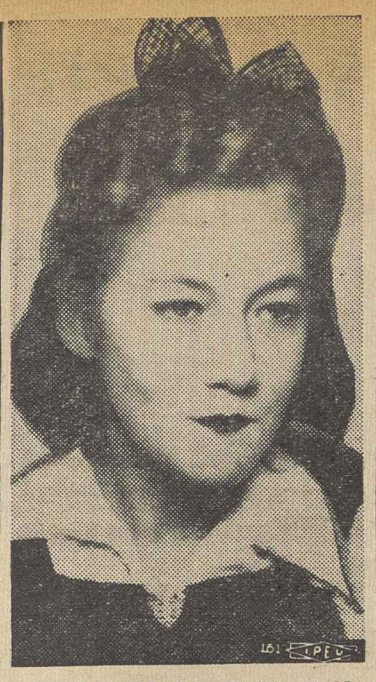
"Deterioration and misbranding of grade and quality represent the most flagrant form of indirect price increases," the CIO said. "To permit the trade to charge a housewife a Grade A price for a Grade C product is to legalize fraud and profiteering. Unless OPA can guarantee honest value inside the can, price ceilings on canned goods have little if any meaning."

The joint CIO, AFL and Brotherhood statement bluntly charged: "Today, at the time when both wages and manpower have been frozen, the collapse of any pretense of a vigorous price control has revealed a two-faced national policy with respect to wages and prices.

"Rigid wage control has become a fact. Effective price control has remained a fiction. Announced public policy of a complete, unified, interdependent economic stabilization program has not been carried out."

Reviewing the entire stabilization picture, with sharp emphasis on the failure to control anything but wages, the joint labor committee, set up to act as a labor policy body within OPA, called on President Roosevelt to roll prices back to May 15, 1942.

"The OPA Labor Policy Commission calls on the President, the Director of Economic Stabilization James F. Byrnes, the Food Administrator (Chester Davis), and the Price Administrator (Prentiss Brown), to immediately put into effect, without qualification, compromise or exception, a vigorous price policy to the end that the cost of living be rolled back to May 15, 1942, and to the end that equity be reestablished in government policies applied to the incomes of workers and the incomes of all other groups."



GIRL MISSING: Nettie Baldwin, 15 years old, 5 feet 5 inches, weighing 112 pounds, brown hair, blue eyes, and the daughter of Charles Baldwin, a member of the United Steelworkers of America, has been reported missing from her home, at 1310 Campbell street, Kansas City, Mo. Any information concerning her whereabouts should be sent to her father.

Form Florida CIO Council

Orlando, Fla., May 1—Delegates from six international CIO unions which have locals or are conducting drives in the state met here recently to perfect organization of a Florida CIO Council.

Cecil Robertson of Local 9, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers, was elected president, and William Smith, regional director in Florida and Georgia for the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

Vice-Presidents are O. J. Swanson, NMU; Robert MacKay, UCAPAWA; J. B. Nimmo, Greater Miami CIO Council; Harold Levy, shipyard workers; Leigh Culley, Newspaper Guild; H. C. Jolly, Auto Workers; and Katherine Fisher, American Communications Assn.

Otis G. Nation, international vice-president of UCAPAWA, was chairman of the organizational convention. Application for a charter as a State Council has been sent to the national CIO.

The Civilian War Front:

Get 'Hot' About Price-Wage Setup, CIO Group Urges

By The CIO Cost of Living Committee

The Cost of Living Committee urges labor and consumer groups to make known to Congress and to the economic control agencies just how they feel about the "hold one side of the line" interpretation of the President's executive order of April 8. Don't just grumble in private about frozen wages and no price control. Write and wire to Washington, and don't censor your indignation.

The revised retail meat ceilings are a decided improvement over those that were originally announced early in April and were suspended after labor protests. But these dollars and cents ceilings still represent a substantial increase over the GMPR ceilings, which have been legally in effect for the past year. Chain store prices will be raised by at least 10 per cent. Thus the President's order not to increase price ceilings is violated again.

In fighting for a better revision of the dollars and cents ceilings, labor groups ran up against the obstacle that wholesale prices, which were raised last fall, could not be rolled back without the imposition of ceilings on live stock, and Food Administrator Davis refused to sanction such ceilings. Thus the President's order to put ceilings on all commodities is violated again.

Brown 'Ingenious'

An ingenious method was used by Prentiss Brown to explain how the new meat ceilings conform to the President's command not to raise the cost of living. The price schedules are compared not with the previous legal ceilings, but with prevailing prices—prices that include black market overcharges as well as legal prices—as measured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics last February.

The BLS checks the prices of only a few meat cuts, and there is some evidence that the new schedules were adjusted or "gerrymandered" so as to show an average of 1/10 of 1 per cent decrease for the specific cuts priced by the BLS in February.

Furthermore, we are told that "the new ceilings will show a sharper decrease from the meat costs reflected in the BLS index for March and April, since index prices during those two months will reflect some increases resulting from black market overcharges."

Trick Too Slick

This trick, which incidentally was discussed in some detail in Brown's press interview of a week ago, is a little bit too slick. The OPA tolerates black markets, and then compares its legalized price rises with black market prices, in order to show that there has been no increase in the cost of living.

Since each new ceiling will have its own black market prices, the OPA can perpetually raise prices while never confessing to an increase in the cost of living.

This statistical juggling of price figures lends emphasis to the fight of the Cost of Living Committee to prevent the issuance of the projected new food margin regulation calling for weekly adjustment of food prices and no posting of ceilings.

The OPA enforcement attorneys have stated that this plan is unenforceable, and we suspect that the plan has been deliberately drawn up to prevent enforcement of price control and to insure black market overcharges. Later on these black market overcharges could be legalized "without increasing the cost of living."

Auxiliaries Fight to Save Penny Milk, School Lunches

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Action to save the school lunch and penny milk programs is the most pressing issue CIO auxiliaries will tackle in "Save the Children Week"—the first week in May. In meetings arranged throughout the country they will protest abandonment of these child nutrition programs as appeasement of the reactionary forces in Congress. Here's the story:

Federal funds assisted school lunch programs last year for 6,200,000 children in 90,000 schools. The program was originally started for two purposes—to help dispose of surplus foods and to aid low-income children.

This year the House Appropriations Committee made some critical remarks about it during the hearings. They said that there were no surplus commodities and that relief was no longer needed. But they did not change the Agriculture appropriation bill to ban school lunches.

As food administrator, Chester Davis could have shown the committee the importance of adequate nutrition for our children in this war period. He could have pointed to the figures on draft rejections to show how many young Americans have suffered serious physical damage from lack of proper feeding.

LOW INCOMES

He could, moreover, have taken the OPA studies of income in 1942 and shown the committee that one-half of American families in that war-boom year earned less than $2,000 a year—and that you can't feed a family adequately on that.

He could even have quoted a memorandum of his subordinate, Roy Hendrickson, director of the Food Distribution Administration, which says:

"The continuation and expansion of the school lunch and school milk programs would be highly desirable as a part of our war food program in order to make it possible for all school children to receive one good meal per day in addition to their home rations. A school feeding program is particularly needed for children from low-income families and children whose parents are engaged in war work."

But Chester Davis didn't try to justify a program of food for our children. He appeased. He quietly ordered the school lunch and school milk programs discontinued. He did it so quietly that many of the sponsors still do not know about it.

Here's an issue on which the PTA, the American Legion, Kiwanis and many other organizations in addition to labor and consumer groups can work together.

Two things are needed: Strong protests to Chester Davis. Letters to Congressmen and especially to Senators stressing the importance of continuing the school lunch and penny milk programs.

Eat Right Food to Build Good Blood

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

As more of our boys go into battle, the casualties are bound to be many. We can do much to give our wounded a chance to new life and renewed health by infusing new blood in their veins from some of our own. The Red Cross is intensifying its drive for blood donors. Many of you are anxious and willing to join the ranks of those who have already contributed not once but several times, yet you hesitate because you don't feel quite up to it. Physicians have pointed out, that under normal conditions, the donor suffers no ill effects.

Because the need is so urgent now to give to the blood bank, and, because, at the same time, we have to guard our health to do our best work on our jobs, we must make it our business to find out how we can keep a good healthy supply of blood on hand.

Fortunately, the right kind of food will do the job for you. And the right kind of food to do this job must be rich in iron, the mineral that builds good red blood.

IRON BUILDS GOOD BLOOD

Iron is present in the body in very small quantities. It is an important part of the red coloring matter of the blood cells, called hemoglobin. It is this hemoglobin that carries oxygen to every cell in the body. If your system lacks iron for sufficient hemoglobin, there won't be enough oxygen in the body, and as a result, you find that you're anemic.

We think of an anemic child as pale and listless. Increased amounts of iron are especially necessary for growing children—from infancy through the teen age—as a protection against this nutritional anemia.

GOOD SOURCES OF IRON

OTHER SOURCES OF IRON

Heart, kidney, poultry, dark meat; whole grain breads and cereals, dried fruits (apricots, prunes, raisins, peaches), oysters shrimp, green leafy vegetables, dried beans (kidney, lima, etc.) lentils, soybeans.

Because iron is present in food in very small quantities, several of the foods listed should be included in the daily diet. If you have 1 pint of milk, 1 cup cooked oatmeal, 3 slices whole grain bread, 1 baked potato, liver or lean meat, ½ cup canned peas, stewed prunes, you will get your daily share of iron.

Small amounts of copper are necessary to enable the iron to form hemoglobin. Since copper is usually found in the same foods as iron, your daily share of iron will give you an adequate supply of copper.

CIO Man Floats 24 Hours, Saved

Washington, May 1—Seaman Joseph Zucchi, USN, a CIO member from Camden, N. J., was rescued from the sea after floating around for 24 hours in a rubber life jacket after his ship was torpedoed off the Solomons, according to a Navy Department release.

He formerly worked at the Campbell Soup Co. plant in Camden, and belonged to Local 80, United Cannery, Agricultural, Packing & Allied Workers.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

There's a Victory March in Gadsden, Alabama! Following up the victory of the United Steelworkers of America at the Republic Steel plant and the United Rubber Workers at the Goodyear Rubber plant, the Textile Workers came through in fine shape in an election at the Dwight Mfg. Co. by a vote of 1628 for CIO to 205 against.

H. S. Williams, TWUA vice-president, and assisted by Vice-President Joe White and representatives Helen Gregory and Elmer Daugherty, R. C. Thomas, and Pat Knight. Other CIO unions joined in this great achievement, which makes Gadsden one of the best organized towns in the South. Congratulations!

Six More for UAW-CIO

UAW President R. J. Thomas reports the following NLRB victories: Carter Carburetor, St. Louis, Mo., 720 UAW-CIO, 652 AFL; Milwaukee Foundry, Milwaukee, UAW-CIO 45, no union 23; Moder Collet, Detroit, UAW-CIO 189, no union 72; Hoover Ball Bearing, Ann Arbor, Mich., UAW-CIO 332, no union 192; Jackson Rigging, Jackson Mich., UAW-CIO 98 per cent; Pittsburgh Forgings, Jackson, UAW-CIO 63, AFL 3.

Keeping up the victory stride, James J. Matles, Director of Organization, Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers, reports the following victories: Otis Elevator Company, Yonkers, N. Y., 1089 for CIO to 281; Emerson Radio Company, New York City, card check 426 for CIO out of 612; Zinsmeyer Company, Los Angeles, 75 for CIO to 10; J. H. Day Company, Cincinnati, card check 214 for CIO out of 240; Herman Nelson Corp., Moline, Ill., 137 for CIO to 3.

Ending a 14-year fight to organize the workers in the plant of the Precision Castings Co., Fayetteville, N. Y., a victory was recorded by the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers. The vote for IUMM&SW was 408, no union 10, Precision Employes Independent Union 44. Organizer Neal Eastman was in charge. Roy W. Atkinson, Regional director for the State of Washington, adds a victory for the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers—19 votes for CIO, AFL no votes and no union one vote.

Rubber Workers Win Another

The United Rubber Workers of America won an election in two departments at the Des Moines Ordnance plant. In the metallurgical control department the vote in percentages was 87.5 per cent for CIO and 12.5 per cent against. In the technical production department the vote was 76.1 per cent for CIO and 23.9 per cent against. Our Regional Director in Iowa, Ben Henry reported the above.

Samuel L. Rothbard, attorney for CIO unions in New Jersey, advises that in a cork factory in the Armstrong Cork Company in Millville, N. J., where the workers voted some time ago to affiliate with the Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers of America, another group attempted to prevent affiliation and brought a suit for an injunction to restrain transferring the funds to the new CIO local No. 69 of this International.

The Court of Chancery ruled that the local was as much a local as it ever was and was merely affiliated with the central organization known as the CIO and sustained the act of affiliation in favor of the CIO.

CIO New Yorkers Spend Sunday Afternoons at War-Problem Parleys

NEW YORK, April 24—Sunday afternoons in New York's communities have a new meaning for trade unionists these days—and for their friends and neighbors—when they get together to discuss and act on war and home front problems in Community Conferences, organized by the city CIO Council.

Their Congressmen are having new experiences, too, as they meet their voters on the home grounds as organized citizens intensely interested in their representative's votes and actions on current issues.

One Congressman's experience was typical. Invited to the community meeting, he found his audience for the first time critical of a vote he had recently cast—a vote in the House for the phoney Ruml plan. He found, also, that his audience knew more about the ins and outs of the Ruml plan and what it meant to the war than he did—and that they knew the score on other issues equally well.

The conferences have been going for some weeks now. They take up more than the broad Congressional issues. Civilian defense, rationing, cost of living, job discrimination against Negroes and other minorities, the black market, child care for kids of war-working mothers, etc., are discussed and acted on.

ORGANIZATION SIMPLE

Organization of the community conferences is simple. Each local in the area, marked off according to Congressional districts, sends one delegate for every 25 members. One of these delegates is elected leader and becomes a member of the executive committee of the conference. Program and agenda are discussed in full conference meeting, where attendance averages 80 to 90 per cent of the elected delegates.

The committee member is made responsible for turning out the members of his local, for letter writing jobs, for delegations, for volunteer work on CDVO and the like. Each member takes with him on these assignments a copy of the CIO Community Guide, which tells him where to go, what official to see, where to put the pressure.

The CIO Community Conferences are just beginning. They're a success already, as any local CIO member here will tell you. And, as Father Alexander Smith, a community priest invited to one of the meetings, said:

"I have seen democracy at work here in ways that can mean the salvation of our country."

Anglo-Soviet Group to Meet

Kuibyshev, May 1 (ALN)—The third meeting of the Anglo-Soviet Trade Union Committee will be held in Moscow in the middle of June, it was announced this week. The committee, organized in October, 1941, held its last meeting in London in January, 1942, during the visit to Britain of Soviet trade unionists headed by Nikolai Shvernik, general secretary of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions.

'Curb Service' Blood

Atlanta, Ga., May 1—One hundred fifty members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union this week were the first to contribute blood to Atlanta's new "Curb Service" blood donor project, located in a mobile trailer.

'Plan Output, Don't Chain Labor'

New York, May 1.—What this country needs to make its utmost contribution to the United Nations' battle against Fascism is not more manpower legislation but better utilization of available manpower under planned production. That was the message brought to the annual meeting of the United States Chamber of Commerce this week by Clinton S. Golden, assistant to the president, United Steelworkers of America.

Citing instance after instance of bungling because of lack of nation-wide planning, Golden said:

"The Austin-Wadsworth Bill now before Congress makes no provision for requiring that the work of the various governmental agencies having to do with procurement be coordinated. Instead it seeks to invest the President and the Selective Service boards with dictatorial powers to place every person between the ages of 18 and 50 where his services presumably can best be utilized. Who is to determine where they can best be utilized?

CLINTON S. GOLDEN

"If we must have legislation let it first be directed toward requiring that the various military agencies first coordinate and jointly plan their varied schedules of production requirements and then cooperate fully with the civilian agencies established to deal with both war production and civilian manpower requirements," Golden recommended.

Here's a New Win-the-War Labor Plan

London, May 1 (ALN)—A proposal that his union "adopt" the Royal Electrical and Mechanical Engineers, army regiment now fighting in North Africa, is made by Jack Tanner, president of the Amalgamated Engineering Union, writing in the current issue of the AEU Journal. AEU membership is now nearing the one million mark.

"There can be no separation today between the war front and the home front," Tanner writes. "Anti-fascist zeal is common to the workshop and the battlefield, and is directed to a common aim. Why should not the AEU, as a great national union, 'adopt' a regiment or regiments?"

Pointing out that the London Times, in a tribute to the Red Army, attributed to the success of that army to "the fact that for 25 years it has never lost touch with the people or ceased to draw its strength from the people's life." Tanner says:

"We want our Army also to draw strength from the people's life and to look at us at home not only to supply weapons, but to give the abounding and inexhaustible moral support which comes from the people.

"By coming closer to the men in the armed forces, we in the factories and our comrades in the Services can defeat any attempts to divide us and set one section against the other.

Americas United to Kill Fascism, Wallace Tells Chilean Labor Heads

SANTIAGO, Chile, by airmail (ALN)—"We are all partisans of greater collaboration between the workers of the Americas in order to win the war against fascism," Vice President Henry Wallace told a delegation of leaders of the Confederation of Chilean Workers (CTCh) last week.

Wallace ended his visit to Chile, probably the most successful in the history of Latin American relations, with interviews with Bernardo Ibanez, secretary of the CTCh, Salvadore Ocampo, assistant secretary, and heads of the Metal Workers, Railway, Tramwaymen, Miners, Teachers and Building Trades Workers.

NEED INDUSTRIALIZATION

After expressing unstinting support for the United Nations, the labor leaders told Wallace frankly that Chile's aid to the democracies could be increased if the U. S. helped industrialize Chile and supplied large quantities of raw materials.

Wallace addressed mass meetings of union miners during his visit to Lota, Chuquicamata and other mining centers. To 30,000 coal miners from the Lota fields, Wallace said:

"Unlike the Nazis, North Americans do not consider themselves a superior race. We cannot wage an economic war without sowing the seeds of a military war. After victory our efforts will be concentrated on obtaining a just, Christian and durable peace." One job of that peace, he said, would be the industrialization of Latin America.

Wallace showed particular interest in the living conditions of agricultural workers on the landed estates. Jose A. Valenzuela, secretary of the Federation of Agricultural Workers, told him that workers on some estates are paid as little as one Chilean peso (about 4 cents) a day.

The modernization of agriculture required the import of up-to-date U. S. farm equipment, Valenzuela said.

Wallace was urged by the secretary of the Federation of Building Trades Workers to use his good offices to secure the release of imprisoned Latin American labor leaders—the tin miners of Catavi, Victorio Codovilla in Argentina, Luis Carlos Prestes in Brazil.

Labor Protests Quash Anti-Semitic Smears

WASHINGTON, May 1—Anti-Semitic, dis-uniting overtones in two publications of the armed forces received death sentences from high government officials this week after labor and liberal organizations had filed sharp protests.

First death sentence came from William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains of the U. S. Army, who said that an anti-Semitic footnote appearing in a revised New Testament distributed to Catholic personnel in the armed forces will be eliminated from future editions.

Protests had come from the Protestant Textbook Commission and from the N. Y. Industrial Union Council, which pointed out too that the Army version of the New Testament also contained a bit of anti-labor propaganda, in the form of a sub-head which certainly could not have appeared in the original version—"Abuses of Labor Unions."

The other piece of anti-Semitism was printed in "The Bluejacket," published at the U. S. Naval Training School, at Memphis, Tenn., and consisted of the stale "joke" about the "famous firsts," which wound up with the statement that the first American to get four brand new tires was "Nathan Goldstein."

Government officials reported that the man responsible for the "joke" had no ulterior motive in publishing it, and that all necessary steps have been taken to see that such offensive, pro-Axis propaganda is not carried again.

Murray May Day Note Hails Int'l. Unity

Washington, May 1—May Day greetings from CIO Pres. Philip Murray were shortwaved to Latin-American, to Italian and to German workers from here today. "We are together engaged in a great struggle which will decide whether we are worthy of the great sacrifices of the leaders, the heroes, the martyrs of the past," he said.

"The CIO has an abiding and growing interest in the workers of Latin-America. We hope to learn more of your methods of organization, your problems, your hopes and aspirations. On this May Day, as you renew those hopes and aspirations, I pledge you our solidarity, our sympathy and our cooperation, and, in the name of the CIO, I salute you."

Addressing the workers in Axis Germany and Italy, Murray greeted those of them who "after 10 years of Nazi dictatorship have not lost faith in the cause of liberty and justice."

Whoops, My Deah! Bed-Bug Chaser Attacks CIO

TORONTO, Ontario, Apr. 24—The U. S. Congressional Dies Committee has a new bidder for "best red-baiter of the Western Hemisphere" in the person of M. A. Sanderson, manager of Reliable Exterminators (bed bugs their specialty). Sanderson was recently described in a three-column advertisement in the Toronto GLOBE & MAIL as "one of Canada's leading pest control operators."

Sanderson ran a three column by 16-inch ad in the daily paper featuring a half column, full length picture of himself, under the sarcastic caption, "The CIO Stages a Win-the-War Parade," and then proceeded to develop the theme in reverse in his own peculiar style.

Seeking to split Canadian soldiers from Canadian workers, the advertisement appealed to the needs of the former for jobs after the war, and said: "They know that they are entitled to the rights—the same rights—as those staying at home enjoy and demand. They know that THEIR 'Union' is also entitled to recognition . . . "

Attacking the Ontario collective bargaining bill, which became law, the pest exterminator suggested that CIO leaders be drafted into the Army—apparently regardless of age or physical condition—in a deliberate effort to weaken the organization so that the pest exterminators, and others like them, can take over the nation.

Believe It or Not!

WLB Man Says Workers Over-Subscribed for Bonds, Have Too Much $!

LOS ANGELES, May 1—Here's one for the book! The CIO United Rubber Workers Union this week protested a statement by an industry member of a War Labor Board panel, who held the unusual opinion that workers at a Firestone plant were not entitled to an increase because they had over-subscribed their 10 per cent U. S. War Bond quota by 3 per cent!

"The evidence shows that the workers of Firestone-California plant have voluntarily invested over 13 per cent of their earnings in U. S. War Bonds, which is three per cent more than the Government is asking from its citizens," Henry B. Neff of the WLB is quoted as saying in a minority opinion.

"EVIDENCE"

"This shows, without doubt, that workers are highly paid and not suffering from maladjustment, otherwise they would not be able to oversubscribe their bond quota," he added.

In a letter sent to Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Marc R. Nielsen, secretary of URW Local 100 asked:

"Is it the position of the U. S. Government and the Treasury Dept. that those working men and women in this country who invest more than 10 per cent of their gross earnings in War Bonds are, in reality, too highly paid, or doing something that the Government frowns upon?"

The Local asked that Neff be removed from the WLB panel on the basis that such views are injurious to the morale of workers and will seriously hinder the financing of the second War Loan.

Assuring the Secretary of further support to the War Bond drive regardless of the wage question, the Local pledged to continue oversubscribing the bond quota to the best of the members' ability.

FBI Probe of Wilmington Post Asked by CIO Shipyard Union

WILMINGTON, N. C., May 1—Pointing to statements in the Wilmington, N. C., POST that attacked democratic voting rights, attempted to destroy confidence in the Supreme Court, and praised Hitler, the CIO Industrial Union of Marine & Shipbuilding Workers this week asked the Federal Bureau of Investigation to probe the policies of the weekly paper.

Declaring that the union had advised the FBI of the paper's "line," Lyman C. Covert, IUMSWA district director, said:

"It is hardly necessary to say that in our opinion such seditious and inflammatory propaganda should be suppressed. If this isn't the Fifth Columnists' line then we have completely misunderstood the term."

Noting that O. G. Carroll is listed as editor and publisher, Covert listed the following quotations from the POST as expressing its policy:

POST'S QUOTATIONS

"The NWLB (National War Labor Board—Ed.) is a hand-picked board, whose authority is vested in an executive decree, never ruled upon by the Supreme Court. But, again what's the use of an appeal to the Supreme Court when that august (?) body itself is hand-picked and tied to White House strings?"

"What justification have we to fight and sacrifice in our war against Hitlerism when we are following many of his precepts right here at home? The upheaval to come in next year's election will not be a simple evolution; it will be a revolution and it will be the New Deal that goes to the guillotine."

* * *

"We still have that 'radical' idea concerning franchise. We do not believe that every person should have a vote equal to some other person. Why should the vote of a man like Henry Ford have his vote paired against that of a gutter snipe?"

* * *

The union, which has been organizing the North Carolina Shipbuilding Co., of Wilmington, pointed out that the POST has been bitterly critical of the campaign, despite the fact that the IUMSWA is supporting an all-out war program for the speediest possible victory over the Fascist Axis.

Plan Master Shipyard Pact

New York, May 1—A conference of Atlantic Coast locals of the Marine & Shipbuilding Workers is scheduled to open here at the Hotel New Yorker Monday, to draw up uniform demands for the new contracts to replace those expiring June 23.

The union stated that "four of the largest employers on the Atlantic Coast were ganging up" on the union's proposal that joint negotiations be held on a master contract.

Here's the Score On Congressmen's Voting Records

WASHINGTON, May 1—With this issue, THE CIO NEWS presents the first of a periodic listing of Congressional votes on important war issues.

Five major votes were selected: 1) continuation of the Dies Committee; 2) setting up of the Smith universal smear committee to probe all U. S. war agencies; 3) the Ruml plan to forgive taxes on the rich; 4) the Hobbs union-busting bill (HR 653); and 5) the vote on incentive payments to bring small farmers into war food production.

Symbols: R—with labor; W—against labor; O—not voting; P—answered present; blank—absent from Congress. On the five measures, the pro-war, pro-labor vote was "Nay."

Four states are covered in this issue. Later issues will cover other major industrial states.

Gadsden Going CIO; Steel, Rubber, Now Textile Victorous

GADSDEN, Ala., May 1—The CIO continued its victorious drive to bring democracy to this center of recent violence against labor organization when the Textile Workers Union of America this week won a Labor Board election at the big Dwight Mfg. Co. by a vote of 1628 to 205.

Last month the United Steelworkrs of America brought the local Republic Steel plant into the folds of CIO by winning an NLRB election five to one. April 7 the United Rubber Workers of America captured collective bargaining rights at the Goodyear Rubber plant by a three to one vote. But TWUA beat all previous Gadsden labor elections with an eight to one victory.

These overwhelming decisions in favor of the CIO are the workers' answer to one of the most brutal attacks against organized labor ever seen in the South. For years company thugs reigned with blackjacks and rubber hoses—beating up CIO members and their representatives. But now the workers have changed all that.

Win Fight For Funds

Newark, N. J., May 1—An attempt to prevent transfer of funds to a new local of the CIO Federation of Glass, Ceramic & Silica Sand Workers failed when a court decree was handled down recently in favor of the CIO union, reports Attorney Samuel L. Rothbard.

The case involves an independent union in the plant of the Armstrong Cork Co., Millville, N. J., which affiliated with the CIO glass workers several years ago. A dissident minority group within the union, instigated by the AFL, brought a suit for an injunction to restrain transferring the funds to the new CIO local. The court's decision was in favor of Local 69 of the Glass Federation.

48-Hour Week Big Victory For Steel

CIO Pres. Philip Murray, head of the United Steelworkers of America, this week hailed the Manpower Commission's order putting the steel industry on a 48-hour week as "a tremendous achievement on behalf of the war effort and a signal victory for the United Steelworkers."

CIO Soldier Gives E. Rickenbacker 'Slap in Puss'

WASHINGTON, May 8—Ex-Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker got a "slap in the puss" this week from a CIO soldier doing his bit on the firing lines of the Southwest Pacific, which Rickenbacker visited briefly as a civilian.

The soldier was Meyer Bernstein, who used to be a research assistant employed by the United Steelworkers of America. In a letter to Nathan Cowan, head of the CIO Legislative Dept., Bernstein said that "many of us here in the Southwest Pacific were appalled to learn that he (Rickenbacker) has taken up the cudgels against our families and friends back home, who have given us the best weapons in the world." The complete letter, sent by "V" mail, follows:

"Army censorship would not permit me to speak of Mr. Edward V. Rickenbacker as fully as I'd like to. Besides, we are too busy here, finishing the job we were sent out to do. But I should like it known that many of us here in the Southwest Pacific were appalled to learn that he has taken up the cudgels against our families and friends back home, who have given us the best weapons in the world."

NO SLACKER

"A soldier, whose wife works in a war, certainly doesn't get much cheer out of seeing her branded as an 'absentee' or a slacker because every so often she finds herself unable to carry on at her strange and difficult factory job. 'Hell,' he says, 'I've had to go on sick call myself. Does that make me a slacker?'

"Mr. Rickenbacker doesn't like labor unions, or apparently, the people who belong to them. That is his privilege. But it is not quite his privilege to denounce labor unions in our behalf or supposedly in our name.

"A close buddy of mine is a member of the AFL, I of the CIO. We have often discussed war aims, and high on the list of things we are fighting for is the right to go back to our jobs and our unions.

"This young man has been overseas more than a year; I almost as long. And in our daily rubbing of elbows with other soldiers we have become convinced there are thousands more like us.

"It is only fair that Mr. Rickenbacker's audiences understand that though we cannot troup around the country making speeches, we are just as strong and as sincere in our convictions as he is in his."

War Just a Joy-Ride to Some Corporation Big Shots

WASHINGTON, May 8—This war against Fascism is just a joy ride for a lot of corporation executives who are skimming off gravy in salaries and bonuses with ladles that are from 50 to 200 per cent larger than they were in 1940.

A survey this week by the American Investors Union reveals that Congressional failure to enact a sound tax program like that advocated by CIO, and Congressional repeal of President Roosevelt's $25,000 salary limitation order, have resulted in a tremendous rise in the level of remuneration "earned" by corporate executives.

In an article, "What Price Management?" appearing in the current issue of "Your Investments," the AIU reveals that "many corporate officers and directors are receiving remuneration that would be too large even if they were solely responsible for the volume of business that is being handled."

The article lists executives (following) whose remuneration has increased from 50 to 200 per cent between 1940 and 1942:

Company	Executive	1940 Remuneration	1942 Reported
American Locomotive Co.	W. Dickerman	$ 75,954	$114,091
Armour and Co.	G. A. Eastwood	74,378	101,340

Budd Wheel Co.	E. G. Budd	110,428	140,318
Burlington Mills Inc.	J. Spencer Love	91,940	196,340
Canada Dry Ginger Ale Inc.	R. W. Moore	47,747	65,540
Doehler Die Casting Co.	H. H. Doehler	35,930	56,105
Electric Storage Battery Co.	R. C. Nordberg	42,882	69,740

Lima Locomotive Works Co.	J. E. Dixon	31,680	63,150
Loews Inc.	L. B. Mayer	697,048	949,766
Munsingwear Inc.	E. L. Olrich	27,886	68,787
J. C. Penney Co.	A. W. Hughes	47,975	81,155
Phelps-Dodge Corp.	L. S. Cates	100,520	151,350
Savage Arms Co.	F. F. Hickey	32,010	86,400
Snider Packing Corp.	S. E. Comstock	22,000	35,595
Standard Oil Co. (Ohio)	W. T. Holliday	90,000	120,000
Swift & Co.	J. Holmes	65,000	85,000
Union Bag & Paper Co.	A. S. Calder	86,829	100,731
Vick Chemical Co.	H. S. Richardson	48,360	95,285
Walworth Co.	W. B. Holton Jr.	60,000	120,000
Willys-Overland Motors Co.	J W. Frazer	60,000	123,184

The AIU pointed out that executives, for the most part, have done little or nothing to earn their fabulous increases in salaries and bonuses.

"If most large corporations have a mountainous backlog of unfilled orders, this can be in no way attributed to the personal skill or acumen of their management," the organization pointed out. "Such companies are doing capacity business because of the war . . .

"If Donald Nelson, who is in charge of the biggest industrial effort in world history receives only $12,000 a year, why should the president of some relatively small company that is enjoying a boom because of a contract made possible by Mr. Nelson receive $100,000 or $150,000 a year?"

Stockholders were urged by the AIU to support labor and the President in the demand for a ceiling on executive salaries because "they are the losers when officers and directors receive remuneration that is five, 10 or 14 times as much as the ceiling ($67,200 before taxes) proposed by the President."

Profit Weeds 30% Higher Than Reported

WASHINGTON, May 8—The lush weeds of profit have grown nearly 30 per cent higher than previously reported, the U. S. Department of Commerce revealed this week.

In its March issue of "Survey of Current Business" the Department stated that "corporate profits after taxes were approximately the same in 1942 as in 1941 when the total was $7.7 billion."

"This level," the Department added, "represents a rise of more than 30 per cent from 1939." (Previously the Department had estimated the rise in this period at only 62 per cent.)

48-Hour Steel Work Week Hailed As Major Victory

ROLL 'EM BACK: The chart above shows dramatically the need to roll back prices if the standard of living is not to be ruthlessly cut, impairing the efficiency of vital war workers. Price increases have ranged from 56 to 256 per cent for four staple foods since January, 1941. The figures are based on a survey made by an AFL Teamsters Local at Canton, Ohio.

Congress Violates Pledge To Nation, Fails to Halt Price Rise, Murray Tells W. Coast

By HAROLD ROSSMAN

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8—The whole of Northern California—the CIO and leaders of all phases of military, government and civil life in this vital war area—had a hand in welcoming CIO Pres. Philip Murray on his four-day visit to San Francisco this week.

They heard him speak on the CIO's home front program, attacking Congress' failure to effect price control, and on the CIO's postwar plan for a pledge to the enslaved nations of the world that their workers will be free to join trade unions and govern their own economic destiny.

TOURS WATERFRONT

The Army's commander of all Pacific coast ports of embarkation was his guide on a tour of the vast San Francisco Bay waterfront, tightly organized by CIO Unionists who are pushing war cargoes over the docks at record speed. Principal public appearance of the CIO President was Monday, May 3, at a meeting sponsored by the California CIO Councils and six Local Industrial Union Councils in San Francisco's CIO Building.

There Murray charged that Congress has violated its pledge to the nation made in passing the price and wage stabilization act of last Oct. 2, and then by failing to provide enforcement of any but its wage freeze features.

ASK PRICE ROLL-BACK

He demanded that prices be rolled back immediately to the September 15, 1942, level as ordered by President Roosevelt in his "hold-the-line" stabilization order. Congress, turning its attention to wage freezing has been indifferent as the price of living skyrocketed, he charged.

Our "beloved Congress" could well turn its attention from anti-strike legislation to real price control, he declared.

Murray reiterated the CIO's intention to hold by its "no-strike" pledge despite failure of others to keep their war pledges.

"But I want it to be known right here in San Francisco tonight that I made a commitment on December 17, 1941, to the President of the United States, that the CIO has thrown its economic gun behind the kitchen door; the CIO will not indulge in any strikes for the duration, the CIO is going to keep that pledge."

BRIDGES' INTRODUCTION

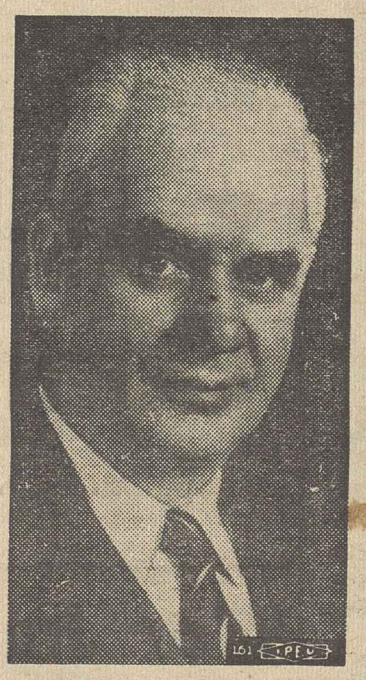
California CIO Director Harry Bridges introduced Murray to the audience. Secretary-Treasurer Mervin Rathborne of the California CIO Council was chairman of the meeting.

One aspect of Murray's speech was a sincere tribute to the Maritime Unions, the men who load the ships and sail their war cargoes to the fronts.

"In San Francisco I have talked to longshoremen, and seamen", he declared. "I have discovered what our Maritime Unions are doing to win the war. They are entitled to commendation for their zeal, effort and energy.

"What is true of the splendid attributes of Maritime Unions is equally true of every CIO affiliate."

Murray was greeted at San Francisco by a delegation from the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries, headed by Mrs. Tillie Olson, president of the California State Auxiliary Council, who presented the CIO President with a bouquet.



PHILIP MURRAY

Wage Freeze Plan a Dud, Says Murray

Oakland, Calif., May 8—The wage freezing program of Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes is completely unworkable, CIO President Philip Murray told a Pacific Coast conference of the United Steelworkers of America here today, but those within the ranks of labor who would combat it by "provocatice acts" can only "create national confusion" that will harm the war effort.

"There are always intelligent and constructive ways to adjust grievances" in such a crisis as our country now faces, Murray told the more than 200 union officials and delegates present.

The conference, representing USA locals in nine western states and Canada, responded by adopting a resolution calling upon President Roosevelt to "instruct Director Byrnes to carry out the law by rolling back prices to the September 15, 1942, level and to permit the adjustment of inequities, inequalities and maladjustments in wages through collective bargaining and through the agency of the National War Labor Board."

Murray forcefully punctuated his address with pledges that labor will fulfill its responsibilities for victory over the Axis. "We have acquired a degree of maturity that brings with it a responsibility to the nation beyond the confines of the steel industry itself," he declared. "Our responsibility is of a global nature, to people who are depending upon us all over the world. The nation can't win the war without steel.

Murray Praises U. S. Order As Aid to War

WASHINGTON, May 8—The order of the War Manpower Commission putting the steel industry on a 48-hour week is "a tremendous achievement on behalf of the war effort and reflects a signal victory for the United Steelworkers of America," President Philip Murray said this week.

Murray's comment came in a letter to CIO Steelworkers District Directors, local unions and staff members, plus a memorandum on the order from Lee Pressman, Steelworkers and CIO general counsel.

The memorandum deals "with the need of protecting the pay of our members so as to prevent any company from using the general order to impose a reduction in wage rates," Murray said.

To this end, the memo points out that "it is up to our grievance committees, staff representatives and District Directors to see to it that all employers comply with the provisions and the spirit of the order with the result that all employes will be scheduled for and will receive 48 hours of work in each plant."

STARTED MONTHS AGO

According to Murray's letter, the USA-CIO drive for the 48 hour week began several months ago, when union representatives submitted a request for it to the War Production Board, through the Labor Advisory Committee of the Steel Branch of WPB.

Opposition came from the Management Advisory Committee, Murray said, which "objected for the sole reason that it would affect their costs and their net profits."

The issue was then brought by the union to the Manpower Commission. "The facts submitted by the union justifying the establishment of the 48 hour week for the basic steel industry could not be denied," Murray said. "As a result, the War Manpower Commission issued its General Order No. 8 establishing a minimum wartime work week of 48 hours for the basic steel industry on a nationwide basis."

TREMENDOUS ACHIEVEMENT

"This order represents a tremendous achievement in behalf of the war effort and as such reflects a signal victory for the United Steelworkers in furnishing the leadership and overcoming the opposition from the management representatives of the industry who sought to block this essential step."

Observers in Washington pointed out that the 48 hour week won by Murray and the union was secured without "tearing the country apart," as one of them put it, and was also won over 10 days ago—on May 1.

The Pressman memo discusses the terms of the order, its application and the exemptions that are permitted under it, pointing out that "it shall be the position of the union that such exemptions shall be the rare exception and be granted only for actual need or cause shown rather than the general rule."

CAN SAVE JOBS

"In many instances an employer may contend that certain employes will have to be released but the union may be able to point out ways and means that such employes can be used in the plant at their previous or substantially equivalent employment," the memo says.

It further points out that "all provisions of our collective bargaining agreements with respect to premium pay for hours worked in excess of eight in any one day or 40 in any one week will continue in effect."

Additional protection for pay standards is provided in the statement:

"Full compliance with the General Order will require the companies to provide work for the employes on the basis of their customary rate of pay. Thus, if an employe is shifted to other work on the sixth day to make up the 48 hour week, he should receive for such sixth day his customary rate of pay or the rate of the new job, whichever is higher, together with the appropriate overtime pay.

"The union must not permit any company, under the guise of the 48 hour week to reduce the pay of any employe for any work performed during the 48 hours."

Talks on to Ban 1-Sided Stabilization

San Francisco, May 8—Discussions are now under way in Washington between the national CIO and President Roosevelt and heads of federal war agencies to correct one-sided stabilization measures concentrated on wages to the exclusion of price control.

Announcement of the conferences was made by President Philip Murray of the CIO during his press conference Monday.

He stressed intention of the CIO to hold to its no-strike pledge while fighting for real anti-inflation measures.

Participating in the discussions are Stabilization Director James Byrnes, the War Labor Board and the President, Murray said.

Murray reiterated CIO's demand that Byrnes roll prices back to the September 15, 1942, level, or that provision be made for wage increases to meet rising living costs.

Murray criticized refusal of the War Shipping Administration and the Maritime Commission, both headed by Admiral Emory S. Land, to give due consideration to CIO production and manpower suggestions.

"The plans devised by our maritime unions are worthy of greater consideration than they are getting from certain war agencies, in particular the War Shipping Administration and the Maritime Commission," he said. "We are hopeful that when Congress gets to know more about the facts of the situation, war shipping will be definitely improved."

Form Vermont Council To Help Fight Reaction

RUTLAND, Vt., May 8—A CIO State Council for Vermont has been established here, partly as an answer to anti-union persecution, with reactionary elements setting up "citizens' committees" in an attempt to halt organization of workers. Delegates from locals of the United Stone & Allied Products Workers, the Textile Workers Union and the United Steelworkers of America attended a convention which set up the Council April 18.

The convention voted to establish headquarters for the Vermont Council in Barre and selected Winooski, Vt., as the convention city for 1944, after passing a resolution condemning the town's officials for violation of civil liberties.

Harold Daoust, Textile Workers Union, who was elected Council president, told of the opposition the union had received from the Winooski City Council when trying to rent a hall. Twice after renting vacant stores for union headquarters, the TWU was refused occupancy. The use of the City Hall was also denied several times.

CITIZENS' COMMITTEE

"At first we did not know what to make of this," Daoust said, "but we know now after reading the names of the so-called citizens committee who advised the workers of Winooski through the mails not to sign a union card."

Daoust said that the union pledged the workers of Winooski that it will stay and fight until they win the right to vote for a union of their own choosing. The convention voted to hold the next (1944) meeting in Winooski to teach the town the meaning of civil liberty.

John C. Lawson, of the Stone Workers, was chosen secretary-treasurer of the council, and James Hanley, USA, was elected executive vice-president.

Seeds for Russia

Detroit, May 8—Contributions made by Detroit workers through the CIO War Relief Fund have gone in part to help purchase vegetable seeds for citizens in the Soviet Union, the organization announced this week.

Connally 'To Hell With War' Bill Passes Senate

WASHINGTON, May 8—Taking full advantage of the John L. Lewis strike in the coal fields, the U. S. Senate this week rushed through—with only two days of debate and without hearings—the Connally bill (S 796) that subjects unions to severe criminal penalties for even the threat of a strike, and that throws collective bargaining apparatus into the lap of the courts and endless litigation.

While the Connally bill went through the Senate, the House prepared to rush a companion measure through its procedure and got to work on a series of five anti-union bills backed up by such Congressmen as polltaxer Smith of Virginia, Hoffman of Michigan, polltaxer Woodruff, also of Virginia, and other veteran labor-haters.

The Connally bill went through despite an appeal to Senate reason by CIO President Murray, who pointed out in a wire to all Senators that public committee hearings should be held to give labor people a chance to show Congress "the unfairness of such a measure and the adverse impact its passage would have upon the morale of the workers and their sons and brothers in the armed forces."

Following the blitz that rushed the bill through the Senate, it was sent to the House Military Affairs Committee, from which it will go to the House floor for debate and a vote.

DESTROYS MORALE

In a letter to all members of the House, which was also sent to all CIO affiliates, Murray pointed to the morale-destroying features of the bill and urged that "there must be an end to this war against labor in order that the effort of the entire nation can be mobilized in a war to destroy Hitler."

The Connally bill is more than simply an "anti-strike" measure, Murray pointed out in the letter to the House, explaining that the bill would throw all War Labor Board decisions into the courts, thus giving anti-union employers a chance to sabotage labor relations needed for top war production.

"The Connally bill provides in effect that the decisions of the War Labor Board would be subject to court review whenever any employer decides to appeal to court," he said.

"Thus, while labor will observe its no-strike pledge, employers who seek to destroy the union will refuse to comply with the decision of the Board, refuse to enter into a collective bargaining agreement with the union, continue to discriminate against the members and leaders of the union while using every legal technicality for obtaining delay in the judicial proceeding.

"Nothing could be more disastrous to war production than the passage of such a bill. It is diabolical in intent and must be construed as being designed to assure a Roman holiday to employers who still prefer to destroy labor unions rather than to win the war," Murray said.

Polltax Petition Over Top; Repeal Bill Must Hit Floor Of House May 24

WASHINGTON, May 8—The polltax repeal bill Discharge Petition (DP 3) has gone over the top, with 218 signatures of Congressmen on the dotted line.

This means that the repeal bill (HR 7) can be brought on the floor of the House for debate and vote at any time.

Now is the time for every union member and everybody who wants to win the war for democracy to turn their attention to two immediate jobs:

1. Make sure your Representative will vote for the bill when it comes up May 24, and vote against any and all amendments.

2. Get to work on your two Senators, to line them up for HR 7 and against the filibuster that the polltax Senators will try to put across.

Tack This Up On Your Union Bulletin Board!

Below is the vote by states on the Connally anti-union bill, S 796. Symbols: W (wrong) is a vote for the bill, against labor and the war. R (right) is a vote against the bill, for labor and the war. Correction

Last week, under a head, "Here's the Score on Congressmen's Voting Records," the CIO NEWS carried the statement that labor's correct position on five important measures was against them.

One of the measures involved incentive payments to small farmers, and was so listed in the story. The CIO's position was against an amendment which denied incentive payments to small farmers.

Ruml Grab Hits Skid Road, Forand Tax Plan Gets OK from House

WASHINGTON, May 8—Passage of the Robertson-Forand bill this week ended the months long House debate on pay-as-you-go tax collection methods, gave a rebuke to the Ruml tax grab plan, and then pushed the whole question over to the Senate.

Under the Forand bill, passed after rejection of the Doughton plan, tax forgiveness is still higher in proportion to the rich than it is to the workers and farmers, but it does not resemble the Ruml scheme which would have forgiven everybody alike—so that a $2,000 man would have $140 in taxes cancelled, or one month's wages, while a $1,000,000 man would win $854,000 — equal to six years' income after taxes.

Following passage of the Forand bill, CIO President Philip Murray wrote to the Senators urging them to put the Ruml plan away for good, when it comes up again, and to adopt a real pay-as-you-go based on the CIO program announced when the debate first began.

Under the CIO plan, the tax on the first $2,000 of income would be cancelled, making it easier for lower income groups to make the change to current tax collection and saving the Treasury the billions of dollars that would be lost in the Ruml plan.

RUML PLAN BAD

"The Ruml plan is completely regressive," Murray wrote to the Senators. "It offers huge savings to the upper brackets and proportionately much smaller savings to the lower groups. This is done despite the fact that the upper brackets are those who can best afford to pay, while the lower groups need every penny of their income to meet inflated living costs. The Ruml plan, if put into effect, would also mean a serious loss of revenue to the Treasury."

Murray emphasized the fact that passage of the Ruml plan or any similar wholesale forgiveness scheme would result in strong pressure for new taxes on the workers and other low income groups, and thus would cut into already meager food budgets.

Referring to the President's demand for $16 billion in new tax revenue, he said: "This revenue cannot be raised from the lower income groups, which are extremely hard put to keep up with living costs as it is, without new taxes.

"Yet if the Ruml plan or some similar plan to give large benefits to the rich is adopted, the temptation to load new burdens on the poor will be very strong. New tax burdens on the workers and farmers will result in lowered health standards, and consequently in lower production."

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The blitz attack on labor that pushed the Connally bill (S 796) through in two days hasn't stopped with one anti-union measure. In the same week, House hearings started on five other anti-union bills, three of them prohibiting political contributions and other activities by unions, the fourth outlawing non-citizen union members and the fifth an anti-strike measure.

Hearings on two of these are being held under the chairmanship of Rep. Sam Hobbs, polltaxer author of the Hobbs bill, (HR 653). Pressure to rush the Hobbs bill through the Senate is piling up, as a result of the blitz on the Connally bill.

The polltax Discharge Petition is over the top. Wire your Representative to be on deck May 24, vote for HR 7, against amendments.

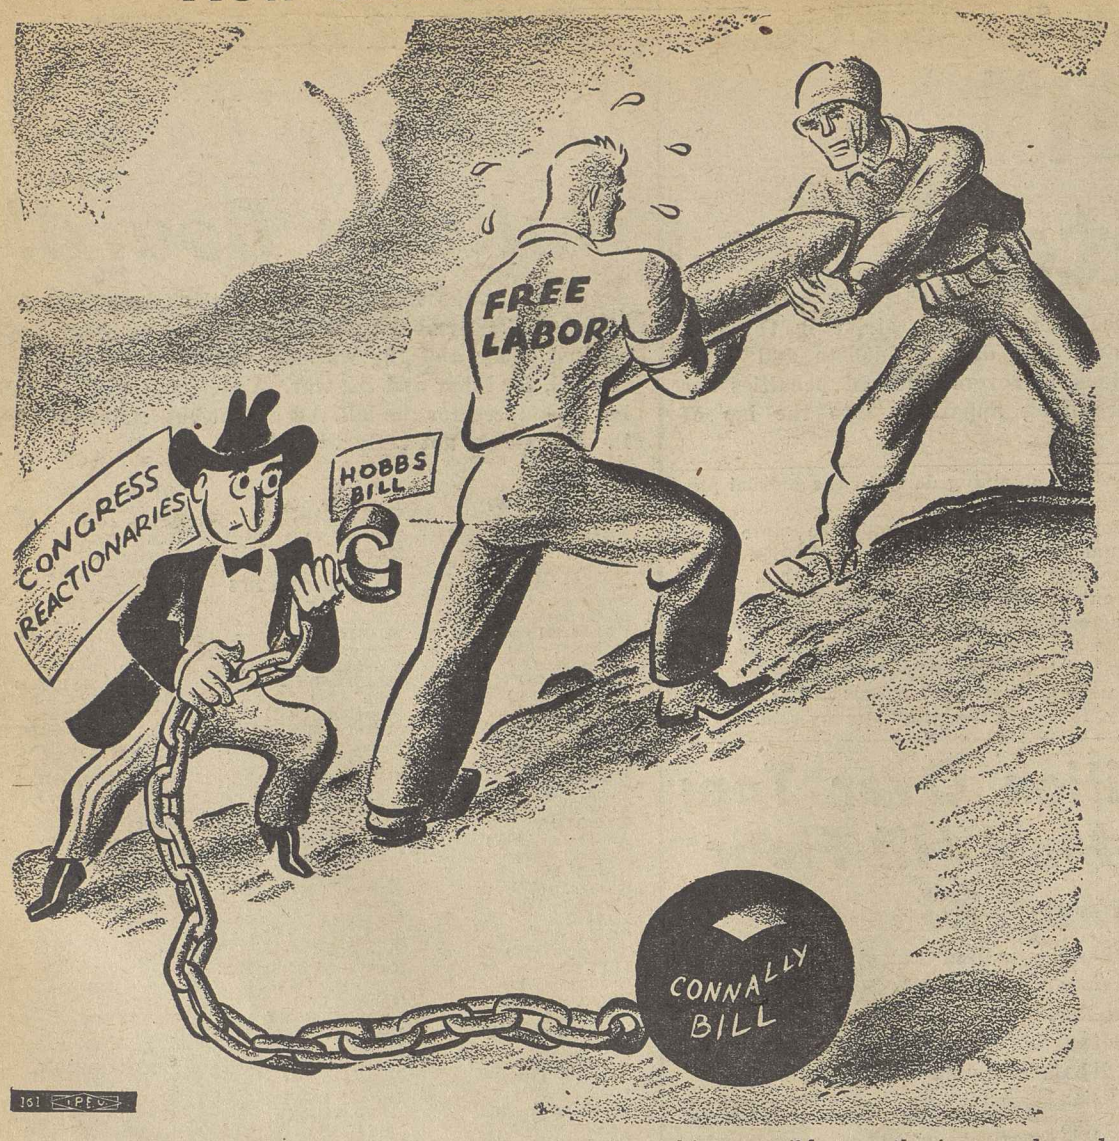
How Not to Win the War!



Anti-Labor Hysterics

The Senate of the United States, usually considered a "deliberative body," yielded to anti-labor hysteria when without deliberation it rushed through the anti-union Connally bill and loaded it down with equally ill-considered and dangerous amendments.

To vent its indignation against one lone-wolf labor leader—connected with none of the three major groupings of American labor—the Senate majority passed a bill that slaps all organized workers in the face and endangers their unions.

The Connally bill, as amended, also throws a monkey-wrench into the present laboriously built machinery for adjusting labor disputes, and permits endless court delays in enforcing War Labor Board decisions.

It is a serious blow to the morale of millions of loyal American workers, who are faithfully observing their organizations' no-strike pledge and producing to the limit for victory.

In taking this action, the Senate majority ignored the urgent plea of the CIO that the Connally bill be returned to committee for public hearings and most careful deliberation.

It has opened the dikes to a legislative war against labor by turning over to the House a bill which the labor-baiters there will seek to load with still further union-busting amendments.

The present anti-labor hysterics in Congress, coupled with numerous recent acts of favoritism to wealthy profiteers, present a serious threat to our national unity and war morale.

Labor and all other win-the-war forces must meet this challenge of disruptive reaction, before it is too late.

The Connally bill must be stopped in the House. And the anti-labor Hobbs bill, recently passed by the House, must be stopped in the Senate.

Let your Congressman and Senators hear from you at once. Tell them the American people want an end to the war against American labor, and more help from Congress to push forward united in the war against the Axis.

A Win For USA

Both the United States of America and the United Steelworkers of America came out on top in the recent order of the War Manpower Commission establishing a minimum wartime work-week of 48 hours for the basic steel industry.

It is the union, the USA-CIO, that has been campaigning for such an order for a number of months, against strong management opposition.

The final issuance of the order, with full protection for premium pay after eight hours in a day or 40 in a week, as provided in union agreements, is therefore a clear-cut CIO victory.

It is also a "tremendous achievement in behalf of the war effort," as Pres. Philip Murray points out, making possible greatly increased production of steel for victory.

The CIO recognizes no divergence between the interests of our country's war effort and the interests of labor. Its unions lead the way in the fight for more and more war production. They ask for their members only those benefits that will help to speed the day of victory.

Furthermore, the CIO faithfully observes its no-strike pledge. It opposes any interruption whatever in the production on which our fighting men depend.

The winning of this steel order is an example of the substantial benefits for labor and the country that can be won through the patriotic and constructive policies followed by the CIO.

Put Skids Under Polltax

Enough signatures of Congressmen have been obtained to force a vote in the House on the bill to outlaw the polltax.

This is an initial success of no mean proportions, due largely to labor's efforts in impressing the people's wishes on the Congressmen.

But it is just the beginning of the battle to remove the polltax obstacle from our road to victory.

No bill has yet been introduced in the Senate at this session for polltax repeal. It is urgent that the Senate speedily follow up House action, without the delays that permitted polltax repeal to be filibustered to death in the last Congress.

Now is therefore no time to rest on our oars.

Urge your Congressman to be sure to be on hand to pass the anti-polltax bill in the House by an overwhelming majority.

And be sure to contact your Senators at the same time to prepare the way for early action in the Senate.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THERE are so many self-proclaimed spokesmen these days for the boys in the foxholes of North Africa and the Southwest Pacific!

And Rickenbacker isn't the only one.

There are pot-bellied poll-taxers in Congress, who don't even speak for their own largely voteless constituencies. But they're quite willing to misrepresent the boys in the foxholes as well, in their fight against labor and "social reform."

Then there are big-business publishers who daily promote selfish profit interests "for the sake of the boys in the foxholes."

And every so often some stuffed-shirt returns from a flying trip to the back of the front, to tell the papers what's on our soldiers' minds.

By the strangest coincidence, such reports always fit in most neatly with the stuffed-shirt's own ideas and with the propaganda of the paper to which he speaks.

Unfortunately our fighting men can't elect their own spokesmen. They get little news from home, and have no means of speaking directly to the general public.

So tory papers and politicians feel safe—without fear of successful contradiction, as the saying goes—in proclaiming that our soldiers are always griping against American labor and demanding that it be sweated and shackled.

We have yet to read a report, from such sources, that the boys have any complaint against war profiteers; against concerns that endanger their lives with faulty steel; against exploiters of their fathers, wives and sweethearts; or against the near-fascist crowd who want open-shop slavery and apple-selling rugged individualism to be the soldiers' lot on their return.

Such political exploitation and misrepresentation of men who are too busy fighting and dying for their country to be able to speak for themselves, is one of the most ghoulish indecencies of this war.

The CIO has a million or more of its members in the armed forces—many of them in the foxholes right now.

No one can express views of all these men and their buddies. But we do know what many of them are saying in letters from the front, or from the camps, to their families and friends, to their unions, and to the CIO.

And there is now a sizeable body of evidence of this kind.

Naturally the personal note predominates in such correspondence. Hardships and dangers are usually treated with courage and humor, though censorship forbids much detail. And there is an insatiable longing for news from home.

But there is also a pronounced social note that recurs again and again. Many letters, for instance, express deep resentment at reports on Rickenbackers' speeches.

"Many of us here in the Southwest Pacific were appalled to learn that Rickenbacker has taken up the cudgels against our families and friends back home, who have given us the best weapons in the world," says one letter.

"Mr. Rickenbacker doesn't like labor unions, or apparently, the people who belong to them. That is his privilege. But it is not quite his privilege to denounce labor unions in our behalf or supposedly in our name."

Two other notes stand out in countless letters received in CIO quarters from our fighting men.

(1) An appreciation of what this people's war is all about. Hatred of fascism and all it stands for. A grim determination to fight for freedom and democracy and for a world safe for peace and social progress.

(2) Eagerness to get the war over as soon as possible, so the writers can return to their families and to a decent and secure livelihood, with opportunity to get ahead, in an America where freedom has been jealously guarded for the common people.

The letters plead again and again for labor to keep up the fight on the home front, not only to speed our victory, but also to defeat domestic reaction and to insure worth-while conditions for our fighting men and their families after the war.

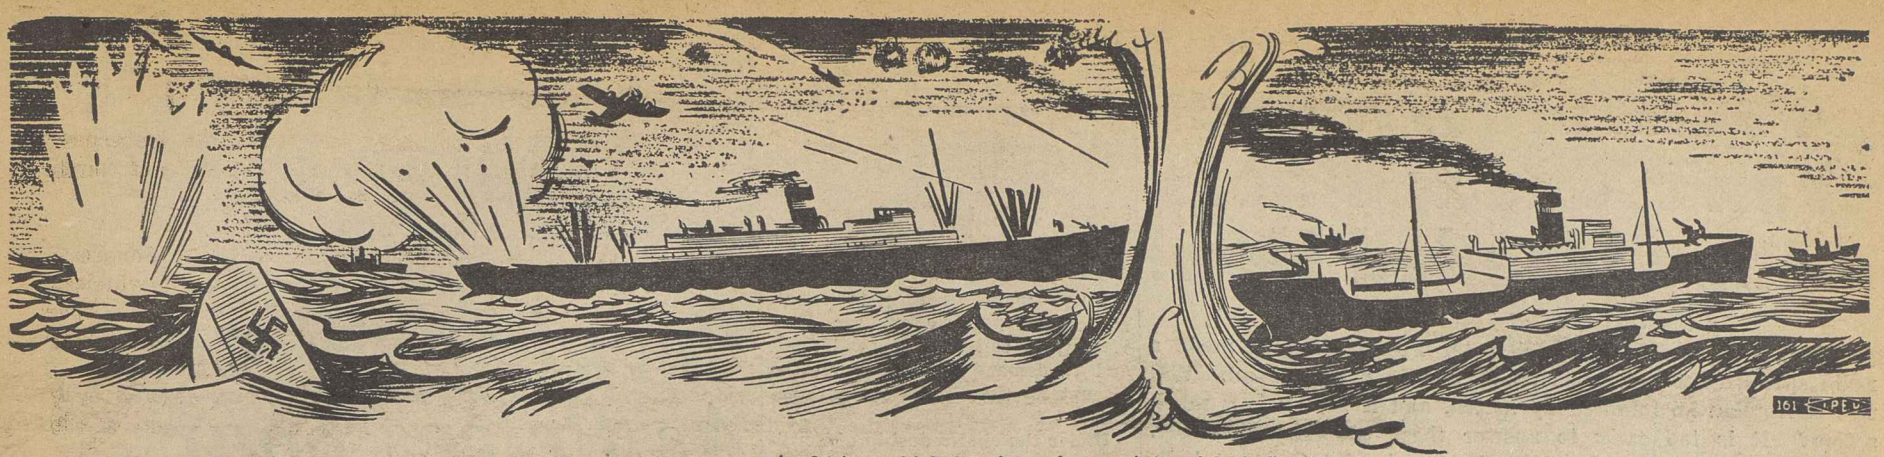
There is hardly a CIO member who does not have members of his family and many close friends in the fighting forces.

We owe it to them to keep up the fight in the way we know they desire.

And we owe them more and more letters from home, to reassure them we're holding the fort and to keep them posted on home developments, so they may not be victimized by lying and disruptive misrepresentations.



CIO Heroes, Too, Fight, Bleed And Die for Freedom

By HOLLACE RANSDELL

WASHINGTON, Apr. 24—What labor-baiters like Eddie Rickenbacker want to hide from the American people is that many of the fighters, on Guadalcanal and other hot spots, whose brave deeds they praise, come from the same families as the workers in our war production plants whom the labor-baiters are busy slandering.

They fail to mention that some of the heroes whose thrilling stories have been heralded throughout the nation by radio and press are members of the CIO and other groups of organized labor.

The stories of Meyer Levin, son of an old and faithful member of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, who was a bombardier on Colin Kelly's plane; of John Bartek who shared the raft with Rickenbacker; and of Basil Izzi who spent 83 days on a raft (both members of the CIO Textile Workers Union) have been told and retold. They will go down in the annals of this World War as outstanding heroes, yet only the labor press and radio have pointed out that these brave warriors come from the ranks of orgnaized labor.

Every day the names of other CIO members are being added to labor's roll of honor, but it takes some time for these stories to trickle through to the labor press and from personal letters and observation of union members who recognize a union buddy in a news story.

Torpedoes Jap Destroyer

There is the story of Lieutenant Frank Freeland, USN, a member of the Screen Publicists Guild whose name must be added to labor's honor roll.

Lt. Freeland, in command of a PT boat, torpedoed and sank a Japanese destroyer off Cape Esperance, Guadalcanal, on Dec. 7, 1942, the anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

A few days later the Navy Department reported that he was missing in action. His family and friends, realizing that many men missing in the far-flung South

Pacific area have turned up later, are confidently hoping that he will be found.

Another CIO hero is James August Wipperman, a Navy gunner from the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes who was one of 28 men commended for successfully fighting off enemy airplanes at sea while on duty aboard a merchant vessel.

Wipperman, who is 30 years old, enlisted a year ago. Tales of his travels in war areas all over the world on merchant ships are related in letters to his mother, Mrs. Louise Wipperman.

Loses Life on Patrol

Also from the United Retail and Wholesale union comes the tragic story of a member who lost his life while on patrol duty. Fred Oscar Germann, who enlisted in the Coast Guard, was drowned in the Ohio River between Pittsburgh, Pa., and Cincinnati. He was buried with military honors in a funeral ceremony attended by officers and members of his local union.

A citation for outstanding and courageous service as a U. S. Navy gunner aboard a merchant ship was awarded to John Ours, member of Celanese Local 1874 of the Textile Workers Union, in Cumberland, Md.

Coxswain Ours, aboard a merchant ship carrying supplies to Russia, was a member of the gun crew that successfully warded off attacks by seven Nazi planes and a later attack of 14 Nazi Heinkel torpedo bombers, according to the Labor Press Service of the Navy. Ours spent 72 hours in a lifeboat after his ship was torpedoed and then was picked up and taken to Russia.

Whole Family in War

It was from the hero Ours' local that the story of Ben Marx came, the CIO member whose family is a United Nations all by itself. Marx has a son with the Army in the Solomons Islands, a daughter working at Edgewood Arsenal, a nephew with Gen. MacArthur in Australia, a niece who is an Army nurse, two nephews with the English army, and two serving in the Russian army.

These are but a few of the stories of CIO heroes among the armed forces, but the great bulk of the stirring tales of heroism concern members of the CIO's National Maritime Union, thousands of whom have already given their lives in the course of their duty transporting needed supplies to our allies. Their stories have received more public attention although it is seldom mentioned that most of these merchant seamen are CIO members.

At least two books, "There Go the Ships" by Robert Carse, and "Dynamite Cargo" by Fred Herman, have been written describing the run to deliver supplies to Russia during which heroism of members of the crew was taken as a matter of course. Other accounts of the ordeals borne by merchant seamen whose convoys have been attacked by German submarine wolf packs below and swarms of Nazi planes above have been featured by the national magazines.

Cited for Bravery

Citations for bravery among these NMU members are common. There is Maximo Murphy, who saved the lives of 21 shipmates when his ship was torpedoed in the Caribbean and then came home and joined the Army He was awarded the Merchant Marine Distinguished Service Medal by the U. S. Maritime Commission.

The NMU presented medals to Nick Hoogendam, 17-year-old NMU man who spent 83 days on a raft along with Basil Izzi, CIO member mentioned before, and one of Nick's fellow countrymen, Cornelius van der Slot. In presenting the medals to the three, NMU President Joseph Curran said:

"Americans can be as proud of the merchant seamen who sail her vessels as are the members of the NMU of Hoogendam and his shipmates whose will to return to fight Fascism was stronger than the suffering and privations they underwent."

Edwin Joseph O'Hara, 19, a Merchant Marine cadet who lost his life while manning a Liberty ship gun single-handed to fire the last five shells into an enemy raider, was awarded a Distinguished Service Medal posthumously by the Maritime Commission. Another young merchant seaman, William M. Thomas, Jr., received the highest Congressional honor for men of the merchant marine for his heroism in rescuing from below decks a badly wounded shipmate and lashing him to a life raft from which they were rescued 20 hours later.

Gustave Alm, a ship's carpenter on a torpedoed merchant vessel who clung with four others from a group originally numbering 40 to an overturned lifeboat, pulling his mates aboard constantly in a heavy sea, was along among the merchant seamen receiving the Distinguished Service Medal.

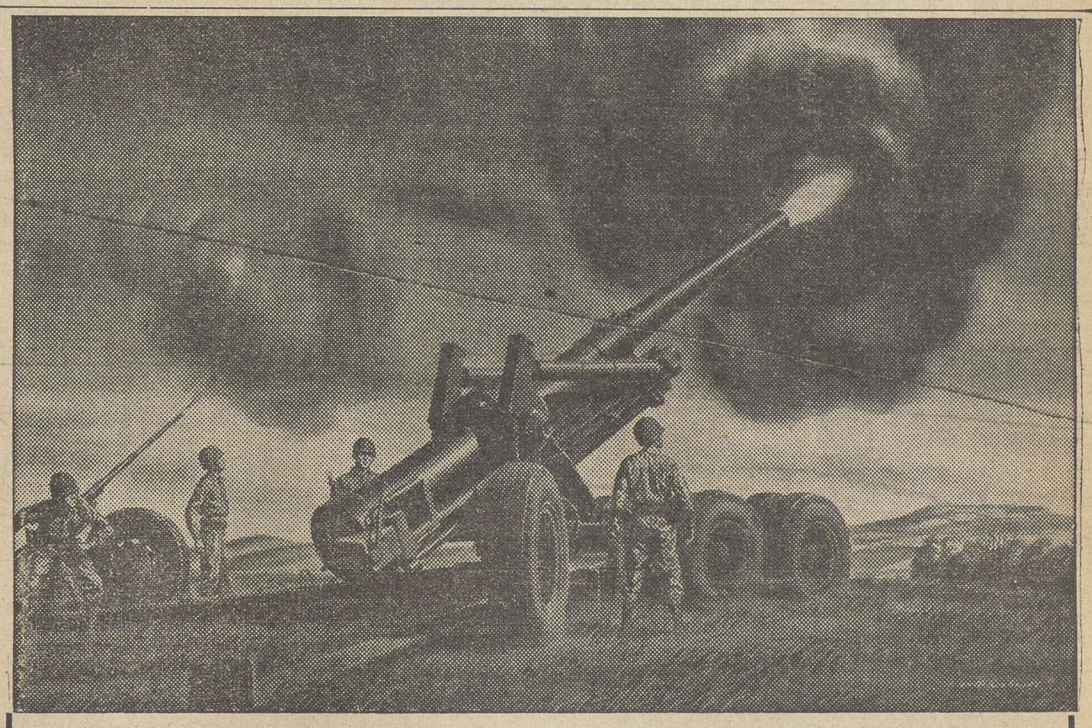
Many other citations for bravery have been given and will continue to go to the merchant seamen for their heroic efforts at sea. According to Admiral Emory Land of the Maritime Commission, "the only difficulty we have is that there are so many of them who deserve this Distinguished Service Medal that it is hard to choose, and the Board of Awards has an extremely difficult time."



THIS IS PART OF YOUR PAY CHECK

That gun's making things pretty hot for the Axis

It came from the pay check and pay envelopes of people like you. It was bought with the money you lent your Government in regular installments from your pay.

But hold on now—Maybe it's not your gun! Maybe you aren't setting aside at least 10 percent of your salary for War Bonds!

There are still some people who aren't; not many, but maybe you're one of them. If you are one, we're sure it's not for want of patriotism, but because you haven't gotten around to it.

Tell your boss today you want to help win the war by joining the Pay-Roll Savings Plan. Tell him you want to save at least 10 percent of every pay check by putting it into War Bonds.

You can't make a better investment. You'll be buying the weapons that insure a future of freedom, peace, and plenty . . . and you'll be getting back $4 for every $3 you save.

The Civilian War Front:

OPA Words, Music Won't Check Prices; Action Needed Now!

By the CIO Cost of Living Committee

On April 30, Price Administrator Prentiss Brown made a radio speech announcing his conversion to price control. Will this conversion be followed by action, and if so, by how much action? It is too early to answer these questions precisely. But the following analysis of the Brown 4-point program indicates the obstacles that will have to be overcome before any of the words and promises can be translated into real price control.

1. To extend price control across the board, to every important commodity. If this means anything, it means placing ceilings on all agricultural commodities, including livestock, cotton, etc.

Mr. Brown lacks the power to carry through on this promise, because all agricultural ceilings must be approved by the Secretary of Agriculture and the War Food Administrator. Both of these gentlemen have refused to sanction such ceilings, and until and unless the President orders them to approve such ceilings, Mr. Brown's promise will remain an empty gesture.

Mr. Brown has so far failed publicly to ask the President to issue this order.

2. To roll back those prices which have got out of hand. To do this requires not only the power to place ceilings on farm commodities at the minimum levels set by law, but also adequate subsidy funds to maintain necessary high-cost production both on the farms and at the processing level.

Congress has for the past year sabotaged all subsidy programs intended to assure necessary production and stabilize the cost of living.

In recent months neither the OPA nor the Administration has pressed for price control subsidies, and indeed Mr. Brown's appointment as Price Control Administrator was designed to appease or satisfy Congress on its stand of no price control subsidies.

Unless Congress can be got to change its stand on subsidies—and recognize what even the conservative, Walter Lippman, calls "the elemental facts of the problem"—then we are simply attempting "to stabilize prices by uttering words."

3. To establish specific dollars and cents prices for food. This phase of the program alone is within the power of the OPA to carry through. The OPA has talked dollars and cents prices for more than six months without any evidence of attempting to carry them through.

The pressure of the trade interests within the OPA has sought to divert the program from dollars and cents prices to percentage margin pricing under which the consumer would be completely helpless.

Brown Filibuster

Price Administrator Brown has seconded this pressure against dollars and cents prices—as well as price control in general—by filibustering against his own order for grade labeling and grade pricing of canned fruits and vegetables.

There can be no effective dollars and cents prices for canned goods without pricing by grade and knowledge of the grade by the consumer.

4. To bring the chiseler, the racketeer, the black market operator to justice. To do this, you have to have the will to enforce and you have to have adequate personnel and funds for enforcement.

Mr. Brown's chief assistants, including the notorious Mr. Maxon, have never ceased harping on "humanization" of OPA policy, on "putting away boxing gloves and the police whistle as weapons of enforcement."

Mr. Brown himself has softened enforcement policy by lashing out against OPA lawyers and by refusing to ask Congress for adequate personnel and funds for enforcement.

Thus hitherto there has been neither the will nor the power to enforce OPA regulations.

Auxiliaries To Mobilize

Washington, May 8—A special meeting of the Executive Board of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries will be held at Cleveland, May 15, following the CIO Executive Board meeting there, to consider plans for mobilizing housewives in support of the CIO program to roll back prices, establish dollar and cents price ceilings, and secure grade labeling of canned goods.

Textile Parley Opens May 8

New York City, May 8—Outstanding leaders of the Government and the CIO are scheduled to speak at the third biennial convention of the Textile Workers Union of America which opens here Monday at Carnegie Hall.

Emil Rieve, TWUA president, will deliver the keynote address Monday noon. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and CIO Secretary James B. Carey are scheduled to speak Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt and Van A. Bittner, assistant to the president of the United Steelworkers of America, are on the program for Wednesday afternoon, and Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, will speak on Thursday.

New Yorkers Pledge Total War Effort

New York, May 8—More than 50,000 people—CIO, AFL, and unorganized—met here this week in a huge mass meeting to renew pledges of total effort for total victory, to call for a second front and to demand an end to all the disrupters that threaten national unity.

Under the chairmanship of Ferdinand Smith secretary of the National Maritime Union, the meeting heard speeches from such leaders as Joseph Curran, NMU president; Mayor LaGuardia, Rep. Vito Marcantonio, Michael Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union; the Rev. A. Clayton Powell, N. Y. councilman, and others.

A featured speaker was Captain Hugh Mulzac, Negro skipper of the liberty ship Booker T. Washington, first U. S. merchant marine vessel to be captained by a Negro in 25 years.

Three seamen, all of them union men, were honored at the meeting. These were the men who survived 83 days on a life raft in the South Atlantic, and who came back to tell the audience that Rickenbacker, who has become the national hero of the NAM, does not represent the men who have gone through comparable hardships.

300 Clergymen Back Bridges' Citizenship Plea

New York City, May 8—More than 300 clergymen throughout the country this week joined Bishop Edward L. Parsons of San Francisco in signing an open letter to President Roosevelt asking that the deportation order against Harry Bridges be set aside and that he be given "the opportunity to become a citizen of the United States."

In announcing the letter, the Citizens Victory Committee for Bridges said that following the denial of a writ of habeas corpus to the president of the CIO International Longshoremen's & Warehousemen's Union in February an appeal, which is still pending, was filed in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

People Seething As Prices Soar

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

People are really seething about the price situation—especially food prices. Housewives talk about it constantly. "I paid 17 cents for one pound of sweet potatoes—two medium sized sweet potatoes—17 cents," one of the Fur Auxiliary women in New York told me this weekend.

They're getting sore about it. Statements that the government is going to do something don't make much impression. They look at the records. They see that since the April 8 "hold-the-line" Executive Order there hasn't been any roll back of food prices.

MONTH'S DELAY

It's a whole month now since the President directed the Price Administrator and the Food Administrator to do two things:

1. "Take immediate steps to place ceiling prices on all commodies affecting the cost of living."

2. "Prevent further price increases direct or indirect, prevent profiteering and reduce prices which are excessively high, unfair or inequitable."

And what has been done? Take meat for example. No ceiling has been placed on livestock. That means consumers have no assurance meat prices will stay put.

Dollars and cents ceiling prices on beef, lamb and veal announced for April 15 have been reduced, but they're still above present chain store ceilings. Take ground beef, for instance. The present ceiling in my chain store is 29 cents a pound. It will be 32 cents after May 17. It's worse on chuck: Present ceiling 23 cents; May 17 ceiling, 31 cents. That's not my idea of holding the line.

MORE PRICES SOAR

Here's what happened to some of the prices that weren't under ceiling back in September, 1942. This table compares what the Bureau of Labor Statistics found were the average New York prices September 16, 1942, with what an auxiliary member paid for her vegetables on April 29, 1943.

	September 16	April 29
Beans (per lb.)	12.3	23
Cabbage (per lb.)	4.3	15
Onions (per lb.)	4.7	8
Potatoes (15 lbs.)	44.8	90
Sweet potatoes (per lb.)	6.3	18

Is there any question that those prices are "excessively high?" But so far nothing effective has been done to stop them from going still higher, let alone roll them back.

READY FOR ACTION

The housewives in this country are ready for action on food prices but they don't know quite what to do. They support the CIO program to roll prices back to the level they reached when wages were frozen. They want grade labeling of canned goods and dollars and cents ceilings on all essential commodities so that price control can be enforced in retail stores.

The Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO is meeting in Cleveland May 15, the day after the CIO Executive Board meeting, to discuss how we can best do our job of helping to carry out the anti-inflation program—getting the housewives into action.

The energy they put into griping to each other and to their husbands must be put into griping to the President, to Byrnes, Brown, Davis and Congress. Delegations should beseige local OPA offices throughout the country demanding action on living costs.

Don't Skip Milk, Foundation of Diet

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

As prices go soaring and you find your budget can buy less and less of the foods you need to keep your family fit—one item that must find a place on your shopping list is milk.

Milk is the foundation of an adequate diet. It is the most important source of calcium and phosphorous, the minerals needed for building strong bones and teeth. It is an excellent source of energy, for it contains both carbohydrates (in the form of sugar) and fat—the elements needed to supply the body with heat and energy. It is an important source of Vitamin A, "the blackout Vitamin," so necessary to keep eyes healthy and your body free from infections. It's an excellent source of Riboflavin of the Vitamin B family—so important to growth and general physical well-being.

It is an excellent muscle-building food—for it is one of the few foods that contain the "complete" proteins needed to build and repair living tissues.

Some milk is reinforced with Vitamin D, the sunshine Vitamin that prevents and cures the infant disease rickets—a disease that affects the bones.

SKIM MILK OK TOO

Skim milk lacks the Vitamin A value found in whole milk, but it can safely be used if the diet provides other foods high in Vitamin A—like green leafy vegetables, yellow vegetables, butter, dried apricots and peaches, tomatoes and eggs.

Cheese may take the place of part of the milk in the diet of older children and adults.

Use fresh whole or skim milk, unsweetened evaporated milk or powdered whole or skim milk.

It is impossible to overestimate or exaggerate the importance of this single item of food in the daily diet.

Here is a recipe that uses milk to make a good nourishing main supper dish for the children.

CREAM OF VEGETABLE SOUP

Cut small onion fine. Cut carrot fine. Cut any vegetables you have in small cubes. Cook in saucepan with just enough water to cover the vegetables. When vegetables one done add 1 quart of milk and 1 small piece of butter or oleomargarine with Vitamin A added. Salt and pepper to taste. Let simmer until milk is well blended. Mash some of the vegetables to give the soup a thicker consistency. Pour into bowls and sprinkle with fresh chopped parsley. Serves 4.

CIO received 475 votes, no union 258, and AFL 75. N. A. Zonarich, president, Aluminum Workers, sends in a victory at the J. P. Marsh Corp., Chicago; CIO 235, 117 against.

Regional Director Paul Christopher, Tenn., sends in two victories, one with the Cannery, Agricultural, Packing and Allied Workers at the Federal Compress plant. CIO received 146 votes with 131 against. Organizers A. J. Marcus and Lou Bentzley conducted the campaign. The second victory was at the Alcoa Brick & Tile Co., Alcoa, Tenn., for the Stone & Allied Products Workers. 45 votes were cast, all for CIO. Organizer Robert Boyer and other local representatives brought about this victory.

George Brown, assistant director of organization, International Woodworkers, reports a victory at the Nash Logging Co., Eugene, Ore., with a vote of 18 for CIO, 2 for no union. Regional Director Harvey C. Fremming of Kansas City comes along with an election at the Phillips Petroleum refinery for the Oil Workers. The result was 374 for CIO, 79 against. Regional Director Hugh Thompson of Buffalo, N. Y., sends in an election at North Tonawanda, N. Y., at the plant of Strippit Corp., 73 for UE-CIO, 57 for no union. Acting Regional Director Joseph Cannon of Louisvile, Ky., reports an election for the UE at the Westinghouse plant for the guards. The vote was 52 for CIO, 25 against.

Mine, Mill Victories

Morris Wright, of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, sends in the following victories: At Morenci, Ariz., Phelps Dodge Corp., 941 for CIO, 52 for AFL. An election was held at the Precision Casting Co., Cleveland, Ohio, this being the last of the big unorganized die casting concerns in the country. The vote was 101 for CIO, 24 against. At Monticello, Utah, Vanadium Corp. of America, the vote 72 for CIO to 4. Regional Director Frank Bonacci helped in this campaign.

At Thomaston, Conn., one of the last unorganized plants in Connecticut's "Brass Valley" was brought into the union's fold when the IUMMSW won an election 380 to 178. Another Cleveland victory was at the United Screw and Bolt Co., where CIO received 209 votes to 58 against. At the Garden City Planting Mfg. Co., in Chicago, the IUMMSW came through with a vote of 97 to 82 against. At East Orange, N. J., they won by a vote of 50 for CIO against 13. Office workers at the American Smelting and Refining Co., Garfield, Utah, chose CIO by a 70% majority.

The United Steelworkers won an election at the Amertorp plant, Forest Park, Illinois, by 53%. CIO National Representative Robert J. Davidson conducted a meeting at Waterbury, Conn., on Sunday, May 2, of representatives from all local unions of the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers in the Connecticut area.

Topics were discussed and questions answered by the speakers, who were J. Raymond Walsh, CIO director of research and education; Mrs. Weston of the Manpower Commission; William Lieder, CIO attorney, who dealt with the War Labor Board problems; Sub-Regional Director Edward McCrone of Conn.; and the writer. This union is growing numerically and stabilizing its structure in every way. Everyone present expressed approval of the gathering.

Regional Director Ewald Sandner of N. J. reports a victory at the William Steinem Co., 111 for CIO; 18 for company union; 3 for no union. Assistant Director of Organization, IWA-CIO, sends in another victory at the Woods Lumber Co., Memphis, Tenn., IWA-CIO 31, to 10 for no union. O. W. Singleton, CIO field representative, reports the following election results: from Blue Field, W. Va., National Electric Coil Co., UE-CIO 129, no union 24; West Virginia Armature Co., U-CIO 63; no union 28.

N. African Victories Chart Course for Invasion Of Europe—Murray

WASHINGTON, May 8—The victories in North Africa are "the forerunner of a United Nations attack on the Nazis in the prison-house of Europe," President Philip Murray said this week in an exchange of greetings between CIO and the trade unions of Algeria, the Confederation General du Travail d'Algerie (CGT).

Murray's message was in response to a greeting from the Algerian workers, which urged, "let us unite in action for the world victory of freedom" and which said that North African workers, having known the Hitler terror at first hand, "know that our life in the future can only be assured by the total defeat of international Fascism."

WARM GREETINGS

In sending "warm fraternal greetings and the expression of our solidarity" to the CGT, Murray declared:

"The five million men and women of the CIO are the artisans of the weapons of freedom. On every production line, in every shop, factory, mill and office our members are giving their best to arm our forces and the forces of our heroic allies for the final blows that will rid the world of Fascism forever.

"In this task, we are joined with the trade union workers of Algeria, of all the United Nations and with the heroic fighters of the underground in France and the occupied nations and territories of Europe and Asia.

"We are determined, with them, that nothing shall break our unity and that nothing shall be allowed to stand in the way of full production for total war and total victory."

Give $99,000 To Red Cross

Philadelphia, May 8—Contributions to the Red Cross totalling $99,009.74 have been made by CIO unions and CIO members in Eastern Pennsylvania, George Craig, CIO regional director, announced this week.

Send CIO News To Army—Murray

Los Angeles, May 8—"There are 800,000 members of the CIO in the armed forces, many of them on world battlefronts. All of them should be receiving news of union activities through national, state and local CIO newspapers."

That was the answer of CIO Pres. Philip Murray last weekend to anti-labor propaganda reaching American fighting men throughout the world.

Murray cited labor's war record and urged that production figures appearing in the CIO news organs be sent to men in the service to counteract what he said were "vicious lies and distortions spread by the foes of labor."

British OK Incentive Pay Plan

LONDON, May 8, (ALN) — On behalf of their members working in Britain's shipyards, and Electrical Trades Union and the National Society of Painters have signed agreements with the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation permitting payment by results (incentive pay), formerly opposed by these unions.

"It is distinctly understood that the introduction of payment by results is a wartime measure, and is aimed to secure greater production," the executive committee declared.

Principal clauses in the ETU's agreement—which closely parallels the Painters' agreement—are:

(1) "Payment by results shall be in the form of group contract schemes and not schemes of individual piecework.

(2) "Contracts and prices shall be arranged between the managements of individual firms and the representatives of the ETU elected by ETU members working on the contract.

(3) "Contracts shall provide for periodical reviews of the value of the work done, at intervals as short as reasonably possible.

(4) "Any questions in connection with such schemes which cannot be disposed of on the spot may be dealt with between the Employers' Local Association and the district representatives of the union; or may be referred to the Employers' Federation and the national executive of the union."

Payment by results has long been accepted in the metal trades, but it is only during the war that the system has become widespread. Principal opposition to insentive pay came from the building trades unions. The Essential Work Order, applied to the building industry in June, 1941, introduced payment by results to certain categories in the industry — mainly bricklaying.

The order was at first bitterly fought by the unions. At its annual conference in June, 1941, the National Federation of Building Trades Operatives—a loose federation of 16 autonomous unions—voted: "This conference views with alarm the attempt to introduce piecework in the building industry, and instructs the NFBTO executive to oppose such conditions with all the force at its command."

In November, 1941, however, the NFBTO voted to accept the system of incentive pay, and established a joint advisory committee to supervise its application.

Change of Name

Washington, May 8—The name of the Nat'l. CIO Committee for American & Allied War Relief has been changed to the Nat'l. CIO War Relief Committee, the organization announced this week.

Soviet Journalists Hits Foes of Unity As Aids to Hitler

KUIBYSHEV, April 30 (Delayed)—ALN)—In a biting article attacking enemies of international labor unity, Nikolai Alexeyev, leading trade union journalist whose writings are considered to reflect the views of the All-Union Central Council of Trade Unions, said here this week:

"Anyone who tries to hinder the establishment of international labor unity brings grist to Hitler's mill, and in the final analysis is acting as Hilter's agent within the labor movement."

OBJECT LESSON

Pointing to the fate of organized labor in Western Europe as an "object lesson" to union officials who oppose unity, Alexeyev says:

"This year, as working people in all parts of the world prepare to celebrate May Day, the international holiday of labor, the essential prerequisites for victory are the mobilization of all the resources of the freedom-loving peoples and the establishment of fighting unity between the sections of the world-wide labor movement.

"The united effort of labor unions in the United States, the countries of Latin America, Great Britain, the Soviet Union, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, Palestine and other countries could undoubtedly play a major role in mobilizing the freedom-loving nations for struggle against the Hitlerites.

POWERFUL STIMULUS

"The fighting alliance of labor the world over would be a powerful stimulus to the underground labor and trade union movements in the occupied countries. Hitler is striving to prevent such an alliance."

Soviet workers, Alexeyev said, have been encouraged to bear wartime hardships by the knowledge that workers in the U. S. "are imbued with the same irreconcilable hatred for fascism and the same desire to hasten the hour of retribution for the Hitlerite cut-throats."

Soviet labor is grateful for gifts from U. S. labor to the Red Army, he said, and even more grateful for labor's concern with increasing war production, as well as the "numerous resolutions demanding the immediate opening of a second front adopted at union meetings, conventions and Congresses."

MAY DAY MESSAGE

The sympathy of American workers, Alexeyev said, "is demonstrated by a May Day message to the Stalingrad Tractor Plant from the Caterpillar Tractor Works of Peoria, Illinois, reading in part:

"Your deeds of valor have written a story of blood and courage that the world will never cease to read with praise and tribute.

"This great international labor day will not be celebrated with marching feet and flying flags. Together with you, we will observe it with grim determination in our plants and at our benches, turning out more implements of war to speed a Western Offensive and bring an end to this war in 1943."

SOVIET ANSWER

The message from the Stalingrad workers to the Caterpillar Tractor workers reads:

"Together with the entire Soviet nation we are now rebuilding our Stalingrad and our plants, where every foot of ground bears witness to a struggle without parallel in history.

"All Soviet working men and women we will celebrate May Day in intense effort, moved by the unanimous urge to supply the Red Army with all the armaments and ammunition it needs for the complete destruction of Hitler's marauding army.

"We confidently believe that the day is not far off when the armies of the United States and Great Britain will not only hurl Rommel into the sea but will begin to annihilate Hitler's hordes no less successfully on the Eurpean continent."

Atlanta CIO Hears Brophy

Atlanta, Ga., May 8—John Brophy, CIO director of Industrial Councils and a panel member of the National War Labor Board, spoke at a conference here of CIO panel members of the board for the Fourth Region.

The conference adopted resolutions calling for vigorous enforcement of a price control system and elimination of gross wage inequalities.

New Zealand Unions Buy Gifts For Troops

Auckland, New Zealand, May 8 (ALN)—The executive committee of the New Zealand Federation of Labor has voted to levy a penny-in-the-pound assessment on pay checks to provide gifts and recreation centers for New Zealand troops and other United Nations troops stationed in New Zealand.

The contributions will be checked off by employers, most of whom will contribute a similar sum. The national plan was endorsed by the Eastern conference of the Federation of Labor in Wellington this week.

Here's a Check On Men You Sent To Congress

WASHINGTON, May 8—The CIO NEWS herewith presents the second of several lists of the voting records of Congressmen on issues vital to the war.

Five major issues have been selected: 1) continuation of the Dies Committee; 2) setting up the Smith universal smear committee to "investigate" government agencies; 3) the Ruml grab plan which would forgive taxes for the rich; 4) the Hobbs bill to bust unions; and 5) an amendment denying incentive payments to small farmers. Labor's position on all these was "nay."

R—With labor.
W—Against labor.
O—Not voting.

116 More War Workers Honored for Ideas To Boost Output

WASHINGTON, May 8—One hundred sixteen more war workers—many of them union members—were honored this week by War Production Drive Headquarters for suggestions that have helped to boost production for a United Nations' victory. Thirty-five of the workers were honored by certificates of individual production merit, and 81 were awarded letters of honorable mention.

American shipyard workers demonstrated spectacularly that they are thinking, as well as working, for victory by winning 42 of the 116 honors announced today. They accounted for 18, or one-half of the 35 Certificates, and 24, or more than a quarter of the 81 Letters of Honorable Mention.

By capturing a combined total of 42 out of the 116 awards granted for suggestions submitted to Washington by Labor-Management Production Committees during the past month, shipyard workers, according to W. Ellison Chalmers, acting chief of staff of the War Production Drive, "have clearly indicated they are not going to accept the menace of U-boat sinking to our Victory time-table by resting on past laurels earned for record-breaking launchings.

"Rather, by surpassing all other industries in point of number of suggestions actually put into operation and reported to Drive Headquarters during April," Chalmers continued, "our ship workers serve notice to the Axis that even greater construction accomplishments are ahead as a result of production short-cuts, man-hour and material savings and safety precautions they themselves have suggested through shipyard joint production committees."

All suggestions which receive national honors are plowed back into industry, so that improvements in shipbuilding developed and put into practice in one yard are made immediately available to all yards. War Production Drive Headquarters is now filling requests for data on suggestions at a rate of 835 weekly through the plow-back system of the Awards Branch.

The first Negro ever to win a Certificate is Charles H. Fletcher, whose suggestion was submitted to Washington by the Moore Dry Dock Co. of Oakland, Cal. He worked out a simple device to use in welding insulation pins to deckheads, which speeds up tack welding about 400 per cent.

In this innovation, he uses a welding pin extension made of copper piping. The device was pronounced by the Board for Individual Awards to merit widest possible use throughout the shipbuilding industry.

Monty-Ward Gets $64 List Of Questions, Flunks 'Em All

CHICAGO, May 8—Making use of his position as a small stockholder to expose Montgomery-Ward's hostile and old-fashioned attitude toward unions, Frank McCulloch this week submitted a list of 11 questions to the big mail order company.

McCulloch is director of the James Mullenbach Industrial Institute in Chicago.

How much did the company spend in its national advertising campaign against the War Labor Board and in legal steps to resist enforcement?

Is it the purpose of the management to evade and break down the Board's authority and thus end the no-strike, no-lockout agreement?

WHO'S RESPONSIBLE?

Does the company follow the advice of its public relation counsel and attorneys in formulating its labor policy?

Why does the firm persist in its willful misrepresentation of the maintenance of membership clause by calling it a closed shop?

Has any study been made by the company of industrial gains obtainable from a policy of wholehearted cooperation with the union?

Why did the company refuse so long to permit the union to cooperate in the Red Cross drive and in securing contributions to the blood bank?

Is it Montgomery-Ward's policy to encourage other concerns like Armour & Co., to join in its campaign to belittle, misrepresent and destroy union security and the War Labor Board?

WHY FIGHT UNITY?

Does the company intend to prolong its dispute with the union and the government at a time when the interest of the nation and the stockholders would be best served by sincere cooperation to beat the axis?

The rebellious stockholder reported that from the response of company officials he found that the company spent $400,000 on its national advertising campaign against the War Labor Board, and that it is determined to carry on its opposition to the government's authority to arbitrate industrial disputes.

Hillman Pledges Labor Aid To 'Unofficial' 2nd Front

NEW YORK, May 8—Underground forces in France and other occupied countries engaged in sabotaging the Nazi war machine were promised unlimited financial aid from the American labor movement this week by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, in a May Day address short-waved to Europe by the Office of War Information.

Hillman, who is co-chairman of the united CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood drive for $4,000,000 to be raised in Greater New York for domestic and overseas relief, declared that underground European labor has constituted an unofficial Second Front since the so-called armistice of 1940.

In a special broadcast to the democratic trade unions of France, the Amalgamated president said that 12,000,000 organized American workers have promised to keep producing and out-producing the Axis in tanks, planes, ships and guns, and would also render financial aid to the heroic underground abroad "to keep them alive to keep them in fighting shape, so that they may not only help destroy the enemy, but be counted present at the peace-table when the war is over."

NAZIS WIPE OUT UNIONS

"To free, democratic American labor, you are the epitome of the democratic trade-union movement," Hillman told the French workers. "You understood fully the nature of the Nazi beast and understood, long before 1939, that free trade unions and the Nazi slave philosophy could not live together in the same world.

"The free trade unions would be the first victims of the Nazi gangster and you made your preparations to nullify his gains and to rob him of his military victories.

"The epic story of your guerilla war against the Nazi enemy has not yet been written. When it is, it will amaze even your most devoted admirers."

N. Y. Report Hailed as Transit Union Victory

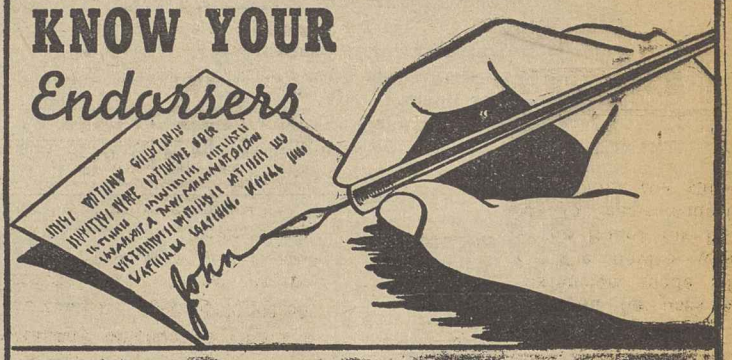
New York, May 8—Recommendations made this week in the report of Mayor F. H. LaGuardia's special committee to study labor relations on the city's transit lines upheld the major demands of the CIO Transport Workers Union, and criticized the Board of Transportation for its "uncooperative attitude."

TWU President Michael J. Quill called the report a victory for the union and its 32,000 members on the city's transit lines, and said that adoption of its recommendations would set up a lasting foundation for stable labor relations.

The report calls for genuine collective bargaining; advisory arbitration in wage disputes; establishment of adequate grievance machinery; uniform and improved working conditions; standardization of working rules and regulations; automatic wage increases and establishment of labor-management committees on an experimental basis.

THE UNITED STATES SECRET SERVICE
TREASURY DEPARTMENT
cautions you to

KNOW YOUR Endorsers



Millions of Government checks are being sent by the Army and Navy to dependents of soldiers and sailors. The Government also sends Social Security and other checks to more millions. When any of these checks are stolen, the people entitled to them may go without food, or fuel, or may suffer other hardships.

The U. S. Secret Service wants your help in fighting the check thief and forger. Here's how you can lend a hand:

IF YOU ARE ASKED TO CASH A GOVERNMENT CHECK

1. INSIST that a person presenting a Government check properly identify himself as the person entitled to that check.

2. BEFORE accepting the check ask yourself this question: IF THIS CHECK IS RETURNED BECAUSE OF A FORGED ENDORSEMENT, CAN I LOCATE THE FORGER AND RECOVER MY LOSS?

3. INSIST that all checks be endorsed in your presence. If a check is already endorsed, ask that it be endorsed again, then compare the writing.

4. REQUIRE all checks to be initialled by the employees who pay out money for them, or who approve such payment.

IF YOU RECEIVE CHECKS FROM THE GOVERNMENT

1. BE SURE some member of the family is at home when checks are due to be delivered.

2. PRINT your name clearly on your mail box. EQUIP your mail box with a lock if you have not done so.

3. CASH your checks in the same place each month. This will make identification easier.

4. DO NOT ENDORSE your check until you are in the presence of the person you will ask to cash it.

For more information on how to guard against forged checks, and how to detect counterfeit money, send ten cents in coin or stamps to the SUPERINTENDENT OF DOCUMENTS, WASHINGTON, D. C., and ask for a copy of the U. S. Secret Service booklet, "KNOW YOUR MONEY."

Robert Reese Clay — Philip Murray

Murray Decorates Wounded NMU Hero

SAN FRANCISCO, May 15—Robert Reese Clay, 24-year-old member of the National Maritime Union, shared the spotlight with CIO President Philip Murray this week at the meeting here to honor the national CIO leader.

President Murray pinned on the smiling young seaman's khaki shirt a gold medal with the NMU emblem and the inscription "For Heroism at Sea."

Young Clay already had been decorated by the Army with the Order of the Purple Heart and had thus become the only merchant seaman to receive a military decoration thus far in the present war.

Clay's story, as told by President Murray in making the presentation, is this:

TORPEDOED BY JAP

A resident of Quemando, Tex., Clay was a pre-medical student for two years before going to sea on a ship which was torpedoed by a Japanese sub near New Guinea.

Although his left leg was shattered by the explosion, Clay made his way into a lifeboat. After he had administered first aid to himself, despite the pain and loss of blood, he made his way from lifeboat to lifeboat, giving medical aid to the other wounded.

The Army credits him with saving the lives of 17 of his shipmates.

Clay is not yet fully recovered from his wound and walks with a limp. But President Murray disclosed that he already has registered with the NMU in San Francisco to go out on another ship.

The CIO chief, visibly moved, told Clay:

"I know of no greater honor that could be conferred on me in this city of San Francisco than this one—the privilege of pinning on your breast this medal for your great service to your country as a member of the National Maritime Union."

CIO Pledges Eisenhower Maximum Output For Invasion of Europe

WASHINGTON, May 15—Five million CIO workers will throw their wholehearted effort behind the drive to build and deliver more than enough tanks, guns, ships and planes to crush Fascist forces forever as the United Nations' armies strike from the west at the European heart of the Axis. That was the pledge unanimously voted this week by the special CIO Executive Board meeting and transmitted by cable to General Dwight Eisenhower, commander of the Allied forces in North Africa. Declaring that "The generalship of the Allied Command and the heroism of the Allied soldiers have once and for all destroyed the myth of the Nazis' military invincibility," the CIO stated:

"We recognize our grave responsibilities. Rather than mere expressions of goodwill, you want more tanks, guns and airplanes. The workers of America accept this challenge. We shall excell all conceivable records in the production of war materials.

"The clearance of the Nazi and Fascist forces from North Africa paves the way for the invasion of Europe and through the combined efforts of the armies of the United Nations to obtain the unconditional surrender of the Axis.

"No sacrifice or effort on our part shall be too great to assist you and our soldiers in this decisive struggle."

Stone Workers Win 4 Elections

Washington, May 15—Four election victories were chalked up this week by the United Stone & Allied Products Workers of America.

At Elberton, Georgia, granite workers chose the union by the following votes: Elberton Granite Industries, 18 for, 1 against; Piedmont Quarries, 22 for, 5 against; American Granite Co., 23 for, 10 against.

At Knoxville, Tennessee, employes of the Alcoa Brick & Tile Co. voted 45 to 0 for the union.

At Bailey, North Carolina, employes of the Southern Aggregates Corp. have been organized and chartered, and a victorious election is expected shortly.

Strip Byrnes' Power To 'Censor' Wage Hikes—CIO

The CIO Executive Board this week urged that Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes be stripped of power to "censor" wage increases recommended by the Nat'l. War Labor Board to eliminate gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war. Such increases now must have his approval if they boost prices or production costs.

Hail Murray's Leadership

Cleveland, May 15—In two sharply contrasting resolutions, the CIO special Executive Board meeting on its last day praised CIO President Philip Murray for "the inspiring leadership" shown by him in uniting labor behind President Roosevelt in the war against Hitler, and strongly condemned John L. Lewis for his attacks on President Roosevelt and his attempt to split the labor movement.

In the resolution praising Murray, the Board expressed "its deep appreciation for his wise guidance and courageous leadership" and pledged to move ahead rapidly on the program Murray set at the Board meeting.

Under Murray's leadership, the resolution said, "the CIO has maintained a constant and forthright policy which has created the basis for unity among the people behind the Commander-in-Chief."

Senate Report Urges:

Wipe Out War Agency Chaos With Total Mobilization

WASHINGTON, May 15—Sharp criticism of crippling chaos among U. S. war agencies and of failure of the government to inaugurate an over-all plan for total war mobilization was contained in a report issued this week by a sub-committee on war mobilization of the U. S. Senate.

The sub-committee recommended that a War Mobilization Board be set up immediately to plan a unified program dealing with production, manpower, economic stabilization and other related problems, which the sub-committee declared are in "a state of crisis."

Describing the War Manpower Commission and the War Production Board as of "service station" status, the sub-committee, headed by Senator Harley M. Kilgore, declared that "in no phase of the war production program does centralized control exist at the present time."

The report lashed out at War Labor Board low wage decisions in the packing and West Coast air frame cases, declaring that they were not considered on the basis of complex manpower and production policies.

"If wages and prices had been administered as production and manpower instruments, stabilization of both the wage and price structure by industry-wide agreements, with incentive payments for increased production, would have become the basis for policy at an early stage," the report charged.

The sub-committee urged adoption of S 607, which would create an Office of War Mobilization. Hearings on this bill are scheduled next week, with President R. J. Thomas and Secretary-Treasurer George Addes of the United Auto Workers Union slated to testify. CIO President Philip Murray is scheduled to appear later.

Textile Membership Hits 400,000 Mark, Rieve Tells Convention

NEW YORK, May 15—Big things are happening in the textile centers of the country in these days of war. Changes are going on that are revolutionizing the industry and the attitudes of the million and a quarter workers in it.

Many of the new wartime problems, mixed with old problems that have long bothered the workers in this low-paid, sweated industry were critically examined at the third biennial convention of the Textile Workers Union of America, one of CIO's biggest unions, which met here this week.

400,000 MEMBERS

More than a thousand delegates representing about 400,000 organized workers in cotton, rayon, woolen and worsted plants in 33 states, gathered to discuss their problems and to hear their union leaders and prominent government officials speak.

In the keynote convention address, Emil Rieve, general president of the union, who was later re-elected to his fourth term, hailed gains made by TWU during the past two years. Rieve said that wages in northern cotton mills had been increased by 17½ cents an hour, and in southern mills by 15 cents.

Warning against overconfidence, Rieve pointed out that while 400,000 workers were now under union contract, this was only one-third of the total number in the industry. "None of us should have any real feeling of security," he said, "until the overwhelming majority of textile workers are brought into the union."

50,000 IN ARMED FORCES

The position taken by the TWU on foreign policy and national wartime problems and the vigorous support of the union for the war effort were outlined in Rieve's speech. More than 50,000 members, he said, were in the armed services today.

Discussing the War Labor Board and its policies, Rieve said that the union's charge was "that the powers of the board have been taken from it and that an effort is being made to destroy its independence by regulations so restrictive that the board cannot function.

"If labor is to withdraw from the War Labor Board, it will not be because the board is anti-labor, but rather because the functions of the board have already been destroyed by others," he said.

HIT LITTLE STEEL FORMULA

Later the convention, after long and lively discussion from the floor, passed a resolution condemning the WLB's Little Steel formula as "oppressive, unrealistic and dangerous" and demanding that its integrity and full authority be restored.

Attacking the hold-the-line executive order of April 8 as wage freezing "allegedly based upon the idea that prices are being controlled, and that the government must 'hold the line' on both wages and prices to prevent inflation," Rieve said that "to the workers of this nation it is evident that the only part of this line which is being held is that on wages."

BITTER OPPOSITION

In a resolution expressing "vigorous and bitter opposition" to the manpower directive of April 18, the convention charged that the order "violates the democratic principles of free labor and free choice, freezes workers on low-paying jobs and imposes the very totalitarian controls against which textile workers in the armed forces are fighting."

Executive Vice President George Baldanzi, speaking on the resolution, charged that the manpower directive "covers up mismanagement." He said the order was "the product of men who think of workers as movable objects to be torn, uprooted, shifted and frozen in low paying jobs."

William Pollock, general secretary-treasurer, speaking in support of the resolution condemned the order as "unintelligent" and a "national scandal" and said that it had resulted in "confusion and chaos among the workers."

Both Baldanzi and Pollock were re-elected to office at the Thursday session.

ASK LABOR REPRESENTATION

In his speech to the delegates on the third day of the convention, James B. Carey, national CIO secretary, also attacked the freezing of labor while profits and prices were permitted to soar. Asserting that a poor job was done on manpower, price control, and use of national resources for war, Carey declared:

"We think it is high time that labor made its demands clear and said, 'we want labor to conduct the affairs of manpower. We want labor to serve, to administer the affairs of at least the Department of Labor. We want organized labor represented on the Cabinet of the President."

Van A. Bittner, assistant to President Philip Murray of the United Steelworkers of America; President Sidney Hillman and Jacob Potofsky, secretary-treasurer, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, were among the leaders of other CIO unions who addressed the TWU convention.

URGE LABOR UNITY

A resolution on international labor unity, passed early in the convention, urged "the CIO to continue its efforts to establish international labor cooperation with direct participation by the British, Soviet Union, AFL, CIO and railway labor unions, and the unions of the other United Nations, including our Latin-American allies."

A resolution in support of the war effort called upon every member of the union "to redouble his efforts to hasten the day of unconditional surrender by selfless and unquestioning devotion to his own personal role in the war effort."

Mark Your Calendar For May 24!

WASHINGTON, May 15—Take a big black pencil and circle Monday, May 24, on your calendar—it's a darned important date for democracy!

On that day members of the House of Representatives will have the privilege of voting for repeal of the polltax, which keeps people like Dies and Smith and Cox and Connally safe from the wrath of thousands who would like to kick them out of office.

CIO's position is for repeal, against all amendments. Write, wire or telephone your Congressman on or before May 24, to tell him to vote the right way.

War Output Slowed, UAW Charges; Asks Nelson—Why?

WASHINGTON, May 15—United States war output has shifted back to second gear despite the urgent need for tanks and planes and guns and ships for the coming invasion of Fascist Europe. That was the charge made this week by President R. J. Thomas of the United Auto Workers Union in a letter of inquiry directed to War Production Chairman Donald Nelson and Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of supply.

Warning against business-as-usual practices of corporations more interested in profits than in victory, Thomas said that war workers are asking why:

1. The Army supply program for 1943 has been cut from 62 billion to 31 billion dollars.

2. The aircraft production program has been slashed to less than 100,000 planes instead of the 125,000 originally called for by President Roosevelt.

3. Supplies of steel for civilian purposes have been substantially increased.

4. Proposals have been made from industry and government figures for reconversion of some production facilities to civilian output.

Declaring that the situation "convinces me more and more that our war production has hit a ceiling of business as usual practices," Thomas said:

"I cannot see how these facts can be explained on the basis either of material shortages or of changed strategic requirements. Material shortages would call for further curtailment of civilian production rather than increases.

"A shipping shortage does undoubtedly exist in relation to the needs of the United Nations to swing maximum weight against the Axis enemy in the immediate future. How can such a shortage justify the use of steel in stoves, refrigerators or locomotives than ships and escort vessels?

"Why have the War Shipping Administration and the Maritime Commission failed to act on CIO proposals for measures to increase effective shipping space by hundreds of thousands of tons?"

CIO'ers Talk Turkey With Roosevelt, Tell Him People Want Price Cuts

WASHINGTON, May 15—This was delegations week in the Capital, with rank and file CIO members coming in to tell Congress and the administration what the workers feel about "hold-the-line" and what they want done to roll back living costs, end wage inequities and push mobilization for total war.

Two large delegations, from New York and New Jersey, came in during the week, and another, made up of UAW members from Indiana, Illinois and other Mid-West areas was scheduled for next week.

The New York delegation, organized by the city CIO council and led by Michael Quill and Saul Mills, council secretary, saw President Roosevelt, Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, Food Administrator Chester Davis, OPA chief Prentiss Brown, and members of the War Labor Board.

The Jersey group, chiefly from the northern section, was led by State President Irving Abramson, UE Vice-President James McLeish, and Regional Director Ewald Sandner. The Jersey people saw Davis, head of the WLB; Galbraith, assistant to Brown at OPA; and Pritchard, assistant to Byrnes.

In seeing the President, the New York group presented a statement pledging full support to the price rollback drive and to the plan to subsidize food production for greater output, and renewed the CIO no-strike pledge given at the time of Pearl Harbor by President Murray.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The Connally bill, (S 796), passed last week in the Senate, went through to the House without hearings, without testimony and without a chance for labor to tell what the bill meant.

The bill is now the Smith-Connally bill, with all the union busting features that Howard Smith, polltaxer and labor hater from Virginia, thought up when he tried unsuccessfully to pass the Smith bill two years ago.

At the time of writing, the Smith-Connally bill was headed for a quick House vote. If it passes, President Roosevelt should be strongly urged to veto it.

Senate action on the 1943 tax bill came in the form of the Ruml tax grab plan (see page 6), which passed and now is headed for the House. Flood your Representatives with protests this week.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Smith-Connally (S. 796)	Knocks out NLRA, War Labor Board, slashes union rights.	Out of House Committee, headed for floor and vote.	If passed, appeal to President for a veto.
1943 tax bill.	Favors rich by tax forgiveness for them on same basis as for poor.	Senate passed Ruml tax grab plan, bill goes to House, paves way for sales tax.	Wire your Representatives, demand vote against Ruml, for sound pay-as-you-go.
McKellar (S. 575)	Hamstrings U. S. war agencies by putting employes under pork barrel patronage.	Out of Senate Judiciary Committee, ready for floor vote.	Write your two Senators, urge defeat in interest of war efficiency.
Smith (HR. 1214)	Prohibits political activities of unions.	In House Judiciary Committee, hearings under polltaxer Sam Hobbs.	Wire your Representative against.

Note: The polltax repeal Discharge Petition (DP 3) has all 218 signatures, and the bill comes up May 24. WIRE your Representative, urge him to be on the floor that day, to vote against any and all amendments, vote for the bill. Start writing your two Senators for early Senate passage.

Strip Byrnes' Power to 'Censor' Wage Hikes—CIO

CLEVELAND, May 15—The CIO Executive Board this week urged that Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes be stripped of the power to "censor" wage increases recommended by the Nat'l. War Labor Board to eliminate gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

The CIO pointed out that although the recent Byrnes order liberalizing the power of the WLB recognizes the basic need of making wage adjustments, it still falls short of the authority needed to eliminate inequalities that hamper war production.

Main point of Byrnes' order was that the WLB would have final authority to make wage adjustments "to correct gross inequities" and "to aid in the prosecution of the war"—but only if such adjustments do not increase prices or increase production costs. Any such increases would have to be approved finally by Byrnes.

The Byrnes order also reaffirmed the Little Steel formula for granting wage increases—to take up slack in real income caused by a 15 per cent rise in the cost of living between January 1, 1941 and May 1, 1942.

Warning that under the Byrnes order it would be impossible to eliminate many wage inequalities, the CIO called upon President Roosevelt to extend to the WLB "the appropriate, final authority without the hampering interference from Mr. Byrnes, to make wage adjustments necessary to eliminate gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war."

The CIO said that only in this way will the Board be able to dispose of injustices which now prevail and which hamper the war effort.

The CIO warned also that prices must be rolled back to September, 1942 levels, if wage stabilization is to work.

Little Bosses Out

Washington, May 15—Supervisory employes are not appropriate units for collective bargaining, the National Labor Relations Board ruled this week in a case involving the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers and the Maryland Drydock Co., Baltimore. The Board's decision overruled an earlier opinion decided in the Union Collieries case on June 15, 1942.

Halt Smith-Connally Union Wrecking Bill, CIO Asks Congress

CLEVELAND, May 13—In a dramatic plea to Congress to brush aside its "few irresponsible Congressmen who are hell-bent on destroying labor unions" and on smashing war workers' and soldiers' morale, the CIO, through President Murray and the executive officers, today wired all House Members and Senators urging defeat of the Smith-Connally bill, which blitzed through the Senate last week.

"This proposed measure, conceived by a few irresponsible Congressmen who are hell-bent on destroying labor unions, would be a stab in the back of labor which is sparing no effort and making heroic sacrifices at home in the interest of winning the war," the wire said.

"As such, the measure would destroy the morale of our soldiers on the battlefronts who, either as members of organized labor or whose fathers and brothers are in the ranks of organized labor, must resent this Fascist strike at home.

"In its diabolical intent to destroy labor unions it must be interpreted as an initial step toward actually weakening the forces which are united behind our Commander-in-Chief in his demand for unconditional surrender of the Axis."

TURNABOUT URGED

The CIO wire called on Congress to turn away from Fascist-minded union smashing dreams to constructive work, urging it to take up and pass "measures to stabilize our domestic economy by effective control of prices which must be rolled back to September 15, 1942 in accordance with outstanding law," and by adopting a win-the-war tax program.

Added to the anti-union, anti-War Labor Board features of the Connally bill in the House have been all the worst morale-smashing angles of the Smith bill, passed first in the House in December, 1941, and now revived in the midst of the flood of union-hatred stirred up by John L. Lewis.

Here are some of things the Smith-Connally bill would do to the war workers and their unions:

1. Requires a so-called "cooling-off" period totalling 90 days before a strike can be called.

2. Includes all kinds of drastic criminal penalties against any violations of the bill, plus civil damage suits against unions for "violence," no matter by whom provoked. Limits pickets to local union members involved in the dispute.

3. Requires unions to register, submit all their books and records to any snooper who wants to look at them.

4. Wipes out the protection of the anti-Injunction Act and deprives unions violating the bill of Wagner Act protection; throws War Labor Board orders into endless court delay.

The Smith-Connally bill was rushed through to the House floor without open hearings of any kind, despite appeals from the CIO to be allowed to testify. The Senate also denied any opportunity for labor to be heard on a bill that affects every war worker and his union.

In appealing for open hearings, CIO Legislative Representative Nathan Cowan pointed out to House Military Committee Chairman Andrew J. May (D., Ky.) that:

"We must take issue with your recent statement that public hearings on the bill are not necessary. The hearings held in recent weeks by your committee on manpower problems gave no opportunity for considering the grave issues presented by this bill. The bill's destructive effect on the War Labor Board is an entirely new factor injected for the first time in the debate on the floor of the House."

Cowan also described the Connally bill as "repressive legislation, carelessly written and hastily passed," in charging that the bill was written on the Senate floor, "without any committee hearings or deliberations of its effect on labor relations, on morale and on war production."

CIO Urges:

Gear Home Front Economy to All-Out Drive for Victory

CLEVELAND, May 15—Reaffirming the complete support of five million war workers and their families to the "unconditional surrender" program of President Roosevelt, the special CIO Executive Board meeting today worked out a major statement of objectives "to meet the realistic needs of our nation in conducting an effective offensive on our domestic front." The statement was unanimously adopted.

The win-the-war basis of the CIO's policy was clearly stated in the preamble to the statement presented to the Board by President Philip Murray, which said:

"Every single request or proposal made by the CIO during this present war is based on the grueling test whether it will serve to support our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, and aid the nation in our war of survival.

"At the same time, every weakness or deficiency which we expose on the part of government or any other group in the nation—we do so with the same objective in mind."

The CIO called for retention by the Nat'l. War Labor Board of all present powers, and further urged President Roosevelt to give the WLB final authority to make wage adjustments necessary to eliminate gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war—thus by-passing Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes, who now has the power to wipe out any wage adjustments the WLB might make.

At the meeting, the CIO sent greetings to Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, congratulating him and other allied leaders on the smashing victory in North Africa and hailing it as a prelude to the invasion of Axis-held Europe.

MINE POLICY

The Board also took time to enunciate CIO policy on the coal miners' situation, pointing out that the miners have "a case based on equity and justice" and citing the justified demands the miners have in their grievances with the employers.

In supporting the miners' grievances, the CIO urged the War Labor Board to give the UMW "an equitable wage adjustment," and at the same time condemned "strikes when our country is at war" and which also "furnish aid and comfort to all of labor's enemies in and out of Congress and endanger the very life of labor organization through vicious anti-labor legislation."

Acting on the most immediate threat to labor unions and to the whole problem of war workers' morale and productive efficiency, the Board sent a wire to all Congressmen and Senators demanding defeat of the Smith-Connally bill and all anti-union, anti-war production legislation.

WIN-WAR PROGRAM

In stating the CIO's over-all win-the-war program, the Board put out a six-point program covering the basic war issues now facing the U. S. labor movement and all Americans interested in victory over the Axis. The program covered:

1. A demand for defeat of the Smith-Connally bill and all measures aimed at "sabotaging the morale and efficiency of our soldiers of production." This was coupled with a re-affirmation of CIO's Pearl Harbor pledge of "no strikes, stoppages or interruptions of production."

2. Acceptance of the wage stabilization program, with a demand for the clearing up of wage inequities by the War Labor Board and other stabilization agencies.

3. A demand for a real rollback of cost of living to September 15, 1942 levels, with support for the subsidy program to bring about the rollback and assure top food production. At the same time, the CIO voiced its demand for effective enforcement of price control, with vigorous prosecution of profiteering violators and the firm establishment of grade labeling of canned goods to halt quality chiseling on food.

4. A sharp insistence on limiting incomes to $25,000 a year net ($67,000 a year before all taxes) to insure that "no individual should be permitted to build up large and extortionate personal incomes."

5. A strong plea for a real win-the-war tax program, calling on Congress to avoid the disgrace of the Ruml tax grab plan and to pass a tax bill based on ability to pay and on the needs of the war workers.

6. A program for full use of all available U. S. manpower in the victory drive, avoiding the manpower freeze as "a bankruptcy of thought on the part of the Manpower Commission" and substituting real over-all planning.

In presenting the CIO plan for strengthening the home front for total war on the offensive fighting fronts, the Board said:

COMPLETE SUPPORT

"The program herein affirmed by the CIO is designed to furnish complete support to the objectives of our Commander-In-Chief and thereby meet the realistic needs of our nation in conducting an effective offensive on our domestic front. As such, it reflects the desires of all the American people."

Declaring it is necessary to act immediately on this program, President Murray said that the CIO will set up special committees of housewives, Auxiliary groups, and citizens from all communities where the CIO is organized, to push for the program's adoption.

39% Faster Gain in CIO Membership!

CLEVELAND, May 15—Under the win-the-war leadership of President Philip Murray, the CIO in the first four months of this year has grown in membership 39.3 per cent more than it did during the first four months of 1942, it was announced this week at the special CIO Executive Board meeting.

President Murray reported that the CIO has 878,000 members in the armed forces—all of them in good standing.

Home Front Offensive

The CIO is ready to back up the coming offensive in Europe with a victory drive of its own on the home front.

That is the meaning of the resolutions adopted at the special Executive Board meeting in Cleveland.

Every sentence breathes the spirit of united action behind our Commander-in-Chief to strengthen the home front for all-out war effort.

In this spirit, the CIO renews its unconditional no-strike pledge, calling on Congress to end its disruptive attacks on labor and to defeat the vicious Connally-Smith legislation.

The policy on wages and prices is actuated by the same motive. It demands an adjustment that will assure maximum productive efficiency and prevent inflation.

For this purpose, the CIO asks enlarged powers for the War Labor Board, to eliminate wage inequalities and other injustices hampering production.

At the same time, it points out that wage stabilization cannot work unless living costs are cut to the level when wages were pegged.

In order to roll back prices, subsidies are necessary, and incentive payments to farmers to increase food production, the CIO notes. It also calls for drastic measures to enforce price ceilings and to end black markets, and for rationing of all necessities.

To spread the war's burdens more equally and stop inflation, the CIO demands tax legislation that will eliminate war profiteering, limit individual net incomes to $25,000 a year, let taxpayers pay as they go but dump the Ruml grab-plan, and leave low-income groups with enough to buy their fair share of living necessities.

Labor must leave no stone unturned to impress on Congress and the administration the vital importance of making this victory program effective.

Ban On Free Speech

The National Association of Broadcasters has recently adopted a new code ruling that could be used to bar all labor radio programs.

This association of the big business interests that control the air has long arrogated to itself the authority to say how much free radio speech the American people may enjoy.

If you have soap, cereal or candy-bars to sell, or other profit-making in mind, the association lets you buy all the time you like; and the public can't get entertainment or news without being plagued with unwanted commercial solicitations.

But labor organizations, representing millions of American workers, have long been told by our self-appointed radio dictators that they can't buy time to bring their vitally important message to the ears of the public.

Under the extra-legal code of the NAB, labor programs are classified as "controversial"—unlike discourses on the doubtful merits of Crunchy-Crunch, or the personal opinions of a business-hired news commentator.

So the NAB code has decreed that labor organizations may be "given" but not sold radio time. This seriously limits the amount of time they may have and places them at the mercy of frequently biased station owners.

The CIO has constantly challenged the right of our radio dictators to restrict labor's free speech in this fashion.

The NAB has not only turned a deaf ear to this protest, but at its recent convention it arrogantly decided to impose still further and more dangerous restrictions.

A new paragraph has been added to the NAB code decreeing that "time should be neither given nor sold" for programs involving "solicitations of memberships in organizations, except where such memberships are incidental to the rendering of commercial services such as an insurance plan either in respect to casualty to life or property, or for membership in the American Red Cross or like organizations engaged in charitable work."

The NAB code might now be applied to ban almost any kind of union radio program, since any fair exposition of labor's constructive activities should logically result in increased membership.

Radio broadcasting is supposed to be operated in the public interest. How much longer can we tolerate such denials of free speech by business dictators, who want to control the air for their private interest and without regard to the rights of America's working population?

That is a question which the CIO will address to the Federal Communications Commission and, if necessary, to Congress.

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

IT IS STRANGE to have to warn against defeatism at a time when we are celebrating the great victory of North Africa.

No good American would listen for a second to any Nazi agent who said we won't or can't win this war. But too many are listening to more subtle defeatist propaganda that detracts from all-out effort for early and total victory.

The capture of Tunis and Bizerte is but a prelude to the greatest test the United Nations have yet faced.

To meet this test, there must be the closest unity between the United Nations.

Yet Goebbels has recently had cause to chuckle over the success of his anti-Soviet propaganda in breaching this unity—and such defeatist bait has found swallowers even in the United States.

To meet the coming test, there must be the closest national unity in America behind our Commander-in-Chief, and total mobilization of all our energies and resources.

Yet all around us we see knowing or unknowing defeatists creating disunity, interfering with war production, grabbing for selfish special privilege and sabotaging the fight against inflation.

Some of the worst defeatists of this type are in the federal Congress. The war against labor launched by the Connally bill, and the orgy of union-busting effort in the House, are just what Doctor Goebbels ordered.

So too is the shameless Ruml grab for windfalls for the rich, to be paid for by the poor, when $16 billion more has to be raised in taxes for victory.

So too is the constant administration-baiting in Congress, and the cynical appeasement of the Wall Street "farm bloc" and other profiteers, regardless of inflationary effects.

Defeatist moods on the anti-inflation front have also been fed by the supineness of government officials, who have allowed prices to get out of hand, and by the deliberate propaganda of those who hope to fish in muddied waters.

Bedfellows of John L. Lewis in the dormitory of shoulder-shruggers who say inflation can't be stopped, and act accordingly, are many profiteering business groups. Their dope-sheets cast constant doubt on the sincerity of all anti-inflation measures.

Labor is not immune to the defeatist propaganda of those who seek to exploit its genuine grievances.

Daily insulted by Rickenbacker and his ilk, under constant attack in a Congress that shows gross favortism to the rich, the workers find their wages tightly pegged, while living costs have risen higher and higher.

Two courses are pointed out to them.

There is the road offered by leaders of the Lewis persuasion, who sneer at all efforts to stop inflation, who seek to undermine Roosevelt's war leadership, who would scrap the War Labor Board and break labor's no-strike pledge, and who say that labor can only get justice by irresponsible hell-raising.

This is the road of disunity, disruption and defeatism. Labor would be the first to suffer from the national calamity to which it leads.

The other course is that pointed out by the CIO, under the win-the-war leadership of Philip Murray.

This calls for unfaltering observance of the no-strike pledge, for all-out war effort, for unity of labor in all the United Nations, and for strengthening the hand of our Commander-in-Chief in carrying out a real victory program.

It calls for an aggressive fight against inflation, by constant pressure for real price control and an effective roll-back of living costs; for restoring the War Labor Board's power to remedy gross wage inequalities; and for a fair and stable adjustment between wages and cost of living.

The CIO course calls for a tremendous mobilization of labor and public opinion to end all administrative appeasement policies, and to jolt Congress into squelching its labor-baiters and seekers of special privilege, and setting victory first.

The road which the CIO points out is not an easy one. It calls for self-control, wide vision and unremitting effort.

But the road to Tunis and Bizerte was not an easy one, and still less is the road to Berlin.

Labor will avoid the defeatist detour and follow the CIO road. For this is the only road that will bring real results, and it is the only road to victory.

CIO Urges:

Gear Home Front Economy To All-Out Victory Drive!

Complete support of 5,000,000 CIO members and their families for the "unconditional surrender" policy of President Roosevelt was reaffirmed this week by the CIO Executive Board, in a unanimous statement of policy which urged that the nation's home front economy be geared 100 per cent to the fighting front victory drive so that the armed forces can be certain of all-out production of the guns, tanks, planes and ships needed to crush the Fascist Axis. The full statement follows:

Every single request or proposal made by the CIO during this present war is based upon the grueling test whether it will serve to support our Commander-in-Chief Franklin D. Roosevelt and aid the nation in our war of survival. At the same time every weakness or deficiency which we expose on the part of government or any other group in our nation—we do so with the same objective in mind.

As our nation girds itself for the all-important struggles which lie ahead to smash our Axis enemies and to extract the unconditional surrender demanded by our Commander-in-Chief, the sacrifices which we must endure become increasingly severe.

In the face of this problem, it is the task of organized labor—more than any other group—to make certain that no individual, adverse or indifferent to the outcome of our struggle, be permitted to exploit the inherent difficulties accompanying a war as to confuse or cause disunity among the people of the nation.

The CIO earnestly believes that its outstanding policies, which are hereby reaffirmed, covering the economic issues before the nation, are directed toward lending complete support to the program of our President and Commander-in-Chief and therefore must be effectuated in the interest of prosecuting the war to an early victorious conclusion.

No Strikes for Duration

1. THE CIO HAS GIVEN ITS PLEDGE THAT FOR THE DURATION OF OF THE WAR THERE SHALL BE NO STRIKES, STOPPAGES OR ANY OTHER INTERRUPTIONS OF PRODUCTION. THIS PLEDGE HAS BEEN GIVEN AND WILL BE FAITHFULLY MAINTAINED, NOT BECAUSE OF ANY FEAR OF PENALTIES, BUT BECAUSE THE WORKERS ARE DETERMINED IN THIS LIFE AND DEATH STRUGGLE THAT THEY SHALL DO ALL WITHIN THEIR POWER TO INSURE THE MAXIMUM PRODUCTION OF MUNITIONS OF WAR TO SPEED US ONWARD TOWARD VICTORY.

In the face of this pledge, predicated upon the wholesome and fervent desire of labor to maintain maximum production, anti-labor legislation such as the Connally Bill and the Smith Amendments added by the House Military Affairs Committee are insulting and provocative with the sole result of sabotaging the morale and efficiency of our soldiers of production.

The CIO calls upon the American people to defeat this legislation by protesting against the acts of a few irresponsible Congressmen who in this moment of grave peril to our country continue in their mad desire to destroy labor unions rather than defeat Hitler.

Congress should be called upon to cease their attacks against organized labor who are giving their complete and wholehearted support to the war effort and instead to address their attention toward fulfilling their obligations to the nation in carrying through their commitment contained in the law of October 2, 1942, to effectuate a stabilization of our domestic economy.

The CIO states very simply that for the duration of the war there shall be no strikes, stoppages or interruptions of production. That is our pledge to our Commander-in-Chief, to the men and women in the armed forces and to the people of the entire country.

WLB Needs More Authority

2. THE CIO HAS ACCEPTED, AS A PART OF THE INDIVISIBLE NATIONAL ECONOMIC STABILIZATION PROGRAM, THE STABILIZATION OF WAGES. IN THE RECENT EXECUTIVE ORDER 9328 THERE IS A VERY SERIOUS OMISSION IN THAT THE NATIONAL WAR LABOR BOARD WAS DEPRIVED OF ITS AUTHORITY TO MAKE WAGE ADJUSTMENTS NECESSARY TO ELIMINATE GROSS INEQUITIES OR TO AID IN THE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR.

The absence of this authority freezes the chaotic conditions prevailing in industry with workers doing the same type of work but receiving different pay. This condition serves no useful purpose and actually hampers the war effort.

The CIO has vigorously fought for an improvement in this situation—not by way of strikes or stoppages—but by the demonstration to the Administration of the merits of our case. This policy has been vindicated by Mr. Byrnes' recent interpretation which recognizes the basic need of making wage adjustments to meet inequalities and to aid in the prosecution of the war.

However, the restrictions imposed upon the Board thereunder do not fully effectuate this objective.

Under the Interpretation, present going rates for any occupation within any labor market area will not be subject to change regardless of the inequalities which may thereby prevail.

Thus discrimination will still continue in that workers of the same company or within the same industry doing substantially the same kind of work, will because of many reasons, such as race, sex or employer discrimination, be paid different wages.

The CIO therefore calls upon President Roosevelt to extend to the National War Labor Board the appropriate final authority without hampering interference from Mr. Byrnes, the Economic Stabilization Director, to make wage adjustments necessary to eliminate gross inequities or to aid in the effective prosecution of the war.

The authority which the Board now has to approve wage adjustments "for promotions, reclassifications, merit increases, incentive wages or the like" must, of course, be retained.

Only in this manner will the Board be able to dispose of injustices which now prevail and establish a real stabilization of wages.

The National War Labor Board has firmly proven its importance in the effective prosecution of the war. It is is because of our very appreciation of the remarkable contribution which has been made by the Board, that we are determined that the Board's powers be enlarged to meet the realistic problems which confront both management and labor.

Must Roll Back Prices, Cut Profits

3. THE INDIVIDUAL NATIONAL ECONOMIC STABILIZATION POLICY ENUNCIATED BY PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT AND SUPPORTED BY THE CIO EMBRACES ALONG WITH THE STABILIZATION OF WAGES — THE NECESSARY STABILIZATION OF PRICES AS OF SEPTEMBER 15, 1942, THE LIMITATION OF SALARIES AND LARGE INCOMES AND THE ELIMINATION OF WAR PROFITS SUCKED FROM THE BLOOD AND SACRIFICES OF OUR WAR WORKERS AND OUR SOLDIERS ON THE BATTLEFIELDS.

It must be recognized that wage stabilization cannot work unless prices are rolled back to the date upon which wage stabilization has been made effective.

Economic Stabilization Director Byrnes, the OPA and Congress have not discharged their responsibility regarding the stabilization of prices as of September 15, 1942.

Prices must be rolled back to this level. This is the mandate of the law of October, 1942, and of the President's recent Executive Order which was a distinct recognition of the correctness of the CIO policy.

This task can be accomplished only through the aid of subsidies which therefore must be made available to fulfill the commitment which has been given to the nation. Those who oppose subsidies are opposing the roll back and actually promoting inflation.

Encouragement should also be given to farmers for a greater production of food through incentive payment and subsidies and extended farm credits to small farm producers.

The American people will not tolerate continued pitiful excuses or further delay in the accomplishment of this objective. All prices must be rolled back to the September 15, 1942, level.

The OPA has taken the initial step, as demanded by the CIO, to roll back prices, but it is not sufficient to limit this task to a few prices or to a small decrease.

Further, there must be effective enforcement of price ceilings and violators ruthlessly prosecuted. This will require the application of grade labeling and the immediate imposition of dollars and cents retail prices.

There must also be an effective system of comprehensive rationing of all necessities. All the people must be afforded an opportunity to assist in such enforcement.

Black markets must be eliminated. Expressions of pious hopes must become a thing of the past and effective and quick enforcement action must become the order of the day.

Urge $25,000 Income Limit

4. WITH WAGES AND PRICES TO BE STABILIZED THERE CAN NO LONGER BE ANY EXCUSE FOR PERMITTING CORPORATE EXECUTIVES TO EXTRACT HIGH SALARIES OR RETAIN LARGE INCOMES. THE CIO CALLS UPON CONGRESS TO RESCIND ITS RECENT ACTION AND IMPOSE A LIMITATION ON THE NET ANNUAL INCOME, AFTER TAXES, OF ALL PERSONS, TO $25,000.

This demand should not be construed as an idle gesture. The CIO reflects the feelings and thoughts of all Americans and particularly of those fighting on the war fronts that while we are engaged in this bitter struggle, with our sons and brothers dying on the battlefields, no individual should be permitted to build up large and extortionate personal incomes.

Equitable Tax Program

5. THE INDIVISIBLE NATIONAL ECONOMIC STABILIZATION POLICY OF PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT ALSO CALLS FOR EQUITABLE AND JUST TAX MEASURES. WHATEVER MONIES THE GOVERNMENT REQUIRES FROM TAXES TO MEET THE FINANCIAL NEEDS OF OUR NATION MUST BE RAISED BUT THE BURDEN MUST BE BORNE ON THE BASIS OF ABILITY TO PAY AND ALSO WITH THE FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLE IN MIND THAT THE WORKERS AND LOW INCOME GROUPS MUST BE LEFT WITH SUFFICIENT FUNDS TO ENABLE THEM TO PURCHASE THEIR FAIR SHARE OF AVAILABLE CONSUMER GOODS AND MEET THEIR BASIC OBLIGATIONS.

No Congressman can justify support for the Ruml Plan which provides a windfall for high income groups by way of a complete forgiveness of their 1942 tax obligations. Whatever amount is thus forgiven will ultimately have to be paid through increased taxes by low income groups.

Our tax legislation should forgive the low income citizens of their 1942 taxes thereby permitting them to be placed on a current pay-as-you-go basis but high income groups should be compelled to meet their 1942 tax obligations. The Ruml Plan must therefore be defeated.

Further, the Roman Holiday for corporations must cease. How can Congress justify to themselves or to the nation the unconscionable war and blood profits of corporations in the face of wage stabilization for those who toil in the war plants and the sacrifices being made by our fellow Americans in the armed forces.

War profits above the 1939 peace time level must be completely eliminated. Other special financial privileges must come to an end.

Our tax legislation should be consistent with the objective pronounced by the President of the United States, namely based upon equity and justice instead of continued privileges to a few.

Total National Mobilization

6. THE MAXIMUM UTILIZATION OF AVAILABLE MANPOWER IS EARNESTLY DESIRED BY THE CIO BUT THIS PROBLEM CAN BE SOLVED NOT IN THE ABSTRACT BUT ONLY AS ONE PHASE OF THE ENTIRE PATTERN CALLING FOR TOTAL NATIONAL MOBILIZATION. THE CIO HAS SOUGHT—UNFORTUNATELY TO DATE UNSUCCESSFULLY—TO IMPRESS THE EXECUTIVE OFFICIALS AND CONGRESS THAT TOTAL MOBILIZATION COULD BE ATTAINED ONLY THROUGH A CENTRALIZED CIVILIAN ADMINISTRATION OF OUR ECONOMIC, MANPOWER AND PRODUCTION PROBLEMS, AS PROVIDED IN THE PEPPER, KILGORE, TOLAN BILLS PENDING IN CONGRESS.

The CIO has cooperated with the War Manpower Commission and has endeavored through joint labor-management committees to effectuate a fuller utilization of available manpower.

Regional manpower stabilization agreements have thereby been placed in operation in many of the war production centers.

The recent directive of Mr. McNutt, Chairman, War Manpower Commission, forbidding workers to leave one essential job for another, though their present jobs pay sub-standard wages, reflects a bankruptcy of thought and program on the part of the War Manpower Commission.

This directive did not have the objective underlying the regional manpower stabilization agreements of how best to use available manpower for maximum production.

To the contrary, its sole interest was to freeze workers to their jobs regardless how chaotic a situation may thereby be frozen with all the prevailing inequities and injustices.

The CIO hereby demands that the War Manpower Commission substitute for its recent directive the program of the regional manpower stabilization agreements to be consummated through the democratic machinery of joint labor-management committees and a greater participation for labor representatives throughout the administrative machinery of the War Manpower Commission.

Conclusion

The program herein affirmed by the CIO is one designed to furnish complete support to the objectives of our Commander-in-Chief and thereby meet the realistic needs of our nation in conducting an effective offensive on our domestic front. As such it reflects the desires of all the American people.

It shall be the primary task of all our affiliated unions and our membership to mobilize the support of the entire nation behind President Roosevelt and to have the decision of the people to obtain the accomplishment of this program conveyed directly to our representatives in Congress; James F. Byrnes, Economic Stabilization Director; Prentiss Brown, Administrator, OPA; Chester Davis, Food Administrator; William Davis, Chairman of the National War Labor Board; Henry Morgenthau, Secretary of Treasury; Paul V. McNutt, Chairman of War Manpower Commission, and to the President of the United States.

Ruml Grab Plan Gets By Senate

WASHINGTON, May 15—Anti-victory forces in the Senate that pushed over the Connally wreck-the-unions bill this week forced through the Ruml grab plan, which will favor the rich by forgiving millions of dollars they should have paid in income taxes. The vote on the measure was 49 to 30. It now goes to the House.

The House last week rejected the Ruml plan by a narrow 206 to 202 vote, favoring instead the Robertson-Forand bill, which also provides for pay-as-you-go taxation, but which does not resemble the Ruml grab.

The Senate version of pay-as-you-go taxation would forgive taxes on a $2000 income to the tune of $140—a month's wages, and on $1,000,000 to the tune of $854,000—equal to six years' income after taxes.

The Senate Ruml steal gives 100 per cent abatement of income taxes from top to bottom on either 1942 or 1943 income, whichever was lower. The House bill would give 100 per cent abatement up to about $3000 net income (depending on number of dependents), with declining percentages from there on up.

It is estimated that the Ruml plan will provide an outright "gift" in tax forgiveness of seven million dollars, the question being how this sum is to be collected if not by income taxes.

Passage of the Ruml plan in the House would lay the ground work for introduction of a sales tax to make up the deficit that the Ruml plan is sure to cause.

Like the Ruml plan, which "gives the millionaire a $850,000 present in order to put his chauffeur on a pay-as-you-go basis," a sales tax would bear lightly on the rich and heavily on the poor.

WINS SCHOLARSHIP: Roi Ottley, publicity director of the National CIO War Relief Committee, this week was awarded one of the coveted Rosenwald Fellowships for a 10-month study of working class minorities among the United Nations. He is the first Negro journalist to win such an award and one of the first from labor's ranks. He will take a leave of absence from his CIO position.

OPA Bows to Public Pressure, Orders Food Price Cut

By the CIO Cost of Living Committee

It has been an historic week at OPA. Dollars and cents prices for small food stores were put into effect in 130 cities for a large number of grocery items. Nation wide roll-backs of 10 per cent on the prices of meats, butter and coffee were announced for June 1, with subsidy money to be furnished by the RFC. Finally, after a survey of ceiling violations in 230 coal mining towns, the OPA Enforcement Division confessed not only to the existence of widespread violations in the mining regions but to a similar state of affairs in the rest of the ocuntry.

OPA publicity has promised to roll back the cost of living to September 15 levels. How is this to be done? In part by nation wide slashes of food prices with subsidies to take up any squeeze that results for the processor and distributor.

The meat, coffee and butter roll-backs are to be followed by a roll-back of fresh vegetable prices, frozen fish and other items. For the rest the roll back is to be accomplished by better enforcement, which in turn is to be facilitated by the new policy of dollars and cents prices as well as by a larger professional enforcement staff.

Pressure Did Job

The new policies are a tribute to the pressure of labor and consumer groups exercised through the OPA Labor Policy Committee—a committee embracing the CIO Cost of Living Committee and representatives of the AFL and the standard railroad organizations.

Although the results of the new policies achieved to date are necessarily modest, they are a beginning of what may develop into a real and vigorous price control program.

There are many obstacles still to be overcome. The business-appeasement, anti-price-control gang, which has risen to power in the OPA under the Brown regime, has neither been put out of the OPA nor has it become completely converted to the new policies.

Conservative Control

Maxon still heads OPA Information. Herring is still trying to make the OPA the tool of business and politics. Charlie Fleischer, of the A&P, is still the dominant figure in the Food Division, and his efforts, as always, are directed towards making food price control safe for the chain groceries. And Brown himself is still strangling grade labeling via the filibuster method.

And then there is Congress. While the anti-subsidy policy of the Congressional groups may be circumvented through the aid of the RFC, there are other pressures which Congressmen are able to exert against effective price control.

Last week a Congressional subcommittee investigating under the terms of the Halleck resolution called upon the OPA to suspend all orders, either issued or pending, which in any way involve grading or standardization.

Probe Asked

The Halleck resolution, incidentally, calls for the investigation of restrictions on newsprint and of government efforts at grade labeling. This seems like a strange combination of interests until it is realized that brand advertising is the key to both interests. The advertisers want plenty of newsprint for plying their trade, and they don't want any government grading which will teach the consumers to rely on standards rather than on ballyhoo.

If Prentiss Brown were to yield to this new Congressional demand, a whole host of OPA regulations in food and clothing would have to be suspended. Fortunately the advertising lobby picked the wrong time to push through this impudent demand, and there is reason to hope that Brown will turn it down cold.

Pledge Shoes For Soldiers

Santiago de Chile, May 15 (ALN)—Members of the Shoe Workers Union in the big Miguel Etchepare shoe factory in Santiago, in a memorandum endorsed by the Minister of Labor for transmission to Vice-President Henry Wallace, offered last week to make 3,000,000 pairs of shoes for the U. S. armed forces.

This can be accomplished, the union said, by labor-management cooperation and the introduction of a three-shift system to replace the present single shift.

"We observe with apprehension," the memorandum said, "that the United States is placing large orders for shoes in other Latin-American countries, including Argentina, which has not yet broken with the Axis.

"This does not take into account, perhaps for lack of accurate information, the great productive capacity of Chilean factories.

"As proof of our desire to contribute to the war effort, we are willing to work long hours to turn out shoes for the North American armies."

White Collar War Meet

New York, May 15—Over 800 scientists, artists, educators and white collar workers—representatives of 78 professional associations and groups, including both CIO and AFL unions—were brought together for the first time this week by their common desire to play a more active role in the war effort and the life of the nation.

In a National Wartime Conference called "to speed the fuller mobilization of America's trained personnel" and greeted by messages of support for their aims from Wendell Willkie and Vice-President Wallace, the workers of the laboratories, schoolrooms and offices took stock of the problems that are blocking their full utilization in the war and cutting deep into their morale.

Out of panel and round-table discussions in the two-day meeting grew a keen consciousness of the need of professional and white collar groups to work more closely together now and in the future to solve their problems and make their voice heard on the issues of the day.

Grade Label Fight Can Still Be Won!

By ELEANOR FOWLER

Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

Grade labeling is not dead. Far from it. Stories that the fight is over are part of the campaign to discourage consumer action. Here's the situation:

Price control orders on canned grapefruit juice, beans, peas, corn and tomatoes in the 1943 pack have already been issued by OPA. Those orders require grade labeling of the products. 1943 canned grapefruit juice, complete with label is now on the market. The bulk of the canned vegetables, however, will not go on sale until summer and canners are holding off labeling them in the hope that the grade labeling requirement will be removed from the order.

The dollars and cents community prices now being issued by OPA are a real object lesson in how important grade labeling is in price control enforcement. Here in Washington, the first list issued includes only canned grapefruit juice. Eleven brands are listed and that is nothing like a complete list.

There are literally thousands of brands of canned fruits and vegetables. In Milwaukee, alone, for instance, there are 222 brands of canned peas on sale.

A PRICE CONTROL 'MUST'

It just isn't practical to put a price ceiling on each brand of canned product in each type of store in each American community. And that means that it just isn't possible to get enforcement of price ceilings on canned fruits and vegetables unless grade labeling is required.

There's another problem, too. Brand names do not ensure quality. So setting prices by brands does not tie price to quality and does not protect consumers against price rises brought about by quality deterioration.

The strategy of the canners is obvious. They're stalling, pressing Prentiss Brown to suspend enforcement of the grade labeling order until it will be literally too late to print grades on labels. They're using Congress to do this job.

LATEST MOVE

The latest move is a request to Brown from a sub-committee of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce that he make no final decision on grade labeling until they have held hearings—scheduled to begin May 24.

It's up to us to use every channel we can to see to it that grade labeling is not killed. That means:

1. Continued letters to James F. Byrnes and Prentiss Brown demanding immediate announcement that the grade labeling order will not be changed.

2. Continued letters to Congressmen and Senators urging them to write Byrnes and Brown to the same effect.

3. Delegations to your local OPA office pointing out the importance of grade labeling if the new price ceilings are to be effective on canned fruits and vegetables. Such delegations are immediately reported to Washington and mean added pressure here. In addition, publicity on these delegations in the papers will influence your Congressmen and Senators as well.

Fish Price Cut Is Boon to Rationed

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

The papers say reduced prices on fish will be announced this week by OPA. That's welcome news to all of us. With supplies of meat dwindling and prices soaring, many of us have turned to the fish counter for the main course for dinner only to find that here too prices were way out of line.

Yet nutritionists tell us fish should be included in a balanced diet.

Salt water fish, sea foods we call them, are rich in iodine. A certain amount of iodine is needed by the body to prevent goiter, an enlargement of the thyroid gland. This gland regulates the rate of burning of fuel to run the human body, besides being directly connected with growth. For this reason it is especially important to see that growing children have the necessary foods that will supply them with their quota of iodine.

EAT SALT WATER FISH

There is a whole region in our country, from the Great Lakes to the northwest section, where the soil and water are low in iodine. This region is called the Goiter Belt. Here the food and water supply are lacking in iodine.

People living in this region should make a special effort to have sea foods as often as possible. That means salt water fish like salmon, oysters and haddock. Fresh water fish won't supply the necessary iodine. It's the salt in its natural state that is a carrier of iodine.

Salt we use at home is another inexpensive source of idoine. Use "iodized" salt for the table and in cooking. Be sure the package of salt carries the word "iodized." In refining the salt for home use, much of its natural qualities are lost. Iodized salt is specially treated to restore the salt to its natural state.

Milk and green vegetables shipped in from non-goiterous regions should be used whenever possible.

A good sea food that is popular with most of us is salmon. Fresh salmon is fine if the price isn't too high and if you can get it. But canned salmon is just as good. And many housewives prefer to use it because it can be fixed in different ways.

On the price ceiling list issued this week by OPA. Canned salmon ranges in price from 22 cents for Cold Stream pink salmon (1 lb.) to 42 cents for Kenney salmon (½ lb.)

Be sure to use the salmon oil. It's one of the few foods that contains Vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin found in fish oils. Canned salmon is also a good source of protein, mineral and vitamins.

As the hot weather approaches, you'll be looking for something nourishing and cool to fix. Try this recipe:

CRUNCHY SALMON SALAD

½ cup bottled salad dressing
⅛ teaspoon salt, pepper
1 teaspoon grated onion
½ cup evaporated milk
2 cups salmon
¼ cup sweet pickles
½ cup diced celery
2 cups crushed potato chips

Put in bowl first five ingredients. Stir in gradually evap. milk, fold in salmon flaked, diced pickles and celery. Chill thoroughly. Just before serving fold in crushed potato chips. Shape into molds. Serve on lettuce or other salad greens. Tuna fish may be substituted for salmon.

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

Big game in the white collar field! The Metropolitan Life Insurance Company has signed a collective bargaining agreement with the Office and Professional Workers, providing for union security, check-off, grievance machinery, paid vacations, seniority rights, leave of absence for union business, and arbitration of disputes. The pact covers 2,000 workers in greater New York area. Organization is progressing in other areas throughout the country.

This culminates a five-year struggle, involving elections, court litigation, and all the discouragement that grows out of such. All the big ones are now in the collective bargaining bag. Congratulations to President Merrill, Leon Berney and associates for a splendid accomplishment.

Director Walter Harris and Representative Edmiston report a victory for the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers coming through in great stride in Canada at the Carborundum plant at Niagara Falls by a vote of 611 for the CIO to 51 for no union. They were inspired by the victory of their fellow U. S. workers in Niagara Falls, U. S., recently.

Regional Director Pete Mosele reports a fine victory in Mayor Hague's town (Jersey City), N. J., for the Packinghouse Workers Organizing Committee. The vote was CIO 245, Employes Protective Association 131.

Rubber Workers, UE Win Elections

Regional Director Hugh Thompson sends in two NLRB election victories at Buffalo. The Rubber Workers at the Buffalo Weaving & Belting plant polled 171 for CIO to 39 against. The Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers at Otis Elevator came through with a vote of 348 for CIO to 100 for no union.

National Representative August Scholle reports a victory at the Modern Collet and Machine Co., Ecorse, Mich., 189 for the UAW-CIO to 72 against. At the Crescent Brass and Pin Co., Detroit, UAW-CIO 43 to no union 10.

President R. J. Thomas, UAW-CIO, sends in two victories. At the Grand Rapids Division of General Motors Steering Gear Division, CIO 1,444, to no union 30; and at the Berridge Shear Co., Sturgis, Mich., UAW-CIO 39 to no union 10.

Regional Director Kojetinsky, St. Louis, brings in a string of victories: Atlas Imperial Diesel Engine, USA 319 to 76 against; Union Wire Rope, Kansas City, USA 293 to 170 against; Granite City Steel, Granite City, Ill., USA 60 to 9 against; General Steel Castings at Granite City, in the cast armor plant, USA 387 to 48 against. Congratulations Al and staff.

Farm Equipment Victories

Regional Director Ben Henry and President Grant Oakes bring in two more victories for the Farm Equipment and Metal Workers at Cedar Rapids, Iowa: Link Belt Speeder, CIO 202, AFL 79, no union 1 and independent union 21; Cherry Burrell, CIO 137 to no union 108.

Sub-Regional Director George DeNucci reports that Russell Quackenbush, Textile representative, won an election at the Buckeye Overall Company, Versailles, Ohio, CIO 104 to 63 against. John C. Lawson, secretary-treasurer of the United Stone and Allied Products Workers reports two election victories at Elberton, Ga. Workers employed by the Piedmont Granite Quarries, and at the American Granite Co., voted by large majorities for the CIO.

Acting Regional Director Harry Haberthear, Cincinnati, through Representative Fudge reports a 28-to-1 victory at the Kay and Ess Co., Dayton, Ohio. The International Woodworkers of America, through Representative Botkin, scored a 31-to-10 victory at the Woods Lumber Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Do you know that in 1941 and 1942 the National Labor Relations Board shows:

Elections	Payroll Checks	Ballots Cast	CIO Won	Votes Polled by CIO in Elections Won
1941	3,122	853,783	1,221	459,176
1942	3,626	989,838	1,612	529,298

In this showing against AFL, independent unions and no union votes, CIO won approximately 44.2 per cent of elections and polled 52.2 per cent of votes cast in elections won in 1942 as against 39.3 per cent of elections won and 45.1 per cent of votes cast in 1941.

Int'l. Nickel Going CIO Despite Co. Terror

SUDBURY, Ont., May 15, (ALN) — The International Nickel Corp., controller of 90 per cent of the United Nations' nickel supply, will soon be forced to recognize the union chosen by its 13,000 employes, officials of the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Worker (CIO) announced here this week.

INCO, which has its main offices at 67 Wall Street, New York, has striven desperately to prevent the growth of the MMSW. Union organizers have been beaten up, union offices have been raided, union members have been discharged or isolated in non-productive jobs, and every means has been tried to force the workers to join the United Copper Nickel Workers, the company union.

"We are organizing to win the war in the quickest possible time, and to bring democracy to all the people," Reid Robinson, president of the MMSW, told a meeting of 7000 Sudbury workers. Pointing out that 3000 miners in British Columbia have joined the MMSW in recent weeks, Robinson said:

"You have to make the company here cooperate with you to get maximum production. That is why it is so important that we organize our union. In union we will work together, fight together, and win together." Five thousand buttons were distributed at the meeting bearing the slogan: "90 Per Cent by June."

Basic rate for workers in the big Coppercliff smelter here is 55 cents an hour; for miners, 63 cents an hour. Living costs are 20 per cent higher in Sudbury than in Toronto, in addition to which INCO workers pay as much as $4.50 a month for company insurance and medical fees.

Negro Wins Election

Greensboro, N. C., May 15—Supported by AFL and CIO local unions, the Rev. R. C. Sharpe, Negro minister and undertaker, was nominated for the Greensboro city council this week, receiving 1,279 votes.

Bolivian President's Hands Smeared With Blood of 400 Workers, CIO Leader Charges

NEW YORK, May 15—General Enrique Penaranda, President of Bolivia now visiting the United States, was responsible for the massacre of 400 tin miners who were demonstrating in protest against wages ranging from 10 to 60 cents a day, Martin Kyne, vice-president of Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, CIO, charged here this week.

Kyne's charges were made in a report submitted to the CIO following his visit to Bolivia as a labor member of the joint U. S.-Bolivian commission that visited the mining areas there following the strike in the Patino and Hochschild mines.

DESPERATION

The demonstration was called in desperation, Kyne revealed, after the miners' request for a wage increase was refused and the government, acting in collusion with the mine owners, declared the strike "subversive" and sent in 700 soldiers to deal with it.

Immediately before the demonstration, the soldiers opened fire on a group of workers calling on the management; 35 were killed or wounded. At news of this, 8,000 workers came out, and the massacre began. Previously, the troops had closed the company food stores and forbidden women to leave their huts in search of food for their children.

"At La Pampa several machine-gun emplacements had been built," Kyne wrote. "At 10 a. m. the soldiers opened fire with machine guns, a trench mortar and rifles. The workers took cover where they could. The firing continued until three o'clock in the afternoon. The dead were hastily buried in a nearby cemetery, precautions being taken that a count of the casualties should not be made."

URGE RELEASE

Following Kyne's charges, the Latin-American Committee of the CIO sent a message to Penaranda urging him to release the union leaders imprisoned wholesale after the massacre. Signed by Committee Chairman Jacob S. Potofsky, the message read:

"American workers felt a strong bond of sympathy with the tin miners. Knowing their low wages and difficult working conditions, we were convinced that they resorted to strike action only when no other recourse remained to them."

Release of the union leaders and members, plus establishment of the right of the workers to organize freely, would result in "a strong and free labor movement" that would strengthen "the unity of the Bolivian nation and greatly increase its contribution to victory," the committee added.

Kyne's report urged CIO members "to learn more about the conditions of life and work of our brothers in the countries to the south," to petition Penaranda for freedom for the workers, to prepare "a program of cooperation with the Bolivian workers," and to urge the U. S. to use its influence with Bolivia for better conditions as a means of stabilizing production of tin needed for the war.

Auxiliaries Meet to Help Cut Prices

Cleveland, May 15—A special meeting of the CIO Congress of Women's Auxiliaries was in progress here this weekend, following the CIO Executive Board meeting. Main points on the agenda, according to Auxiliary President Faye Stephenson and Secretary-Treasurer Eleanor Fowler were:

1. The roll back of prices demanded by CIO, and what CIO Auxiliary members can do to help the program.

2. The problem of developing child care facilities for children of working mothers.

CIO Beats Guns, Goons, Pressure Politics To Win Nevada Election

LAS VEGAS, Nev., May 15—Climaxing a campaign replete with everything from political high pressure to guns and goons, Basic Magnesium Inc., this state's only large industrial plant, went CIO this week in an National Labor Relations Board election. Winner was the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union, with 1,122 votes. Losers were a combination of 17 AFL craft unions and two district councils, who garnered only 985 votes even though they held a back-door closed shop contract with the company.

MM&SW started organization last November at the request of dissatisfied workers. When a majority had signed up, the company revealed that it was operating under an "unsigned contract" with the AFL.

The CIO demanded bargaining rights, whereupon the company signed a closed shop contract with the AFL which cut wages in certain classifications 12½ to 23 cents an hour. NLRB action followed, leading up to the election.

Civil liberties became an issue when AFL officials, paid goons and construction workers repeatedly attacked CIO leaflet distributors while plant guards looked on and local authorities refused protection. The story of the first attacks was carried in the CIO NEWS March 1.

Several CIO men, including MM&SW Organizer Robert Holloway, were severely beaten. CIO wives were mauled, autos were smashed, CIO property was stolen or wrecked, and two mimeograph machines were stolen from a home.

With the plant in desperate need of competent help, more than 50 skilled workers were fired for refusal to join the AFL. CIO members were threatened with eviction from homes controlled by the defense plant corporation. CIO meetings, even in homes, were forbidden or prevented.

Much of the Mine, Mill campaign was conducted "underground" except for the last three days, when the local sheriff, sensing a CIO victory, gave protection to women leaflet distributors.

The company, controlled by Anaconda Copper, permitted 30 AFL business agents and an undetermined number of workers who were temporarily put to work full time by the AFL, to roam the plant at will, haranguing and coercing the employes.

Plant guards said they had orders not to interfere with fights, and there were many, inside and outside the plant. Protection was given by guards when AFL men were getting the worst of the argument. CIO men were waylaid and beaten in the plant and their homes were "spotted" by guards and spied upon by goons at night.

The terrorism was exposed by the CIO in a radio and press campaign which so aroused local citizens that all AFL-backed incumbents were roundly defeated in a Las Vegas municipal election three days prior to the BMI voting.

The Civil Liberties Division of the Dept. of Justice had FBI men in the plant making an investigation, and a further probe is now under way by the Truman Committee of the U. S. Senate, which previously exposed waste and inefficiency of the former BMI management.

CIO Urges WLB To Grant Miners Wage Adjustment

CLEVELAND, May 15—The CIO Executive Board this week urged the Nat'l. War Labor Board to grant the coal miners of the nation an equitable wage adjustment."

The CIO declared that the WLB now "has a very deep obligation to demonstrate to the coal miners that their cause has not been prejudiced despite any individual's arbitrary action, but rather that their meritorious case will be equitably determined, which necessarily compels a decision in favor of the United Mine Workers of America."

At the same time, the CIO warned that the UMW members "should not strike or cause any interruption of production because they know that such action can only result in aiding Hitler and the enemies of our nation."

The complete CIO statement on the mine case follows:

"The coal miners of the nation, organized in the United Mine Workers of America, are true soldiers of production. They produce the fuel which keeps the wheels of our factories, plants, mills and railroads turning thereby assuring our armed forces of all necessary munitions of war.

Conditions Dangerous

"The historic role of the coal miners within the American labor movement cannot be questioned. The democratic traditions and personal valor of those men who work long hours and under dangerous conditions both in this and other countries, have always been an inspiration to all other workers.

"The United Mine Workers of America have a case based on equity and justice:

"1. COAL MINERS HAVE NOT RECEIVED ANY WAGE ADJUSTMENTS FOR OVER TWO YEARS. UNTIL RECENTLY, THEY HAVE HAD WORK IN MANY MINES FOR ONLY TWO OR THREE DAYS A WEEK.

"At the same time, food prices and the cost of living have soared. The recent study of the OPA frankly discloses that there has not been an effective enforcement of price ceilings in the coal areas—a situation similar to that in other parts of the country.

Must Buy Tools

"In addtion, coal miners are compelled to purchase out of their own wages, their tools, powder, safety lamps and other materials necessary to perform their hazardous work and to pay for blacksmithing.

"These practices are but examples of the exploitation to which the coal miners are subjected.

"2. THE NOT INFREQUENT OCCURRENCE OF MINE EXPLOSIONS TAKING THEIR WRATHFUL TOLL OF HUMAN LIFE MAKES COAL MINING ONE OF THE MOST HAZARDOUS INDUSTRIES IN THE WORLD.

"3. COAL MINERS AS DISTINGUISHED FROM ALL OTHER UNDERGROUND MINERS IN THIS COUNTRY DO NOT RECEIVE COMPENSATION FOR THE TIME THEY SPEND UNDER GROUND GOING TO AND FROM THEIR PLACES OF WORK.

"The CIO succeeded both before the Wage Hour Administration and in court litigation in compelling employers of all other underground workers to pay the men for their time spent underground, thereby paving the way for coal miners to be paid on a portal to portal basis.

"We believe that in light of the legal decisions it is incumbent upon the National War Labor Board to accord the United Mine Workers of America the same treatment which all other underground miners already enjoy.

"The case of the United Mine Workers of America is now pending before the National War Labor Board.

Should Ban Strikes

"The membership of the United Mine Workers of America should not strike or cause any interruption of production because they know that such action can only result in aiding Hitler and the enemies of our nation.

"Strikes when our country is at war endanger the nation's security and also furnish aid and comfort to all labor's enemies in and out of Congress and endanger the very life of labor organizations through vicious anti-labor legislation.

"President Roosevelt should be commended for his action in affording the coal miners the opportunity, through peaceful means rather than the use of troops, of demonstrating their loyalty to their Government and their desire to win the war by continued and uninterrupted production of coal.

"Labor has traditionally opposed and will continue to oppose the use of troops in any labor dispute.

Urge Adjustment

"The CIO therefore calls upon the National War Labor Board to grant to the United Mine Workers of America an equitable wage adjustment.

"Only in this manner can the Board realistically discharge its responsibility to determine the case in a manner that will best serve to aid the successful prosecution of the war.

The Board must not repeat its unfortunate errors of the packinghouse workers and the West Coast airplane workers' cases where just and equitable claims for wage adjustments based upon prevailing gross equities were denied over the opposition of the CIO. These claims must be recognized and satisfied by the Board.

"The National War Labor Board now has a very deep obligation to demonstrate to the coal miners that their cause has not been prejudiced despite any individual's arbitary action but rather that their meritorious case will be equitably determined which necessarily compels a decision in favor of the United Mine Workers of America."

Murray Hits War-Time Strikes, Renews Pledge To Back Fighters 100%

CHICAGO, May 12 — Philip Murray, president of the CIO and of the United Steelworkers of America, praised the war efforts of the American workers and condemned the get-rich elements at work in the war economy, in a speech given here before delegates to a USA District 31 conference.

Introduced by District Director Joe Germano as the "greatest labor leader in the entire world," Murray was presented with a gift by a delegation from Local 1029, whose spokesman said they came from "a dirty, dusty sledge-hammer shop in East Chicago."

In his speech Murray recalled the battle of the steelworkers to establish unionism in the nation's most powerful anti-labor industrial shops in America. He hailed the martyrs of 1897, 1919 and 1937 who fell in strike struggles and said that "the hillsides of America are dotted with graves of men who gave their lives that we might be gathered here today."

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 15—Denouncing the use of strikes as a means of solving the war-time problems of labor, CIO President Philip Murray brought round after round of applause from an audience of close to 2,000 at the Municipal Auditorium here last Sunday night, as he repeated the CIO's pledge not to strike during the war.

Murray did not mention John L. Lewis by name, but after discussing the failure of effective price control which he said had caused unrest, and the need for a more flexible wage policy, he declared:

"These problems will not be solved by labor leaders rushing to the workers and telling them to hit the pavement and stop production for the war."

He stressed the fact that 850,000 CIO members were in the armed forces fighting for freedom "for you here in the United States," and that defeat in the war would mean the loss of everything for union members.

3 Pairs of Shoes A Year May Be Pipe Dream, Shoe Union Warns; Plan Needed

WASHINGTON, May 15—"The chaotic situation in the Shoe Industry offers no guarantee that the consumer will get the three pairs of durable shoes a year as he has been led to expect," Frank R. McGrath, president of the United Shoe Workers of America, said this week, in offering a union plan to end the chaos.

"It is an open secret that WPB and OPA officials are saying that all ration coupon 17 means is that the consumer can purchase one pair of shoes by June. What will happen next no one knows.

"The General Executive Board of the United Shoe Workers of America has a simple and workable plan to assure adequate durable shoes for the consumer without interfering with the needs of our military forces.

"We suggest that shoes be graded, based upon standards of labor and material set by the WPB and OPA. This will assure first a durable shoe for the consumer and will at the same time conserve shoe leather because of the reduced needs and demands for replacements.

"We feel that material should be allocated to manufacturers first if they are willing to comply with the standards of shoe production set up by the Government and secondly, if they have available sufficient labor supply."

In other actions, the Executive Board called for: Opening of a Western land front in Europe to carry out the Casablanca decision to fight for the "unconditional surrender" of the Axis; reaffirmed the union's pledge not to strike during the war; supported President Roosevelt's "hold-the-line" order of April 8; and urged that the War Labor Board be granted powers to adjust wages where gross inequities exist.

CIO Fights U. S., State Bills that Hamstring Labor

CIO waged an unconditional surrender fight this week against state and national legislation that would cripple labor and harm the drive for victory over the Axis. From Congress to Kansas the battle is raging, against native defeatists who would smash the unions which are leading the fight against the Fascists.

CIO Serviceman Says:

Soldiers Solid With Labor To Smash Axis

WASHINGTON, May 22—Fighting American soldiers are lined up solid with American workers to smash the Axis. They don't pay attention to anti-labor lies of Rickenbacker and company. They don't spend a lot of time grousing about alleged "high wages and short hours" of production line workers. And they do appreciate "the superior weapons of war turned out fast and accurately by workers during long and tough hours on the line."

Take it from a guy who knows, Corporal Gene Derrickson, of Camp Gordon Johnston, Florida. A former CIO representative from Wilmington, Delaware, Corporal Derrickson, this week, took time out from intensive training for war to write a letter to Editor Len De Caux, of the CIO NEWS. Here's what Derrickson said:

"This marks my first "Letter to the Editor" after 14 months' service in a combat line outfit of the United States Infantry. I've seen so many letters in the press that are obviously planted, smearing labor and labor's achievements in the war effort, I felt I should set forth the reaction of our outfit to some of these questions.

"Actually, there is little or no division between the organized production workers and the servicemen on our post. All of us are very well aware of the tremendous flow of superior weapons of war coming to us and the other Allied Armies from the factories of America.

SUPERIOR WEAPONS

"We have used the pistols, rifles, carbines, machine guns, mortars, and anti-tank weapons made by American labor, to a great extent CIO labor.

"No one can kid us about the kind of armaments you are making. These superior weapons of war we know are turned out fast and accurately by your workers during long and tough hours on the line.

"We just don't pay any attention to the phoney 40-hour week and absenteeism tall tales.

"You members of CIO can also put down as 'baloney' all ideas that the enlisted men spend a large part of their time lamenting the so-called high wages and short hours of the production workers. Stories of that nature just aren't true and besides we have our own problems to worry about.

"The ranting and raving of Rickenbacker haven't caused a ripple of excitement in our ranks. The only comment I've heard is that he should speak for himself as a corporation executive and not assume the unwarranted power of speaking for us.

"Soldiers believe in unions. A good many of us carry union cards in our pockets, know the unions are helping us mightily to win the war, and will help us get our jobs

House Committee Whips Up Attack on Rent Control

WASHINGTON, May 22—The Smith Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives has given real estate lobbyists a field day for spreading falsifications about federal rent regulations and about the Office of Price Administration rent division. That was the charge made today by the CIO Cost of Living Committee.

Describing the OPA rent control program as "an outstanding bastion in the fight against inflation," the CIO Committee said that the Smith Committee is refusing time to labor and consumer groups to state their support of rent control while it builds up the argument of landlords and realtors against rent control."

The members of the CIO Committee are: J. Raymond Walsh, chairman; Leo Goodman, Donald E. Montgomery and Russ Nixon.

The CIO statement said:

"The OPA rent control program, which has been an outstanding bastion in the fight against inflation, is now under attack before the Smith Special Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives.

"This committee, operating under a roving mandate to investigate all executive agencies, is deliberately allowing itself to be used as a forum from which lobbies and special interest groups can carry on smear attacks against the war programs enacted by Congress, and against the officials who are sworn by law to carry them out.

FIELD DAY

"In its campaign against the rent program the Smith Committee has given real estate lobbyists a field day for spreading falsifications about the rent regulations and the rent administration.

"It is refusing time to labor and consumer groups to state their support of rent control, while it builds up the argument of landlords and realtors, against rent control.

"Rent control was enacted to protect labor and consumer groups—the general public—against wartime profiteering by landlords. OPA has refused to permit rents to be raised through the device of fictitious sales. It has protected tenants against unjustified evictions.

"The nation cannot allow this protection to be broken down by star chamber proceedings in which the enemies of rent control are paraded and publicized."

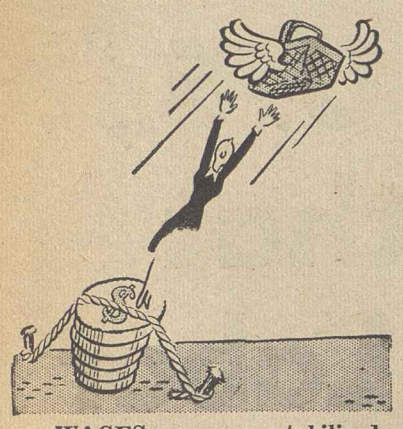
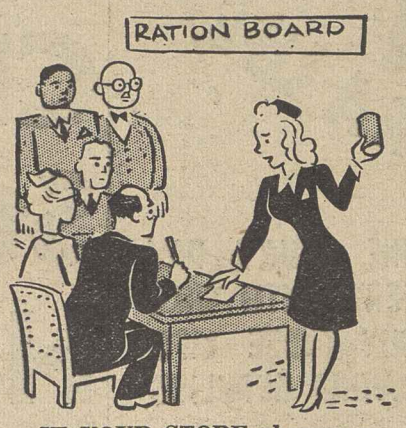
Check Prices—Help Beat Hitler

The CIO has made price control and the price rollback a number one job for all union members and for everyone who wants to win the war. You, the people, have a big war job to do in the fight to make this program a reality, bring food prices back to tolerable levels, and hold quality standards up. It's a basic part of your whole war job, just as important as anything you do in an organized way through your union and other community organizations. To do this job, you have to work as a CIO union member, as an Auxiliary, as a shopper; with Congress, the OPA and other government agencies, as a citizen, and with your neighbors, as an American who wants to hold the line against inflation for a strong and mobilized nation to win an early victory in the war. Below are some examples of how to do the job:

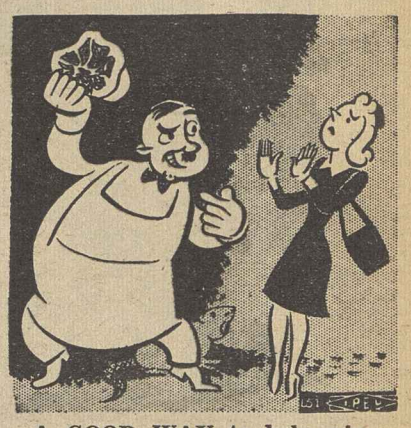


WAGES are stabilized. Prices have been flying up and up. To keep our people well fed and healthy, so that they can turn out war weapons and take their part in the fighting we must do to win against Hitler, we must have rigid price control. If we don't have price control, we'll have real inflation. Inflation can lose the war for us just as much as a military defeat. Winning the battle against inflation can help win the war just as our military successes will win it. This is No. 1 on CIO's win-the-war program.

CEILING PRICES have been set in dollars and cents on a number of foods. When you shop, take along the ceiling price list with you. You can help yourself, and your family, and be helping to win the war by such a simple thing as knowing the prices you are supposed to pay. Take the ceiling list with you, compare the prices marked on the shelves. They must not be higher than ceiling, they can be lower—in chain stores they should be lower.

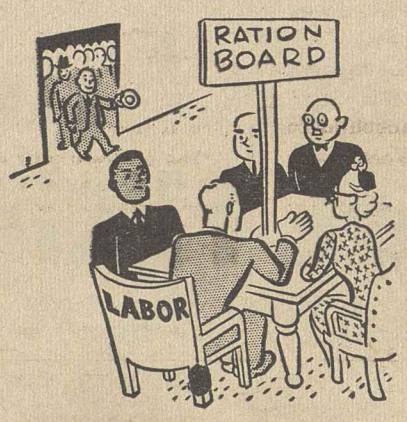


IF YOUR STORE charges a higher than ceiling price, tell the storekeeper that he is breaking the law. If you cannot avoid buying the article at the over-the-ceiling price, pay the overcharge and get a receipt. Take or mail the receipt, with the name and address of the store, to the Price Panel of your local OPA War Price and Rationing Board. If you let yourself be overcharged, without doing something about it, you are knocking holes in price control and helping to lose the battle against inflation.

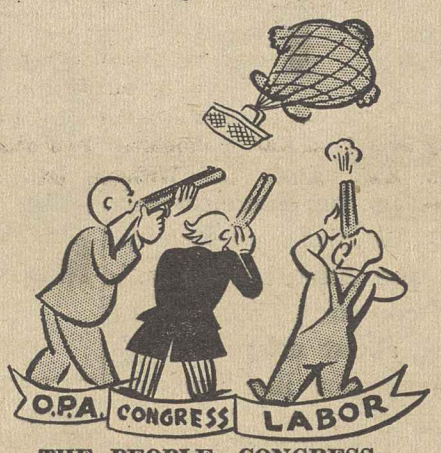


A GOOD WAY to help win the battle of the home front is to refuse to buy on the black market. Don't accept rationed goods without giving up the full number of ration points. Don't be led into the black market because it looks like the easy way out. It isn't—you pay fantastic prices, get rotten food, help Hitler when you buy there. Nobody will pin medals on you for NOT buying on the black market, but you'll feel a lot easier in your mind if you don't.

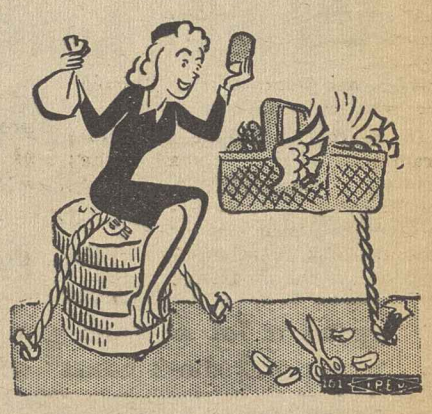
QUALITY CONTROL goes hand-in-hand with price control. Without one, you can't have the other. Right now, the battle of the year is going on over quality grade labeling on canned goods. OPA has yielded to the selfish pressure from the big canners. You can counteract that pressure by writing or wiring OPA, Washington, D. C. to demand quality grade labeling printed on all canned goods. Without a quality label on each can, you buy blind; you will find yourself paying a Grade A price for a Grade C product. With grade labeling, you know what you're paying for.



THE WAR PRICE and Rationing Board in your community is the agency that touches your living standards and your budget most closely. It should be a really representative affair, with labor taking its full place along with all other groups in the community. Every War Price Board must have a price panel. See that a good, active union or auxiliary member who knows the score is seated on it. Take your fellow union members and your neighbors to the board when you have a beef. It's there to serve you, as a democratic agency in winning the people's war.



THE PEOPLE, CONGRESS and the OPA have to work together to beat the menace of inflation. They will work together if YOU tell them what you want, because Congress and the OPA and all Government agencies are there to do what you say. Congress makes broad policy; you must see that the policy brings real price control and roll back of prices to Sept., 1942, levels through subsidies. The OPA shapes policy in administering price control laws. See that the OPA administers them fully and fairly. It's up to you.



PARADISE is not around the corner. The struggle to bring living costs within reach of stabilized wages is a continuous, day-to-day affair. But if you make it as much your business as any other in the win-the-war activity, you will be helping your country and helping yourselves. Inflation won't be killed by one blow, but we can bring the food basket back from the sky if we work at it. The reward of working at it is plain—we bring victory that much closer by protecting the living standards of the men and women who work and fight for victory.

Murray Renews Pledge Of All-Out War Support

CLEVELAND, May 22—In the first CIO gathering after the special Board meeting here this week, some 500 USA-CIO delegates heard their President, Philip Murray, repeat pledges of all-out support to the Commander-in-Chief and to the one aim of all workers—defeat of Hitler.

"No labor organization can endure in the U. S. unless it is prepared to carry out its commitments," he said in reference to the wartime no-strike pledge and to its violation by John L. Lewis. A labor union, he added, "must be just as honest with the people of the U. S. as it is with its own members."

The conference adopted a major resolution in full support of the CIO's win-the-war policy statement adopted unanimously the day before. The resolution, after praising Murray's leadership and re-affirming support of President Roosevelt's unconditional surrender policy, said in part:

"Only with the adoption of the foregoing (CIO) program will the objectives of our Commander-in-Chief be actually put into effect. We Steelworkers have pledged our unconditional support to the Commander-in-Chief and will do all in our power to make certain that this program be effected, in order that our war effort can smash forward to the unconditional surrender of the Axis."

Fur Workers Buy $4 Million in War Bonds

BOSTON, May 22—Nearly $4,000,000 worth of War Bonds have been purchased during the last six months by members of the International Fur & Leather Workers Union, Irving Potash, secretary of the union's Win-the-War Committee, reported to the semi-annual meeting of the Intl. Executive Board which met here this week.

Ben Gold, international president of the Fur Workers, in his semi-annual report to the Board, reaffirmed the union's pledge not to strike for the duration of the war. To break this pledge, he said, "would provide aid and comfort to the enemy, divide the ranks of labor and destroy the unity of the nation."

Reviewing the union's organizational gains during the past six months, Gold pointed to the union's outstanding victory in organizing and signing a contract covering the 2,300 tannery workers of Endicott-Johnson, open-shop holdout for 54 years; organization of dressing and dyeing fur workers in Montreal and Toronto and the signing of union contracts at the Canadian Hollander and other dressing and dyeing plants.

CIO Demands Action On Total War Plan

WASHINGTON, May 22—The CIO pressed for speedy action this week on the most comprehensive program yet offered for mobilizing all the country's resources behind the offensive and victory, adopted by the CIO at its special enlarged Executive Board meeting in Cleveland.

The program:

1. Reaffirmed CIO's absolute pledge of no strikes or production stoppages for the duration of the war, not out of fear of penalties but because the workers are determined to do everything in their power for victory.

2. Demanded more clear-cut authority for the War Labor Board to eliminate inequities in wages, including a demand for a more definite interpretation of the recent executive order to allow the Board to function more effectively.

3. Demanded a rollback of cost of living prices to the September 15, 1942 levels; limitation of salaries and incomes; curbing of war profits. To make price rollbacks a reality, the Board also demanded a comprehensive system of subsidy payments to ensure a full supply of food at prices the workers can pay.

4. Demanded a limitation of salaries and incomes to $25,000, after all taxes.

5. Demanded an equitable tax program, based on ability to pay and on the needs of war financing, with a real pay-as-you-go collection system, avoiding the Ruml plan as a tax grab for the rich. The tax program must also end "the Roman holiday" of profits for the big corporations.

6. Aimed at the basic objective of total mobilization for total war, including a clean-up of the present muddled manpower picture, an end to arbitrary job freezes as in the recent McNutt order; and a general extension of joint labor-management control, with labor having real representation on all manpower agencies, starting with the top at the War Manpower Commission and working down through the area agencies.

In its conclusion, the CIO program declared that "it shall be the primary task of all our affiliated unions and our membership to mobilize the support of the entire nation behind President Roosevelt" and to have the program submitted forcefully to Congress and to the heads of the major war agencies.

Bad News:

OPA Dumps Grade Label Program

Washington, May 22—Following weeks of pressure from the big canners, OPA chief Prentiss Brown announced this week that he was rescinding the original OPA order for quality labelling on the 1943 pack of canned foods.

OPA's decision to knuckle under came despite long protest by labor and consumer organizations, with the CIO taking the lead in the drive that began some weeks ago to give protection to the consumer. Without grade labelling, the CIO pointed out, consumers will find themselves paying Grade A prices for Grade B products, which will destroy price control.

The OPA action was immediately protested by Sam Wolchok, president of the CIO Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes, who described it as "appeasement of the canning lobby and the profiteers" and as a "blow to those democratic principles which place the welfare of the people above the selfish interests of an infinitesimal minority."

CIO people here and in the field quickly resolved to carry on the fight for grade labelling, and not to accept Brown's action as final, but to carry it to Economic Director James F. Byrnes and higher if necessary. Indicating this, Wolchok declared:

Brown's verdict, which disregards the order of President Roosevelt that no further price increases can be tolerated, cannot and will not be accepted by labor and consumers as the final word on the subject. More and louder action must be taken to revive the original grade labelling order."

CIO, AFL Unite to Fight Kansas Anti-Union Bill

KANSAS CITY, May 22—United labor action on the Kansas anti-union bill took shape this week, with attorneys for CIO and AFL filing identical suits for a test of the law in the Federal court here.

The bill, described as one of the most vicious anti-union measures to come out of the current state legislative drive, will be tested in the courts through the process of seeking an injunction against its enforcement by state officials.

In essence, the Kansas law opens the door to court interference and state control of unions by:

1. Requiring "business agents" to register, and interpreting "business agents" to mean any union official.

2. Requiring unions to register and file detailed financial statements.

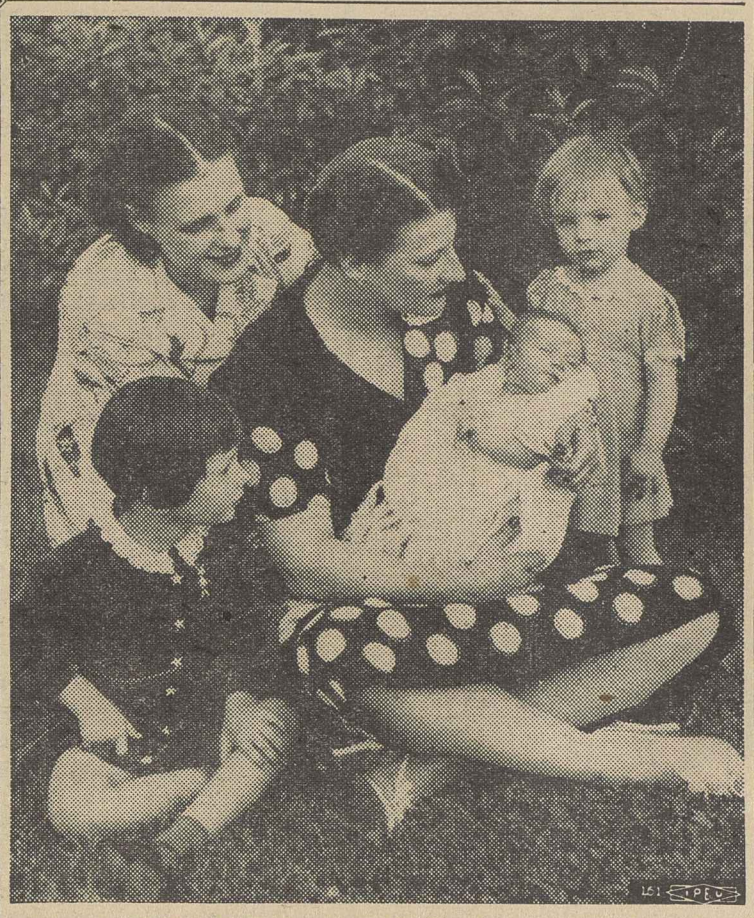
3. Sharply restricting the right to strike, picket, etc.

4. Protecting the "legal rights" of employes, a vague clause opening the way to endless disruption.

CIO unions backing the suit, in addition to the national CIO, are Steel, Auto and Packing, the most powerful state groups. In addition to the united action in Kansas, similar legal moves are planned in Colorado and Texas.

From Washington, CIO President Philip Murray sent a round-up letter to CIO affiliates outlining the dangers to the war and to the unions in similar bills passed in other states, and urging them to prepare for legal action in those areas. States included in Murray's roundup are: Arkansas, Kansas, Colorado, Texas, South Dakota and Idaho.

Murray's letter, accompanied by a detailed analysis of the bills prepared by CIO Counsel Lee Pressman, outlined three main steps: 1) refusal to comply with the act, thus bringing prosecution and a court test; 2) suit for an injunction in state courts, leading to the U. S. Supreme Court; and 3) suit for injunction in Federal court, on the ground the law violates the U. S. Constitution.



NAMED FOR MURRAY: Aside from being the granddaughter of one of the few women presidents of a United Steelworkers of America local, Phyllis Murray Falcona had the additional distinction this week of being named after President Philip Murray of the USA and CIO. The month-old girl is held, above, by her grandmother, Mrs. Betty Karr, president of the USA local at the Murray Co., in Atlanta, Georgia. The baby's mother, Mrs. Lillian Falcona, looks proudly over Mrs. Karr's shoulder. Two other grandchildren of Mrs. Karr, Linda Lee Witham, left, and Vera Beth Witham, are interested observers.

Anti-War Bills on Deck—Watch 'Em!

WASHINGTON, May 22—Two major issues involving the whole war and the morale and health of all war workers neared a decisive vote in Congress this week, as action was prepared on the Smith-Connally-Lewis bill and the 1943 tax bill.

The Smith-Connally bill (S 796), to which John L. Lewis' name was added by CIO people as a reflection of the Lewis coal strike that provoked the measure, was ready for action on the House floor any time after Monday, May 24.

The bill was passed, as charged by the CIO, in the heat of debate and without any chance for labor representatives to testify or appear against it. It knocks out the War Labor Board and the Wagner Act, in addition to subjecting unions to severe criminal actions.

DUMP RUML PLAN

The tax bill went to a Conference Committee of the House and Senate, following the turndown given to the Senate's Ruml tax grab plan by the House earlier this week. The House voted by a narrow margin for the Robertson-Forand pay-as-you-go bill, thus throwing the Ruml plan back for the third time.

ACTION NOTE: Members of the House side of the tax bill Conference Committee are: Reps. Doughton, Cooper, Disney, Dingell, Knutson and Reed. They should get the wires from you, as well as your own Representatives, urging them to stand firm against the Ruml steal.

If the Smith-Connally-Lewis bill is still up for debate, your Representatives should be similarly bombarded with wires against passage.

Three More Victories For Steel

Duluth, Minn., May 22—The United Steelworkers of America cleaned up in three more National Labor Relations Board elections this week. Companies and scores were:

Pickands Mather & Co. and Corsica Iron Co., Ricor, Minn.—USA 69, no union 4; Biwabik Mining Co. and Pickands Mather & Co.—USA 33, no union 2; Evergreen Mines Co.—USA 19, no union 1.

Convention Shifted

Detroit, May 22—The convention of the Michigan CIO Council scheduled to be held at Mackinac Island June 28-July 1 has been transferred to Detroit because of wartime transportation difficulties, August Scholle, president of the Council announced this week.

Blast Law Banning Unions in Politics

WASHINGTON, May 22—The Smith-Hoffman bills denying unions the right to political activity "are basically un-democratic and anti-American," Philip Porter, UAW-CIO representative here, told the House Judiciary Committee in testimony presented on behalf of Legislative Director Nathan Cowan for the CIO.

The two bills, (Smith HR 1214, Hoffman HR 2463) are demagogically aimed at both unions and corporations, despite the fact that existing law prohibits corporations from making financial contributions to political parties. Thus, Porter explained, they were in reality aimed at choking off political action by unions, since rich individuals can contribute as much as they like.

"The proposed bills are nothing more than proposals to prohibit union members from voting freely and democratically to use their own funds to make a contribution for the support of public candidates," he said.

Wealthy individuals and families can make huge slush fund gifts amounting to millions of dollars without a word against them, while a union cannot take up a collection or vote funds to a win-the-war candidate in Congress.

Smith, (polltaxer, Va.) and Hoffman, a hard-bitten appeaser from Michigan, are among the most notorious enemies of labor and the worst disrupters of morale and the war drive in Washington. They have been trying to get such bills passed for years. Porter declared.

In addition, Porter urged defeat of the Patman bill (HR 147), which would subject countless people, in government agencies and out of them, to criminal persecution, and which is so "vague, incoherent and sweeping" that it would paralyze much of the conduct of the war if passed.

Alex McGowan Of UAW Dies

Buffalo, N. Y., May 22—Alex D. McGowan, co-regional director for the United Automobile Workers in this area since 1941, died suddenly this week following an operation, it was announced at local UAW headquarters.

In a statement following his death, the UAW said that McGowan had spent most of his 37 years in the labor movement and that since his arrival here from Scotland 15 years ago, he had been a militant union leader.

Hit Connally Bill

Washington, May 22—Strong protest against the Smith-Connally anti-strike bill and the Ruml tax plan was voiced this week by the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council.

End Wage Inequalities

The War Labor Board recently held that it had no power to grant equal pay for equal work by women, unless the President's hold-the-line executive order was clarified.

This is one of the many shocking results of the omission in this order to continue the Board's powers to remedy wage inequalities.

As a result of the vigorous protest of the CIO, Stabilization Director Byrnes issued an interpretation of the President's order that recognized the basic need for the Board to make wage adjustments to meet inequalities and to aid in the prosecution of the war.

At its Cleveland board meeting, however, the CIO pointed out that Byrnes' directive imposes restrictions on the Board whereby present going rates for any occupation within any labor market area will not be subject to change, regardless of prevailing inequalities.

"Thus discrimination will still continue," the CIO said, "in that workers of the same company or within the same industry doing substantially the same kind of work will because of many reasons, such as race, sex or employer discrimination, be paid different wages."

Some of the worst cases of unequal pay arise from Negro workers being paid less than whites, and women being paid less than men. Nothing is so disruptive of labor morale and united war effort as discriminations like these.

That is why the CIO is so urgently demanding that the War Labor Board be given increased powers to aid the prosecution of the war by ending many present gross wage inequalities and injustices.

The Board has made a great contribution and proved the vital importance of its war work. This has been further shown by the chaos resulting from recent attempts to clip its powers. Along with enlarged powers, the Board should be given final authority to remedy inequalities, without the interference of Stabilization Director Byrnes.

Tough On The AFL

After fighting off the proffered embraces of John L. Lewis ever since he left the CIO, the AFL executive council has finally been maneuvered into considering his application for affiliation.

The CIO is big-hearted enough to be able to commiserate with its sometime rival on this misfortune.

From experience, we can warn the AFL that Lewis's embrace will not be tender and will leave them badly mauled, if they succumb to it.

Nor will the AFL be the only one to suffer. For Lewis will add his weight to that of reactionary America First and anti-Roosevelt leaders in the AFL and endanger control by the present win-the-war majority. This could only have most serious results for all labor and for our war effort.

Furthermore, the divisive influence of the power-greedy Lewis will be thrown against the present healthy trend to closer and closer labor unity.

The AFL council should re-read the fable about the frogs who wanted a king—and who finally got a stork to gobble them up—before it makes its final decision on Lewis.

X Marks the Spot

"And one of those men was Mr. X, who swore by every God that ever sat on high that he would never waver in the cause, and he signed the scroll and by book, bell and candle vowed to affiliate to this movement (the CIO). And where is Mr. X today? He has crept back into the American Federation of Labor. He abandoned his fellows and he abandoned what he claimed was his principle. And he has gone into that organization on his adversary's terms."

That is what John L. Lewis said in November, 1940. But he didn't say "Mr. X." He wasn't talking about himself, but about another fellow. We've inserted Mr. X, because X marks the spot where Lewis is today.

But Lewis also spoke of himself on that occasion. He said:

"It just happened that some of those organizations that they (the AFL) were willing to let come back in by themselves and unsupported are not willing to desert and betray the other organizations. The United Mine Workers of America is one of these organizations. . . . . And it is true, if I know the temper of the membership of the United Mine Workers, that they do not propose now or in the future to return to the American Federation of Labor and be led by a man who betrayed them."

Ho! Hum!

LOOKING AHEAD

By Len De Caux

THE real story of the Cleveland CIO conference is the thumping victory for Philip Murray's win-the-war policies.

Exploiting labor's real grievances over fixed wages and unfixed prices, John L. Lewis and his followers have sought to turn the workers to strike action, against Roosevelt, against the War Labor Board, against any sane anti-inflation program, and generally to switch labor off the victory track.

They bragged of inroads even into the CIO. But the Cleveland conference gave CIO's answer. Not a voice was raised nor a vote cast for the Lewis line. Let the unanimously adopted program speak:

Support for the Commander-in-Chief. Tories and defeatists in Congress, and Lewis followers in labor, have sought to direct all discontent against Roosevelt—thus disrupting national unity for all-out war effort.

But the CIO emphatically reaffirmed its complete support of our Commander-in-Chief. Most of our present troubles, it was noted, are due to Congressional and administrative sabotage of his seven-point anti-inflation program.

Labor's No-Strike Pledge. Lewis has broken his own no-strike pledge, and a few followers have talked of withdrawing theirs. As a result, all labor is now threatened with the most vicious union-busting legislation.

But the CIO reaffirmed its no-strike pledge, with no strings whatever, as an unconditional war pledge to our country and to our fighting men.

It denounced the Connally-Smith bills as an insult and a provocation that can only sabotage morale and productive efficiency.

Wages and War Labor Board. Both Lewis and the labor-baiting tory-defeatist crowd have long directed their fire against the War Labor Board, seeking to scrap it. The recent stripping of the Board's powers to remedy wage inequalities played right into their hands.

The CIO has led the fight to restore these powers to the Board. It has won recognition of this basic need in Stabilization Director Byrnes' recent directive, though this would still leave many gross inequalities uncorrected.

The CIO therefore demanded larger powers and final authority for the Board to remedy inequalities, without dictation from Byrnes.

Inflated Living Costs. Lewis and tory-defeatist profiteers sneer at or sabotage all attempts at inflation-control. Congress and lax administrators have played into their hands.

But the CIO demands action to bring living costs in reach of wages and to stop inflation. It calls for a roll-back of all prices to September levels, for subsidies to make this possible, for incentive payments and credits to farmers to increase food production, and for rationing of all necessities.

Taxes and Manpower. Lewis and his crowd make demagogic references to war profiteering. But their anti-Roosevelt line plays the game of the profiteers in opposing a win-the-war tax program.

The CIO, on the other hand, supports Roosevelt's demand for limiting individual net incomes to $25,000 and dumping the Ruml grab-plan for the rich.

It demands complete elimination of war profits above the 1939 level and taxation based on ability to pay, that will leave low-income groups with enough for all living necessities.

The CIO leads the fight against job-freezing edicts that will only freeze substandard wages, injustice and chaos.

But while the Lewis crowd makes only disruptive propaganda, the CIO offers a constructive solution to manpower problems through the democratic machinery of joint labor-management committees, and through the total war mobilization proposed in the Tolan-Pepper-Kilgore bills.

The CIO conference paid glowing tribute to the wise and courageous leadership of Philip Murray, which contrasts so sharply with Lewis's reckless sabotage of labor and war interests.

Under Murray's leadership, the CIO has grown to unprecedented strength and has been responsible for every substantial economic safeguard or improvement that labor has won for some time.

It was the CIO that won portal-to-portal pay in metal mining. If the coal miners also win it, they will owe it to CIO. It was Murray too who won the 48-hour week in steel, with full overtime rates.

Labor and the whole American people can also thank the CIO, under Murray's leadership, for the guidance it now offers along the only road that will advance both labor's and the country's interests—the road of all-out effort for victory.

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

April 20, 1943

Dear Mr

The Hearst Newspapers and Magazines believe that immediate action should be taken by Americans in regard to certain thinking on grade labeling at Washington.

On the chance that you may have missed an editorial on grade labeling that appeared recently in all Hearst newspapers I am sending you a reprint.

You may wish to express your views to your Congressman on the abolishment of brand names in America.

Sincerely,

R. E. Berlin

'GRADE A' CONSPIRACY:

This is a letter sent by the Hearst Corp,, which has spearheaded the nationwide conspiracy to prevent the grade labeling of canned food. Of course nowhere in the editorial enclosed with the letter is any mention made of the millions in revenue that Hearst newspapers receive from the big canners.

War Output Lags As Army Cries For Guns, UAW Charges

WASHINGTON, May 22—Increases in civilian output while war production lags seriously were charged by UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas in testimony before the Senate Kilgore Committee here this week. Thomas' charges were underlined by UAW Secretary-Treasurer George F. Addes, who added that labor plans for stepping up output were constantly given the brush-off by industry.

"Why should we slow down production now when the big fight against the Axis is just ahead of us," Thomas asked, revealing that the auto industry was turning out only eight billions of war goods while it could easily turn out 12 billions worth. We will be lucky, he said, if we get 80 per cent of our schedued turnout of even our present insufficient goals.

Both UAW leaders called for passage of the Tolan-Kilgore-Pepper bill to create an Office of War Mobilization that would end confusion, overlapping and lack of central planning. This bill, (S 607) has been stalled now in the Senate Military Affairs Committee for weeks.

Thomas accused certain government agencies, as well as corporations, of sticking to business-as-usual at the expense of the war. Addes cited an example of workers going ahead with a war production committee over company opposition, thereby sharply increasing output—only to be met with a sharp refusal by the company to permit any expansion of the set-up.

Urge 2nd Front

London, May 22, (ALN)—A call for a second front in Europe and "complete military cooperation between Britain, America, the Soviet Union and China" was put forward this week by the Scottish Trades Union Congress at its annual convention in Aberdeen. More than 500,000 Scottish workers were represented at the convention.

CIO Delegates Storm Washington, Ask Pro-War Action

WASHINGTON, May 22—More delegations of CIO people, representing over 500,000 CIO members in mid-western states came to call on Congress and the government war agencies this week.

The delegation coming from Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa, was led by Albert E. Glenn, state vice-president; George Nordstrom, UAW regional director; Harold Christoffel, Milwaukee CIO president, and others, and represented all CIO unions in the mid-west area.

As one of the delegates pointed out: "We're here to do something for the war, something that's badly needed. There's a great deal of indignation and unrest back home—unrest about wage freezes, inflated prices, food shortages and failure to control living costs. The workers sent us here with their nickels and dimes. We're going to find out what's wrong, and correct it."

In their interview with Chairman Davis of the War Labor Board, the delegates talked on wage inequities, differentials in pay between men and women doing the same work, substandard wages, and the freezing of WLB cases. Davis promised "positive action" on their complaints.

CALL ON OPA

In calling on the OPA, the delegation stressed the price rollback, the need for dollars and cents ceilings, and the workers' demand for an end to truckling to the canners on quality grade labelling. They also told OPA of the volunteer price warden system they were setting up on a ward and block basis in the home communities.

In their talk with Chester Davis, food administrator, they stressed the demand for a real subsidy program, both at grower and distributor levels, to make the price rollback a reality.

"This is only a forerunner of plenty more delegations," one of the leaders said. "We'll keep 'em coming until the whole of Washington gets on the 'victory beam'."

'Farming As Usual' Hit, Victory Food Plan Urged By CIO Cannery Union

WASHINGTON, May 22—Full use of all U. S. and United Nations resources for food production and an end to the enormous waste of land, labor, materials and shipping on non-essential crops is an absolute necessity for the European offensive against Hitler, the CIO Cannery and Agricultural Workers said this week in releasing a "United Nations Food Plan."

The plan, timed with the United Nations Food Conference now going on in Hot Springs, Va., was announced by UCAPAWA President Donald Henderson, who also called for an immediate investigation of the food production crisis by the Senate Kilgore Committee.

"The U. S. and the United Nations face a critical shortage of food, not only for today's war needs but even more critically for those of the future," Henderson said in announcing the plan.

"The resources, in manpower, land and machinery exist in the U. S. for an adequate food supply now and in the future. Together with all of the United Nations we can produce and distribute enough food to win the war and secure the peace.

Courage Needed

"All that is required is the courage and the sense to force agriculture in the U. S. away from peacetime methods to those of wartime."

Declaring that the blame for shortages lies "squarely on the refusal of Congress, the government agencies and the farm bloc to give up farming-as-usual and turn to farming for victory," the CIO union called for a four-point plan that would assure ample food production and thus make economic stabilization and the price roll-back a reality.

It is no use to have a price roll-back unless the war workers can get the rolled back foods, the union said, urging:

(1) Conversion of agriculture from non-essential crops to victory crops.

(2) Full use of land, manpower and other farm resources now being wasted.

(3) Incentive payments where needed to boost output.

(4) Full use of all United Nations food resources to save manpower, shipping and other resources needed for war.

Pointing out that the United Nations Food Conference shows "the urgency of the Allied food problem," the CIO union emphasized the need for "overall planning on a national and United Nations scale. To deal with food production, price control and wage stabilization separately threatens the victory drive of the U. S. and our allies," the union stated.

Food Wasted

Citing instances of food production waste abroad, the CIO plan pointed out that surpluses of corn and flaxseed are today burned in the Argentine, while U. S. farmers are urged to grow more of these products.

Food raising possibilities in North Africa are being completely neglected, while we use critically needed shipping space to send food over there from this country.

"The most criminal waste is in the huge cargoes of nitrates sent from Chile to the U. S., where they are used to produce more cotton for the warehouses," the plan said in urging a halt to production of un-needed cotton and the conversion of cotton land and labor to food crops.

A two years' supply of cotton is lying today in U. S. warehouses, all of it the short staple kind that is no use in war production. Despite this, farm bloc pressure on Congress and the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has resulted in increases rather than decreases in allotments to cotton.

Plan Would Aid War

Proper planning could make the United Nations not only self-sufficient in many areas, but could also add to the total allied food stockpile, the union pointed out, citing the lagging meat production in Brazil, Africa, the Argentine, the Middle East and southern Asia as examples of underproduction.

"As another result of our flat failure to plan food production," the union said, "the U. S. is falling down on its lend-lease commitments. For example, shipments to the Soviet Union are far below not only the requested amounts but even below our promises.

"On occasion, our Soviet allies have received some rather shocking substitutes — as happened when linseed oil was substituted for meat."

In surveying the U. S. resources for food production, the union pointed to the fact that "half again as much usable crop land lay idle in 1942 as was cultivated. Our acreage in crops could be expanded by at least 40 million acres."

No Labor Shortage

There is no real shortage of farm labor, despite farm bloc claims and "loud demands for a freeze of farm workers." The trouble is caused by waste of labor on non-war crops, such as cotton—which will take about one-third of all farm labor man-hours in 1943, unless conversion is carried out.

Another prime resource that is neglected, due to the farm bloc and to lack of planning, is the small farmer, some one million of whom are not now in food production. Aid by the Farm Security Administration — scuttled by the farm bloc in Congress— would bring these farmers into full war production.

Similarly, machinery, fertilizer and other materials are being wasted, either on non-war crops or by not being used to full capacity.

In addition to conversion and an end to waste, top food production demands an adequate subsidy program, both for the grower and at distribution points, the CIO plan said. This must be done with full labor representation at all stages in the planning process.

Vacations Ordered

Washington, May 22—The American Car & Foundry Co., was directed this week by the War Labor Board to make provision for vacations in the contract with the CIO Marine & Shipbuilding Workers, representing the company's 1100 employes at Wilmington, Del.

The order also directed that if vacations were found impractical "in the interests of war production," the workers should receive full vacation pay while continuing to work.

Auxiliaries Back Price Cut Drive

(See Picture, Page 7)

Windsor, May 22—A national campaign to enlist every woman who does the buying for a CIO home in the CIO drive for enforcement of price ceilings and roll back of prices was planned by the Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO, which met in Cleveland May 15 and 16.

The Board voted unanimously to make this campaign the central national activity of the organization and to urge every auxiliary to join in carrying out the plan. The first step will be national distribution of a simple leaflet explaining to each housewife her duty to check prices, to report violations and to refuse to buy any rationed commodity without surrendering the proper coupons.

FULL AID TO CIO

The auxiliary Board pledged its support to the CIO victory program in a resolution unanimously adopted which pointed out the important role auxiliaries can play in the legislative and political action program of the CIO.

A second resolution adopted unanimously by the Board dealt with the importance of adequate wartime child care facilities and called for appropriation of additional federal funds to help finance nurseries and before and after school care projects.

The importance of low cost eating facilities to the health of industrial workers was pointed out in a resolution which calls on Food Administrator Chester Davis to act quickly to establish low cost restaurants where workers in industry can be assured of one hot meal daily in addition to home rations.

Keep Your Eye on Congress

The Smith-Connally-Lewis bill (S 796) continues to be the number 1 item on the anti-union, anti-war morale agenda in Congress this week. It can be called up any time by any member of the House Rules Committee after Monday, May 24. Rush wires to your Congressman while there's still time.

The 1943 tax bill has gone to a Conference Committee of both Houses, following House rejection of the Senate's Ruml plan. Keep after both your Senators and your Congressman. The House favors the Robertson-Forand pay-as-you-go-bill, which forgives less to the rich than Ruml.

BILL	WHAT IT DOES	WHERE IT IS	ACTION
Smith-Connally (S 796)	Kills union rights, knocks out War Labor Board, Wagner Act.	Can be called up this week for House vote.	Keep wires pouring in on your Representative.
1943 tax bill		In House-Senate Conference Committee; Senate for Ruml tax grab, House rejects it.	Wire your Representative against Ruml, for Robertson-Forand as lesser grab.
McKellar (S 575)	Hamstrings U. S. war agencies by putting employes under patronage.	Ready for Senate floor vote, and still a real danger to the war.	Write your Senators against.
Hobbs (HR 653)	Hamstrings unions, slashes morale under "anti-racketeering" mask.	Passed by House, can be taken up in Senate any time.	Keep after your Senators for vote against.
Smith (HR 1214)	Prohibits political activities of unions. One of many similar bills.	In House Judiciary Committee, hearings under Polltaxer Sam Hobbs.	Keep after your Representatives against this and all similar measures.

NOTE: the polltax repeal bill comes up for debate Monday, May 24. Work on your Senators needed now. Only absenteeism in the House can kill it there. If we've done our job, the bill will have passed the House as you read this.

The Civilian War Front

Food Distribution Is New Problem Plaguing Nation

By the CIO COST OF LIVING COMMITTEE

Serious as is the problem of rising food prices, it is now being topped by the problem of proper allocation and distribution of the food supply.

This problem is equally critical in the case of certain unrationed foods like potatoes and in the case of rationed items such as meat. In the case of both items, we see scarce supplies being drained off to black markets, and we see also a breakdown of the proper distribution of the supplies that are available in the legal markets.

Some regions have a good supply of meat; others have little or no meat at all.

We used to be told that rationing is a solution to supply problems. Labor groups never accepted this doctrine. They knew from the experience of England and other countries that strict control and allocation of supplies before they reach retail outlets is necessary to make a rationing system work, and it is even more necessary to distribute commodities that cannot for the moment be rationed.

The experience with the meat supply has confirmed labor's contentions. From various parts of the country, notably the Far West, come reports that there is no meat to honor ration stamps.

STARVED FOR MEAT

In New Mexico metal miners have complained that they have been able to get only about one-eighth of the meat they are entitled to under their ration allowance.

The OPA and the War Food Administration have finally recognized the problem by creating a War Meat Board for the management of the nation's meat supply. Unfortunately labor and consumer groups—who have been the chief proponents of a system of meat allocation—are excluded from representation on the board.

The board comprises representatives of the OPA, the WFA and the meat packers. These are the same groups that have mismanaged meat distribution until now.

LABOR REPRESENTATION NEEDED

Not only will labor and consumer groups have to secure proper representation on the food distribution, but it has become apparent that strong measures—possibly including government purchase of basic agricultural commodities—will have to be employed before a real solution can be reached.

In the case of meat, this would mean government purchase of all livestock offered for sale, as well as government purchase of the output of the packers.

Great Britain found that only through government ownership of supplies and complete control of distribution can essential foods be safeguarded from black markets and distributed fairly to meet all of the nation's needs.

Blame OPA For Black Market

New York, May 22—Development of a black market in the food industry was blamed on the OPA in a resolution adopted at the second annual conference of Local 338, Retail, Wholesale & Chain Store Employes Union, held here last weekend.

Other resolutions pledged continued support to President Roosevelt; condemned the Connally anti-labor bill, and demanded "that government agencies take the necessary steps to roll back prices to the September 15, 1942, level or permit the necessary adjustment in wages to meet the increased cost of living."

Murray J. Kudish, president of Local 338, reported that 2,000 members of the local are serving in the armed forces and that another thousand men were given permission by the union to leave shops and work in war industries with the provision that after the war they can return to full membership in the union.

Back Furloughs For Farmers

Washington, May 15—Leaves of absence to permit industrial workers living on small farms to plant and harvest crops were advocated this week in a joint statement issued by Chariman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission and War Food Administrator Chester Davis, and suggested by the United Auto Workers Union.

The statement, which was an outcome of recent meetings between WMC and WFA officials and representatives of the UAW, pointed out that many industrial workers living on the outskirts of industrial cities have plots of ground that might be used for growing vegetables and other food products.

Auxiliaries Pledge Full Aid to CIO Victory Program

By ELEANOR FOWLER
Secretary-Treasurer, CIO Women's Auxiliaries

"President Murray and the CIO have shown the American people how to give effective support to our Commander-in-Chief in his program for unconditional surrender of the fascist enemy. We pledge ourselves, as wives, mothers, sisters and daughters of CIO members to do everything in our power to help to carry out the Victory program of the CIO."

That's part of the resolution unanimously adopted in Cleveland May 15 by the Executive Board of the Congress of Women's Auxiliaries of the CIO. It goes on to point out that the auxiliaries are in a position to give particularly effective help in the CIO campaign to enforce price ceilings and roll prices back to the September 15, 1942 level.

The first step in the action program, planned by the Board, in which every auxiliary is being asked to participate, is distribution to every CIO housewife of a simple leaflet explaining to her her duty in enforcement of current ceilings and in combatting the black market.

The Executive Board recognized that enforcement of present ceilings is only a part of the job. The big job is the roll-back and until there is roll-back it's going to be hard to get enthusiastic cooperation from housewives in the enforcement program.

LETTER TO BROWN

We sent a letter about that to Prentiss Brown. We told him that the new meat ceilings are above the chain store prices we have been paying. We said:

"It is utterly inadequate and completely destructive of confidence to meet that situation by appealing to chain stores to keep their prices 10% under the ceiling. Chain store meat prices must be officially set at their proper low level so that housewives may be protected by legal ceilings."

In the same letter we demanded immediate extension of ceilings with real roll-back to fresh fruit and vegetable prices. We protested the complicated nature of the new price order with its four classes of stores and asked that that be simplified as soon as possible to provide for two classes only, as in the meat price orders.

DISTURBED BY APPEASEMENT

Finally we told Mr. Brown that we were disturbed by the extent to which he was ready to appease big business interests as evidenced by his abandonment of grade labeling and his repeated postponement of the price order on rayon hose.

But it isn't enough for the Auxiliary executive board to write letters to Mr. Brown. He's got to have letters from auxiliaries and from auxiliary members all over the country saying the same thing. And all our Congressmen must get letters, too, asking them to put pressure on Mr. Brown to do a real job.

Check Cleaning Bill With Ceiling Prices

By SUNNY PRESSMAN

Now that the warm weather is here, the very next job you are probably planning to tackle is setting up house for the summer. This year, especially, we'll all be taking special care in putting away our winter woolens. Many of us will think twice about packing them away without having them cleaned first. After all, they'll have to give us extra wear for the next few years. That's going to mean an extra item in the budget and by no means a small one.

You may not know it, but OPA has set ceiling prices for dry cleaning establishments as far back as March, 1942. Ceiling prices were set for every dry cleaning store in every community .

The cleaners are not required to post these prices. But they are required to show them to a customer upon request. There is no guarantee, however, that the cleaner will stick to those prices. But if you feel that you are being overcharged, you can do something about it.

First, see that you get a receipt with the date on it. Then ask the cleaner to show you his ceiling price list. If he refuses or claims that he doesn't have such a list, take your receipt to the OPA office in your community and explain the situation. They will be glad to check your price with their list for that particular store.

If you were overcharged, you can file suit against the cleaner, and if you can prove your case, you can recover $50 plus attorney's fees. If you have any questions about what to do, consult your local OPA office. It's worth looking into.

AUXILIARY COOK BOOK

And here is something else worth looking into—the CIO Auxiliary Cook Book. This cook book is made up of favorite recipes submitted by members of the Los Angeles Auxiliary. These recipes are especially adapted to meet war-time shortages.

It will save you precious time in planning your meals. Just scan through the booklet and you'll find dishes for hot or cold weather, main dishes of meat, fish or meat substitutes, dishes made of macaroni, rice and beans to pinch hit for the disappearing potato, salads, nourishing and easy to fix, cakes and cookies, good for desserts at home and at the factory.

The booklet is attractively set up and sells for 25 cents. Congratulations to the Los Angeles Auxiliary for a job well done!

Write for a copy to Los Angeles Auxiliary Council, CIO, 5851 So. Avalon Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif.

RECIPE

After a busy day getting your house in order for the warm weather, here is a simple and appetizing dish to fix for dinner.

BAKED COD

Sliced fish, sliced onion, sliced tomato, grated cheese, salt, pepper.

Place slices of fish in shallow baking dish. Dot with butter, salt, pepper. Place slice of onion and slice of fresh tomato on top of each slice of fish. Sprinkle with cheese, if desired. Bake 15 or 20 minutes.—Marcia Brown Auxiliary, UFWA, No. 576.

Hail Murray's All-Out War Leadership

CLEVELAND, O., May 22—The CIO Executive Board this week unanimously expressed "its deepest appreciation to CIO President Philip Murray for his wise guidance and courageous leadership" which cemented "beyond attack the unity of the CIO behind all-out support of the nation's war effort."

This unity, the board stated in a resolution, "assures our Commander in Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, that his decision to proceed forward to smash the Axis enemies until their unconditional tional surrender shall be fully supported by the entire nation."

The resolution on Murray, which hailed "his inspirational leadership," was in sharp contrast to one on John L. Lewis, which accused the United Mine Workers' leader of using "the legitimate grievances of labor for irresponsible personal and political aggrandizement and with a studied indifference to our entire war effort."

The full resolution on Murray follows:

WHEREAS, in the face of the severe problems and difficult tasks which have arisen for the people of our nation in the course of the development of our war effort to obtain the objective of unconditional surrender of the Axis enemies, the CIO has maintained a constant and forthright policy which has created the basis for unity among all people behind our Commander-in-Chief;

2. This accomplishment has been possible only because of the inspirational leadership demonstrated by our president, Philip Murray, who has defied and defeated all elements in our nation which sought, without any success, to sow the seeds of disunity in the ranks of labor and elsewhere and endeavored fruitlessly to weaken the wholehearted support of labor to the war effort and to the CIO policies.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this extraordinary meeting of the Executive Board of the CIO and our representatives of all the international unions and state councils;

Deep Appreciation

1. Expresses its deepest appreciation to President Philip Murray for his wise guidance and courageous leadership which by cementing beyond attack the unity of the CIO behind all-out support of the nation's war effort and assures our Commander-in-Chief, Franklin D. Roosevelt, that his decision to proceed forward to smash the Axis enemies until their unconditional surrender shall be fully supported by the entire nation.

2. Pledges to proceed immediately toward the establishment of all necessary committees within each local union throughout the nation; through them the fullest information regarding the CIO program will be brought to the attention of the entire membership and with whose aid we shall endeavor to mobilize the support of not only our own membership but of groups of all other citizens in the local communities behind the CIO program whose decisions shall be conveyed to the members of Congress and appropriate Executive Officials.

Portal-to-Portal Pay Won By CIO Before It Was Gleam in Lewis' Eye

WASHINGTON, May 22—Portal-to-portal pay, by which miners are paid from the time they enter the mine until they come up on top again, was won by the CIO long ago and was rejected by John L. Lewis, CIO President Philip Murray revealed at the Cleveland Executive Board meeting.

According to President Murray's account, the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers won portal-to-portal pay from three big companies in Birmingham, Ala., when court action sustained the Wage Hour Division's order against Republic Steel, Tennessee Coal and Iron, and Sloss-Sheffield Steel—three of the biggest in the business.

Lewis had the same chance to get the same agreement, Murray pointed out, but rejected it at the time. Attorneys for the Mine Workers declared then it would upset traditional methods of payment and "result in work stoppages."

The original order won by the CIO was first sustained by the U. S. District Court in August, 1941 and finally upheld by the U. S. Circuit Court in New Orleans in March of this year.

Lewis' refusal to use this simple method of getting the point he now clamors for came in a letter from UMWA Counsel Earl Houck to Col. Fleming, then head of the Wage-Hour Division, to whom the Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers first applied.

Hit Rickenbacker

San Francisco, May 22—Ex-Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker this week was branded as "not only a foe to wage earners, but also to our country in that his present villification of unions and union men and women tends to create disunity and to imperil our all-out war effort." The criticism came from the San Francisco-Oakland Newspaper Guild, in a resolution unanimously adopted at a membership meeting.

Blast Lewis' Stand As Anti-Victory

CLEVELAND, O., May 22—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers Union, has used "the legitimate grievances of labor for irresponsible personal and political aggrandizement and with a studied indifference to our entire war effort." That was the charge hurled at the recently concluded CIO Executive Board meeting here, and endorsed unanimously by CIO leaders present.

In an earlier resolution, the CIO Board went on record supporting the economic demands of the miners, urging them not to strike but to use established government agencies to seek satisfaction.

Pointing to Lewis' attack on the War Labor Board, the CIO Board stated:

"This man has consistently schemed to undermine duly established war-time agencies which have sought in this emergency to substitute conciliation for strikes and lock-outs."

The full CIO resolution on Lewis follows:

CIO Puts War First

"It has been the position of the Congress of Industrial Organizations that the welfare of the Nation is paramount to all things, in peacetime and in war. The entire program of the CIO has been directed toward that end.

"Nothing must jeopardize the winning of the war.

"In times of emotional stress the labor movement of this country must be particularly wary of any person or element which seeks to substitute for sane and democratic processes willful and revengeful dictation.

"Labor's rights must be protected—vigorously protected—but they must be protected within the framework of rational procedure. Public servants and leaders of labor must follow this tenet.

Condemn Lewis

"On the basis of these principles the CIO must condemn the actions of John L. Lewis and any others who reject established procedures for equitable adjustments of labor's true grievances.

"This man has consistently schemed to undermine duly established war-time agencies which have sought in this emergency to substitute conciliation for strikes and lock-outs.

"This is particularly true in his attacks on the War Labor Board which was established through the unanimous consent of labor, including Mr. Lewis.

Vicious Attacks

"He has done this in public utterances and more viciously through his personally directed publication which has carried repeated and wholly unwarranted attacks on spokesmen for the CIO who are loyally supporting both our government and our labor movement.

"He has jeopardized the just demands of the United Mine Workers of America by exploiting the injustices in the mining industry in furtherance of his personal and political vendetta against the President of the United States, our Commander-in-Chief.

"He persists in these activities although he must know that they endanger the very existence of our Nation and the lives of the millions of Americans on the front, including many thousands in the Armed Service from the coal mines.

"The CIO has stated its position in regard to the equitable proposals put forth in behalf of the miners, but in loyalty to our country and in the interest of the labor movement we must emphatically denounce any individual who seeks to use the legitimate grievances of labor for irresponsible personal and political aggrandizement and with a studied indifference to our entire war effort."

Metropolitan Life, Biggest Insurance Firm In Nation, Signs With UOPWA

NEW YORK, May 22—A contract covering 2,000 industrial insurance agents in Greater New York was signed this week between the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. and the United Office & Professional Workers of America.

The contract shows a recognition of the growing strength of the UOPWA in the insurance field. Metropolitan Life, largest insurance corporation in the nation, signed the contract after a history of many years' fight to resist the organization of the industrial insurance agents.

A clause in the contract provides the War Labor Board shall determine the amount of increased compensation to be given.

UNION SECURITY

The agreement provides for union security, dues deduction, arbitration of all disputes through an arbitrator to be appointed by the American Arbitration Association, paid vacations and recognition of seniority rights in promotions.

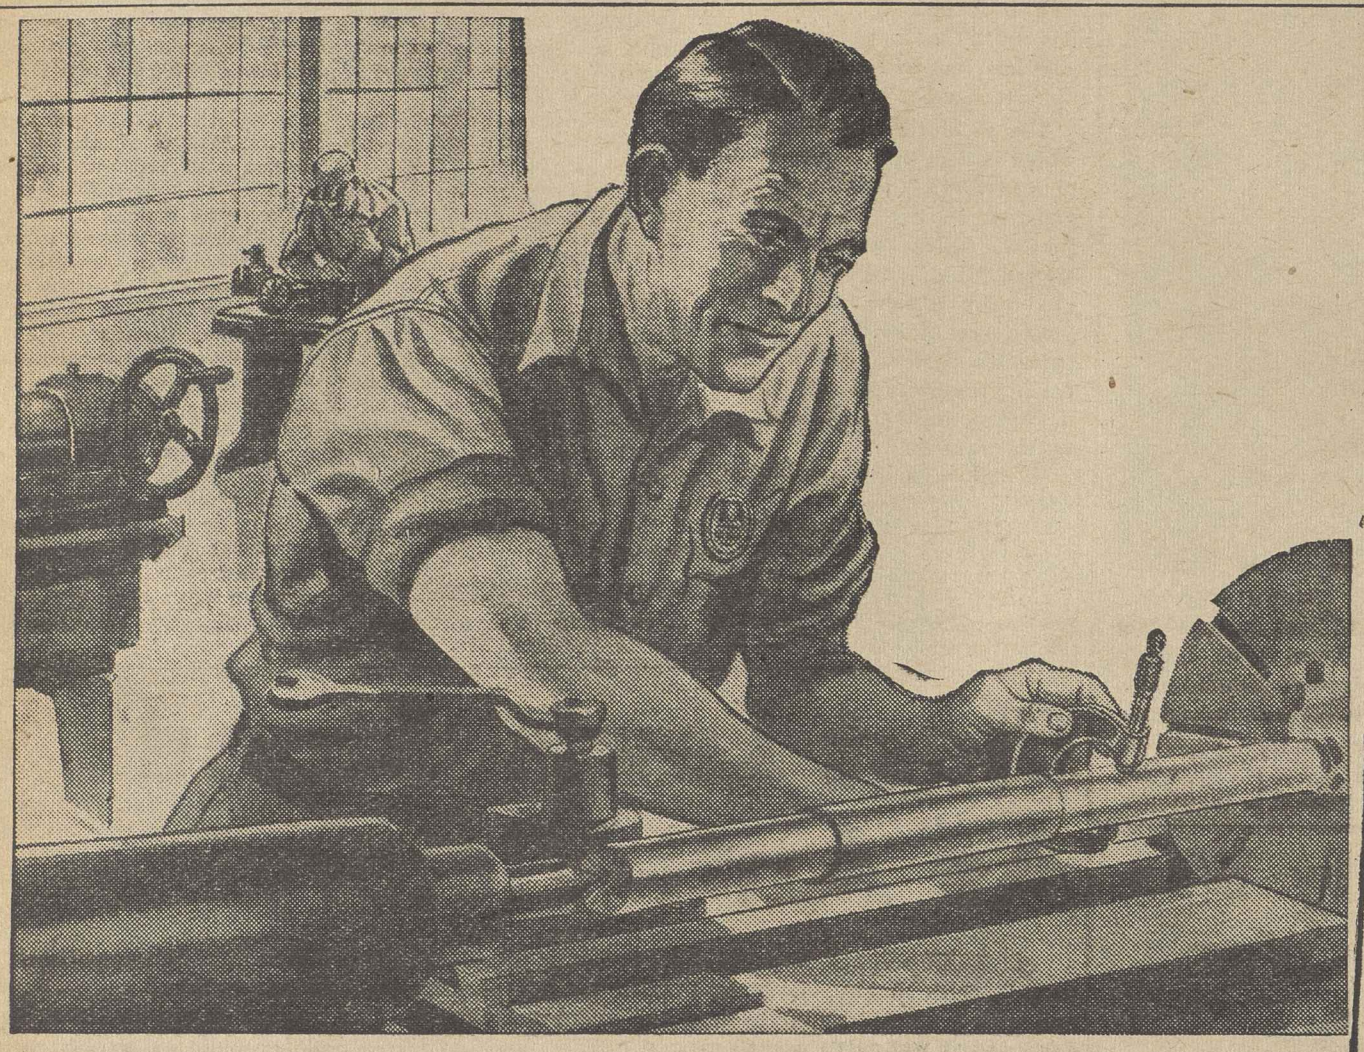
A clause in the contract gives agents leave of absence with pay for attendance at union conventions. One clause permits a leave of absence up to two years to be granted to any agent who wishes to take a full time position with the union.

ACA Wins Pay Hikes Up To 41½c an Hour for Western Union Workers

New York, May 22—Pay vouchers of all Western Union employes in the company's metropolitan division here were higher this week as the result of an increase negotiated by the American Communications Association, the CIO union announced here. Individual raises ranged up to 41½ cents an hour, or $86.30 a month, the ACA stated.

Retroactive pay due the employes amounting to $800,000 will be paid within the next month. More than 1,880 workers or about 60 per cent of the employe group, received increases of $20 or more a month, and 785 workers, or 25 per cent, received $30 or more.

In some cases workers with 25, 35 and 50 years' service received a raise for the first time since 1926 or 1929, the union said.



"In which we serve"

THE achievement of American industry and American agriculture in the war to date is one of the miracles of modern times.

In factories, offices, farms and laboratories in every State in the Union . . . in aircraft plants, steel mills, shipyards and railroad yards . . . in iron mines, lumber camps, wheat fields, textile mills . . . in oil fields, power plants, canneries, distilleries—labor and management are pooling the might of an aroused people prepared to give, as our men on the fighting fronts are giving, their "full measure of devotion" for victory.

They know, as our men in arms know, that we are fighting the gravest threat in the history of this nation—a threat to those freedoms which we call our American way of life. Freedom to have and to hold the things that are our own. Freedom to worship according to our beliefs . . . to educate our children as we choose . . . to think what we please, say what we please, do what we please.

Not all of us can carry guns. Not all of us can even make guns. But we've learned one thing so far—there are no civilians in an all-out war.

There are war jobs for all of us to do on the home front. Check the column on the right and see how well YOU are serving your country. Do it now.

In the tremendous contribution to the winning of the war that is being made by American industry, National Distillers is doing its part. This organization, like the rest of the distilling industry, is devoting 100% of its production facilities to the manufacture of alcohol for war purposes—for munitions, rubber, medicines and other essential war needs.

Check this list and ask yourself:

"HOW WELL AM I SERVING MY COUNTRY?"

- I regularly buy War Stamps and Bonds—at least 10% of my income.
- I avoid unnecessary expenditures in order to help prevent inflation.
- I cheerfully observe all rationing regulations and do not hoard.
- I budget my ration points carefully and don't waste food.
- I work where I can do the most good for the war effort.
- I get to work on time and am never avoidably absent.
- I do my best to stay healthy.
- I do my best to avoid accidents, especially if I work in a war plant.
- I watch what I say and spread no rumors.
- I conserve tires and gasoline.
- I share my car with others.
- I travel only when absolutely necessary.
- I carry my own bundles when shopping to save manpower, gas and tires.
- I contribute to the Red Cross and all War Relief funds.
- I save and turn in scrap metal, used cooking fats and other needed materials.
- I do Civilian Defense work.
- I work with the Red Cross or other volunteer groups.
- I am a regular blood donor.
- I volunteer for Nurse's Aide work.
- I pay my taxes on time and in full.
- I do community social service work.
- I am prepared to quietly cooperate with the F.B.I. in apprehending suspicious persons.
- I am planting a Victory garden.
- I contribute books to the men in the service.
- I write to friends and relatives in the service.
- I observe dimout and blackout regulations to the letter.

This list, of course, is not complete. Every man, woman and child will find many other ways to help. Check this list with your neighbors and find out what they are doing. But get going! Do all you can! And do it now! Consult your local Civilian Defense Council for further information.

Furniture Union Praises Murray's Victory Program

CLEVELAND, May 22—The United Furniture Workers Union, first CIO international to meet after last week's special Board meeting, this week took its third biennial convention as a new opportunity to support the victory program of CIO Pres. Philip Murray and to renew unqualified support of President Roosevelt's war leadership.

Meeting under the leadership of Morris Muster, president; Ernest Marsh, secretary-treasurer; and Jack Hochstadt, organization director, the 300 delegates heard first-hand reports from CIO leaders who were out here for the Board meeting. Featured speakers included Joseph Curran, Allan S. Haywood, R. J. Thomas, Reid Robinson and James B. Carey.

Haywood's detailed review of the Board meeting was also marked by a vigorous denunciation of John L. Lewis as a disrupter and wrecker of war unity. Thomas spoke on similar lines, stressing the win-the-war determination of the close to one million workers in the UAW, while Curran spoke on the victory will of the merchant seamen, out fighting the war on the front lines, and Carey raised the sharp question of what Lewis had done to help win the war, citing failures to work for price control, stabilization, etc. in answer.

Convention speakers from the delegates joined in condemning Lewis and pointing out that the demands of the miners' rank and file were just. "If Lewis is militant, he should expend some of it on behalf of the war," Pres. Muster said. "He has chosen his lot with the Fascists and the appeasers."

Major resolution was on the CIO policy as worked out at the Cleveland Board meeting, which was enthusiastically endorsed by the convention. Another praised Murray for his "contributions in mobilizing labor on the military, economic and production fronts," and for his rallying support behind Roosevelt's war leadership.

Must Build Unity Between Battle, Home Fronts—Hillman

NEW YORK CITY, May 22—The partnership between the workers on the home front and their sons and brothers on the battle front must be strengthened, Pres. Sidney Hillman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers told delegates at the recent convention of the Textile Workers Union held here.

"Our solidarity with our armed forces must be expressed by producing, in ever greater quantities and without pause or interruption the weapons which are essential to our victory," Hillman said.

HITS LEWIS

Without mentioning Pres. John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers by name, Hillman attacked his position by declaring that labor's no-strike pledge was not "a bargain to be revoked by labor."

"Labor's commitment was unconditional," he said. "No strings were tied to it. Labor pledged that it would forego the strike weapon out of a deep sense of obligation to its own fundamental interests."

Criticizing the administration of the manpower program, Hillman called for "decisive measures to assure full production" and integration of manpower with the distribution and scheduling of contracts.

"Only such integration can assure the full utilization of workers in surplus labor areas, prevent labor hoarding and provide a constant flow of work to all war industries," he said.

Failure so far to hold price increases, Hillman placed at the door of Congress which, he said, had neglected to take "the legislative steps necessary to implement the seven-point program" of President Roosevelt.

Plan Board Gets Senate Death Kiss

Washington, May 22—The Senate delivered virtually the kiss of death to the Nat'l. Resources Planning Board this week, recommending an appropriation of only $200,000 for its work of charting a course for a stable domestic economy after the war.

Previously the House of Representatives had refused to grant the agency a penny. President Roosevelt had advised that it needed $1,400,000 to carry on its work effectively.

The $200,000—if OKed by the House—would allow NRPB to carry on in a halting way purely mechanical functions, when its real job is to study the problem of bringing together "from all sources plans for full employment, security and building America."

Typewriter General's Smear On 2 CIO Leaders Answered

NEW YORK, May 22—A vicious attack on the war records of two CIO leaders by "Fair Enough" Westbrook Pegler was answered factually this week by the officials through their unions. Those smeared were Presidents Joseph Curran of the Nat'l. Maritime Union and Lewis Merrill of the United Office & Professional Workers.

Pegler, in a column dated May 10, accused Curran and Merrill of advocating a second front in Europe to defeat the Nazis, but of being reluctant to serve on it.

REMARKABLE RESTRAINT

Curran answered Pegler in a personal letter, remarkable for its restraint, which pointed out that the NMU leader has not asked for deferment.

Curran said that he informed the NMU's department which handles draft cases that his draft board should be requested to allow him to sail on merchant ships, where his skill as a seaman could be utilized, rather than serve in the Army—a much safer place than the deck of a steamship, as casualty figures prove.

"It is my personal feeling," Curran wrote Pegler, "that I could be more useful at sea. My board, however, felt that the job of keeping our merchant ships manned required my presence ashore."

The attack on Merrill was answered by UOPWA Acting Secretary-Treasurer Richard Lewis, in a letter to be published shortly in the union's paper. In it he said:

"I should like to make clear that the decision to request an occupational deferment for President Merrill was neither of his making nor of his liking. The request was made by the Administrative Committee of our national union, with the approval of the General Executive Board."

Stressing the fact that Merrill's experience is virtually irreplaceable in the union, Lewis wrote:

NATIONAL POLICY

"The request on the part of the union for deferment of President Merrill is in accordance with the national policy of the Selective Service System, which provides for occupational deferment to persons essential in the maintenance of labor-management relations.

"Organized labor in America is playing an important, constructive and patriotic role in contributing to our war effort and in supporting the win-the-war policies of our government.

"In order to insure that the organizations of labor have proper leadership which will guarantee the mobilization of their members behind the war effort, on the production front and on every other front, and in order to insure that sound, stable and peaceful settlements of management-labor disputes are achieved during wartime, it is necessary that responsible leadership be retained in non-critical as well as critical industries."

UAW Hits Do-Nothing Police of OPA

Detroit, Mich., May 22—In the name of its membership of nearly one million workers, the United Automobile Workers this week attacked the do-nothing policies of the Office of Price Administration in full page ads headed, "Yes, we have no potatoes."

"Three times OPA has failed to carry out promises to stabilize the cost of living," the UAW says. "In April, 1942, we got the President's 7-point stabilization program; in September, 1942, we got an order absolutely fixing prices; on April 8, 1943, we got a new 'hold-the-line' order."

Yet a store-by-store check in Detroit, the union declares, "shows average living costs have gone up 28 per cent in the last year. Detroit is typical of the nation."

The survey here showed that 47 per cent of chain stores and supermarkets, and 65 per cent of independent stores are violating ceiling prices, the UAW said.

Dons Uniform, Urges—Back Army 100%

Cleveland, O., May 22—American unions have the responsibility of seeing that absolutely nothing interferes with full-speed-ahead war production. That was the parting statement made this week by A. E. Stevenson, executive secretary of the Cleveland Industrial Union Council, at a farewell dinner given him prior to his entry into the Army.

Praised by leading CIO, AFL and Railroad Brotherhood officials, Stevenson told the guests at the testimonial dinner in his honor that he was "happy and proud" to serve his country in the armed forces.

HAPPY TO SERVE

"I go not only eagerly but happily because I know America cannot exist if we do not win this war," he said. "I know there is no solution to the problems that beset us in 1932 and 1933 unless we win this war.

"As I go I know you at home recognize your responsibility, your responsibility not only to maintain the institutions we have builded, but also a responsibility to see that nothing—and I repeat to see that nothing — interferes with your being on the job of production every day."

Among CIO leaders present were: Allan S. Haywood, CIO vice-president and director of organization, representing President Philip Murray; R. J. Thomas, George Addes and Richard T. Frankensteen, respectively president, secretary-treasurer and vice-president of the UAW; Harry Bridges, president of the ILWU; Joseph Curran, president of the NMU; Reid Robinson, president of the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers; and Len De Caux, editor of The CIO NEWS.

Ask Life for NYA

Indianapolis, Ind., May 22—Continuation of the National Youth Administration was urged this week by the Indiana State Industrial Union Council. The council said that the NYA "has been doing a tremendous job training persons between 16 and 25 years of age for war industries."

2 New CIO Pamphlets Hot Off the Press!

Two new CIO pamphlets are hot off the press this week, and they're both musts for every CIO member and his friends and neighbors.

ONE—"All-Out for Victory," carries the main policy resolution adopted at the special CIO meeting last week in Cleveland. The resolution gives CIO win-the-war policy on War Labor Board, Strikes, Price Rollback, Taxes, Manpower, and winds up with CIO's pledge to do everything to win the war.

TWO—"Your War Job With Congress," is CIO's new guide to effective legislative work, with Congress and government agencies. It gives you the facts on how Congress ticks, how to keep your Congressmen on the victory beam. It should be in every local member's library.

Order both these new pamphlets from Publicity Dept., CIO, 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington, D. C. Prices on request, discounts for quantities.

NMU Heroes Hailed by Nation On Maritime Day

WASHINGTON, May 22—By proclamation of President Roosevelt, the nation this week honored America's heroes in dungarees—the men of the merchant marine. In his tribute to the men who keep 'em sailing, the President said: "The support of our overseas forces and the rendering of aid to our allies depend upon the steady movement of cargo along the ocean tracks—a movement now maintained by the courageous seamen of our merchant marine in resolute defiance of the enemy above, beneath and on the surface of the seas."

Joseph Curran, president of the Nat'l. Maritime Union, whose members comprise the bulk of the merchant marine, pledged that the union would continue to fulfill its slogan—"Keep 'Em Sailing—Deliver the Goods"—despite any intensification of enemy attack.

CITES SEAMEN'S LOSSES

Curran pointed out that the announced losses of the merchant marine, as of last March 31, were 4,198 men dead and missing, a proportionate loss more than four times greater than the other armed forces combined.

"The men who sail the ships today are adding a new and glorious chapter to the history of the American merchant marine. They are heroes. They are pledged to deliver the goods no matter what the danger. They are doing that," Curran said.

"American seamen are dying in these great numbers because they are determined that Hitler and his gang shall not make slaves of the free peoples of the world. And they are equally determined that when the war is over, there shall be no slave peoples anywhere.

"KEEP 'EM SAILING"

"Although the risks and rigors of keeping the lifelines open remains the war's greatest problem, we pledge that a bridge of ships shall be maintained across the oceans, and that no enemy concentration shall be strong enough to deter us from manning the ships and keeping 'em sailing on time and in sufficient quantities to keep our armies and our allies equipped with the weapons of war," he said.

In commemorating National Maritime Day this year, Curran said that never has the nation owed so great a debt to its seamen as it does today.

"For a long time, seamen were regarded as second-class citizens. But by their contribution to our common cause and by the heroic sacrifices they have made, they have earned the fullest measure of respect from their fellow Americans," he said.

Labor-Management Groups Real Aid To War, Says WPB Head

WASHINGTON, May 22—A year's operation of labor-management production committees show that they are a real aid to America's all-out effort for victory over the Axis, Chairman Donald Nelson of the War Production Board announced this week. The operation, he said, shows "convincingly that this approach to the problem of increasing production is sound and extremely effective."

"Reports from Labor-Management Production Committees on the range of activities in which they are engaged indicate the sincerity and realism with which they have tackled the greatest production task any nation ever faced," he said.

The major accomplishments, Nelson said, are indicated by War Production Drive Headquarters' first labor-management activities survey, after a year of operation. Analysis is based on reports received in Washington to date from 800 out of 2,000 committees now being canvassed.

These 800 committees represent close to two million workers, or approximately 45 per cent, of all workers employed in the plants where Labor-Management Production Committees are set up.

In addition to the activties mentioned by Nelson, the survey showed that a high percentage of the committees also are conducting programs related to quality control, care of tools and equipment, training, nutrition and health.

Seventy-five per cent of the employes, the analysis showed, are represented on the joint Labor-Management Committees by the CIO or AFL.

Operating a suggestion system requires the placing of suggestion boxes, the collection of suggestions from workers, investigation and evaluation of suggestions and awarding of honors or prizes.

600,000 SUGGESTIONS

It is estimated by the Awards Branch of War Production Drive Headquarters that since the Drive started a little over a year ago, 600,000 suggestions have been submitted to Labor-Management Committees by workers, saving thousands of man-hours and large amounts of critical materials.

Joint committees have sent the best of these suggestions to Washington, where they have been received by the Board for Individual Awards, with the result that 505 have received national honors.

CIO Protests Halt of Fair Job Hearing

Washington, May 22—The Washington, D. C. Industrial Union Council this week protested the cancellation of hearings involving the employment policy of the Capital Transit Co., which has consistently refused to hire Negroes as operators of buses and street cars.

Urging an immediate public hearing under the jurisdiction of the Fair Employment Practice Commission, which has been investigating the case, the Council said that "this case rightfully belongs under the jurisdiction of the FEPC and any attempt to weaken the authority of the FEPC is an attempt to prevent the full utilization of our nation's manpower."

House Votes to Oust 3 U. S. Employes in Hitler-like Bill of Attainder Action

WASHINGTON, May 22—In an unprecedented and probably unconstitutional move, the House of Representatives this week voted to fire three Government employes after the smearing Dies Committee and subsequently the Kerr Committee had branded their philosophies with the nebulous label "subversive."

The action, voted by 317 to 62, was a virtual bill of attainder, which is unconstitutional in that it is legislation aimed at one or a few individuals instead of action at least nominally for the general good and welfare.

The three ordered fired—their dismissal still awaits Senate action—are: Dr. Goodwin Watson and Dr. William E. Dodd, of the Federal Communications Commission, and Dr. Robert Moses Lovett, government secretary of the Virgin Islands.

Defenders of the three in the House were allowed only 12 minutes to state their case. They pointed out that the unusual action is a device to strangle criticism of monopoly wealth, and said that the only "subversive" thought advocated by the three was the overthrow of Fascism.

RECORDS GOOD

The three were accused of belonging to organizations which the Dies and Kerr Committees have described as "fronts" for radical groups.

The records of Drs. Dodd and Watson were defended by the FCC and the record of 73-year-old Dr. Lovett was hailed by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, who said that he had the fullest confidence in Dr. Lovett's integrity and patriotism.

In an official statement, the FCC said of Drs. Dodd and Watson:

"The records of Watson and Dodd were carefully examined before they were employed. They have been even more carefully investigated since their employment.

"The report of the sub-committee contains no information or charges which the Commission has not previously considered, and there is nothing in the report which would warrant the Commission in changing the conclusion it has reached that these men are qualified for the work assigned them."

The three were defended also by the conservative Washington POST, a daily paper, which called for a last-ditch fight against the discriminatory action and urged that "many distinguished members of the legal profession would no doubt be eager to champion a cause involving such basic American principles."

Pay Bolivian Tin Workers Fair Wages Is CIO Plea

NEW YORK, May 22—Appealing for practical action on the good neighbor policy, the CIO Latin-American Committee today urged the U. S. Government to put fair wages and decent conditions, abolition of child labor and democratic rights for the workers in all contracts to buy tin from Bolivia.

The appeal was made by the committee, whose chairman is Jacob S. Potofsky, secretary-treasurer of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in a statement repeating previous appeals to President Penaranda of Bolivia for humane treatment of the tin workers.

Earlier, the CIO committee heard a report by Martin Kyne, a member of the joint commission that toured Bolivia some time ago, which described the horrible conditions that led to the tin miners' strike in Bolivia last year and the bloody repressions that cost the lives of hundreds of workers.

It also asked for release of hundreds of imprisoned strikers, who were sent to exile in jungle areas that amount to a sentence of death.

"It is in all respect and friendship for yourself and with profound admiration for the people of Bolivia that the CIO Latin American Committee petitions you to take this action," the committee said in addressing Penaranda.

"We are confident that you will receive and consider this letter in the spirit which prompts us to write it."

Iron Ore Miners Demand 48-Hour Week

Bessemer, Ala., May 22—A demand that some 5000 iron ore miners, quarry and plant workers of the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. be permitted to work a full 48-hour week is being made here by the Mine, Mill & Smelter Workers Union.

In a newspaper ad appearing in the morning and afternoon papers in Birmingham, the union says of the iron ore miner:

"This is the man who digs the iron that makes the steel that builds the ships, tanks, planes, guns that will smash Hitler in '43. Let him work a full 48-hour week!"

Organizing

By ALLAN S. HAYWOOD

CIO Vice-President and Director of Organization

The Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers overcame terrorism of all kinds and a back-door conniving contract by the company and the AFL at the Basic Magnesium, Inc., plant at Las Vegas, Nev. Local 629, MMSW was victorious in an election. The vote was 1,122 for CIO against a combination of 17 AFL craft unions totaling 985 votes. Congratulations to all.

Regional Director Hugh Thompson reports a Newspaper Guild victory at the Buffalo Evening News by a vote of 65 for CIO and 59 against. The effect this victory will have is very important.

UAW Wins Two More

National Representative August Scholle, Detroit, sends in two UAW-CIO victories: The National Tool Salvage Co., CIO 86 to 25 no union; Bryant Gear Tool Division of Bryant Motor Sales, CIO 53 to 0 for no union.

Field Representative Judd, Chattanooga, brings in two election victories: One for Textile Workers at the Central Franklin Process Co., CIO 154 to 111 against; the other at the Chattanooga Steam Laundry, CIO 68 to 18 against.

Regional Director Sandner of New Jersey reports victory at the Raymond-Commerce Building, CIO 68 to 1 no union. In a card check of the Barden and Robinson Corp. employes, Lockport, N. Y., the CIO won. In another card check at the Republic Light, Heat & Power Co., Inc., Batavia and Ontario Divisions, the Gas, Coke & Chemical Workers got every employe signed up.
